

This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

Usage guidelines

Google is proud to partner with libraries to digitize public domain materials and make them widely accessible. Public domain books belong to the public and we are merely their custodians. Nevertheless, this work is expensive, so in order to keep providing this resource, we have taken steps to prevent abuse by commercial parties, including placing technical restrictions on automated querying.

We also ask that you:

- + Make non-commercial use of the files We designed Google Book Search for use by individuals, and we request that you use these files for personal, non-commercial purposes.
- + Refrain from automated querying Do not send automated queries of any sort to Google's system: If you are conducting research on machine translation, optical character recognition or other areas where access to a large amount of text is helpful, please contact us. We encourage the use of public domain materials for these purposes and may be able to help.
- + Maintain attribution The Google "watermark" you see on each file is essential for informing people about this project and helping them find additional materials through Google Book Search. Please do not remove it.
- + Keep it legal Whatever your use, remember that you are responsible for ensuring that what you are doing is legal. Do not assume that just because we believe a book is in the public domain for users in the United States, that the work is also in the public domain for users in other countries. Whether a book is still in copyright varies from country to country, and we can't offer guidance on whether any specific use of any specific book is allowed. Please do not assume that a book's appearance in Google Book Search means it can be used in any manner anywhere in the world. Copyright infringement liability can be quite severe.

About Google Book Search

Google's mission is to organize the world's information and to make it universally accessible and useful. Google Book Search helps readers discover the world's books while helping authors and publishers reach new audiences. You can search through the full text of this book on the web at <http://books.google.com/>

Aug 10 89

THE LAWYERS REPORTS ANNOTATED.

BOOK LXVII.

ALL CURRENT CASES OF GENERAL VALUE AND IMPORTANCE, WITH FULL ANNOTATION.

BURDETT A. RICH AND HENRY P.
FARNHAM, EDITORS.

ROCHESTER, N. Y.

THE LAWYERS' CO-OPERATIVE PUBLISHING COMPANY.

1905.

KF
130
126
Beck's

Entered according to Act of Congress, in the year nineteen hundred five, by THE LAWYERS' CO-OPERATIVE PUBLISHING CO.,
In the Office of the Librarian of Congress, at Washington, D. C.

Rec. Aug. 12, 1905,

E. R. ANDREWS PRINTING COMPANY, Rochester, N. Y.

TABLE

OF CASES REPORTED

IN

LAWYERS' REPORTS ANNOTATED, BOOK LXVII.

A.		Bradley, Supreme Lodge K. of P. v.
Adams Express Co. v. Walker (Ky.)	412	(Ark.)	770
Alabama G. S. R. Co. v. Baldwin		Brasie v. Minneapolis Brewing Co.
(Tenn.)	340	(Minn.)	865
v. Roberts (Tenn.)	495	Brown v. American Freehold Land
Albright, Gannon v. (Mo.)	97	Mortg. Co. (Tex.)	195
Alexander v. Nanticoke Light Co. (Pa.)	475	v. Brown (Iowa)	629
A. L. Lakey Co. v. Kalamazoo (Mich.)	931	Buenger, Mueller v. (Mo.)	648
American Freehold Land Mortg. Co.,		Burns v. Delaware & A. Teleg. &
Brown v. (Tex.)	195	Teleph. Co. (N. J. Err. &
Ardmore Stock Exchange, Love v. (Ind.		App.)	956
Terr.)	617
Atlanta, Fitts v. (Ga.)	803
Hewin v. (Ga.)	795
Atlanta & W. P. R. Co. v. West (Ga.)	701
Atlantic Coast Line R. Co., Daniel v.
(N. C.)	455
B.		C.
Baldwin, Alabama G. S. R. Co. v.		Callanan, Iowa Pipe & Tile Co. v.
(Tenn.)	340	(Iowa)	408
v. Ohio Twp. (Kan.)	642	Carolina Teleph. & Teleg. Co., Godwin
Bank, Citizens' State, Fair v. (Kan.)	851	v. (N. C.)	251
Cornerstone, v. Rhodes (Ind.		Charlotte Electric R. Light & P. Co.,
Terr.)	812	Moore v. (N. C.)	470
Mapleton, v. Standrod (Idaho)	656	Cherry v. Sprague (Mass.)	33
Ware Nat., Gordon v. (C. C. A.		Chicago Sanitary Dist., Beidler v. (Ill.)	820
8th C.)	550	Cincinnati, L. & A. Electric Street R.
Barber Asphalt Paving Co., Re (C. C.		Co. v. Lohe (Ohio)	637
A. 8th C.)	761	Citizens' State Bank, Fair v. (Kan.)	851
v. Morris (C. C. A. 8th C.)	761	Citizens' Teleph. Co., Gwynn v. (S. C.)	111
Beidler v. Chicago Sanitary Dist. (Ill.)	820	Claytor, Goodwin v. (N. C.)	209
Bigelow, Van Dusen v. (N. D.)	288	Clemens v. Connecticut Mut. L. Ins. Co.
Bird, People v. (Mich.)	424	(Mo.)	362
Blackmar, Yazoo & M. Valley R. Co. v.		Clough, State ex rel. Munsey v. (N. H.)	946
(Miss.)	646	Commercial Cable Co., People ex rel.,
Blunt v. Fidelity & C. Co. (Cal.)	793	v. Morgan (N. Y.)	960
Boston & M. R. Co., Obertoni v. (Mass.)	422	Com. v. Jacobson (Mass.)	935
Bostwick v. Mutual L. Ins. Co. (Wis.)	705	Morrison v. (Ky.)	529
Bowen v. Hackney (N. C.)	440	v. Pear (Mass.)	935
Bowman, Jones v. (Wyo.)	860	Condor, Lipscomb v. (W. Va.)	670
Boyettt, Re (N. C.)	972	Connecticut Mut. L. Ins. Co., Clemens
67 L. R. A.		v. (Mo.)	362
		Coolidge, St. Louis, I. M. & S. R. Co. v.
		(Ark.)	555
		Cormack v. Marshall (Ill.)	787
		Cornerstone Bank v. Rhodes (Ind.
		Terr.)	812
		Crabtree v. Dawson (Ky.)	565
		Crichton v. Webb Press Co. (La.)	76

D.

Dahl, Schmitt v. (Minn.)	590	Hartford F. Ins. Co. v. Redding (Fla.)	518
Daniel v. Atlantic Coast Line R. Co.		Hays v. Western U. Teleg. Co. (S. C.)	481
(N. C.)	455	Hercules Powder Co. v. Knoxville, L. &
Dawson, Crabtree v. (Ky.)	565	J. R. Co. (Tenn.)	487
Deer Trail Consol. Min. Co. v. Mary-		Herzog v. Title Guarantee & T. Co.
land Casualty Co. (Wash.)	275	(N. Y.)	146
Delaware & A. Teleg. & Teleph. Co.,		Hewin v. Atlanta (Ga.)	795
Burns v. (N. J. Err. & App.)	956	Hickman, Gartlan v. (W. Va.)	694
Donahue v. (N. J. Err. & App.)	956	Hodge v. Muscatine County (Iowa)	624
Dickert, Silver Camp Min. Co. v.		Howells, State ex rel., v. Metcalf
(Mont.)	940	(S. D.)	331
Donahue v. Delaware & A. Teleg. &		Hubbard v. Hubbard (Vt.)	969 Teleph. Co. (N. J. Err. &
App.)	956
Dow v. National Ins. Co. (R. I.)	479
Durham & C. R. Co., McNeill v. (N. C.)	227
Dyer v. Maine C. R. Co. (Me.)	416

E.

Edna Cotton Mills, Redd v. (N. C.)	983
Edwards, Vann v. (N. C.)	461
Erie R. Co., Russell v. (N. J. Err. &
App.)	433
Evansville, Jourdan v. (Ind.)	613

F.

Fair v. Citizens' State Bank (Kan.)	851
Fidelity & C. Co., Blunt v. (Cal.)	793
Firemen's Fund Ins. Co. v. Oregon R.
& Nav. Co. (Or.)	161
Fisk, State ex rel., v. Porter (N. D.)	473
Fitts v. Atlanta (Ga.)	803
Fleetwood, Wool v. (N. C.)	444
Frank v. Stratford-Hancock (Wyo.)	571
Frazier v. Western U. Teleg. Co. (Or.)	319

G.

Galle, State ex rel., v. New Orleans
(La.)	70
Gannon v. Albright (Mo.)	97
Gartlan v. Hickman (W. Va.)	694
Glencoe v. Reed (Minn.)	901
Godwin v. Carolina Teleph. & Teleg. Co.
(N. C.)	251
Goodwin v. Claytor (N. C.)	209
Gordon v. Ware Nat. Bank (C. C. A.
8th C.)	550
Green v. Western U. Teleg. Co. (N. C.)	985
Gwynn v. Citizens' Teleph. Co. (S. C.)	111

H.

Hackney, Bowen v. (N. C.)	440
Hager v. Kentucky Children's Home
Soc. (Ky.)	815
Hall, Ware v. (Mich.)	313
67 L. R. A.

I.

Ide, State v. (Wash.)	280
Illinois & M. Canal Comrs., Merrifield
v. (Ill.)	369
Insurance Co., Connecticut Mut. L.,
Clemens v. (Mo.)	362
Firemen's Fund, v. Oregon R. &
Nav. Co. (Or.)	161
Hartford F., v. Redding (Fla.)	518
Mutual L., Bostwick v. (Wis.)	705
National, Dow v. (R. I.)	479
Scottish Union & Nat., L'Engle
v. (Fla.)	581
Travelers', Richards v. (S. D.)	175
Iowa Pipe & Tile Co. v. Callanan (Iowa)	408

J.

Jacobosky, Le Roy v. (N. C.)	977
Jacobson, Com. v. (Mass.)	935
Johnson v. Union P. Coal Co. (Utah)	506
Jones v. Bowman (Wyo.)	860
Jourdan v. Evansville (Ind.)	613

K.

Kaeufer, Teopfer v. (N. M.)	315
Kalamazoo, A. L. Lakey Co. v. (Mich.)	931
Kaufmann v. Liggett (Pa.)	353
Keene Syndicate v. Wichita Gas, Electric Light & P. Co. (Kan.)	61
Kennedy, Re (Cal.)	406
Kent, Morrison v. (Mich.)	965
Kentucky Children's Home Soc., Hager
v. (Ky.)	815
King, Re (Kan.)	783
Kingsley v. Merrill (Wis.)	200
Knoxville, L. & J. R. Co., Hercules
Powder Co. v. (Tenn.)	487

L.

Lamb v. Powder River Live Stock Co.
(C. C. A. 8th C.)	558
Latta, Mack v. (N. Y.)	126
L'Engle v. Scottish Union & Nat. Ins.
Co. (Fla.)	581

Le Roy v. Jacobosky (N. C.).....	977
Liggett, Kaufmann v. (Pa.).....	353
Lipscomb v. Condon (W. Va.).....	670
Livingstone, State ex rel., v. Williams (Or.)	166
Lohe, Cincinnati, L. & A. Electric Street R. Co. v. (Ohio).....	637
Love v. Ardmore Stock Exchange (Ind. Terr.)	617

M.

McCormick, Turner v. (W. Va.).....	853
McCurdy, Radey v. (Pa.).....	359
Mack v. Latta (N. Y.).....	126
McNeill v. Durham & C. R. Co. (N. C.)	227
Maine C. R. Co., Dyer v. (Me.).....	416
Mallory, State v. (Ark.).....	773
Mapleton Bank v. Standrod (Idaho) ..	656
Marsh, State v. (N. C.).....	179
Marshall, Cormack v. (Ill.).....	787
Maryland Casualty Co., Deer Train Consol. Min. Co. v. (Wash.)	275
Merrifield v. Illinois & M. Canal Comrs. (Ill.)	369
Merrill, Kingsley v. (Wis.).....	200
Metcalf, State ex rel. Howells v. (S. D.)	331
Miller, Nashville, C. & St. L. R. Co. v. (Ga.).....	87
Mills, People v. (N. Y.).....	131
Minneapolis Brewing Co., Brasie v. (Minn.)	865
Modern Brotherhood of America, Peter- son v. (Iowa)	631
Montgomery, State v. (Mo.).....	343
Moore v. Charlotte Electric R. Light & P. Co. (N. C.).....	470
v. State (Tex. Crim. App.).....	499
Morgan, People ex rel. Commercial Cable Co. v. (N. Y.).....	960
Morris, Barber Asphalt Paving Co. v. (C. C. A. 8th C.).....	761
Morrison v. Com. (Ky.).....	529
v. Kent (Mich.).....	965
Mueller v. Buenger (Mo.).....	648
Munsey, State ex rel., v. Clough (N. H.)	946
Muscatine County, Hodge v. (Iowa)...	624
Mutual L. Ins. Co., Bostwick v. (Wis.)	705

N.

Nanticoke Light Co., Alexander v. (Pa.)	475
Narragansett Electric Lighting Co., Nelson v. (R. I.).....	116
Nashville, C. & St. L. R. Co. v. Miller (Ga.)	87
National Ins. Co., Dow v. (R. I.).....	479
Nelson v. Narragansett Electric Light- ing Co. (R. I.).....	116
State v. (Idaho)	808
New Orleans, State ex rel. Galle v. (La.)	70
07 L. R. A.

New Orleans Tailor-Made Pants Co., Wolf v. (La.)	65
Nobles, Tripp v. (N. C.).....	449
Normile v. Northern P. R. Co. (Wash.)	271
Northern P. R. Co., Normile v. (Wash.)	271

O.

Obertoni v. Boston & M. R. Co. (Mass.)	422
Ohio Twp., Baldwin v. (Kan.).....	642
Oregon R. & Nav. Co., Firemen's Fund Ins. Co. v. (Or.).....	161
Orman v. Van Arsdell (N. M.).....	438

P.

Pear, Com. v. (Mass.).....	935
People v. Bird (Mich.).....	424
v. Mills (N. Y.)	131
v. Pratt (Mich.).....	923
People ex rel. Commercial Cable Co. v. Morgan (N. Y.)	960
Peterson v. Modern Brotherhood of America (Iowa)	631
Petition of Waldron (R. I.).....	118
Phillips, State v. (Iowa).....	292
Porter, State ex rel. Fisk v. (N. D.) ..	473
Powder River Live Stock Co., Lamb v. (C. C. A. 8th C.).....	558
Pratt, People v. (Mich.).....	923

Q.

Quigley, State v. (R. I.).....	322
--------------------------------	-----

R.

Radey v. McCurdy (Pa.).....	359
Railroad Co., Alabama G. S., v. Bald- win (Tenn.).....	340
Alabama G. S., v. Roberts (Tenn.)	495
Atlanta & W. P., v. West (Ga.)	701
Atlantic Coast Line, Daniel v. (N. C.)	455
Boston & M., Obertoni v. (Mass.)	422
Cincinnati, L. & A. Electric Street, v. Lohe (Ohio).....	637
Durham & C., McNeill v. (N. C.)	227
Erie, Russell v. (N. J. Err. & App.)	433
Knoxville, L. & J., Hercules Powder Co. v. (Tenn.).....	487
Maine C., Dyer v. (Me.).....	416
Yazoo & M. Valley, v. Blackmar (Miss.)	646
Railway Co., Nashville, C. & St. L., v. Miller (Ga.)	87
Northern P., Normile v. (Wash.)	271
St. Louis, I. M. & S., v. Coolidge (Ark.)	555

Re Barber Asphalt Paving Co. (C. C. A. 8th C.)	761	Swan v. Western U. Teleg. Co. (C. C. A. 7th C.)	153
Boyett (N. C.)	972
Kennedy (Cal.)	406	T.
King (Kan.)	783
Teopfer (N. M.)	315	Teopfer, Re (N. M.)	315
Redd v. Edna Cotton Mills (N. C.)	983	v. Kaeufer (N. M.)	315
Redding, Hartford F. Ins. Co. v. (Fla.)	518	Title Guarantee & T. Co., Herzog v. (N. Y.)	146
Reed, Glencoe v. (Minn.)	901	Toney v. State (Ala.)	286
Rhodes, Cornerstone Bank v. (Ind. Terr.)	812	Travelers' Ins. Co., Richards v. (S. D.)	175
Richards v. Travelers' Ins. Co. (S. D.)	175	Tripp v. Nobles (N. C.)	449
Roberts, Alabama G. S. R. Co. v. (Tenn.)	495	Turner v. McCormick (W. Va.)	853
Russell v. Erie R. Co. (N. J. Err. & App.)	433	U.
S.		Union P. Coal Co., Johnson v. (Utah)	506
		V.
St. Louis, I. M. & S. R. Co. v. Coolidge (Ark.)	555	Van Arsdell, Orman v. (N. M.)	438
Schmitt v. Dahl (Minn.)	590	Van Dusen v. Bigelow (N. D.)	288
Scottish Union & Nat. Ins. Co., L'En- gle v. (Fla.)	581	Vann v. Edwards (N. C.)	461
Seattle, Stone v. (Wash.)	253	Vogt v. Shienebeck (Wis.)	756
Shienebeck, Vogt v. (Wis.)	756	W.
Silver Camp Min. Co. v. Dickert (Mont.)	940	Waldron's Petition (R. I.)	118
Smiley, State v. (Kan.)	903	Walker, Adams Express Co. v. (Ky.)	412
Sprague, Cherry v. (Mass.)	33	v. State (Ga.)	426
Standrod, Mapleton Bank v. (Idaho)	656	Ware v. Hall (Mich.)	313
State v. Ide (Wash.)	280	Ware Nat. Bank, Gordon v. (C. C. A. 8th C.)	550
v. Mallory (Ark.)	773	Webb Press Co., Crichton v. (La.)	76
v. Marsh (N. C.)	179	West, Atlanta & W. P. R. Co. v. (Ga.)	701
v. Montgomery (Mo.)	343	Western U. Teleg. Co., Frazier v. (Or.)	319
Moore v. (Tex. Crim. App.)	499	Green v. (N. C.)	985
v. Nelson (Idaho)	808	Hays v. (S. C.)	481
v. Phillips (Iowa)	292	Swan v. (C. C. A. 7th C.)	153
v. Quigley (R. I.)	322	Wichita Gas, Electric Light & P. Co., Keene Syndicate v. (Kan.)	61
v. Smiley (Kan.)	903	Williams, State ex rel. Livingstone v. (Or.)	166
Toney v. (Ala.)	286	Wolf v. New Orleans Tailor-Made Pants Co. (La.)	65
Walker v. (Ga.)	426	Wool v. Fleetwood (N. C.)	444
State ex rel. Munsey v. Clough (N. H.)	946	Y.
Howells v. Metcalf (S. D.)	331
Galle v. New Orleans (La.)	70	Yazoo & M. Valley R. Co. v. Blackmar (Miss.)	646
Fisk v. Porter (N. D.)	473
Livingstone v. Williams (Or.)	166
Stone v. Seattle (Wash.)	253
Stratford-Handcock, Frank v. (Wyo.)	571
Supreme Lodge K. of P. v. Bradley (Ark.)	770
67 L. R. A

CITATIONS

IN OPINIONS OF THE JUDGES CONTAINED IN THIS BOOK.

A.

Abeel v. Clark, 84 Cal. 226, 24 Pac. 383 930
 Adams v. Cronin, 29 Colo. 488, 63 L. R. A. 61, 69 Pac. 590..... 811
 v. Manning, 48 Conn. 477..... 837
 v. Ross, 30 N. J. L. 505, 82 Am. Dec. 237..... 630
 Adams Exp. Co. v. Ohio State Auditor, 165 U. S. 194, 41 L. ed. 683, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 305..... 206
 Addyston Pipe & Steel Co. 175 U. S. 211, 44 L. ed. 136, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 96..... 912
 Adler v. Whitbeck, 44 Ohio St. 539, 9 N. E. 672..... 628
 Aetna Ins. Co. v. Hannibal & St. J. R. Co. 3 Dill. 1, Fed. Cas. No. 96..... 165
 v. Reed, 33 Ohio St. 283..... 749
 v. Wheeler, 49 N. Y. 616..... 436
 Aetna L. Ins. Co. v. France, 94 U. S. 581, 24 L. ed. 287..... 553
 v. Frierson, 51 C. C. A. 424, 114 Fed. 56..... 527
 v. McCormick, 20 Wis. 269..... 187
 Agricultural Bank v. Burr, 24 Me. 256 685
 Ah Jow, Re, 29 Fed. 181..... 810
 A. J. Neimeyer Lumber Co. v. Burlington & M. River R. Co. 54 Neb. 321, 40 L. R. A. 534, 74 N. W. 670 759
 Alabama & V. R. Co. v. McAfee (1893) 71 Miss. 70, 14 So. 260..... 248
 Alabama Gold L. Ins. Co. v. Mobile Mut. Ins. Co. 81 Ala. 329, 1 So. 501 553
 Alabama G. S. R. Co. v. Harris, 71 Miss. 74, 14 So. 263..... 247
 Albany County v. Stanley, 105 U. S. 305-311, 26 L. ed. 1044-1049 907, 910, 917 864
 Albert v. Perry, 14 N. J. Eq. 540..... 864
 Allam v. Pennsylvania R. Co. 183 Pa. 174, 39 L. R. A. 535, 38 Atl. 709..... 275
 Allen v. Allen, 121 N. C. 328, 28 S. E. 513 451, 454
 v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co. 94 Wis. 93, 68 N. W. 873..... 165
 v. Goodwin, 92 Tenn. 386, 21 S. W. 760..... 342
 v. London & S. W. R. Co. L. R. 6 Q. B. 65..... 458
 v. Pass, 20 N. C. 207 (4 Dev. & B. L. 77)..... 448
 Allgeyer v. Louisiana, 165 U. S. 578, 41 L. ed. 832, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 427..... 287
 Allison v. Norwood, 44 N. C. (Busbee, L.) 414..... 250
 Alston v. Clay, 3 N. C. (2 Hayw.) 171..... 982
 Altenburg v. Com. 126 Pa. 602, 4 L. R. A. 543, 17 Atl. 799..... 425
 Alton R. & Illuminating Co. v. Foulds, 81 Ill. App. 322..... 478
 American Exp. Co. v. People, 133 Ill. 649, 9 L. R. A. 138, 23 Am. St. Rep. 641, 24 N. E. 758..... 781
 American Ins. Co. v. Neiberger, 74 Mo. 167 732
 American Sugar Ref. Co. v. Louisiana, 179 U. S. 89, 45 L. ed. 102, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 43..... 206
 Amery v. Keokuk, 72 Iowa, 703, 30 N. W. 780..... 409
 Amy v. Watertown, 130 U. S. 329, 32 L. ed. 353, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 537..... 564 Anderson v. Anderson, 164 Pa. 358, 30 Atl. 304..... 630
 v. Felton, 36 N. C. (1 Ired. Eq.) 55..... 442
 v. Johnson, 32 Gratt. 558..... 691, 692
 Audis v. Personnett, 108 Ind. 202, 9 N. E. 101..... 578 Ausonia v. Cooper, 64 Conn. 544, 30 Atl. 760..... 437
 67 L. R. A.

Applegate v. Smith, 31 Mo. 166..... 653, 654
 Arkansas Valley Land & Cattle Co. v. Mann, 130 U. S. 69, 32 L. ed. 854, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 458..... 498
 Armory v. Delamirie, 1 Strange, 505..... 352
 Armstrong v. Grafton, 23 W. Va. 50..... 693
 v. State, 34 Tex. Crim. Rep. 250, 30 S. W. 235..... 503
 Ashley v. Port Huron, 35 Mich. 296, 24 Am. Rep. 552..... 934
 Ashmore v. Pennsylvania Steam Towing & Transp. Co. 28 N. J. L. 180..... 435
 Atcheson v. Mallon, 43 N. Y. 147, 3 Am. Rep. 678..... 64
 Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co. v. Gants, 58 Kan. 608, 5 Am. St. Rep. 780, 17 Pac. 54..... 251
 v. Hammer, 22 Kan. 703, 31 Am. Rep. 216..... 644
 v. Morgan, 42 Kan. 23, 4 L. R. A. 284, 16 Am. St. Rep. 471, 21 Pac. 809..... 700
 Atkeson v. Lay, 115 Mo. 538, 22 S. W. 481 338, 474
 Atty. Gen. v. Briant, 15 Mees. & W. 169..... 929
 Aulbach v. Dahler, 4 Idaho, 654, 43 Pac. 322..... 665
 Austin v. Great Western R. Co. (1867) L. R. 2 Q. B. 442..... 237, 239

B.

Babcock v. Lake Shore & M. S. R. Co. 49 N. Y. 491..... 436
 Bachelder v. Heagan, 18 Me. 32..... 420, 421
 Bacon v. Michigan C. R. Co. 66 Mich. 166, 33 N. W. 181..... 929 Baker v. Baker, 57 Wis. 382, 15 N. W. 425 453
 v. Election Comrs. 110 Mich. 635, 68 N. W. 752..... 339
 v. Wasson, 53 Tex. 150..... 685
 Baldwin v. Franks, 120 U. S. 678, 32 L. ed. 766, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 656 908, 909, 910, 916
 Balk v. Harris, 124 N. C. 468, 45 L. R. A. 257, 70 Am. St. Rep. 606, 32 S. E. 799..... 226 Ball v. Hancock, 82 Ky. 107..... 101
 v. Tompkins, 41 Fed. 486..... 764
 Ballard v. Struckman, 123 Ill. 636, 14 N. E. 682..... 836
 Ballou v. Talbot, 16 Mass. 461, 8 Am. Dec. 146..... 978, 979
 Baltimore v. Radecke, 49 Md. 217, 33 Am. Rep. 243..... 971 Baltimore & O. R. Co. v. Glenn, 28 Md. 287, 92 Am. Dec. 688..... 685
 v. Lafferty, 14 Gratt. 478..... 694
 v. Lafferty, 2 W. Va. 104..... 694
 v. McCullough, 12 Gratt. 595..... 684
 v. Wabash R. Co. 57 C. C. A. 322, 119 Fed. 678..... 764
 Baltimore & Y. Turnp. Road v. Green, 86 Md. 161, 37 Atl. 642..... 459
 Baltimore City Pass. R. Co. v. Kemp, 61 Md. 619, 48 Am. Rep. 134..... 234
 Baltzen v. Nicolay, 53 N. Y. 407..... 981
 Bancroft v. Cambridge, 126 Mass. 438..... 940
 Bank of Alabama v. Dalton, 9 How. 522, 13 L. ed. 242..... 561, 564 Bank of Augusta v. Earle, 13 Pet. 588, 10 L. ed. 307..... 226
 Bank of Ravenswood v. Hamilton, 43 W. Va. 75, 27 S. E. 200..... 094
 Bank of United States v. Moss, 6 How. 38, 12 L. ed. 334..... 192 Banzer v. Banzer, 156 N. Y. 429, 51 N. E. 291..... 150

- Barber Asphalt Paving Co. v. Denver, 19 C. C. A. 139, 36 U. S. App. 499, 72 Fed. 336 765
- Barnes v. Calhoun, 37 N. C. (2 Ired. Eq.) 196 984
- v. Western U. Teleg. Co. 27 Nev. 438, 65 L. R. A. 666, 76 Pac. 931 992
- Barnitz v. Beverly, 163 U. S. 118, 41 L. ed. 93, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1042 502
- Barrett v. McAllister, 33 W. Va. 738, 11 S. E. 220 855 860
- Barrow v. Hill, 13 How. 54, 14 L. ed. 48 770
- Barrow S. S. Co. v. Kane, 170 U. S. 100, 42 L. ed. 964, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 526 766
- Barrows v. McDermott, 73 Me. 441 775
- Bartemeyer v. Iowa, 18 Wall. 129, 21 L. ed. 929 610 617
- Bartlett v. Tucker, 104 Mass. 336, 6 Am. Rep. 240 978
- Barton v. Syracuse, 36 N. Y. 54 934 935
- Bartonshill Coal Co. v. McGuire, 3 Macq. H. L. Cas. 307 514
- v. Reid, 3 Macq. H. L. Cas. 296 514
- Basham v. Toors, 51 Ark. 309, 11 S. W. 282 494
- Basket v. Moss, 115 N. C. 448, 48 L. R. A. 842, 44 Am. St. Rep. 463, 20 S. E. 733 250
- Baskett v. Sellars, 93 Ky. 2, 19 S. W. 9 630
- Basshor v. Baltimore & O. R. Co. 65 Md. 90, 3 Atl. 285 492
- Bath County v. Amy, 13 Wall. 244, 20 L. ed. 539 767 768
- Baughman v. Louisville, E. & St. L. R. Co. 94 Ky. 150, 21 S. W. 757 416
- Beacannon v. Liebe, 11 Or. 443, 5 Pac. 273 163
- Beam v. Jennings, 89 N. C. 451 447
- Bear Lake & River Waterworks & Irrig. Co. v. Garland, 164 U. S. 1, 41 L. ed. 327, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 7 500
- Beatson v. Skene, 5 Hurlst. & N. 838 929
- Beaven v. Oxford, 6 De G. M. & G. 524 687
- Beedy v. Minney, 118 Iowa, 276, 91 N. W. 1060 630
- Beekman v. Bonsor, 23 N. Y. 575 151
- Beetle v. Anderson, 98 Wis. 5, 73 N. W. 560 746
- Belknap v. Trimble, 3 Paige, 605 837
- Belleville Stone Co. v. Mooney, 60 N. J. L. 323, 38 Atl. 835 957
- v. Mooney, 61 N. J. L. 254, 39 L. R. A. 834, 39 Atl. 764 957
- Bennett v. Byrne, 2 Barb. Ch. 216 864
- Bergen v. Carman, 70 N. Y. 153 886
- Berger v. Hoerner, 36 Ill. App. 360 701
- Bernhardt v. Brown, 118 N. C. 710, 36 L. R. A. 402, 24 S. E. 527 187
- Berry v. Ransdall, 4 Met. (Ky.) 292 561
- Bethell v. Bethell, 92 Ind. 318 942
- Bierne v. Ray, 37 W. Va. 571, 16 S. E. 804 691
- Bigelow v. Bemis, 2 Allen, 496 560
- Biggs, Ex parte, 64 N. C. 202 186 194
- Bingham v. Salene, 15 Or. 208, 3 Am. St. Rep. 152, 14 Pac. 523 777
- Bird v. Gilliam, 121 N. C. 326, 28 S. E. 489 449
- Blissell v. Davison, 65 Conn. 183, 20 L. R. A. 251, 32 Atl. 348 939
- Black v. State, 113 Wis. 205, 90 Am. St. Rep. 533, 89 N. W. 522 205 207 208
- Black Hawk County v. Springer, 58 Iowa, 417, 10 N. W. 791 975
- Bladen v. Marletta & N. G. R. Co. 97 Tenn. 393, 37 S. W. 135 493
- Blades v. Higgs, 11 Ill. L. Cas. 621 776
- Blantin v. Whitaker, 11 Humph. 313 876
- Blen v. Bear River & A. Water & Min. Co. 20 Cal. 613, 81 Am. Dec. 132 437
- Bloom v. Franklin L. Ins. Co. 97 Ind. 478, 49 Am. Rep. 469 772
- v. Moy, 43 Minn. 397, 19 Am. St. Rep. 243, 45 N. W. 715 604
- Bloomershine v. Uline, 159 Ind. 500, 65 N. E. 513 616
- Blue v. Beach, 155 Ind. 121, 50 L. R. A. 64, 80 Am. St. Rep. 195, 50 N. E. 89 939
- Blyth v. Waterville, 57 Minn. 115, 47 Am. St. Rep. 596, 58 N. W. 817 262
- Bobb v. Woodward, 50 Mo. 95 876
- Bodine v. Arthur, 91 Ky. 53, 34 Am. St. Rep. 162, 14 S. W. 904 630
- Bonfanti v. State, 2 Minn. 123, Gil. 99 330
- Bonneville v. Western Assur. Co. 68 Wis. 298, 32 N. W. 34 745
- Boorman v. American Exp. Co. 21 Wis. 15 744
- Bort, Re, 25 Kan. 308, 37 Am. Rep. 255 786
- Bosher v. Richmond & H. Land Co. 80 Va. 455, 37 Am. St. Rep. 879, 16 S. E. 360 131
- Bosley v. National Mach. Co. 123 N. Y. 550, 25 N. E. 990 128
- Boston Beer Co. v. Massachusetts, 97 U. S. 25-33, 24 L. ed. 989-992 938
- Boston Music Hall Assn. v. Cory, 129 Mass. 435 693
- Bosworth v. Swansey, 10 Met. 363, 43 Am. Dec. 441 248
- Bowers v. Western U. Teleg. Co. 135 N. C. 504, 47 S. E. 597 991
- Bowman v. Phillips, 41 Kan. 364, 3 L. R. A. 631, 13 Am. St. Rep. 292 245
- Boyd v. Royal Ins. Co. 111 N. C. 372, 16 S. E. 389 226
- v. Selma, 96 Ala. 144, 16 L. R. A. 729, 11 So. 393 204
- v. State, 33 Tex. Crim. Rep. 470, 26 S. W. 1080 503 505
- Boyington v. Sweeney, 77 Wis. 55, 45 N. W. 938 758
- Boyle v. Union P. R. Co. 25 Utah, 422, 71 Pac. 988 509
- Braceville Coal Co. v. People, 147 Ill. 66, 22 L. R. A. 340, 37 Am. St. Rep. 206, 35 N. E. 62 920
- Bradley v. Mutual Ben. L. Ins. Co. 45 N. Y. 422, 6 Am. Rep. 115 772
- Bradstreet, Ex parte, 7 Pet. 634, 8 L. ed. 810 768 770
- Ex parte, 8 Pet. 588, 8 L. ed. 1054 770
- Bragg v. Gaynor, 85 Wis. 468, 21 L. R. A. 161, 55 N. W. 919 203
- Bramwell v. Lucas, 4 Dowl. & R. 367 929
- v. Lucas, 2 Barn. & C. 745 230
- Branch v. Bass, 5 Sneed, 366 497 498
- Braun v. Wisconsin Rendering Co. 92 Wis. 245, 66 N. W. 196 750
- Brauser v. New England F. Ins. Co. 21 Wis. 509 225
- Brayton v. Fall River, 113 Mass. 218, 18 Am. Rep. 470 934
- Bretherton v. Wood, 3 Brod. & B. 54 239
- Bricker v. Philadelphia & R. R. Co. 132 Pa. 1, 19 Am. St. Rep. 585, 18 Atl. 983 246
- Brigham v. Mead, 10 Allen, 245 684 685
- Bright v. Patton, 5 Mackey, 534, 60 Am. Rep. 306 171
- v. Western U. Teleg. Co. 132 N. C. 317, 43 S. E. 841 988
- Bright's Case. See BRIGHT v. WESTERN U. TELEG. CO.
- Brinkerhoff v. Brown, 6 Johns. Ch. 139 129
- Bristow v. Bristow, 5 Beav. 289 151
- v. Cormican, 24 Moak, Eng. Rep. 431 775
- Britt v. Rowland Lumber Co. 136 N. C. 171, 48 S. E. 586 449
- Brock v. Dwelling House Ins. Co. 102 Mich. 583, 26 L. R. A. 623, 47 Am. St. Rep. 562, 61 N. W. 67 358
- Brock's Case, 44 Tex. Crim. Rep. 335, 60 L. R. A. 465, 100 Am. St. Rep. 859, 71 S. W. 21 504
- Brodhine v. Revere, 182 Mass. 598, 66 N. E. 607 807
- Broderick's Will (Kleley v. McGlynn) 21 Wall. 503, 22 L. ed. 599 765
- Bronson v. Kinzie, 1 How. 311, 11 L. ed. 143 561 562
- v. Schulten, 104 U. S. 415, 26 L. ed. 799 192
- Brooke v. Logan, 112 Ind. 183, 2 Am. St. Rep. 177, 13 N. E. 669 790
- Brooks v. Matthews, 78 Ga. 739, 3 S. E. 627 741
- v. People, 49 N. Y. 436, 10 Am. Rep. 398 351
- Brosnan v. Sweetser, 127 Ind. 1, 26 N. E. 555 92

Brown v. Boston Ice Co. 178 Mass. 108, 86 Am. St. Rep. 469, 59 N. E. 644.....	423	Cabanne v. Graf , 87 Minn. 510, 59-L. R. A. 735, 94 Am. St. Rep. 722, 92 N. W. 461.....	944
v. Cunningham , 82 Iowa, 512, 12 L. R. A. 583, 48 N. W. 1042.....	775	Cairo & V. R. Co. v. Stevens , 73 Ind. 278, 38 Am. Rep. 139.....	645
v. Desmond , 100 Mass. 267.....	942, 943	Callahan, Re , 102 Wis. 561, 78 N. W. 750.....	756
v. Equitable Life Assur. Soc. 75 Minn. 412, 78 N. W. 103, 79 N. W. 968.....	553	Cameron v. Louisville, N. O. & T. R. Co. 69 Miss. 78, 10 So. 554.....	563
v. Greenfield Life Asso. 172 Mass. 498, 53 N. E. 129.....	553	Cammack v. Lewis , 15 Wall. 643, 21 L. ed. 244.....	552
v. Griswold , 109 Wis. 275, 85 N. W. 363.....	755	Campbell v. Holt , 115 U. S. 624, 29 L. ed. 485, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 209.....	439
v. Harper , 54 Iowa, 546, 6 N. W. 747.....	358	v. Jones , 25 Minn. 155.....	884
v. Kendall , 6 Cush. 292.....	569	v. Talbot , 132 Mass. 174.....	837
v. Knapp , 79 N. Y. 136.....	451	Candee v. Lord , 2 N. Y. 269, 51 Am. Dec. 294.....	607
v. Maryland , 12 Wheat. 419, 6 L. ed. 678.....	288	Canman v. St. Louis , 97 Mo. 92, 11 S. W. 60.....	365
v. Railway Pass. Assur. Co. 45 Mo. 221.....	178	Cannon v. Barry , 59 Miss. 289.....	630
v. Scherrer , 5 Colo. App. 255, 38 Pac. 427.....	318, 319	Capehart v. Furman Farm Improv. Co. 103 Ala. 671, 49 Am. St. Rep. 60, 16 So. 627.....	759
v. State , 58 Ga. 212.....	429, 430	v. Hale , 6 W. Va. 547.....	860
v. Weaver , 76 Miss. 7, 42 L. R. A. 423, 71 Am. St. Rep. 512, 23 So. 388.....	290	Carr v. United States , 98 U. S. 433, 25 L. ed. 209.....	189
Brown Case. See BROWN v. STATE.		Carrigan v. Drake , 36 S. C. 554, 15 S. E. 339.....	630
Brown Shoe Co. v. Hunt , 103 Iowa, 586, 39 L. R. A. 291, 64 Am. St. Rep. 198, 72 N. W. 765.....	628	Carroll v. Staten Island R. Co. 58 N. Y. 126, 17 Am. Rep. 221, 233, 235.....	249
Browne v. McClintock , L. R. 6 H. L. 458.....	750	Carter v. Greenwood , 58 N. C. (5 Jones, Eq.) 410.....	250
Bruggerman v. Hoerr , 7 Minn. 337, 82 Am. Dec. 97, 611.....	598, 599, 605	v. Howe Mach. Co. 51 Md. 290, 34 Am. Rep. 311.....	459
Brush Electric Light & P. Co. v. Wells , 110 Ga. 198, 35 S. E. 385.....	799	Carver v. Detroit & S. P. Road Co. 61 Mich. 584, 28 N. W. 721.....	261
Bryan v. Western U. Teleg. Co. 133 N. C. 603, 45 S. E. 938.....	988	Case of Daniel M'Naghten , 10 Clark & F. 200.....	327
Buckland v. New York, N. H. & H. R. Co. 181 Mass. 3, 62 N. E. 955.....	423	Casey v. Casey , 14 Ill. 112.....	291
Bucroft v. Council Bluffs , 63 Iowa, 646, 19 N. W. 807.....	412	Cashion v. Western U. Teleg. Co. 124 N. C. 459, 45 L. R. A. 160, 32 S. E. 746.....	989
Buffalo City Cemetery v. Buffalo , 46 N. Y. 503.....	123	v. Western U. Teleg. Co. 123 N. C. 267, 31 S. E. 493.....	988
Bullard v. Randall , 1 Gray, 605, 61 Am. Dec. 433.....	624	Cassady v. Old Colony Street R. Co. 184 Mass. 156, 63 L. R. A. 285, 68 N. E. 10.....	423
Bullen, Re , 28 Kan. 781.....	819, 864	Cassity v. Robinson , 8 B. Mon. 279.....	578
Bundy v. Hyde , 50 N. H. 120.....	970	Cater v. Northwestern Teleph. Exch. Co. 60 Minn. 539, 28 L. R. A. 310, 51 Am. St. Rep. 543, 63 N. W. 111.....	902
Bunter v. Coke , 1 Salk. 237, 3 Bro. P. C. 19.....	651	Cathcart v. Robinson , 5 Pet. 264, 8 L. ed. 120.....	511
Burbage v. Windley , 108 N. C. 357, 12 L. R. A. 409, 12 S. E. 839.....	250	Catlin v. Hull , 21 Vt. 152.....	204
Burdlet v. Missouri P. R. Co. 123 Mo. 221, 26 L. R. A. 384, 45 Am. St. Rep. 528, 27 S. W. 453.....	498	Catron v. Tennessee Ins. Co. 6 Humph. 176.....	480
Burke v. Louisville & N. R. Co. 7 Helsk. 451, 19 Am. Rep. 618.....	410	Caulfield v. Sullivan , 85 N. Y. 153.....	451
Burlington & M. River R. Co. v. Boestler , 15 Iowa, 555.....	578	Cayzer v. Taylor , 10 Gray, 274, 69 Am. Dec. 317.....	509
Burmester v. Phillips , 25 Fed. 805.....	859	Cecil Nat. Bank v. Watertown Bank , 105 U. S. 217, 26 L. ed. 1039.....	684
Burnam v. White , 16 Ky. L. Rep. 241, 22 S. W. 555.....	553	Centrala v. Smith , 103 Mo. App. 438, 77 S. W. 488.....	807
Burnap v. Albert Taney , 244, Fed. Cas. No. 2,170.....	460	Central R. Co. v. Brewer , 78 Md. 406, 27 L. R. A. 63, 28 Atl. 615.....	459
Burnett v. Pennsylvania R. Co. 176 Pa. 45, 34 Atl. 972.....	233	Chamberlain v. Butler , 61 Neb. 730, 54 L. R. A. 338, 87 Am. St. Rep. 478, 86 N. W. 481.....	553
Burns v. Weaner , 134 Ind. 442, 34 N. E. 10.....	630	v. Wood , 15 S. D. 216, 56 L. R. A. 187, 91 Am. St. Rep. 674, 88 N. W. 109.....	336
Burrage v. Bonanza Gold & Quicksilver Min. Co. 12 Or. 169, 6 Pac. 766.....	163	Chandler v. Atlantic Coast Electric R. Co. 61 N. J. L. 380, 39 Atl. 674.....	959
Burrall v. Bushwick R. Co. 75 N. Y. 211.....	964	v. Kennedy , 8 S. D. 56, 65 N. W. 439.....	38
Bursinger v. Bank of Watertown , 67 Wis. 75, 58 Am. Rep. 848, 30 N. W. 290.....	553	Chapin v. Brown Bros. 83 Iowa, 156, 12 L. R. A. 428, 32 Am. St. Rep. 297, 48 N. W. 1074.....	913
Butcher's Union S. H. & L. S. L. Co. v. Crescent City L. S. L. & S. H. Co. 111 U. S. 746, 28 L. ed. 585, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 652.....	287	v. Crow , 147 Ill. 219, 37 Am. St. Rep. 213, 35 N. E. 536.....	630
Butler v. Regents of University , 32 Wis. 124.....	740	Chapman v. Long , 66 Vt. 656, 30 Atl. 3.....	970
Butner v. Western U. Teleg. Co. 2 Okla. 234, 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 770, 37 Pac. 1087.....	321	v. Pittsburg & S. R. Co. 26 W. Va. 324.....	601
Butterworth v. United States , 112 U. S. 50, 28 L. ed. 656, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 25.....	174	v. Western U. Teleg. Co. 88 Ga. 763, 17 L. R. A. 430, 30 Am. St. Rep. 183, 15 S. E. 901.....	992
v. Western Assur. Co. 132 Mass. 489.....	587	v. Western U. Teleg. Co. 90 Ky. 265, 13 S. W. 880.....	991
Byers v. McAuley , 149 U. S. 608, 37 L. ed. 867, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 906.....	766	Chappell v. Ellis , 123 N. C. 263, 68 Am. St. Rep. 822, 31 S. E. 709, 987.....	988
67 L. R. A.		Chautauque County Bank v. Risley , 19 N. Y. 369, 75 Am. Dec. 347.....	886

- Chauvin v. Valiton, 8 Mont. 451, 3 L. R. A. 196, 20 Pac. 658..... 628
 Cheever v. Meyer, 52 Vt. 66..... 686
 Cheeves v. Anders, 87 Tex. 287, 47 Am. St. Rep. 107, 28 S. W. 274..... 553
 Chesapeake & O. R. Co. v. Paline, 29 Gratt. 502..... 676, 677
 Chesapeake & P. Teleph. Co. v. Baltimore & O. Teleg. Co. 66 Md. 390, 59 Am. Rep. 167, 7 Atl. 811..... 252
 Chew v. Keller, 100 Mo. loc. cit. 370, 13 S. W. 395..... 99 Chicago v. Jackson, 196 Ill. 496, 63 N. E. 1013..... 842
 v. Netcher, 183 Ill. 104, 48 L. R. A. 201, 75 Am. St. Rep. 93, 55 N. E. 707..... 287
 v. Seben, 165 Ill. 371, 56 Am. St. Rep. 245, 46 N. E. 244..... 262 Chicago & A. R. Co. v. Esten, 178 Ill. 192, 52 N. E. 954..... 418
 v. Maher, 91 Ill. 312..... 843
 v. Michle, 83 Ill. 427..... 246, 248, 251 Chicago & E. L. R. Co. v. Loeb, 118 Ill. 203, 59 Am. Rep. 341, 8 N. E. 460..... 844
 Chicago & N. W. R. Co. v. Whitton, 13 Wall. 270, 20 L. ed. 571..... 765 Chicago & P. R. Co. v. Francis, 70 Ill. 238..... 843
 v. Stein, 75 Ill. 41..... 836, 844
 Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Beal (Neb.), 94 N. W. 958..... 410
 v. Mehlsack, 131 Ill. 61, 19 Am. St. Rep. 17, 22 N. E. 812..... 245, 247, 251 Chicago M. & St. P. R. Co. v. Hall, 90 Ill. 42..... 843
 v. Ross, 112 U. S. 377, 28 L. ed. 787, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 184..... 341
 Chicago Packing & Provision Co. v. Chicago, 88 Ill. 221, 30 Am. Rep. 545..... 616
 Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co. v. Sturm, 174 U. S. 710, 43 L. ed. 1144, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 797..... 224, 226 Chicot County v. Kruse, 47 Ark. 80, 14 S. W. 469..... 253
 v. Sherwood, 148 U. S. 529, 37 L. ed. 546, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 695..... 765, 766 Chieflinksy v. Hoopes & T. Co. 1 Marv. (Del.) 273, 40 Atl. 1127..... 93
 Childs v. Moran, 114 Ga. 320, 40 S. E. 271..... 804, 808
 Childers v. People, 11 Mich. 43..... 627
 Choctaw, O. & G. R. Co. v. Zwirtz, 13 Okla. 411, 73 Pac. 941..... 648
 Christensen v. Lambert, 67 N. J. L. 341, 51 Atl. 702..... 959
 Christian v. St. Louis, 127 Mo. 109, 29 S. W. 996..... 366
 Christmas v. Russell, 5 Wall. 290, 18 L. ed. 475..... 563, 561
 Christopher v. Searcy, 12 Rush. 171..... 193
 Chrystle v. Phyte, 19 N. Y. 344..... 630
 Church v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. 50 Minn. 218, 16 L. R. A. 861, 52 N. W. 647..... 703 Cicero Lumber Co. v. Cicero, 176 Ill. 9, 42 L. R. A. 696, 68 Am. St. Rep. 155, 51 N. E. 758..... 971
 Cincinnati, N. O. & T. P. R. Co. v. Graves, 21 Ky. L. Rep. 684, 52 S. W. 961..... 416
 v. Kentucky, 115 U. S. 321, 29 L. ed. 414, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 57..... 206 Circleville v. Sohn, 59 Ohio St. 283, 69 Am. St. Rep. 777, 52 N. E. 788..... 262
 Citizens' Rapid Transit Co. v. Dew, 100 Tenn. 317, 40 L. R. A. 518, 66 Am. St. Rep. 754, 45 S. W. 790..... 472
 City Bank, Ex parte, 3 How. 296, 11 L. ed. 605..... 760
 City Electric Street R. Co. v. Conery, 61 Ark. 381, 31 L. R. A. 570, 54 Am. St. Rep. 262, 33 S. W. 426..... 557
 Clapp v. Otoe County, 45 C. C. A. 579, 104 Fed. 473..... 553
 Clark v. Allen, 11 R. I. 439, 23 Am. Rep. 496..... 553
 v. Bever, 139 U. S. 96, 35 L. ed. 88, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 468..... 765 Clark v. Cox, 115 N. C. 93, 20 S. E. 176..... 443
 v. Hodge, 116 N. C. 761, 21 S. E. 562..... 982
 v. Hughes, 51 Neb. 780, 71 N. W. 716..... 343
 v. Kansas City, 176 U. S. 114, 44 L. ed. 392, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 284..... 907
 v. Lawrence, 59 N. C. (6 Jones, Eq.) 83, 78 Am. Dec. 241..... 984
 Clarke v. Holmes (1862) 7 Hurlst & N. 937..... 513
 Clay v. Isenminger, 187 Pa. 108, 41 Atl. 38, Affirmed in 185 U. S. 55, 46 L. ed. 804, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 573..... 561
 v. St. Albans, 43 W. Va. 539, 64 Am. St. Rep. 883, 27 S. E. 368..... 934, 935
 Cleland v. Tavernier, 11 Minn. 194, Gil. 126..... 945 Clemence v. Auburn, 66 N. Y. 334..... 261
 Clemens v. Hannibal & St. J. R. Co. 53 Mo. 366, 14 Am. Rep. 460..... 419
 Clement v. New York L. Ins. Co. 101 Tenn. 22, 42 L. R. A. 247, 70 Am. St. Rep. 650, 46 S. W. 561..... 553
 Cleveland, C. C. & St. L. R. Co. v. Drulen, 26 Ky. L. Rep. 103, 80 S. W. 778..... 415
 v. Moneyhun, 146 Ind. 147, 34 L. R. A. 141, 44 N. E. 1106..... 642 Cleveland P. & A. R. Co. v. Curran, 19 Ohio St. 1, 2 Am. Rep. 362..... 235
 Clidden v. Harrington, 189 U. S. 255, 47 L. ed. 798, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 574..... 928
 Close v. Wheaton, 65 Kan. 830, 70 Pac. 891..... 942, 943
 Clough v. London & N. W. R. Co. L. R. 7 Exch. 26..... 748
 Cluff v. Mutual Ben. L. Ins. Co. 13 Allen, 308, Reaffirmed in 99 Mass. 318..... 772
 Cobb v. Davenport, 32 N. J. L. 369..... 777
 Cochrane v. Schell, 140 N. Y. 516, 35 N. E. 971..... 151, 153
 Cockburn v. Ashland Lumber Co. 54 Wis. 619, 12 N. W. 49..... 760
 Coffee v. Black, 82 Va. 567..... 864
 Coffin v. Portland, 43 Fed. 411..... 857
 Cogdell v. Western U. Teleg. Co. 135 N. C. 431, 47 S. E. 490..... 987 Coggs v. Bernard, 2 Smith, Lead. Cas. 82..... 236, 237
 Cohen v. Ottenhelmer, 13 Or. 220, 10 Pac. 20..... 174
 Coldwater v. Tucker, 36 Mich. 474, 24 Am. Rep. 601..... 933
 Cole v. Tyson, 43 N. C. (8 Ired. Eq.) 170..... 590
 Cole Bros. v. Wood, 11 Ind. App. 37, 36 N. E. 1074..... 343
 Cole Mfg. Co. v. Falls, 92 Tenn. 607, 22 S. W. 856..... 494
 Coleman v. Applegarth, 68 Md. 21, 6 Am. St. Rep. 417, 11 Atl. 284..... 579
 Coles v. Peck, 96 Ind. 333, 49 Am. Rep. 161..... 358
 Colt v. Ives, 31 Conn. 25, 81 Am. Dec. 161..... 685, 686
 Colton v. Fox, 67 N. Y. 348..... 149
 Columbian Ins. Co. v. Lawrence, 2 Pet. 25, 7 L. ed. 333..... 480
 Combs v. Combs, 67 Md. 11, 1 Am. St. Rep. 359, 8 Atl. 757..... 101
 Commercial Union Assur. Co. v. Hocking, 115 Pa. 407, 2 Am. St. Rep. 562, 8 Atl. 589..... 484
 Commercial Union Teleg. Co. v. New England Teleph. & Teleg. Co. 61 Vt. 241, 5 L. R. A. 161, 15 Am. St. Rep. 893, 17 Atl. 1071..... 252
 Com. v. Addicks, 5 Binn. 520..... 864
 v. Addicks, 2 Serg. & R. 174..... 864
 v. Alger, 7 Cush. 53..... 940
 v. Anthes, 5 Gray, 185..... 939
 v. Hickings, 12 Pa. Dist. R. 206..... 142
 v. Blackington, 24 Pick. 352..... 940
 v. Briggs, 16 Pick. 203..... 864
 v. Brown, 121 Mass. 69..... 952
 v. Cain, 102 Mass. 487..... 953
 v. Carey, 103 Mass. 214..... 952
 v. Clifford, 8 Cush. 215..... 351
 v. Connelly, 163 Mass. 539, 40 N. E. 862..... 939
 v. Costello, 120 Mass. 358..... 952
 v. Cullins, 1 Mass. 116..... 349

Com. v. Davis, 12 Bush, 240	425	Cooper v. Johnson, 143 Mass. 108, 9 N. E.	700
v. Delaware Div. Canal Co. 123 Pa.		v. Reynolds, 10 Wall. 308, 19 L. ed.	931
594, 2 L. R. A. 798, 16 Atl.	203		224, 943
584	330	Copeland v. Western Assur. Co. 43 S. C.
v. Eddy, 7 Gray, 583.		26, 20 S. E. 754.	483
v. Fall Brook Coal Co. 156 Pa. 488,	206	Corbett v. Spring Garden Ins. Co. 85 Hun,
26 Atl. 1071.		250, 32 N. Y. Supp. 1059.	635
v. Gagne, 153 Mass. 205, 10 L. R.		Corcoran v. White, 117 Ill. 118, 57 Am.
A. 442, 26 N. E. 449.	907, 917	Rep. 858, 7 N. E. 525.	857
v. Hall, 9 Gray, 262, 60 Am. Dec.		Corey v. Waldo, 126 Mich. 706, 86 N. W.
285	950	122	314, 315
v. Has, 122 Mass. 40.	939	Cornick v. Rickards, 3 Lea. 1.	687
v. Hearsey, 1 Mass. 137.	952	Cory v. Cory, 37 N. J. Eq. 198.	452
v. Hills, 10 Cush. 530.	952	v. State, 55 Ga. 239.	193
v. Holmes, 103 Mass. 440.	952	Costelo v. Crowell, 127 Mass. 293, 34 Am.
v. Hoskins, 18 Ky. L. Rep. 59, 35		Rep. 367.	37
S. W. 284.	532	Cote v. New York, N. H. & H. R. Co. 182
v. Leach, 1 Mass. 61.	511	Mass. 290, 94 Am. St. Rep. 650,
v. Lehigh Coal & Nav. Co. 162 Pa.		65 N. E. 400.	557
603, 29 Atl. 664.	206	Cottom v. Holliday, 59 Ill. 176.	291
v. Lehigh Valley R. Co. 129 Pa.		Coventry Mut. Live Stock Ins. Asso. v.
455, 18 Atl. 406.	205	Evans, 102 Pa. 281.	524
v. Morse, 2 Mass. 128.	952	Covington v. Threadgill, 88 N. C. 186.	250
v. Perry, 155 Mass. 117, 14 L. R.		Cowan v. Western T. Tele. Co. 122 Iowa,
A. 325, 31 Am. St. Rep. 533,		379, 64 L. R. A. 545, 101 Am.
28 N. E. 1126.	287, 920	St. Rep. 268, 98 N. W. 281.	902
v. Plaisted, 148 Mass. 375, 2 L. R.		Cowell v. Thayer, 5 Met. 253, 38 Am. Dec.
A. 142, 12 Am. St. Rep. 566,		400.	837
19 N. E. 224.	807	Cowhick v. Shingle, 5 Wyo. 87, 25 L. R. A.
v. Sisson, 179 Mass. 578, 60 N. E.		608, 63 Am. St. Rep. 17, 37
385	798	Pac. 689.	511
v. Tuck, 20 Pick. 356.	952	Cowles v. Mercer County, 7 Wall. 118, 19
v. Walte, 11 Allen, 264, 87 Am.		L. ed. 86.	765, 766
Dec. 711.	938	Cowley v. Northern P. R. Co. 159 U. S.
v. Webster, 5 Cush. 320, 52 Am.		569, 40 L. ed. 263, 16 Sup. Ct.
Dec. 711.	329	Rep. 127.	765
v. Williams, 7 Gray, 337.	349	Cozine v. Horn, 1 Bradf. 143.	864
v. Worcester, 3 Pick. 462.	811	Crabb v. Nashville Bank, 6 Yerg. 332.	497
v. Wright, 158 Mass. 149, 19 L. R.		Craft v. McCounoughy, 79 Ill. 346, 22 Am.
A. 206, 35 Am. St. Rep. 475,		Rep. 171.	913
33 N. E. 82.	951	Crane, Re, 164 N. Y. 71, 58 N. E. 47.	153
v. York, 9 Met. 93, 43 Am. Dec.		Cranstown v. Johnston, 3 Ves. Jr. 170.	942
373	511	Creigh v. Boggs, 19 W. Va. 240.	860
v. York, Bennett & H. Lead. Crim.		Crim v. Harmon, 38 W. Va. 596, 18 S. E.
Cas. 504.	329	753.	687
Compher v. Compher, 25 Pa. 31.	454	Croasdale v. Von Boyneburgk, 206 Pa. 15,
Condran v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. 28		55 Atl. 770.	459, 460
L. R. A. 749, 14 C. C. A. 506,		Cromwell v. Sac County, 94 U. S. 351, 24
32 U. S. App. 182, 67 Fed.		L. ed. 195.	554
522	248, 251	Croswell v. Connecticut Indemnity Asso.
Congdon v. Kendall, 53 Neb. 282, 73 N.		51 S. C. 103, 28 S. E. 200.	553
W. 659	750	Crowder v. Clowes, 2 Ves. Jr. 449.	152
Congower v. Equitable Mut. Life & Endow-		Crowley v. Christensen, 137 U. S. 86, 34 L.
ment Asso. 94 Iowa, 499, 63 N.		ed. 620, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 13,	74
W. 192	632		618, 617
Conlon v. St. Paul, 70 Minn. 216, 72 N. W.		v. West, 52 La. Ann. 526, 47 L. R.
1073	259	A. 652, 78 Am. St. Rep. 355, 27
Connecticut F. Ins. Co. v. Erie R. Co. 73		So. 53.	75
N. Y. 890, 29 Am. Rep. 171.	165	Cruiser v. State, 18 N. J. L. 209.	193
Connecticut Mut. L. Ins. Co. v. Schaefer,		Crumlish v. Shenandoah Valley R. Co. 40
94 U. S. 457, 24 L. ed.		W. Va. 627, 22 S. E. 90.	684
251	552, 553	Culton v. Gl'christ, 92 Iowa, 718, 61 N.
v. Spratley, 172 U. S. 602, 43 L. ed.		W. 384.	856
569, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 308.	224	Cumberland v. Willison, 50 Md. 138, 33
Connely v. Western T. Tele. Co. 100 Va.		Am. Rep. 304.	934
51, 56 L. R. A. 663, 93 Am. St.		Cumbey v. Lovett, 76 Minn. 230, 79 N. W.
Rep. 919, 40 S. E. 618.	992	99	883
Connolly v. Boston, 117 Mass. 64, 19 Am.		Cummings v. Merchants' Nat. Bank, 101
Rep. 396.	232, 248	U. S. 153, 25 L. ed. 903.	765
v. Union Sewer Pipe Co. 184 U. S.		Cunningham v. Evansville & T. H. R. Co.
540, 46 L. ed. 679, 22 Sup. Ct.		102 Ind. 478, 52 Am. Rep.
Rep. 431.	906, 921, 922	683, 1 N. E. 800.	92
Connor v. People, 18 Colo. 373, 25 L. R.		Curley v. Hoff, 62 N. J. L. 760, 42 Atl. 731	959
A. 341, 36 Am. St. Rep. 295,		Curriden v. St. Paul & N. P. R. Co. 50
33 Pac. 159.	142	Minn. 454, 52 N. W. 966.	877
Continental Nat. Bank v. Eliot Nat. Bank,		Curtis v. Crossley, 59 N. J. Eq. 358, 45
7 Fed. 369.	683, 686	Atl. 905.	685
Cook, Re, 49 Fed. 833.	954, 955	v. Steever, 36 N. J. L. 304.	676
v. Berlin Woolen Mills Co. 43 Wis.		v. Whitney, 13 Wall. 68, 20 L. ed.
438	291	513.	561
v. Genesee Mut. Ins. Co. 8 How. Pr.		Curtiss v. Etina L. Ins. Co. 90 Cal. 245, 25
514	164	Am. St. Rep. 114, 27 Pac. 211.	553
v. Marshall County 119 Iowa, 384,		Cuthbertson v. North Carolina Home Ins.
93 W. W. 372.	626	Co. 96 N. C. 480, 2 S. E. 258.	480
v. Moore, 100 N. C. 294, 6 Am. St.
Rep. 587, 6 S. E. 795, 187, 191,	192
v. Southern R. Co. 128 N. C. 333,
38 S. E. 925.	228, 229, 245
Coon v. Cook, 6 Ind. 268.	942
Coonley, v. Albany, 132 N. Y. 145, 30 N. E.
382	934
Cooper, Ex parte, 136 N. C. 130, 48 S. E.
581	449
v. Day, 3 Meriv. 154.	151
67 L. R. A.

D.

Daggett v. Colgan, 92 Cal. 53, 14 L. R. A.
474, 27 Am. St. Rep. 95, 28
Pac. 51.	818
Dalley v. Preferred Masonic Mut. Accl.
Asso. 102 Mich. 289, 26 L. R.
A. 171, 57 N. W. 184, 60 N. W.
604.	178

Dallas v. Jones, 93 Tex. 38, 49 S. W. 577, 53 S. W. 377	262	Devine v. Boston & A. R. Co. 159 Mass. 351, 34 N. E. 539	343
Dally v. Young, 3 Ill. App. 39	459	Dick v. Pitchford, 21 N. C. (1 Dev. & B. Eq.) 484	447
Dana v. Fiedler, 12 N. Y. 40, 62 Am. Dec. 130	632	Dickert v. Salt Lake City R. Co. 20 Utah, 394, 59 Pac. 95	509
v. Murray, 122 N. Y. 604, 26 N. E. 21	153	Dicklason v. Central Nat. Bank, 129 Mass. 279, 37 Am. Rep. 351	686
v. Third Nat. Bank, 13 Allen, 445, 90 Am. Dec. 216	624	v. Dodds, L. R. 2 Ch. Div. 463	579
Dance v. Seaman, 11 Gratt. 778	685	Dietrich v. Hutchinson, 73 Vt. 134, 87 Am. St. Rep. 698, 50 Atl. 810	970
Daniel v. Weaver, 5 Lea, 393	494, 495	Dillenberger v. Weingartner, 64 N. J. L. 292, 45 Atl. 638	959
Daniels v. State, 6 Am. St. Rep. 238, note (78 Ga. 98)	928	Dinham v. Bradford, L. R. 5 Ch. 519	357
v. Tearney, 102 U. S. 415, 26 L. ed. 187	562	Disch v. Timm, 101 Wis. 189, 77 N. W. 196	756
Danville v. Hatcher, 101 Va. 523, 44 S. E. 723	617	Dixon v. National L. Ins. Co. 168 Mass. 48, 46 N. E. 430	553
Darragh v. H. Wetter Mfg. Co. 23 C. C. A. 609, 49 U. S. App. 1, 78 Fed. 7	765	Doe ex dem. Taylor v. Roe, 11 N. C. (4 Hawks) 116, 15 Am. Dec. 512	448
Darrah v. Baird, 101 Pa. 265	362	Donnally v. Hearndon, 41 W. Va. 519, 23 S. E. 646	689
Davenport Nat. Bank v. Davenport Bd. of Equalization, 123 U. S. 83, 31 L. ed. 94, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 73	206	Donnell v. Mater, 40 N. C. (5 Ired. Eq.) 7	448
Davidson v. New Orleans, 96 U. S. 97, 24 L. ed. 616	628	Donnelly v. Frick & L. Co. 207 Pa. 597, 57 Atl. 60	362
Davis v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. 93 Wis. 470, 33 L. R. A. 654, 57 Am. St. Rep. 935, 67 N. W. 16	236	Dorsey v. Allen, 85 N. C. 358, 39 Am. Rep. 704	984
v. Davis, 115 Pa. 261, 7 Atl. 746	354	Doster v. Charlotte Street R. Co. 117 N. C. 651, 34 L. R. A. 481, 23 S. E. 449	471
v. Gray, 16 Wall. 203, 21 L. ed. 447	765	v. Manistee Nat. Bank, 67 Ark. 325, 48 L. R. A. 334, 77 Am. St. Rep. 116, 55 S. W. 137	886
v. Hamlin, 108 Ill. 39, 48 Am. Rep. 541	290	Dott v. Cunningham, 1 Bay, 453, 1 Am. Dec. 624	630
v. Headley, 22 N. J. Eq. 115	942	Dougherty v. Sprinkle, 88 N. C. 300	467, 468
v. Morgan, 10 Mont. 141, 47 Pac. 793	927	Dow v. Dow, 36 Me. 211	100
v. Moss, 38 Pa. 346	362	Dowdell, Re, 169 Mass. 387, 61 Am. St. Rep. 290, 47 N. E. 1033	974
v. Parker, 14 Allen, 94	942	Downey v. Hoffer, 110 Pa. 109, 20 Atl. 655	553
v. Somerville, (1880) 128 Mass. 594, 35 Am. Rep. 309	248	Doyle, Re, 16 Mo. App. 159	864
v. Tacoma R. & Power Co. 35 Wash. 203, 66 L. R. A. 802, 77 Pac. 209	992	Doyle's Petition, 16 R. L. 537, 5 L. R. A. 359, 27 Am. St. Rep. 759, 18 Atl. 150	976
v. Turner, 4 Gratt. 422	685	Drake v. Hamilton Woolen Co. 99 Mass. 574	646
v. United States, 160 U. S. 469, 40 L. ed. 499, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 353	328	Dreutzer v. Baker, 60 Wis. 179, 18 N. W. 776	875
v. Western U. Teleg. Co. 107 Ky. 527, 92 Am. St. Rep. 371, 54 S. W. 849	415	Drinkall v. Spiegel, 68 Conn. 441, 36 L. R. A. 486, 30 Atl. 830	951
v. Western U. Teleg. Co. 46 W. Va. 48, 32 S. E. 1026	992	Drinkwater v. Dinsmore, 80 N. Y. 390, 36 Am. Rep. 624	93
Davis's Case, 122 Mass. 324	950	Dubois v. Johnson, 96 Ind. 6	790
Davis Shoe Co. v. Kittanning Ins. Co. 138 Pa. 73, 21 Am. St. Rep. 904, 20 Atl. 838	484	Duffield v. Williamsport School District, 162 Pa. 476, 25 L. R. A. 152, 29 Atl. 742	939
Dearle v. Hall, 3 Russ. Ch. 1	686, 687	Duncan v. Berlin, 60 N. Y. 151	624
Decker v. McGowan, 59 Ga. 805	802	v. Cobb, 32 Minn. 460, 21 N. W. 714	560
Deering v. Hoeft, 111 Wis. 339, 87 N. W. 298	741	v. Maine, C. R. Co. (1902) 113 Fed. 508	251
Dehart v. Dehart, 15 Ind. 167	942	v. Niles, 32 Ill. 532, 83 Am. Dec. 293	978
Deltz v. Neenah, 91 Wis. 425, 64 N. W. 299, 65 N. W. 500	756	Dunnell v. Keteltas, 16 Abb. Pr. 205	357
Delafield v. Shipman, 103 N. Y. 463, 9 N. E. 184	153	Dunning v. Maine C. R. Co. 91 Me. 87, 64 Am. St. Rep. 298, 39 Atl. 352	419
Delaney v. McCormack, 88 N. Y. 174	153	v. Maine C. R. Co. 91 Me. 87, 64 Am. St. Rep. 298, 39 Atl. 352	421
Delano, Re, 37 Mo. App. 185	863	Dunster v. Glengall, 3 Ir. Ch. Rep. 47	687
Delaware, L. & W. R. Co. v. Trautwein, 52 N. J. L. 169, 7 L. R. A. 435, 19 Am. St. Rep. 442, 19 Atl. 178	233	Duxbury v. Boice, 70 Minn. 113, 72 N. W. 838	877
Dellus v. Cawthorn, 13 N. C. (2 Dev. L.) 90	979, 980	Dwight v. Eckert, 117 Pa. 508, 12 Atl. 32	758
Del'z v. Winfree, 80 Tex. 400, 26 Am. St. Rep. 755, 16 S. W. 111	198, 199, 200
Den ex dem. Ferebee v. Procter, 10 N. C. (2 Dev. & Bl.) 439	447	E.
Denny v. Fronheiser, 207 Pa. 174, 56 Atl. 406	354	Earl v. Vass, 1 Shaw, 229	929
Denver v. Barber Asphalt Paving Co. 27 C. C. A. 677, 49 U. S. App. 633, 83 Fed. 1020	705	Eastman v. State, 109 Ind. 278, 58 Am. Rep. 400, 10 N. E. 97	615
Denver & S. F. R. Co. v. Domke, 11 Colo. 247, 17 Pac. 777	367	East Tennessee, V. & G. R. Co. v. Johnson, 85 Ga. 497, 11 S. E. 809	558
Denver Consol. Electric Co. v. Lawrence, 31 Colo. 301, 73 Pac. 39	478	East Texas F. Ins. Co. v. Blum, 76 Tex. 653, 13 S. W. 572	585, 588
v. Simpson, 21 Colo. 371, 31 L. R. A. 566, 41 Pac. 499	478	v. Brown, 82 Tex. 631, 18 S. W. 713	480
Derby v. Derby, 4 R. I. 414	121, 123, 124	Eastwood v. Retsof Min. Co. 86 Hun, 91, 34 N. Y. Supp. 196	517
Detroit v. Blackeby, 21 Mich. 84, 4 Am. Rep. 450	260	Eaton v. Delaware, L. & W. R. Co. 57 N. Y. 382, 15 Am. Rep. 513	247
Deville v. Widoe, 64 Mich. 593, 8 Am. St. Rep. 852, 31 N. W. 533	314	v. Manitowoc County, 40 Wis. 668	561
67 L. R. A.		Eberhart v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. 70 Ill. 347	843
		Echols v. State, 109 Ga. 508, 34 S. E. 1038	430, 431

- Echols v. Tracewell, 52 W. Va. 614, 44 S. E. 164 693 Eckel v. Renner, 41 Ohio St. 232 553
 Edelman v. Yeakel, 27 Pa. 27 465
 Eden v. People, 161 Ill. 296, 32 L. R. A. 659, 52 Am. St. Rep. 365, 43 N. E. 1108 75
 Edsall v. Camden & A. R. & Transp. Co. 50 N. Y. 661 436
 Edwards v. Kearzey, 96 U. S. 595, 24 L. ed. 793 563
 v. London & N. W. R. Co. L. R. 5 C. P. 446 480
 Edwards & B. Lumber Co. v. Rank, 73 Am. St. Rep. 514, 57 Neb. 323, 77 N. W. 765 699
 Egger v. Nesbitt, 122 Mo. 667, 43 Am. St. Rep. 596, 27 S. W. 385 858
 Eldridge v. Trezevant, 160 U. S. 452, 40 L. ed. 490, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 345 778
 Elgin v. Eaton, 83 Ill. 535, 25 Am. Rep. 412 843
 Elliot v. McCormick, 144 Mass. 10, 10 N. E. 705 944
 Ellsworth v. Lord, 40 Minn. 337, 42 N. W. 389 902
 Elmbank, The, 72 Fed. 610 164
 Emerich v. Indianapolis, 118 Ind. 279, 20 N. E. 795 616
 Emory v. Keighan, 88 Ill. 482 875
 English v. English, 32 N. J. Eq. 738 864
 Ephland v. Missouri P. R. Co. 57 Mo. App. 147 93
 Erlanger v. New Sombbrero Phosphate Co. L. R. 3 App. Cas. 1283 750
 Ermentrout v. Girard F. & M. Ins. Co. 63 Minn. 303, 30 L. R. A. 346, 56 Am. St. Rep. 481, 65 N. W. 635 523
 Erskine v. Staley, 12 Leigh. 406 692
 Essex County Electric Co. v. Kelly, 57 N. J. L. 100, 29 Atl. 427 950
 Everhart v. Teire Haute & I. R. Co. 78 Ind. 292, 41 Am. Rep. 567 703
 Ewell v. Daggs, 108 U. S. 146, 27 L. ed. 683, 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. 412 250
 Eyre v. McDowell, 9 H. L. Cas. 619 687
- F.
- Fair v. Philadelphia, 88 Pa. 309, 32 Am. Rep. 455 934
 Fairbanks v. Long, 91 Mo. 628, 4 S. W. 499 875
 Fairchild v. St. Louis, 97 Mo. 85, 11 S. W. 60 365
 Faison v. Alabama & V. R. Co. 69 Miss. 569, 30 Am. St. Rep. 577, 13 So. 37 557
 Falkland Islands Co. v. Reg. 10 Jur. N. S. 807 776
 Fallon v. Childester, 46 Iowa, 590, 26 Am. Rep. 164 318
 Falmouth v. Watson, 5 Bush, 660 616
 Faribault v. Misener, 20 Minn. 396, Gil. 347 284
 Farmers' & M. Ins. Co. v. Dolney, 189 U. S. 301, 47 L. ed. 821, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 565 522
 Farmers' Nat. Gold Bank v. Wilson, 58 Cal. 600 668
 Farmville v. Walker, 101 Va. 323, 61 L. R. A. 125, 99 Am. St. Rep. 870, 43 S. E. 558 616
 Farr v. Peterson, 91 Wis. 182, 64 N. W. 863 742
 Farrar v. Christy, 24 Mo. 453 110
 Farthing v. Shields, 106 N. C. 280, 10 S. E. 908 467
 Faulkner v. Territory, 6 N. M. 465, 30 Pac. 905 327
 Faust v. Birner, 30 Mo. 417 105
 Fennell v. Zimmerman, 60 Va. 197, 31 S. E. 22 731
 Ferguson v. Kumlir, 11 Minn. 104, Gil. 63 601 Ferry v. Campbell, 110 Iowa, 294, 50 L. R. A. 92, 81 N. W. 604 627
 v. Deneen (Iowa) 82 N. W. 424 627
 Fessenden v. Jones, 52 N. C. (7 Jones, L.) 14, 75 Am. Dec. 445 970 Field v. Eastern Bldg. & L. Asso. 117 Iowa, 185, 90 N. W. 717 632
 v. Pierce, 102 Mass. 253 685
 Fielden v. People, 128 Ill. 599, 21 N. E. 585 193
- Fifield v. Farmers' Nat. Bank, 148 Ill. 163, 39 Am. St. Rep. 166, 35 N. E. 802 700
 Findlay v. Smith, 6 Munf. 142, 8 Am. Dec. 733 691
 Fink v. O'Neill, 106 U. S. 272, 27 L. ed. 196, 1 Sup. Ct. Rep. 325 189
 First Nat. Bank v. Gifford, 47 Iowa, 575 684
 v. Harkness, 42 W. Va. 156, 32 L. R. A. 408, 24 S. E. 548 687
 v. Henry, 156 Ind. 1, 58 N. E. 1057 944
 v. Savannah, F. & W. R. Co. 36 Fla. 183, 18 So. 345 586
 v. Whitman, 94 U. S. 347, 24 L. ed. 232 623 Fisher v. Brilerley, 30 Nev. 267 152
 v. Essex Bank, 5 Gray, 373 686
 v. McGlirr, 1 Gray, 1, 61 Am. Dec. 381 938
 v. Trader's Mut. L. Ins. Co. 136 N. C. 217, 48 S. E. 667 224
 Fitzgerald v. Edison Electric Illuminating Co. 200 Pa. 540, 86 Am. St. Rep. 732, 59 Atl. 161 477
 Fitzpatrick v. Hartford Life & Annuity Ins. Co. 56 Conn. 116, 7 Am. St. Rep. 288, 13 Atl. 673, 17 Atl. 411 553
 Flack v. Fry, 32 W. Va. 364, 9 S. E. 240 616
 Flaum v. Wallace, 103 N. C. 296, 9 S. E. 567 468 Fleetwood v. Fleetwood, 17 N. C. (2 Dev. Eq.) 223 442
 v. Read, 21 Wash. 547, 47 L. R. A. 205, 58 Pac. 665 801
 Fleischner v. Pacific Postal Telegr. Cable Co. 55 Fed. 738, Affirmed in 14 C. C. A. 166, 29 U. S. App. 227, 68 Fed. 899 160
 Fleming v. Barden, 126 N. C. 450, 53 L. R. A. 316, 78 Am. St. Rep. 671, 36 S. E. 17, 127 N. C. 214, 53 L. R. A. 326, 37 S. E. 219 468
 Flippin v. Flippin, 117 N. C. 376, 23 S. E. 321 453
 Florence Min. Co. v. Brown, 124 U. S. 385, 31 L. ed. 424, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 531 623
 Florida C. & P. R. Co. v. Sullivan, 61 L. R. A. 410, 57 C. C. A. 167, 120 Fed. 799 239
 Florida East Coast R. Co. v. Hazel, 43 Fla. 263, 31 So. 272 521
 Flower v. Pennsylvania R. Co. 69 Pa. 210, 8 Am. Rep. 251 704
 Floyd v. Barker, 1 Paige, 480 151
 Foley v. Jersey City Electric Light Co. 54 N. J. L. 411, 24 Atl. 487 959
 Ford v. Flint, 40 Vt. 382 630
 Forkner v. Stuart, 6 Gratt. 198 685
 Forrester v. Georgia R. & Bkg. Co. 92 Ga. 699, 19 S. E. 811 557
 Forse and Hemblings Case, 4 Coke, 606 318
 Fort v. Southern R. Co. 64 S. C. 423, 42 S. E. 196 116
 Ft. Dodge Electric Light & P. Co. v. Ft. Dodge, 115 Iowa, 568, 89 N. W. 7 412 Foster v. Cockerell, 3 Clark & F. 466 686
 v. Potter, 37 Mo. 525 675
 Fourth Street Nat. Bank v. Yardley, 165 U. S. 634, 41 L. ed. 855, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 439 623
 Fowle v. Kerchner, 87 N. C. 56 981
 v. Park, 131 U. S. 88, 33 L. ed. 67, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 658 115
 Fowler v. Sands, 73 Vt. 237, 50 Atl. 1067 971
 Fox v. Boston & M. R. Co. 148 Mass. 220, 1 L. R. A. 702, 19 N. E. 222 557
 Francis v. Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co. 19 Kan. 303 282
 v. Edwards, 77 N. C. 271 457
 v. Western C. Telegr. Co. 58 Minn. 252, 25 L. R. A. 400, 49 Am. St. Rep. 507, 59 N. W. 1078 902
 Franklin L. Ins. Co. v. Hazard, 41 Ind. 116, 13 Am. Rep. 313 553
 Frazier v. Brownlow, 38 N. C. (3 Ired. Eq.) 237, 42 Am. Dec. 165 467
 Freeman v. Alderson, 119 U. S. 185, 30 L. ed. 372, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 165 944
 French v. Barber Asphalt Paving Co. 181 U. S. 324, 45 L. ed. 879, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 625 410
- 67 L. R. A.

French Case. See FRENCH v. BARBER

ASPHALT PAVING CO.

Frorer v. People, 141 Ill. 171, 16 L. R. A.

492, 31 N. E. 395

Fuller v. Madison Mut. Ins. Co. 36 Wis. 599

Furman v. Tenny, 28 Minn. 77, 9 N. W. 172

G.

Gaines v. Fuentes, 92 U. S. 10, 23 L. ed.

524

Galtner v. Balley, 49 N. C. (4 Jones, L.)

488, 69 Am. Dec. 763

Gallagher v. Crooks, 132 N. Y. 338, 30 N.

E. 746

Galligan v. Old Colony Street R. Co. 182

Mass. 211, 65 N. E. 48

Gann v. Nashville, C. & St. L. R. Co. 101

Tenn. 380, 70 Am. St. Rep. 687,

47 S. W. 493

Gardner v. Jay, L. R. 29 Ch. Div. 52, 3

English Ruling Cases, 251

v. Newburgh, 2 Johns. Ch. 162, 7

Am. Dec. 526

v. Swan Point Cemetery, 20 R.

I. 646, 78 Am. St. Rep. 897, 40

Atl. 871

Garn v. Lockard, 108 Mich. 196, 65 N. W.

764

Garner v. State, 36 Tex. 693

Garrett v. Dabney, 27 Miss. 335

Garriek v. Florida C. & P. R. Co. 53 S. C.

448, 69 Am. St. Rep. 874, 31

S. E. 334

Gastenaue v. Com. 108 Ky. 473, 49 L. R.

A. 111, 94 Am. St. Rep. 386,

56 S. W. 705

Gatch v. Des Moines, 63 Iowa, 718, 18 N.

W. 310

Gates v. Buck, 4 C. C. A. 116, 12 U. S.

App. 69, 53 Fed. 961

v. Raymond, 106 Wis. 657, 82 N. W.

530

Gauch v. St. Louis Mut. L. Ins. Co. 88 Ill.

251, 30 Am. Rep. 554

Gay v. D. M. Osborne & Co. 102 Wis. 641,

78 N. W. 1079

v. Grant, 101 N. C. 219, 8 S. E. 99,

106

Geer v. Connecticut, 161 U. S. 519, 40 L. ed.

793, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 600, 775,

778, 779, 780,

Geer Case. See GEER v. CONNECTICUT.

Geismann v. Missouri-Edison Electric Light

Co. 173 Mo. 654, 73 S. W. 654

Gentry v. Standard Life & Accd. Ins. Co. 6

Ohio S. & C. P. Dec. 114, 5

Ohio N. P. 331

German Bank v. Muth, 96 Wis. 344, 71 N.

W. 361

German Sav. Inst. v. Adae, 1 McCrary,

501, 8 Fed. 106

Gernet v. Lynn, 31 Pa. 94

Glant Powder Co. v. Oregon P. R. Co. 8

L. R. A. 700, 14 Sawy. 560,

42 Fed. 474

Gibbons v. District of Columbia, 116 U. S.

404, 29 L. ed. 414, 6 Sup. Ct.

Rep. 427

v. Ogden, 9 Wheat. 1, 6 L. ed. 23

v. Wisconsin Valley R. Co. 66 Wis.

161, 28 N. W. 170

Gibbs v. Consolidated Gas Co. 130 U. S. 396,

32 L. ed. 979, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep.

553

v. Williams, 25 Kan. 214, 37 Am.

Rep. 241

Gibson v. State, 17 Tex. App. 574

Giddens v. Western U. Teleg. Co. 111 Ga.

824, 35 S. E. 638

Giesler v. Jones, 25 Beav. 418

Gilbert v. Ackerman, 159 N. Y. 118, 45 L.

R. A. 118, 53 N. E. 753

v. Baxter, 71 Iowa, 327, 32 N. W.

364

v. James, 86 N. C. 244

v. Moore, 104 Pa. 74, 49 Am. Rep.

570

Gill v. Continental Union Gas Co. L. R. 7

Exch. 332

Gillespie v. Brooklyn Heights R. Co. 178 N.

Y. 347, 66 L. R. A. 618, 102 Am.

St. Rep. 503, 70 N. E. 857

Glozza v. Tiernan, 148 U. S. 657, 37 L. ed.

599, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 721

75, 616,

67 L. R. A.

Gleason v. Goodrich, Transp. Co. 32 Wis.

85, 14 Am. Rep. 716

Godcharles v. Wigeman, 113 Pa. 431, 6

Atl. 354

Godman v. Converse, 38 Neb. 657, 57 N. W.

394

Goetzman v. Connecticut Mut. L. Ins. Co. 3

Hun, 515

Gold v. Judson, 21 Conn. 616

Goodell v. Woodbury, 71 N. H. 378, 52

Atl. 855

Goodhart v. Pennsylvania R. Co. 177 Pa.

1, 55 Am. St. Rep. 705, 35 Atl.

191

Goodtitle ex dem. Hayward v. Whitby, 1

Burr, 228

Goodwin v. Coddington, 154 N. Y. 283, 48

S. E. 729

Gordon, Ex parte, 1 Black, 503, 17 L. ed.

134

Gormley v. Clark, 134 U. S. 338, 33 L. ed.

909, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 534

Gouglesmann v. People, 3 Park. Crim. Rep.

15

Gould v. Topeka, 32 Kan. 485, 49 Am. Rep.

496, 4 Pac. 822

Gourdin v. Deas, 27 S. C. 470, 4 S. E. 64

Gourlay v. Somerset, 19 Ves. Jr. 429

Govett v. Radridge, 3 East, 62

Graham v. Western U. Teleg. Co. 109 La.

1069, 34 So. 91

Grain v. Aldrich, 38 Cal. 514, 99 Am. Dec.

423

Grand Trunk R. Co. v. Stevens, 95 U. S.

655, 24 L. ed. 535

Granger Cases. See MUM v. ILLINOIS.

Graves v. United States, 150 U. S. 118, 37

L. ed. 1021, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 40

Gray v. Western U. Teleg. Co. 108 Tenn. 39,

56 L. R. A. 301, 91 Am. St. Rep.

706, 64 S. W. 1063

Green, Re, 141 U. S. 325, 35 L. ed. 765,

12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 11

v. Underwood, 30 C. C. A. 162,

57 U. S. App. 535, 86 Fed. 427

v. Williams, 92 Tenn. 220, 19 L. R.

A. 418, 21 S. W. 520

Greene v. White, 37 N. Y. 405

Greenfield v. Detroit & M. R. Co. 133 Mich.

557, 95 N. W. 546

Greenleaf v. People's Bank, 133 N. C. 202,

63 L. R. A. 490, 98 Am. St. Rep.

709, 45 S. E. 638

Greenwood v. Verdon, 1 Kay & J. 74

Gregg v. Wyman, 4 Cush. 322

Gregory v. Michell, 18 Ves. Jr. 328

Grey ex rel. Simmons v. Paterson, 60 N. J.

Eq. 385, 48 L. R. A. 717, 83

Am. St. Rep. 642, 45 Atl. 995

Grice, Re, 79 Fed. 627

Griffin v. Colver, 16 N. Y. 489, 60 Am. Dec.

718

v. Hasty, 94 N. C. 438

Grimes v. Hoyt, 55 N. C. (2 Jones, Eq.)

274

Griswold v. Waddington, 18 Johns. 439

Griswold College v. Davenport, 65 Iowa,

634, 22 N. W. 904

Grosvenor v. Flint, 20 R. I. 21, 37 Atl. 304

Gruener v. Moore County Judge, 6 Colo.

526

Guffy v. Hukill, 34 W. Va. 49, 8 L. R. A.

759, 26 Am. St. Rep. 901, 11

S. E. 754

Gulf, C. & S. F. R. Co. v. Benson, 60 Tex.

507, 5 Am. St. Rep. 74, 5 S. W.

822

v. Brown (Tex. Civ. App.) 24 S. W.

018

v. Campbell, 76 Tex. 174, 13 S. W.

19

v. Edior, 89 Tex. 454, 34 S. W. 414,

35 S. W. 144

v. Ellis, 165 U. S. 150, 41 L. ed.

666, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 253

v. Levy, 59 Tex. 542, 46 Am. Rep.

269, 59 Tex. 563, 46 Am. Rep.

278

v. Metcown, 65 Tex. 640

Gunther v. Ulrich, 82 Wis. 222, 33 Am.

St. Rep. 32, 52 N. W. 88

Guthrie's Appeal, 37 Pa. 9

Guyer v. Warren, 175 Ill. 328, 51 N. E. 580

Gwaltney v. Provident Sav. Life Assur.

Soc. 132 N. C. 925, 44 S. E. 659

527

648

920

453

772

655

174

92

447

149

769

765

183

262

630

357

239

992

163

239

505

991

769

764

494

143

248

245

100

248

357

838

922

482

250

250

243

628

358

253

699

419

484

251

557

284

991

236

745

630

576

527

H.
Hackett v. Hackett, 18 R. I. 155, 19 L. R. A. 558, 49 Am. St. Rep. 762, 26 Atl. 42	123
v. Moxley, 68 Vt. 210, 34 Atl. 949	970
Hackworth v. Ottumwa, 114 Iowa, 467, 87 N. W. 424	409
Hadley v. Baxendale, 9 Exch. 341	486
Hagan v. Scottish Union & Nat. Ins. Co. 186 U. S. 423, 46 L. ed. 1220, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 862	586
Hagar v. Reclamation Dist. No. 108, 111 U. S. 701, 28 L. ed. 569, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 603	628
Haggerty v. St. Louis Ice Mfg. & Storage Co. 143 Mo. 238, 40 L. R. A. 151, 65 Am. St. Rep. 647, 44 S. W. 1114	240
Hague v. Hague, 161 Pa. 643, 41 Am. St. Rep. 900, 29 Atl. 261	630
Haines v. People, 97 Ill. 161	792
Hale v. Audsley, 122 Mo. 316, 26 S. W. 963	653
Haley v. Reld, 16 Ga. 437	675
Hall v. Alford, 114 Mich. 165, 38 L. R. A. 205, 72 N. W. 137	777
v. Center, 40 Cal. 63	576
v. Crandall, 20 Cal. 567, 89 Am. Dec. 64	979
v. Nashville & C. R. Co. 13 Wall. 367, 20 L. ed. 594	164
v. Storrs, 7 Wis. 253	760
Hallyburton v. Single, 132 N. C. 947, 44 S. E. 655	448
Ham v. Ham, 21 N. C. (1 Dev. & B. Eq.) 598	448
Hamilton, Re, 66 Kan. 754, 71 Pac. 817, 784, 790	792
Hammond v. People, 32 Ill. 446, 83 Am. Dec. 286	790
v. State, 74 Miss. 214, 21 So. 149	407
Hampson v. Taylor, 15 R. I. 83, 8 Atl. 331, 23 Atl. 732	117
Hankinson v. Lynn Gas & Electric Co. 175 Mass. 271, 56 N. E. 604	423
Hanna v. Read, 102 Ill. 596, 40 Am. Rep. 608	383
Hannibal & St. J. R. Co. v. Fox, 31 Kan. 597, 3 Pac. 322	516
Harbison v. Swan, 58 Mo. 147	102, 110
Hard v. Ashley, 117 N. Y. 606, 23 N. E. 177	149, 150
v. Brown, 18 Vt. 87	578
Hardy v. Galloway, 111 N. C. 519, 32 Am. St. Rep. 828, 15 S. E. 890	447
v. Kingman County, 65 Kan. 111, 68 Pac. 1078	907
Harman v. Com. 12 Serg. & R. 69	186
Harper v. Phoenix Ins. Co. 19 Mo. 506	772
Harriman v. Pittsburgh, C. & St. L. R. Co. 45 Ohio St. 11, 4 Am. St. Rep. 507, 12 N. E. 451	423
Harrington v. McLean, 62 N. C. (Phil. Eq.) 260	254
Harris v. Harris, 42 N. C. (7 Ired. Eq.) 111, 33 Am. Dec. 393	467
Harrison v. Allen, 3 Call. (Va.) 297	651
v. People, 50 N. Y. 518, 10 Am. Rep. 517	136
Hart, Ex parte, 59 Fed. 804	953
v. Employers' Liability Assur. Corp. 122 Fed. 828	524
v. Moulton, 104 Wis. 349, 76 Am. St. Rep. 881, 80 N. W. 599	746
v. Sansom, 110 U. S. 151, 28 L. ed. 101, 3 Sup. Ct. Rep. 586	944
v. Western R. Corp. 13 Met. 99, 46 Am. Dec. 719	418
Hartford F. Ins. Co. v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. 30 L. R. A. 193, 17 C. C. A. 62, 36 U. S. App. 152, 70 Fed. 201	553
v. Hedding (Fla.) 37 So. 62	584
Hartman v. Aveline, 63 Ind. 344, 30 Am. Rep. 217	951
v. Welland, 36 Minn. 223, 30 N. W. 815	604
Harvey v. Johnson, 133 N. C. 352, 45 S. E. 644	467
Haskell v. Lambert, 16 Gray, 502	37
Hathaway v. Brown, 22 Minn. 214	873
Hatton v. Robinson, 14 Phil. 416, 25 Am. Dec. 415	930
Haverty v. Bass, 66 Me. 71	938
67 L. R. A.
Hawkins v. Barney, 5 Pet. 457, 8 L. ed. 180	561
v. Com. 61 Am. Dec. 163	296
Hawley v. James, 16 Wend. 121	153
v. Kansas & T. Coal Co. 48 Kan. 593, 30 Pac. 14	65
Hawralty v. Warren, 18 N. J. Eq. 124, 90 Am. Dec. 613	576
Hawse v. Burdmore, 4 Colo. 313	561
Hayes v. Wadgrom, 44 N. H. 580, 84 Am. Dec. 105	646
Haynes v. Burlington, 38 Vt. 350	934
v. Sherman, 117 N. Y. 433, 22 N. E. 938	153
Hayward v. Cope, 25 Beav. 151, 17 Eng. lish Ruling Cases, 823	971
Hazard Powder Co. v. Byrnes, 21 How. Pr. 189	491
Hearing's Succession, 26 La. Ann. 326	553
Hechinger v. Maysville, 22 Ky. L. Rep. 486, 49 L. R. A. 114, 57 S. W. 619	810
Heckman v. Sweet, 99 Cal. 303, 33 Pac. 1099	777
Hedden v. Griffin, 136 Mass. 229, 49 Am. Rep. 25	129
Hedderich v. State, 101 Ind. 564, 51 Am. Rep. 768, 1 N. E. 47	615
Hedger v. Rennaker, 3 Met. (Ky.) 255	561
Hedges v. Hudson River R. Co. 49 N. Y. 223	275
Heinrich v. St. Louis, 125 Mo. 424, 46 Am. St. Rep. 490, 28 S. W. 626	366
Helena v. Dwyer, 64 Ark. 424, 39 L. R. A. 266, 62 Am. St. Rep. 206, 42 S. W. 1071	811
Helmetag v. Miller, 76 Ala. 183, 52 Am. Rep. 316	553
Henderson v. Lacon, L. R. 5 Eq. 249	130
Hendricks v. Western U. Tele. Co. 126 N. C. 304, 78 Am. St. Rep. 658, 35 S. E. 543	987
Hendryx v. Kansas City, Ft. S. & G. R. Co. 45 Kan. 377, 25 Pac. 893	251
Herbst v. Lowe, 65 Wis. 316, 26 N. W. 751	743, 745
Herman v. Gray, 79 Wis. 182, 48 N. W. 113	754
Hershey v. O'Neill, 36 Fed. 168	459
Hess v. Reynolds, 113 U. S. 73, 28 L. ed. 927, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 377	765
Heusner v. Mutual L. Ins. Co. 47 Mo. App. 336	553
Hickey v. Boston & L. R. Co. 14 Allen, 429	642
Hight v. United States, Morris (Iowa) 407, 43 Am. Dec. 111	407
Higley v. Gilmer, 3 Mont. 90, 35 Am. Rep. 450	245
Hill v. Henry, 57 Atl. 554	944
v. Sewald, 53 Pa. 271, 91 Am. Dec. 209	361
Hilton v. Eckersley, 6 El. & Bl. 47	913
Hinds v. Marshall, 22 Mo. App. 208	262
Hinnen v. Newman, 35 Kan. 709, 12 Pac. 144	65
Hoagland v. Forest Park Highlands Amusement Co. 170 Mo. 335, 94 Am. St. Rep. 740, 70 S. W. 878	352
Hocking v. Hamilton, 158 Pa. 107, 27 Atl. 836	758
Hoerr v. Melhofer, 77 Minn. 228, 77 Am. St. Rep. 674, 79 N. W. 964	604
Hoffman v. St. Louis, 15 Mo. 651	365
Hogan v. Jackson, 1 Cowp. 303	650
Hogue v. Minnesota Packing & Provision Co. 59 Minn. 39, 60 N. W. 812	553
Hoke v. St. Louis, B. & N. R. Co. 88 Mo. 360	342
Holcomb v. Danby, 51 Vt. 428	232, 249
Holcombe v. Tracy, 2 Minn. 241, Gil. 201	560
Holland v. Oregon Short Line R. Co. 26 Utah, 209, 72 Pac. 940	517
Holley v. Chamberlain, 1 Redf. 333	864
Holman v. Johnson (1775) 1 Cowp. 341	246
Home Ins. Co. v. Smith (Tex. Civ. App.) 29 S. W. 264	480
Home Mut. Ins. Co. v. Oregon R. & Nav. Co. 20 Or. 569, 23 Am. St. Rep. 151, 26 Pac. 857	166
Home Mut. Ins. Co. Case. See HOME MUT. INS. CO. V. OREGON R. & NAV. CO.
Hooper v. Wells F. & Co. 27 Cal. 11, 85 Am. Dec. 211	435
Hopkins v. Gilman, 22 Wis. 476	357

Horbach v. Miller, 4 Neb. 31	561,	Jackson v. Jackson, 127 Ind. 346, 26 N. E.	630
Horsfall v. Pacific Mut. L. Ins. Co. 32 Wash.		887
132, 63 L. R. A. 425, 98 Am.		v. Pleasanton, 95 Va. 654, 29 S. E.	291
St. Rep. 846, 72 Pac. 1028.	279	680
Hough v. Texas & P. R. Co. 100 U. S. 221,		Jackson, ex dem. Hart v. Lamphhvre, 3 Pet.	561
25 L. ed. 612	514	280, 7 L. ed. 679
Houldsworth v. Glasgow Bank, L. R. 5 App.		J. A. Coates & Sons v. Buck, 93 Wis. 128,	745
Cas. 317	748	67 N. W. 23
House Bill Re. No. 1280, 163 Mass. 589,		Jacobs, Re, 98 N. Y. 98, 50 Am. Rep. 636	940
28 L. R. A. 344, 40 N. E. 713.	940	74, 921,
Householder v. Kansas City, 83 Mo. 488.	365	Jacobus v. St. Paul & C. R. Co. 20 Minn.
House of Reform v. Lexington, 112 Ky. 171,		125, 18 Am. Rep. 360, Gil. 110	234, 235
65 S. W. 350	818
Howard v. Carusi, 109 U. S. 725, 27 L. ed.		James v. Newton, 142 Mass. 386, 56 Am.	163
1089, 3 Sup. Ct. Rep. 575	101	Rep. 692, 8 N. E. 122
v. Stillwell & B. Mfg. Co. 139 U. S.		Jansen v. Williams, 36 Neb. 869, 20 L. R.	291
199, 35 L. ed. 147, 11 Sup. Ct.		A. 207, 55 N. W. 279
Rep. 500	482,	J. B. Ehrsam Mach. Co. v. Phenix Ins. Co.	480
Howard Ins. Co. v. Hocking, 115 Pa. 415, 8		43 Neb. 554, 61 N. W. 722
Atl. 592	525	Jefferies v. Great Western R. Co. 5 El. &	352
Howe v. Newmarch, 12 Allen, 49	423	Bl. 802	675
v. Starkweather, 17 Mass. 240.	675	Jenckes v. Probate Court, 2 R. I. 255.
Howell v. Gordon, 127 Mich. 517, 86 N.		Jenkins, Ex parte, 2 Wall. Jr. 521, Fed.	408
W. 1042	203	Cas. No. 7,259
v. Knight, 100 N. C. 254, 6 S. E.		v. Charleston Street R. Co. 58 S. C.	482
721	449	373, 36 S. E. 703
Hoxsey v. Hoxsey, 37 N. J. Eq. 21	101	v. Wilmington & W. R. Co. 110 N.	645
Hoyt, Ex parte, 13 Pet. 279, 10 L. ed. 161	769	C. 438, 15 S. E. 193	578
Hubbard v. Briggs, 31 N. Y. 518	129	John v. Jenkins, 1 Crompt. & M. 227
Hubbell v. Melgs, 50 N. Y. 480	129	John Hancock Mut. L. Ins. Co. v. Warren,
Hubinger v. Central Trust Co. 36 C. C. A.		181 U. S. 73, 45 L. ed. 755, 21	522
494, 94 Fed. 788	764	Sup. Ct. Rep. 535
Hucless v. Childrey, 135 U. S. 662, 34 L. ed.		John O'Brien Lumber Co. v. Wilkinson, 117	759
304, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 972.	617	Wis. 468, 94 N. W. 337.
Hudson v. Northern P. R. Co. 92 Iowa, 231,		Johnson v. Devoe Snuff Co. 62 N. J. L. 417,	959
54 Am. St. Rep. 550, 60 N. W.		41 Atl. 936	800
608	464	v. Macon, 114 Ga. 426, 40 S. E. 322	425
Hughes v. Com. 17 Gratt. 565, 94 Am. Dec.		Johnson v. People, 83 Ill. 431
498	349	v. Wiseman, 4 Met. (Ky.) 360, 83	700
v. Green, 28 C. C. A. 537, 56 U. S.		Am. Dec. 475	864
App. 56, 84 Fed. 833	704	Johnstone v. Beattie, 10 Clark & F. 42.	101
Hull v. Sacramento Valley R. Co. 14 Cal.		Jones v. Bacon, 68 Me. 34, 28 Am. Rep. 1	471
357, 73 Am. Dec. 656	419	v. Bond, 40 Fed. 281	476
Humes v. Ft. Smith, 93 Fed. 857.	801	v. Jones, 71 Wis. 520, 38 N. W. 88	756
Hunsaker v. Wright, 30 Ill. 146	285	v. Leonard, 50 Iowa, 106, 32 Am.
Hunt v. D'Orval, Dud. L. 180	486	Rep. 116	951
v. Hall, 37 Me. 363	443	v. Wood, 16 Pa. 25	694
Hunter v. Western U. Teleg. Co. 130 N. C.		Joseph v. Randolph, 71 Ala. 499, 46 Am.	287
602, 41 S. E. 796	987	Rep. 347	952
Huntley v. Whitner, 77 N. C. 392	468	Josslyn v. Com. 6 Met. 236
Hustis v. James A. Banister Co. 63 N. J. L.		Joye v. South Carolina Mut. Ins. Co. 54 S.	484
465, 43 Atl. 651	959	C. 375, 32 S. E. 446
Hutchins v. St. Paul M. & M. R. Co. 44		J. Thompson Mfg. Co. v. Gunderson, 106
Minn. 5, 46 N. W. 79	498	Wis. 449, 49 L. R. A. 859, 82 N.	727
Hutchinson v. York, N. & B. R. Co. 5 Exch.		W. 299
343	512
Hyde v. Stone, 20 How. 170, 15 L. ed. 874	766

I.

Illinois C. R. Co. v. Bogard, 78 Miss. 11, 27
So. 879	484
v. Bolton, 99 Tenn. 274, 41 S. W.
442	342
v. Crudup, 63 Miss. 291	236
v. Illinois, 146 U. S. 387, 36 L. ed.
1018, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 110	776
v. Meacham, 91 Tenn. 428, 19 S. W.
233	245, 247
v. Mills, 42 Ill. 407	419
v. Radford, 23 Ky. L. Rep. 886, 64
S. W. 511	415, 416
v. Spence, 93 Tenn. 181, 42 Am.
St. Rep. 907, 23 S. W. 211	341
Indian River State Bank v. Hartford F.
Ins. Co. (Fla.) 35 So. 228	520, 523
Ingle v. Hartman, 37 Iowa, 274	291
Ingram v. Ingram, 49 N. C. (4 Jones, L.)
188	250
International Ocean Teleg. Co. v. Saunders,
32 Fla. 434, 21 L. R. A. 810, 14
So. 148	992
Irvine v. Clark, 98 N. C. 437, 4 S. E. 30	442

J.

Jackman v. Arlington Mills, 137 Mass. 277	645
Jackowski v. Illinois Steel Co. 103 Wis.
448, 79 N. W. 757	741
Jackson, Re, 2 Flipp. 183, Fed. Cas. No.
7,125	950
v. Holbrook, 36 Minn. 494, 1 Am. St.
Rep. 683, 32 N. W. 852	872,
	878, 883, 886

K.

Kansas City v. Mastin, 169 Mo. 80, 68 S. W.
1037	807
v. Union P. R. Co. (Kansas City v.
Clark) 59 Kan. 427, 52 L. R. A.
321, 53 Pac. 468	907
Kansas City, Ft. S. & M. R. Co. v. Berry, 53
Kan. 112, 42 Am. St. Rep. 278,
36 Pac. 53	248
v. Dalton, 65 Kan. 661, 70 Pac. 645	992
Kansas P. R. Co. v. Whipple, 39 Kan. 531,
18 Pac. 730	251
Kavanagh v. Brooklyn, 38 Barb. 232	934
Keely v. Atlanta, 69 Ga. 583	802
Kelley v. Kelley, 161 Mass. 111, 25 L. R. A.
806, 42 Am. St. Rep. 389, 36 N.
E. 837	39
v. Meins, 135 Mass. 231	101
Kelly v. Courter, 1 Okla. 277, 30 Pac. 372	250
v. Fleming, 113 N. C. 138, 18 S. E.
81	465
Kemper v. Widows' Home, 6 Ohio Dec. Reprint, 1049	646
Kendall v. Albia, 73 Iowa, 241, 34 N. W.
833	262
v. United States, 12 Pet. 524, 9 L.
ed. 1181	769
v. United States, 12 Pet. 622, 9 L.
ed. 1220	767
Kennedy v. Pawtucket, 24 R. I. 461, 53 Atl.
317	807
Kenney v. Goergen, 36 Minn. 190, 31 N. W.
210	945
Kent v. Freehold Land & Brickmaking Co.
L. R. 4 Eq. 588	130
Kentucky v. Dennison, 24 How. 66, 16 L.
ed. 717	952

- Kentucky C. R. Co. v. Thomas, 79 Ky. 160, 42 Am. Rep. 208
- Keokuk Northern Line Packet Co. v. Keokuk, 95 U. S. 80, 24 L. ed. 377 907, 151
- Kerr v. Dougherty, 79 N. Y. 327
- v. Kingsbury, 39 Mich. 150, 33 Am. Rep. 362
- Kessler v. Hall, 64 N. C. 61
- Kewanee v. Otley, 204 Ill. 402, 68 N. E. 388
- Keyser v. Lowell, 54 C. C. A. 574, 117 Fed. 400
- Keystone Min. Co. v. Gallagher, 5 Colo. 23
- Kibler v. Southern R. Co. 62 S. C. 270, 40 S. E. 556
- Kidd v. Alabama, 188 U. S. 730, 47 L. ed. 669, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 401
- v. Pearson, 128 U. S. 1, 32 L. ed. 346, 2 Inters. Com. Rep. 232, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 6
- Kimberlin v. Commission to Five Civilized Tribes, 44 C. C. A. 109, 104 Fed. 658
- Kimberly, Re, 150 N. Y. 90, 44 N. E. 945
- Kimmarle v. Houston & T. C. R. Co. 76 Tex. 686, 12 S. W. 698
- King, Re, 66 Kan. 695, 67 L. R. A. 783, 97 Am. St. Rep. 399, 72 Pac. 263 791, 792
- v. Burdett, 12 W. Va. 688
- v. State, 37 Tenn. 304, 3 L. R. A. 210, 10 S. W. 509
- v. Winants, 71 N. C. 469, 17 Am. Rep. 11
- v. Woodbridge, 34 Vt. 565
- Kingman v. Lancashire Ins. Co. 54 S. C. 599, 32 S. E. 762
- Kingsbury's Case, 106 Mass. 223-949, 950, 951
- Kirby, Re, 10 S. D. 416, 73 N. W. 908
- v. Circuit Court, 10 S. D. 196, 72 N. W. 461
- Kirk v. Chicago, St. P. M. & O. R. Co. 59 Minn. 161, 50 Am. Rep. 397, 60 N. W. 1084
- v. Garrett, 84 Md. 385, 35 Atl. 1089
- Kirtland v. Hotchkiss, 100 U. S. 491, 25 L. ed. 558, Affirming 42 Conn. 426, 19 Am. Rep. 546
- Kitchen v. Greenbaum, 61 Mo. 110
- Kleeb v. Long-Bell Lumber Co. 27 Wash. 648, 68 Pac. 202
- Klein v. McNamara, 54 Miss. 105
- Kline v. Eubanks, 109 La. 242, 33 So. 211 69, 70
- Knapp v. St. Louis, K. C. & N. R. Co. 6 Mo. App. 210
- Knapp Electrical Works v. New York Insulated Wire Co. 157 Ill. 456, 42 N. E. 147
- Knapp, S. & Co. v. St. Louis, 153 Mo. 572, 55 S. W. 104
- Knickerbocker Ins. Co. v. Comstock, 16 Wall. 258, 21 L. ed. 493
- Knight v. Barr, 130 Mich. 673, 90 N. W. 849
- Knox v. Jones, 47 N. Y. 389
- v. Jordan, 58 N. C. (5 Jones Eq.) 175
- Knutter v. New York & N. J. Teleph. Co. 67 N. J. L. 646, 58 L. R. A. 808, 52 Atl. 565
- Koontz v. Nabb, 16 Md. 549
- Korn v. Browne, 64 Pa. 55
- Koshkonong v. Burton, 104 U. S. 668, 26 L. ed. 886
- Kraft v. Wickey, 4 Gill. & J. 332, 23 Am. Dec. 369
- Kuhlmann v. Meier, 7 Mo. App. 260
- Kuhn v. Warren Sav. Bank, 20 W. N. C. 230, 11 Atl. 440
- Kunkle v. Mitchell, 56 Pa. 100
- L.
- Labette County v. United States, 112 U. S. 217, 28 L. ed. 698, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 108
- Laclede Bank v. Schuler, 120 U. S. 511, 30 L. ed. 704, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 644
- Laing v. Barbour, 119 Mass. 523
- Lake County v. Platt, 25 C. C. A. 87, 49 U. S. App. 216, 79 Fed. 567
- Lake View v. Rose Hill Cemetery Co. 70 Ill. 191, 22 Am. Rep. 71
- Lambert, Re, 134 Cal. 626, 55 L. R. A. 856, 86 Am. St. Rep. 296, 66 Pac. 851
- v. Smith, 9 Or. 193
- Lanahan v. Birge, 30 Conn. 438
- Landle v. Western U. Teleg. Co. 124 N. C. 528, 32 S. E. 886
- Lane v. Innes, 43 Minn. 137, 45 N. W. 4
- Langellier v. Schaefer, 36 Minn. 361, 31 N. W. 690
- Lansburgh v. District of Columbia, 11 App. D. C. 512
- Lansing v. Toolan, 37 Mich. 152
- Lascelles v. Georgia, 148 U. S. 537, 37 L. ed. 549, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 687
- Latimer v. Waddell, 119 N. C. 370, 26 S. E. 122
- Laudie v. Western U. Teleg. Co. 126 N. C. 431, 78 Am. St. Rep. 668, 35 S. E. 810
- Laughlin v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co. 28 Wis. 204, 9 Am. Rep. 493
- Lawrence v. Nelson, 143 U. S. 215, 36 L. ed. 130, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 440
- Lawton v. Steele, 152 U. S. 133-136, 38 L. ed. 385-388, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 499
- Leach v. French, 69 Me. 389, 31 Am. Rep. 296
- Leacroft v. Maynard, 1 Ves. Jr. 279
- Leavitt v. Canadian P. R. Co. 90 Me. 153, 38 L. R. A. 152, 37 Atl. 886
- Le Donne, Re, 173 Mass. 552, 54 N. E. 244
- Lee v. Western U. Teleg. Co. 51 Mo. App. 375
- Leigh v. Green, 193 U. S. 79, 48 L. ed. 623, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 390
- Lelsay v. Hardin, 135 U. S. 100, 34 L. ed. 128, 3 Inters. Com. Rep. 36, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 681
- Lemon v. Chanslor, 68 Mo. 340, 30 Am. Rep. 799
- Lent v. Tillson, 72 Cal. 404, 14 Pac. 71
- Leoni v. State, 44 Ala. 110
- Levin v. Burlington, 129 N. C. 184, 55 L. R. A. 396, 39 S. E. 822
- Lewis v. Lewis, 7 How. 776, 12 L. ed. 909
- v. Norfolk & W. R. Co. 132 N. C. 382, 43 S. E. 919
- v. Western U. Teleg. Co. 57 S. C. 325, 35 S. E. 556
- Lexington R. Co. v. Fain, 24 Ky. L. Rep. 1443, 71 S. W. 628
- Life & Fire Ins. Co. v. Wilson, 8 Pet. 291, 8 L. ed. 949
- Liggat v. Hart, 23 Mo. 127
- Limpus v. London General Omnibus Co. 32 L. J. Exch. N. S. 34
- Lindauer Mercantile Co. v. Boyd (N. M.) 70 Pac. 568
- Lindley v. O'Reilly, 50 N. J. L. 636, 1 L. R. A. 79, 7 Am. St. Rep. 802, 15 Atl. 379
- Lindsay Petroleum Co. v. Hurd, L. R. 5 P. C. 221
- Little v. Thurston, 58 Me. 86
- Little Rock & Ft. S. R. Co. v. Cravens, 57 Ark. 112, 18 L. R. A. 527, 38 Am. St. Rep. 230, 20 S. W. 803
- v. Miles, 40 Ark. 298, 48 Am. Rep. 10
- Live Stock D. & B. Asso. v. Crescent City L. S. L. & S. H. Co. 1 Abb. (U. S.) 398, Fed. Cas. No. 8,408
- Livingston v. Dorgenois, 7 Cranch, 577, 3 L. ed. 444
- v. Jefferson, 1 Brock. 203, Fed. Cas. No. 8,411
- Loaiza v. Superior Court, 85 Cal. 11, 9 L. R. A. 376, 20 Am. St. Rep. 197, 24 Pac. 707
- Lockard v. Nash, 64 Ala. 385
- Locke v. Williamson, 40 Wis. 377
- Lockhart v. Yeiser, 2 Bush, 231
- Locklin v. State (Tex. Crim. App.) 75 S. W. 305
- Long v. Meriden Britannia Co. 94 Va. 594, 27 S. E. 469
- v. State, 74 Md. 563, 12 L. R. A. 423, 28 Am. St. Rep. 268, 22 Atl. 4
- Longshore Printing Co. v. Howell, 26 Or. 527, 28 L. R. A. 464, 46 Am. St. Rep. 640, 38 Pac. 547

Lord v. American Mut. Accl. Asso. 89 Wis. 19, 26 L. R. A. 741, 46 Am. St. Rep. 815, 61 N. W. 293.	635	McGaunten v. Willbur. 1 Cow. 257.	578
v. Chadbourne, 42 Me. 429, 66 Am. Dec. 290.	249	McGowan v. Supreme Court, I. O. F. 107 Wis. 462, 83 N. W. 775.	741
Lorie v. North Chicago City R. Co. 32 Fed. 270.	368	McGrath v. Merwin, 112 Mass. 467, 17 Am. Rep. 119.	248
Louisville, & N. R. Co. v. Brownlee, 14 Bush, 590.	416	McGraw v. Southern R. Co. 135 N. C. 264, 47 S. E. 738.	251
v. Frazee, 24 Ky. L. Rep. 1273, 71 S. W. 437.	416	M'Intire v. Wood, 7 Cranch, 504, 3 L. ed. 420.	769
v. Garrett, 8 Lea, 450, 41 Am. Rep. 640.	497	McIntyre v. McIntyre, 16 S. C. 290.	630
v. Jones, 100 Ala. 263, 14 So. 114.	537	McKay v. Royal, 52 N. C. (7 Jones, L.) 426.	979
v. Marbury Lumber Co. 132 Ala. 520, 90 Am. St. Rep. 917, 32 So. 745.	419	McKee v. United States, 164 U. S. 287-293, 41 L. ed. 437-439, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 92.	907
v. Owen, 98 Ky. 201, 19 S. W. 590.	416	McKenna, Ex parte, 126 Cal. 429, 58 Pac. 916.	801
v. Reese, 85 Ala. 497, 7 Am. St. Rep. 66, 5 So. 283.	419	McKenzie's Appeal, 41 Conn. 607, 19 Am. Rep. 525.	101
v. Wallace, 91 Tenn. 35, 14 L. R. A. 548, 17 S. W. 882.	497	McKinley v. Beasley, 5 Sneed, 170.	497
Louisville, C. & L. R. Co. v. Hedger, 9 Bush, 645, 15 Am. Rep. 740.	416	McKinnon v. Vollmar, 75 Wis. 82, 6 L. R. A. 121, 17 Am. St. Rep. 178, 43 N. W. 800.	746
Louisville, N. A. & C. R. Co. v. Faylor, 126 Ind. 126, 25 N. E. 869.	235	McLane v. Perkins, 92 Me. 39, 43 L. R. A. 487, 42 Atl. 255.	421
v. Louisville Trust Co. 174 U. S. 522, 43 L. ed. 1081, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 817.	225	McLaughlin v. Louisville Electric Light Co. 100 Ky. 173, 34 L. R. A. 812, 37 S. W. 851.	477
Love v. People, 160 Ill. 501, 32 L. R. A. 139, 43 N. E. 710.	146	McLean v. McLean, 88 N. C. 396.	979
Lovett v. State, 29 Fla. 384, 16 L. R. A. 313, 11 So. 176.	193	McLennan v. Prentice, 85 Wis. 427, 55 N. W. 764.	776
Lowner v. New York, N. H. & H. R. Co. 175 Mass. 166, 55 N. E. 805.	423	McLeod v. Scott, 21 Or. 94, 26 Pac. 1061, 29 Pac. 1.	174
Lowney v. New Brunswick R. Co. 78 Me. 479, 7 Atl. 381.	421	McMahon v. St. Louis, A. & T. R. Co. 41 La. Ann. 827, 6 So. 640.	367
Lowney Case. See LOWNEY v. NEW BRUNSWICK.		M'Manus v. Crickett, 1 East, 106.	456
L. Realty Co. v. Johnson (Minn.) 66 L. R. A. 439, 100 N. W. 94.	902	McMaster v. New York L. Ins. Co. 40 C. C. A. 119, 90 Fed. 856.	751
Luddington v. Kime, 1 Ld. Raym. 203.	443	v. New York L. Ins. Co. 183 U. S. 25, 46 L. ed. 64, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 10.	755
Ludington v. Patton, 111 Wis. 208, 86 N. W. 371.	754	McMaster Case. See McMASTER v. NEW YORK L. INS. CO.
Ludwig v. Stewart, 32 Mich. 27.	564	McMillan v. Cheeney, 30 Minn. 519, 16 N. W. 404.	887
Lusk v. Lusk, 28 Mo. 91.	864	McMillen v. Anderson, 95 U. S. 37, 24 L. ed. 335.	628
Lutz v. Crawfordsville, 109 Ind. 466, 10 N. E. 411.	616	McNally v. Phoenix Ins. Co. 137 N. Y. 389, 33 N. E. 475.	523
Lydlard v. Chute, 43 Minn. 277, 47 N. W. 967.	945	McNiel, Ex parte, 13 Wall. 236, 20 L. ed. 624.	765
Lyne v. Western U. Telegr. Co. 123 N. C. 129, 31 S. E. 350.	980	Macon Sash, Door & Lumber Co. v. Macon, 96 Ga. 23, 23 S. E. 120.	800
Lyons v. Boston & L. R. Co. 181 Mass. 551, 64 N. E. 404.	418	McPeck v. Western N. Telegr. Co. 107 Iowa, 356, 43 L. R. A. 214, 70 Am. St. Rep. 205, 78 N. W. 63.	321
v. Desotelle, 124 Mass. 387.	248	McQuerry v. Gilliland, 89 Ky. 434, 7 L. R. A. 454, 12 S. W. 1037.	942
M.		McRae v. Atlantic & N. C. R. Co. 58 N. C. (3 Jones Eq.) 395.	250
McAllen v. Western U. Telegr. Co. 70 Tex. 243, 7 S. W. 715.	991	Macrow v. Great Western R. Co. L. R. 6 Q. B. 622.	647
McBride v. State Revenue Agent, 70 Miss. 116, 12 So. 699.	628	McVeety v. St. Paul, M. & M. R. Co. 45 Minn. 268, 11 L. R. A. 174, 22 Am. St. Rep. 728, 47 N. W. 809.	251
v. Union P. R. Co. 3 Wyo. 248, 21 Pac. 687.	515	Maddox v. Craig, 80 Tex. 600, 16 S. W. 328.	946
McBryde v. South Carolina Mut. Ins. Co. 55 S. C. 589, 74 Am. St. Rep. 769, 33 S. E. 729.	484	Madsden v. Phoenix F. Ins. Co. 1 S. C. N. S. 2.	484
McCabe v. Hunter, 7 Mo. 357.	466	Magner v. People, 97 Ill. 333.	780
McCarthy v. Timmins, 178 Mass. 378, 86 Am. St. Rep. 490, 59 N. E. 1038.	423	Magner Case. See MAGNER v. PEOPLE.
McCartney v. Chicago & E. R. Co. 112 Ill. 611.	836	Magoun v. Illinois Trust & Sav. Bank, 170 U. S. 296, 42 L. ed. 1037, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 594.	284
McCarty v. New York L. Ins. Co. 74 Minn. 530, 77 N. W. 426.	750	Maher v. Thropp, 59 N. J. L. 186, 35 Atl. 1057.	959
M'Clung v. Stillman, 6 Wheat. 598, 5 L. ed. 340.	768	Mahogany v. Ward, 16 R. I. 479, 27 Am. St. Rep. 753, 17 Atl. 860.	118
McConnell v. Kennedy, 29 S. C. 180, 7 S. E. 76.	171	Mall v. Lord, 39 N. Y. 381, 100 Am. Dec. 448.	459
McCormick v. Horan, 81 N. Y. 86, 37 Am. Rep. 479.	645	Mamlock v. Fairbanks, 46 Wis. 415, 32 Am. Rep. 716, 1 N. W. 167.	729
McCracken v. Hayward, 2 How. 608, 11 L. ed. 397.	562	742, 743, 744, 746, 749, 750, 755.	751
McCready v. Virginia, 94 U. S. 391, 24 L. ed. 248.	782	Manchester Street R. Co. v. Williams, 71 N. H. 312, 52 Atl. 461.	685
McCulloch v. Maryland, 4 Wheat. 428, 4 L. ed. 607.	627	Mandeville v. Band, 111 La. 806, 35 So. 915.	75
McDaniel v. Pollock, 87 N. C. 503.	190	v. Welch, 5 Wheat. 277, 5 L. ed. 87.	163
McDaniels v. J. J. Connelly Shoe Co. 30 Wash. 549, 60 L. R. A. 947, 94 Am. St. Rep. 889, 71 Pac. 37.	284	Manning v. Lowell, 130 Mass. 21.	934
McDermott v. Palmer, 8 N. Y. 383.	491	Marbury v. Madison, 1 Cranch, 137, 2 L. ed. 60.	769
McElmoyle v. Cohen, 13 Pet. 312, 10 L. ed. 177.	562
McGahey v. Virginia, 135 U. S. 602, 34 L. ed. 304, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 972.	561
67 L. R. A.

Marine Ins. Co. v. St. Louis, I. M. & S. R. Co. 41 Fed. 643.....	165	Minneapolis, St. P. & S. Ste. M. R. Co. v. Milner, 57 Fed. 276.....	938
Markley v. Snow, 207 Pa. 447, 64 L. R. A. 685, 56 Atl. 999.....	461	Minnesota Moline Plow Co. v. Dowagiac Mfg. Co. 61 C. C. A. 352, 126 Fed. 746.....	770
Markwell v. Pereles, 95 Wis. 406, 69 N. W. 798.....	864	Minnesota Thresher Mfg. Co. v. Schaack, 10 S. D. 511, 74 N. W. 445.....	607
Marlborough Mfg. Co. v. Smith, 2 Conn. 579.....	685	Minters v. People, 139 Ill. 365, 29 N. E. 45.....	928
Marshall v. York, N. & B. R. Co. 11 C. B. 655.....	239	Mississippi C. R. Co. v. Kennedy, 41 Miss. 678.....	648
Martin v. Stubbings, 126 Ill. 387, 9 Am. St. Rep. 620, 18 N. E. 657.....	553	Missouri K. & T. R. Co. v. Haber, 169 U. S. 613, 42 L. ed. 878, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 488.....	921
v. Wallace, 40 Ga. 52.....	230, 232, 246	Missouri P. R. Co. v. Jarrard, 65 Tex. 560.....	93
Maryland Casualty Co. v. Huddins (Tex.) 64 L. R. A. 349, 76 S. W. 745.....	638	v. Kaiser, 82 Tex. 144, 18 S. W. 305.....	990
Mason v. Caldwell, 10 Ill. 196, 48 Am. Dec. 330.....	980	Missouri Valley L. Ins. Co. v. McCrum, 36 Kan. 146, 59 Am. Rep. 537, 12 Pac. 517.....	553
v. St. Paul F. & M. Ins. Co. 82 Minn. 336, 83 Am. St. Rep. 438, 85 N. W. 13.....	523	v. Sturges, 18 Kan. 93, 26 Am. Rep. 761.....	553
Massadillo v. Nashville & K. R. Co. 89 Tenn. 661, 15 S. W. 445.....	498	Mitchell v. Com. 37 Pa. 187.....	358
Massie v. Watts, 6 Cranch, 148, 3 L. ed. 181.....	942	v. Crassweller, 13 C. B. 246.....	460
Massillon Bridge Co. v. Cambria Iron Co. 59 Ohio St. 179, 52 N. E. 192.....	641	v. Southern P. R. Co. 87 Cal. 62, 11 L. R. A. 130, 25 Pac. 245.....	642
Mathews v. Kalamazoo Bd. of Edu. 127 Mich. 530, 54 L. R. A. 736, 86 N. W. 1036.....	939	Mizell v. McGowan, (N. C.) 85 Am. St. Rep. 733.....	646
Mathews v. Slate Co. v. New Empire Slate Co. 122 Fed. 972.....	576	Mobile & O. R. Co. v. Hopkins, 41 Ala. 486, 94 Am. Dec. 607.....	236
Mathewson v. Hoffman, 77 Mich. 420, 6 L. R. A. 349, 43 N. W. 879.....	837	Mohr, Re, 73 Ala. 503, 49 Am. Rep. 63.....	951
Mauritz v. New York, L. E. & W. R. Co. 23 Fed. 765.....	648	Mollineux v. Collins, 177 N. Y. 395, 65 L. R. A. 104, 69 N. E. 727.....	137
May v. Ritchie, 65 Ala. 602.....	680	Monk v. New Utrecht, 104 N. Y. 552, 11 N. E. 268.....	259
Maynard v. Locomotive Engineers' Mut. Life & Acci. Ins. Asso. 16 Utah. 145, 67 Am. St. Rep. 602, 51 Pac. 259.....	635	Montgomery & E. R. Co. v. Mallette, 92 Ala. 210, 9 So. 363.....	93
Mebane v. Mebane, 39 N. C. (4 Ired. Eq.) 131, 44 Am. Dec. 102.....	447	Montreal River Lumber Co. v. Mihills, 80 Wis. 540, 50 N. W. 507.....	746
Meichor v. Burger, 21 N. C. (1 Dev. & B. Eq.) 634.....	450	Montross v. State, 72 Ga. 261, 53 Am. Rep. 840.....	808
Melvin v. Easley, 52 N. C. (7 Jones, L.) 356.....	231	Mood v. Western U. Telegr. Co. 40 S. C. 524, 19 S. E. 67.....	483
Memphis v. Kimbrough, 12 Helsk 133.....	497	Moore v. Cohen, 128 N. C. 345, 38 S. E. 919.....	460
Mendenhall v. Mendenhall, 53 N. C. (8 Jones, L.) 287.....	451, 453	v. Edwards, 167 Mass. 75, 44 N. E. 1070.....	37
Mentzer v. Western U. Telegr. Co. 98 Iowa, 752, 28 L. R. A. 72, 57 Am. St. Rep. 294, 62 N. W. 1.....	992	v. Hinnant, 90 N. C. 163.....	191, 192
Merceln v. People, 25 Wend. 64, 35 Am. Dec. 653.....	790, 792	v. Holt, 10 Gratt. 284.....	692
Merceln Case. See MERCERN v. PEOPLE.		v. Moore, 48 Mich. 271, 12 N. W. 180.....	453
Mercer v. State, 17 Tex. App. 452.....	503	v. New York, N. H. & H. R. Co. 173 Mass. 335, 73 Am. St. Rep. 298, 53 N. E. 816.....	557
Merchant's Nat. Bank v. Braithwaite, 7 N. D. 358, 66 Am. St. Rep. 653, 75 N. W. 244.....	561, 563	v. State, 44 Tex. Crim. Rep. 526, 72 S. W. 595.....	499
Merrill v. Beckwith, 163 Mass. 503, 40 N. E. 855.....	942	v. Turbeville, 2 Bibb. 602, 5 Am. Dec. 642.....	749
Merritt v. American Steel-Barge Co. 24 C. C. A. 530, 49 U. S. App. 85, 79 Fed. 228.....	764	Morehead Bkg. Co. v. Morehead, 122 N. C. 318, 30 S. E. 331.....	979
Meshmeyer v. State, 11 Ind. 482.....	917	Morgan v. Bell, 3 Wash. 554, 16 L. R. A. 614, 28 Pac. 925.....	943
Messinger's Appeal, 109 Pa. 285, 4 Atl. 162.....	837	v. Ireland, 1 Idaho, 786.....	318
Metropolitan Acci. Asso. v. Froiland, 161 Ill. 30, 52 Am. St. Rep. 359, 43 N. E. 766.....	685	Morledge Case. See STATE v. MORLEDGE.
Meyer v. Fidelity & C. Co. 96 Iowa, 378, 59 Am. St. Rep. 374, 65 N. W. 328.....	633, 634	Morrell v. Dickey, 1 Johns. Ch. 153.....	864
Meyer Case. See MEYER v. FIDELITY & C. Co.		Morris v. Columbus, 102 Ga. 792, 42 L. R. A. 175, 66 Am. St. Rep. 243, 30 S. E. 850.....	939
Michael v. Jones, 84 Mo. 578.....	981	v. Platt, 32 Conn. 84.....	569
Miller, Re, 90 N. C. 625.....	443	v. Western U. Telegr. Co. 94 Me. 423, 47 Atl. 926.....	245
v. Fidelity & C. Co. 97 Fed. 836.....	635	Morton v. Western U. Telegr. Co. 130 N. C. 209, 41 S. E. 484.....	988
v. Laubach, 47 Pa. 154, 86 Am. Dec. 521.....	645	v. Western U. Telegr. Co. 53 Ohio St. 431, 32 L. R. A. 735, 53 Am. St. Rep. 648, 41 N. E. 689.....	992
v. Seaman, 176 Pa. 291, 35 Atl. 134.....	759	v. Woodbury, 153 N. Y. 243, 47 N. E. 283.....	151
v. State, 37 Tex. Crim. Rep. 575, 40 S. W. 313.....	502, 505	Moss v. Exchange Bank, 102 Ga. 808, 30 S. E. 267.....	245
Mills v. East Tennessee, V. & G. R. Co. 87 Ga. 105, 13 S. E. 205.....	343	Mt. Leonard Mill Co. v. Liverpool & L. & G. Ins. Co. 25 Mo. App. 259.....	480
v. Hobbs, 76 Mich. 126, 42 N. W. 1084.....	314	Mowry v. Hawkins, 57 Conn. 453, 18 Atl. 784.....	686
v. Kansas Lumber Co. 26 Kan. 574.....	852	Muehlhausen v. St. Louis R. Co. 91 Mo. 332, 2 S. W. 315.....	246
v. Thorne, 95 N. C. 362.....	448, 449	Mugler v. Kansas, 123 U. S. 623, 31 L. ed. 205, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 273.....	273
Milner v. Bowman, 119 Ind. 448, 5 L. R. A. 95, 21 N. E. 1094.....	554	616, 617, 938, 939
Milnes v. Gery, 14 Ves. Jr. 400.....	357, 358	Mullin v. Vermont Mut. F. Ins. Co. 54 Vt. 223.....	480
Minneapolis v. Janney, 86 Minn. 111, 90 N. W. 313.....	818	Mullreed v. Clark, 110 Mich. 229, 68 N. W. 138.....	105
67 L. R. A.		Munds v. Cassidy, 98 N. C. 558, 4 S. E. 353.....	447
		Munn v. Illinois, 94 U. S. 113, 24 L. ed. 77.....	919
		Murchie v. Gates, 78 Me. 300, 4 Atl. 696.....	837

- Murdock v. Hunter, 1 Brock. 135 Fed. Cas. No. 9,941..... 511
- Murphy, Re. 51 Wis. 519, 8 N. W. 419..... 667
- v. Curry, 137 Cal. 479, 59 L. R. A. 97, 70 Pac. 461..... 474
- v. Phillips, (1876) 35 L. T. N. S. 477..... 514
- v. Red, 64 Miss. 614, 60 Am. Rep. 68, 1 So. 761..... 553
- v. Smith, (1865) 19 C. B. N. S. 361, 513..... 513
- v. Steele County, 14 Minn. 67, Gil. 51..... 765
- Murray v. New York L. Ins. Co. 96 N. Y. 614, 48 Am. Rep. 658..... 772
- Muscogee R. Co. v. Redd, 54 Ga. 33..... 230, 246
- Musselman v. Kent, 33 Ind. 452..... 876
- Mutual L. Ins. Co. v. Allen, 138 Mass. 24, 52 Am. Rep. 245..... 553
- v. Armstrong 117 U. S. 591, 29 L. ed. 907, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 877..... 553
- v. Harris, 97 U. S. 331, 24 L. ed. 959..... 767
- Myer v. Liverpool, L. & G. Ins. Co. 40 Md. 595..... 225
- Myers v. Anderson, 1 Strobb. Eq. 344, 47 Am. Dec. 537..... 630
- v. Wheelock, 60 Kan. 747, 57 Pac. 956..... 563
- N.
- Naglee v. Pacific Wharf Co. 20 Cal. 529..... 668
- Nashua Sav. Bank v. Sayles, 184 Mass. 520, 100 Am. St. Rep. 573, 69 N. E. 309..... 38, 39
- Nashville & D. R. Co. v. Jones, 9 Helak. 27..... 497
- Nashville, C. & St. L. R. Co. v. Foster, 10 Lea. 366..... 497
- v. Taylor, 86 Fed. 168..... 208
- Nason v. West, 78 Me. 253, 3 Atl. 911..... 420
- National Bank v. Indiana Bkg. Co. 114 Ill. 483, 2 N. E. 401..... 623
- v. Millard, 10 Wall. 152, 19 L. ed. 807..... 623
- National Bank of Commerce v. Feeney, 9 S. D. 550, 46 L. R. A. 732, 70 N. W. 874..... 38
- National Ben. Asso. v. Jackson, 114 Ill. 533, 2 N. E. 414..... 177
- National Exch. Bank v. McLoon, 73 Me. 498, 40 Am. Rep. 388..... 164
- National Surety Co. v. State Bank, 61 L. R. A. 394, 56 C. C. A. 657, 120 Fed. 593..... 765
- Naylor v. Godman, 109 Mo. 550, 19 S. W. 56..... 105
- Needham v. Thayer, 147 Mass. 536, 18 N. E. 429..... 944
- Neill v. Rogers Bros. Produce Co. 41 W. Va. 37, 23 S. E. 702..... 684
- Nelson v. Hudson River R. Co. 48 N. Y. 498, 436..... 437
- New Jersey Steam Nav. Co. v. Merchant's Bank, 6 How. 382, 12 L. ed. 465..... 437
- Newport v. Smith, 61 Minn. 277, 63 N. W. 734..... 981
- Newton v. Bronson, 13 N. Y. 587, 67 Am. Dec. 59..... 942
- New York v. Weaver, 100 U. S. 539, 25 L. ed. 705..... 208
- New York & N. H. R. Co. v. Schuyler, 34 N. Y. 30..... 667
- New York C. R. Co. v. Lockwood, 17 Wall. 357, 21 L. ed. 627..... 232, 238, 239
- New York Commercial Co. v. Francis, 28 C. C. A. 199, 51 U. S. App. 663, 83 Fed. 769..... 686
- New York Land Improv. Co. v. Chapman, 118 N. Y. 288, 23 N. E. 187..... 129
- New York L. Ins. Co. v. McMaster, 30 C. C. A. 532, 57 U. S. App. 638, 87 Fed. 63..... 731, 744
- New York, S. & W. R. Co. v. Marlon, 57 N. J. L. 94, 30 Atl. 316..... 959
- Niagara Falls Brewing Co. v. Wall, 98 Mich. 158, 57 N. W. 99..... 249
- Niagara F. Ins. Co. v. Bishop, 154 Ill. 8, 45 Am. St. Rep. 105, 39 N. E. 1102..... 358
- v. Cornell, 110 Fed. 816..... 906, 910, 921, 922
- Nichols v. Freeman, 33 N. C. (11 Ired. L.) 99..... 982
- 67 L. R. A.
- Nickell v. Tomlinson, 27 W. Va. 720..... 465
- Nigro v. Hatch, 2 Ariz. 144, 11 Pac. 177..... 701
- Nitro-glycerine Case. See PARROTT v. WELLS, F. & Co.
- Nobles v. Georgia, 168 U. S. 398, 42 L. ed. 515, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 87..... 975
- Noel v. People, 187 Ill. 587, 52 L. R. A. 287, 79 Am. St. Rep. 238, 58 N. E. 616..... 75, 971
- Noonan v. Albany, 79 N. Y. 470, 35 Am. Rep. 540..... 934, 935
- Nord Deutscher Lloyd S. S. Co. v. Ingebregsten, 57 N. J. L. 400, 31 Atl. 619..... 959
- Norman v. Kentucky Bd. of Managers, 93 Ky. 537, 18 L. R. A. 556, 20 S. W. 901..... 818
- Normanshaw v. Normanshaw, 69 L. T. N. S. 468..... 929
- Norris v. Tayloe, 49 Ill. 17, 95 Am. Dec. 568..... 290
- Northern Assur. Co. v. Grand View Bldg. Asso. 183 U. S. 308, 46 L. ed. 213, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 133..... 527
- Northern P. R. Co. v. Adams, 192 U. S. 440, 48 L. ed. 513, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 408..... 231
- Northrop v. Curtis, 5 Conn. 246..... 685
- v. Newton & B. Turnp. Co. 3 Conn. 544..... 685
- Northwestern Fertilizing Co. v. Hyde Park, 97 U. S. 659-669, 24 L. ed. 1036-1039..... 938
- Northwestern Iron Co. v. Meade, 21 Wis. 475, 94 Am. Dec. 557..... 858
- Norton v. Shelby County, 118 U. S. 425, 30 L. ed. 178, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1121..... 915
- Norwich Union F. Ins. Soc. v. Standard Oil Co. 8 C. C. A. 433, 19 U. S. App. 460, 59 Fed. 984..... 165
- Norwood v. Baker, 172 U. S. 269, 43 L. ed. 443, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 187..... 410, 411
- Norwood-Baker Case. See NORWOOD v. BAKER.
- Nowack v. Metropolitan Street R. Co. 166 N. Y. 433, 54 L. R. A. 592, 82 Am. St. Rep. 691, 60 N. E. 32..... 140
- Noyes v. Mordaunt, (1706) 2 Vern. 581..... 450
- O.
- Oakes v. Turquand, L. R. 2 H. L. 325..... 748
- O'Brien v. St. Paul, 18 Minn. 176, Gil. 163..... 934
- v. State, 6 Tex. App. 665..... 142
- O'Connell v. State, 6 Minn. 279, Gil. 190..... 186
- Ogden v. Raymond, 22 Conn. 379, 58 Am. Dec. 429..... 978, 980
- Ogden City v. Weaver, 47 C. C. A. 485, 108 Fed. 564..... 764
- Ohio & M. R. Co. v. Dickerson, 59 Ind. 317..... 98
- Old Town v. Dooley, 81 Ill. 255..... 902
- Olmsted v. Keyes, 85 N. Y. 593..... 553
- Olmsted County v. Barber, 31 Minn. 256, 17 N. W. 473..... 603
- Onelda Common Pleas Judges v. People, 18 Wend. 99..... 970
- Opinion of the Justices, 41 N. H. 553..... 908
- Opsahl v. Judd, 30 Minn. 126, 14 N. W. 575..... 234
- Organ v. State, 56 Ark. 267, 19 S. W. 840, 778, 780, 781..... 781
- Organ Case. See ORGAN v. STATE.
- Orient Ins. Co. v. Daggs, 172 U. S. 557, 43 L. ed. 552, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 281..... 522
- v. McKnight, 197 Ill. 190, 64 N. E. 339..... 527
- Orndorff v. Adams Exp. Co. 3 Bush, 194, 96 Am. Dec. 207..... 415
- Ortwein v. Com. 76 Pa. 414, 18 Am. Rep. 420..... 330
- Osborn v. Leach, 135 N. C. 628, 66 L. R. A. 648, 47 S. E. 811..... 989
- Osborne v. Lindstrom, 9 N. D. 1, 46 L. R. A. 715, 81 Am. St. Rep. 516, 81 N. W. 72..... 561, 564
- v. Wilkes, 108 N. C. 651, 13 S. E. 285..... 876
- Oscanyan v. Winchester Repeating Arms Co. 103 U. S. 261, 26 L. ed. 539..... 246
- Ottumwa Screen Co. v. Stodghill, 103 Iowa, 437, 72 N. H. 669..... 667
- Overton v. Hill, 5 N. C. (1 Murph.) 47..... 982
- v. St. Louis Mut. L. Ins. Co. 39 Mo. 122, 90 Am. Dec. 455..... 772
- Oxford Turnp. Co. v. Bunnel, 6 Conn. 552..... 685

P.
Pabst Brewing Co. v. Jensen, 68 Minn. 293, 71 N. W. 384.....	603
Pacific Exp. Co. v. Selbert, 142 U. S. 330, 35 L. ed. 1035, 3 Inters. Com. Rep. 810, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 250.....	205
Pacific Mut. L. Ins. Co. v. Snowden, 7 C. C. A. 264, 12 U. S. App. 704, 58 Fed. 342.....	179
Pacific Nat. Bank v. Eaton, 141 U. S. 227, 35 L. ed. 702, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 984.....	684
Page v. Chicago M. & St. P. R. Co. 70 Ill. 324.....	844
Palatine v. Kreuger, 121 Ill. 72, 12 N. E. 75.....	903
Palatine Ins. Co. v. Ewing, 34 C. C. A. 236, 92 Fed. 111.....	586
Palmer v. Buck, 83 Mich. 528, 47 N. W. 355.....	976
v. McMahon, 133 U. S. 660, 33 L. ed. 772, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 324.....	628
v. Pennsylvania Co. 111 N. Y. 488, 2 L. R. A. 252, 18 N. E. 859.....	642
Palmyra, The, 12 Wheat. 1, 6 L. ed. 531 192-194.....
Parker v. Catholic Bishop, 146 Ill. 158, 34 N. E. 473.....	368
v. Latner, 60 Me. 529, 11 Am. Rep. 210.....	248
v. Nashua, 59 N. H. 402.....	934, 935
Parrott v. Wells, F. & Co. 15 Wall. 524, 21 L. ed. 206.....	509
Paterson v. Wallace, 1 Macq. H. L. Cas. 748.....	513, 514
Patrick v. Morehead, 85 N. C. 62, 39 Am. Rep. 684.....	449
Patterson v. Chicago, D. & V. R. Co. 75 Ill. 588.....	368
v. Winn, 5 Pet. 241, 8 L. ed. 111.....	511
Paul v. Pennsylvania R. Co. 57 Atl. 139.....	435
v. Travelers' Ins. Co. 112 N. Y. 472, 3 L. R. A. 443, 8 Am. St. Rep. 758, 20 N. E. 347.....	635
Paulmier v. Erie R. Co. 34 N. J. L. 151.....	950
Paulsen v. Portland, 149 U. S. 30, 37 L. ed. 637, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 750.....	628
Paxton v. Boyer, 67 Ill. 132, 16 Am. Rep. 615.....	569
Payne v. Com. 1 Met. 379.....	532
v. Sheets, 75 Vt. 335, 55 Atl. 656 777, 781.....	782
Pearce, Ex parte, 32 Tex. Crim. Rep. 301, 23 S. W. 15.....	953
v. Texas, 155 U. S. 311, 39 L. ed. 164, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 118.....	953
Peck v. Herrington, 109 Ill. 611, 50 Am. Rep. 627.....	645
Pedley v. Wellesley, 3 Car. & P. 558.....	502
Pelree v. Tobey, 5 Met. 168.....	560
Pellerin v. International Paper Co. 96 Me. 388, 52 Atl. 842.....	420
Penfold v. Universal L. Ins. Co. 85 N. Y. 317, 39 Am. Rep. 660.....	635
Peninsular Land Transp. & Mfg. Co. v. Franklin Ins. Co. 35 W. Va. 666, 14 S. E. 237.....	524
Penn v. Baltimore, 1 Ves. Sr. 444.....	942
Pennoyer v. Neff, 95 U. S. 714, 24 L. ed. 565.....	946
224, 943, 944, 945.....
Pennsylvania Coal Co. v. Sanderson, 113 Pa. 126, 57 Am. Rep. 447, 6 Atl. 453.....	645
Pennsylvania Co. v. Marlon, 104 Ind. 230, 3 N. E. 874.....	92
Pennsylvania R. Co. v. Butler, 57 Pa. 335.....	233
Penton v. Robert, 2 East, 88.....	362
Peonage Cases, 123 Fed. 671.....	288
People v. Barker, 60 Mich. 207, 1 Am. St. Rep. 513, 27 N. W. 546.....	927
v. Bliven, 112 N. Y. 79, 8 Am. St. Rep. 701, 19 N. E. 638.....	137
v. Bridges, 142 Ill. 30, 16 L. R. A. 684, 31 N. E. 115.....	780
v. Bush, 4 Hill, 133.....	136
v. Collins, 53 Cal. 185.....	141
v. Dillon, 8 Utah, 92, 30 Pac. 150.....	327
v. Gardner, 144 N. Y. 119, 28 L. R. 699, 43 Am. St. Rep. 741, 38 N. E. 1003.....	136
v. Gillson, 109 N. Y. 389, 4 Am. St. Rep. 465, 17 N. E. 343 708, 920, 921.....	940
People v. Helmer, 154 N. Y. 603, 49 N. E. 249.....	145
v. Hibernia Sav. & L. Soc. 51 Cal. 243, 21 Am. Rep. 704.....	205
v. Koerner, 154 N. Y. 377, 48 N. E. 730.....	145
v. McCord, 76 Mich. 200, 42 N. W. 1106.....	141
v. Marx, 99 N. Y. 386, 52 Am. Rep. 34, 2 N. E. 29.....	74
v. Moran, 123 N. Y. 254, 10 L. R. A. 109, 20 Am. St. Rep. 732, 25 N. E. 412.....	136
v. Peckens, 153 N. Y. 576, 47 N. E. 883.....	137
v. Sullivan, 173 N. Y. 122, 63 L. R. A. 353, 93 Am. St. Rep. 582, 65 N. E. 989.....	136
v. Tinder, 19 Cal. 539, 81 Am. Dec. 77.....	407, 329
v. Walter, 1 Idaho, 386.....
People ex rel. Allen v. Allen, 105 N. Y. 628, 11 N. E. 143.....	863
Valentine v. Berrien Circuit Judge, 124 Mich. 664, 50 L. R. A. 493, 83 Am. St. Rep. 352, 83 N. W. 594.....	287
Griffin v. Brooklyn, 4 N. Y. 419, 55 Am. Dec. 296.....	411
Nubell v. Byrnes, 33 Hun. 98, 952.....	954
Edison Electric Light Co. v. Campbell, 138 N. Y. 543, 20 L. R. A. 453, 34 N. E. 370.....	964
Eaton v. District Court, 18 Colo. 26, 31 Pac. 339.....	338
Jourdan v. Donohue, 84 N. Y. 438.....	950
Mead v. Elmore, 35 Cal. 653.....	668
Taylor v. Forbes, 143 N. Y. 219, 38 N. E. 303.....	928
Corkran v. Hyatt, 172 N. Y. 176, 60 L. R. A. 774, 92 Am. St. Rep. 706, 64 N. E. 825.....	951
Thatcher v. Hyde Park, 117 Ill. 462, 6 N. E. 33.....	253
Bristow v. Macomb County, 3 Mich. 475.....	968
Douville v. Manistee County, 40 Mich. 589.....	968
Draper v. Pinkerton, 17 Hun. 199.....	950
United Verde Copper Co. v. Roberts, 156 N. Y. 585, 51 N. E. 293.....	964
Ordway v. St. Saviour's Sanitarium, 34 App. Div. 363, 56 N. Y. Supp. 431.....	975
Nechamcus v. Warden of City Prison, 144 N. Y. 529-535, 27 L. R. A. 718, 39 N. E. 686.....	938
American Contracting & Dredging Co. v. Wemple, 129 N. Y. 538, 29 N. E. 812.....	964
John A. Roebbling's Sons' Co. v. Wemple, 138 N. Y. 586, 34 N. E. 386.....	962
People's Ice Co. v. Davenport, 149 Mass. 322, 14 Am. St. Rep. 425, 21 N. E. 385.....	775
Peoria & R. I. R. Co. v. Schertz, 84 Ill. 135.....	368
Perkins v. Wakeham, 86 Cal. 580, 21 Am. St. Rep. 67, 25 Pac. 51.....	945
Perrigo v. Milwaukee, 92 Wis. 241, 65 N. W. 1025.....	203
Perry, Ex parte, 102 U. S. 183, 26 L. ed. 43.....	769
v. Erie Transfer Co. 28 Abb. N. C. 430, 19 N. Y. Supp. 239.....	226
Peters v. State, 96 Tenn. 682, 33 L. R. A. 114, 36 S. W. 399.....	782
Petrie v. Columbia & G. R. Co. 27 S. C. 63, 2 S. E. 837.....	484
Phalen v. Clark, 19 Conn. 421, 50 Am. Dec. 253.....	240
Phelps v. Piper, 48 Neb. 724, 33 L. R. A. 53, 67 N. W. 755.....	338
Phifer v. Traveler's Ins. Co. 123 N. C. 410, 31 S. E. 716.....	252
Philadelphia & R. R. Co. v. Derby, 14 How. 468, 14 L. ed. 502.....	235, 237, 238
Philadelphia Underwriters' Ins. Co. v. Bielow, (Fla.) 37 So. 210.....	580
Phillips v. Curtis, 4 Idaho, 193, 38 Pac. 405.....	338
v. Moor, 71 Me. 78.....	856

- Pickering v. Ilfracombe R. Co. L. R. 3 C. P. 235 684, 687
- P. Noyes, 4 Barn. & C. 639 777
- Pickett v. Buckner, 45 Miss. 245 465
- v. Pacific Mut. L. Ins. Co. 144 Pa. 79, 13 I. R. A. 661, 27 Am. St. Rep. 618, 22 Atl. 871 635
- Pierce v. North Carolina R. Co. 124 N. C. 83, 44 L. E. A. 316, 32 S. E. 399 245
- v. Swan Point Cemetery, 10 R. I. 227, 14 Am. Rep. 667 123
- Pinkerton v. Manchester & L. R. Co. 42 N. H. 424 685
- Pippen v. Wesson, 74 N. C. 438 468
- Pittsburgh & W. Coal Co. v. Estievenard, 53 Ohio St. 43, 40 N. E. 725 642
- Pittsburgh, C. & St. L. R. Co. v. Shields, 47 Ohio St. 387, 8 L. R. A. 464, 21 Am. St. Rep. 840, 24 N. E. 658 423
- Pittsburgh, C. C. & St. L. R. Co. v. Montgomery, 152 Ind. 1, 71 Am. St. Rep. 302-311, 49 N. E. 582 907
- v. Sheppard, 56 Ohio St. 68, 60 Am. St. Rep. 732, 46 N. E. 81 415
- Playford v. United Kingdom Electric Teleg. Co. L. R. 4 Q. B. 706 320
- Plinsky v. Germania F. & M. Ins. Co. 32 Fed. 47 178
- Plummer v. Hatton, 51 Minn. 181, 53 N. W. 460 945
- Plunket v. Holmes, T. Raym. 28 443
- Plymouth v. Schultheis, 135 Ind. 339, 35 N. E. 12 971
- Polndexter v. Greenhow, 114 U. S. 270, 29 L. ed. 185, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 903 916
- Poling v. Condon-Lane Boom & Lumber Co. (W. Va.) 47 S. E. 279 700
- Pollasky v. Minchener, 81 Mich. 280, 9 L. R. A. 102, 21 Am. St. Rep. 516, 46 N. W. 5 929
- Pool v. Southern P. Co. 20 Utah, 210, 58 Pac. 326 509
- Poole v. Jackson, 93 Tenn. 62, 23 S. W. 57 262
- Porter v. Beattie, 88 Wis. 22, 59 N. W. 400 746
- v. Cocke, Mart. & Y. 264 875
- Port Townsend Nat. Bank v. Port Townsend Gas & Fuel Co. 6 Wash. 597, 34 Pac. 155 667
- Post v. Pearsall, 22 Wend. 425 776
- Postal Teleg. Cable Co. v. Barwise, 11 Colo. App. 328, 53 Pac. 252 321
- Potter v. Gilbert, 177 Pa. 159, 35 L. R. A. 580, 35 Atl. 597 701
- v. Phenix Ins. Co. 63 Fed. 382 635
- v. Taggart, 54 Wis. 395, 11 N. W. 678 754
- Potts v. Breen, 167 Ill. 67, 39 L. R. A. 152, 59 Am. St. Rep. 262, 47 N. E. 81 930
- v. Whitehead, 22 N. J. Eq. 512 857
- Powell v. Dewey, 123 N. C. 103, 68 Am. St. Rep. 818, 31 S. E. 381 553
- v. Pennsylvania, 127 U. S. 678, 32 L. ed. 253, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 992 939
- Power v. Harlow, 57 Mich. 107, 23 N. W. 606 203
- v. Kitching, 10 N. D. 254, 88 Am. St. Rep. 691, 86 N. W. 737 563
- Pozzi v. Shipton, 8 Ad. & El. 963 239
- Prather v. Richmond & D. R. Co. 80 Ga. 436, 12 Am. St. Rep. 263, 9 S. E. 530 343
- Pratt v. Radford, 52 Wis. 114, 8 N. W. 606 165
- Pressley v. Moblie & G. R. Co. 4 Woods, 569, 15 Fed. 199 459
- Price v. First Nat. Bank, 62 Kan. 743, 64 Pac. 639 553
- v. Hopkin, 13 Mich. 318 561
- Priestly v. Fowler, 3 Mees. & W. 1, 512, 513, 514 514
- Priewe v. Wisconsin State Land & Improv. Co. 93 Wis. 534, 33 L. R. A. 645, 67 N. W. 918 776
- Primrose v. Western U. Teleg. Co. 154 U. S. 1, 38 L. ed. 883, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1098 321
- Prince v. International & G. N. R. Co. 64 Tex. 146 251
- v. Overholser, 75 Wis. 646, 44 N. W. 775 746
- Pritchard v. Bailey, 113 N. C. 521, 18 S. E. 668 447
- v. Norton, 106 U. S. 124, 27 L. ed. 104, 1 Sup. Ct. Rep. 102 203
- 67 L. R. A.
- Procter Case. See WESTERN U. TELEG. CO. v. PROCTER.
- Prouty v. Clark, 73 Iowa, 55, 34 N. W. 614 466
- Prudential Ins. Co. v. Liersch, 122 Mich. 436, 81 N. W. 258 553
- Public Schools v. Heath, 15 N. J. Eq. 22 164
- Puckett v. Alexander, 102 N. C. 95, 3 L. R. A. 43, 8 S. E. 767 250
- Pullman's Palace Car Co. v. Central Transp. Co. 171 U. S. 150, 43 L. ed. 113, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 813 246
- Purcell v. St. Paul F. & M. Ins. Co. 5 N. D. 100, 64 N. W. 943 525
- v. Southern R. Co. 119 N. C. 728, 26 S. E. 161 343
- Purdy v. Hayt, 92 N. Y. 446 153
- Purple v. Union P. R. Co. 57 L. R. A. 700, 51 C. C. A. 564, 114 Fed. 123 248, 251
- Purvis v. Carstaphan, 73 N. C. 575 468
- Q.
- Queen v. Robertson, 6 Can. S. C. 52 777
- R.
- Rahrer, Re (Wilkinson v. Rahrer) 140 U. S. 545, 35 L. ed. 572, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 865 910
- Railroad Traffic Asso. Case, 166 U. S. 290, 41 L. ed. 1007, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 540 911
- Ramsay v. Woodard, 48 N. C. (3 Jones, L.) 508 250
- Ramsburg v. Erb, 16 W. Va. 777 694
- Rapauno Chemical Co. v. Greenfield & N. R. Co. 59 Mo. App. 6 491
- Rath v. Zembleman, 49 Neb. 351, 68 N. W. 488 645
- Rawls v. White, 127 N. C. 20, 37 S. E. 68 468
- Reading v. Althouse, 93 Pa. 400 837
- Reary v. Louisville, N. O. & T. R. Co. 40 La. Ann. 32, 8 Am. St. Rep. 497, 3 So. 390 245
- Rebenack, Re, 62 Mo. App. 8 939
- Redd v. Muscogee R. Co. 48 Ga. 102 230
- Redditt v. Singer Mfg. Co. 124 N. C. 100, 32 S. E. 392 460
- Redfield v. Redfield, 126 N. Y. 466, 27 N. E. 1032 152
- Reed v. Merchants' Mut. Ins. Co. 95 U. S. 23, 24 L. ed. 348 587
- Reeves v. Dougherty, 7 Yerg. 222, 27 Am. Dec. 496 875
- Regan v. Palo, 62 N. J. L. 35, 41 Atl. 364 959
- Reggel, Ex parte, 114 U. S. 642, 29 L. ed. 250, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1148, 950, 951, 952, 953, 955 939
- Reg. v. Downes, 13 Cox, C. C. 111 939
- Remington v. Fidelity & D. Co. 27 Wash. 429, 67 Pac. 989 279
- Reneau v. State, 2 Lea, 720, 31 Am. Rep. 626 296
- Reske v. Reske, 51 Mich. 541, 47 Am. Rep. 594, 16 N. W. 895 314
- Rex v. Akers, 6 Esp. 125n 929
- Reynolds v. United States, 98 U. S. 145, 25 L. ed. 244 939
- Rhelms v. Standard F. Ins. Co. 39 W. Va. 672, 20 S. E. 670 484
- Rhodes v. Georgia R. & Bkg. Co. 84 Ga. 320, 20 Am. St. Rep. 362, 10 S. E. 922 703, 704
- v. Louisville, & N. R. Co. 9 Bush, 688 416
- Rice v. Flint, 67 Mich. 401, 34 N. W. 719 934
- v. Minnesota & N. W. R. Co. 21 How. 82, 16 L. ed. 31 192
- Rich v. Minneapolis, 37 Minn. 423, 5 Am. St. Rep. 861, 35 N. W. 2 902
- Richardson v. Green, 9 C. C. A. 565, 15 U. S. App. 488, 61 Fed. 423 765
- Richmond & D. R. Co. v. Burneds, 70 Miss. 437, 35 Am. St. Rep. 656, 12 So. 958 229, 245
- v. Williams, 86 Va. 165, 19 Am. St. Rep. 876, 9 S. E. 990 343
- Riggin v. Love, 72 Ill. 553 630
- Riggs v. Johnson County (United States ex rel. Riggs v. Johnson County) 6 Wall. 166, 18 L. ed. 768 769
- Riley v. Com. 94 Ky. 266, 22 S. W. 222 532
- Rio Grande Cattle Co. v. Burns, 82 Tex. 50, 17 S. W. 1043 685

Ritchie v. People, 155 Ill. 98, 29 L. R. A. 79, 46 Am. St. Rep. 315, 40 N. E. 454	920	St. Louis & S. F. R. Co. v. James, 161 U. S. 545, 40 L. ed. 802, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 621	225
Rittler v. Smith, 70 Md. 261, 2 L. R. A. 844, 16 Atl. 890	534	St. Louis, I. M. & S. R. Co. v. Commercial Union Ins. Co. 139 U. S. 223, 35 L. ed. 154, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 554	164
Rives v. Frizzle, 43 N. C. (8 Ired. Eq.) 237	442	v. Lesser, 46 Ark. 236	558
Robb v. Indianapolis, 38 Ind. 49	616	v. Mudford, 48 Ark. 502, 3 S. W. 814	558
Robert v. Sadler, 104 N. Y. 220, 58 Am. Rep. 498, 10 N. E. 428	902	v. Phelps, 46 Ark. 485	558
v. West, 13 Ga. 122	511	v. Spann, 37 Ark. 127, 20 S. W. 914	558
Roberts, Ex parte, 15 Wall. 384, 21 L. ed. 131	769	v. Weakly, 50 Ark. 397, 7 Am. St. Rep. 104, 8 S. W. 134	558
Re, 24 Fed. 132	952	St. Louis, S. W. R. Co. v. Birdwell (Ark.) 82 S. W. 835	357
v. Rellly, 116 U. S. 80, 29 L. ed. 544, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 291	955	St. Louis, V. & T. H. R. Co. v. Capps, 67 Ill. 607	843
Robertson v. New York & E. R. Co. 22 Barb. 91	251	v. Haller, 82 Ill. 208	843
Robinson v. Barnett, 18 Fla. 602, 43 Am. Rep. 327	587	Salem v. Eastern R. Co. 98 Mass. 431, 96 Am. Dec. 650	938
v. Hyer, 35 Fla. 544, 17 So. 745	587	Sanborn v. People's Ice Co. 82 Minn. 43, 51 L. R. A. 829, 83 Am. St. Rep. 401, 84 N. W. 641	775
v. May, 2 Smith, 3	929	Sanderlin v. Deford, 47 N. C. (2 Jones, L.) 74	448
v. Nesbitt, L. R. 3 C. P. 264	687	San Diego, A. T. & P. B. R. Co. v. Pacific Beach Co. 112 Cal. 53, 33 L. R. A. 788, 44 Pac. 338	437
v. Schenck, 102 Ind. 307, 1 N. E. 608	615	San Mateo County v. Southern P. R. Co. 8 Sawy. 238, 13 Fed. 722	208
v. State, 82 Ga. 535, 9 S. E. 528	430	Santa Clara County v. Southern P. R. Co. 18 Fed. 385	208
v. Weller, 81 Ga. 704, 8 S. E. 449	858	Saranac Land & Timber Co. v. Comptroller, 177 U. S. 318, 44 L. ed. 786, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 642	561
Rodman v. Robinson, 134 N. C. 503, 65 L. R. A. 682, 101 Am. St. Rep. 877, 47 S. E. 19	232	Saratoga County Bank v. King, 44 N. Y. 87	65
Rogers v. Rogers, 3 Wench. 503, 20 Am. Dec. 716	630	Sargent v. Hampden, 38 Me. 581	927
v. Sandersville, 120 Ga. 152, 47 S. E. 557	801	Sartin v. Oregon Short Line R. Co. 27 Utah, 447, 76 Pac. 219	510
Roller v. Holly, 176 U. S. 398, 44 L. ed. 520, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 410	945	Sattler v. Opperman, 30 Pittsb. L. J. N. S. 205	701
Rollins v. Keel, 115 N. C. 68, 20 S. E. 209	449	Savacool v. Boughton, 5 Wend. 170, 21 Am. Dec. 181	171
Romaine, Re, 23 Cal. 585	949	Savannah v. Dehoney, 55 Ga. 33	801
Rona v. Meier, 47 Iowa, 607, 29 Am. Rep. 493	101	v. Keeley, 66 Ga. 34	801
Rose v. Des Moines Valley R. Co. 39 Iowa, 246	235	Savannah F. & W. R. Co. v. Harris, 26 Fla. 148, 23 Am. St. Rep. 551, 7 So. 544	557
Rosencranz v. Swofford Bros. Dry Goods Co. 175 Mo. 518, 97 Am. St. Rep. 609, 75 S. W. 445	352	v. Holland, 82 Ga. 258, 14 Am. St. Rep. 158, 10 S. E. 200	96
Rosevear China Clay Co. Ex parte, L. R. 11 Ch. Div. 560	759	Sawyer v. Brossart, 67 Iowa, 678, 56 Am. Rep. 371, 25 N. W. 876	857
Ross v. Estates Invest. Co. L. R. 3 Eq. 122	130	v. White, 58 C. C. A. 587, 122 Fed. 223	765
v. Parks, 93 Ala. 153, 11 L. R. A. 148, 30 Am. St. Rep. 47, 8 So. 368	576	Sayward v. Carlson, 1 Wash. 29, 23 Pac. 830	511
Rosser v. Western U. Telegr. Co. 130 N. C. 251, 41 S. E. 378	987	Scales v. Masonic Protective Asso. 70 N. H. 490, 48 Atl. 1084	635
Rossmiller v. State, 114 Wis. 169, 58 L. R. A. 98, 91 Am. St. Rep. 910, 80 N. W. 839	775	Schaller v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co. 97 Wis. 31, 71 N. W. 1042	745
Roth v. Rauschenbusch, 173 Mo. 582, 61 L. R. A. 455, 73 S. W. 664	107	Scheiderer v. Travelers' Ins. Co. 58 Wis. 13, 46 Am. Rep. 618, 16 N. W. 47	177
Rouss v. Creglow, 103 Iowa, 60, 72 N. W. 429	432	Schettler v. Smith, 41 N. Y. 328	152
Rowell v. Doyle, 131 Mass. 474	775	Schultz v. Roenitz, 86 Wis. 31, 21 L. R. A. 483, 39 Am. St. Rep. 873, 56 N. W. 194	864
Royal Electric Co. v. Heve, Rap. Jud. Quebec, 11 B. R. 436	478	Schlamp v. Berner, 21 Ky. L. Rep. 324, 51 S. W. 312	553
Rubidoex v. Parks, 48 Cal. 215	291	Schlereth v. Schlereth, 173 N. Y. 444, 93 Am. St. Rep. 618, 66 N. E. 130	153
Ruckman v. Bergholz, 37 N. J. L. 437	291	Schonfeld v. Turner, 75 Tex. 324, 7 L. R. A. 180, 12 S. W. 626	553
Rude v. St. Louis, 93 Mo. 408, 6 S. W. 257	365	School Committee v. Kesler, 67 N. C. 447	447
Rude's Case. See Rude v. St. Louis.		Schrader v. Port Huron, 106 Mich. 173, 63 N. W. 964	261
Ruffin v. Harrison, 91 N. C. 398	191	Schultz v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co. 44 Wis. 638	740
Rupert v. Penner, 35 Neb. 587, 17 L. R. A. 824, 53 N. W. 598	630	Schweltzer v. Citizens' General Electric Co. 21 Ky. L. Rep. 608, 52 S. W. 830	477
Russell, Re, 168 N. Y. 169, 61 N. E. 166	152	Schwenk v. Naylor, 102 N. Y. 683, 7 N. E. 788	129
v. H. C. Akeley Lumber Co. 45 Minn. 376, 48 N. W. 3	560	Scotfield v. Council Bluffs, 68 Iowa, 695, 28 N. W. 20	412
v. Koonce, 104 N. C. 237, 10 S. E. 256	979	Scott v. Hastings, 4 Kay & J. 633	687
v. Pittsburgh, C. C. & St. L. R. Co. 157 Ind. 305, 55 L. R. A. 253, 87 Am. St. Rep. 214, 61 N. E. 678	235	v. Indianapolis Wagon Works, 48 Ind. 75	607
Rust v. Vanvactor, 9 W. Va. 600	864	v. London & St. K. Docks Co. 3 Hurlst. & C. 596	477
Rutherford v. Holley, 105 N. Y. 632, 11 N. E. 818	646	v. Queen, 95 N. C. 340	187
Ryder v. State, 109 Ga. 528, 38 L. R. A. 721, 62 Am. St. Rep. 334, 28 S. E. 246	327	Scripture v. Francetown Soapstone Co. 50 N. H. 571	679
S.		Scroggs v. Stevenson, 108 N. C. 260, 12 S. E. 1031	187
St. John v. American Mut. L. Ins. Co. 13 N. Y. 31, 64 Am. Dec. 529	553	Seaman v. Marshall, 116 Mich. 327, 74 N. W. 484	933
St. Joseph & W. R. Co. v. Wheeler, 35 Kan. 185, 10 Pac. 461	248
St. Louis v. Gurno, 12 Mo. 414	365
67 L. R. A.

- Sears v. Cottrell, 5 Mich. 251 628
 Sebert v. Alpena, 78 Mich. 165, 43 N. W. 1098 261
 Second Ward Sav. Bank v. Milwaukee, 94 Wis. 587, 69 N. W. 359 206
 Seculovich v. Morton, 101 Cal. 673, 40 Am. St. Rep. 106, 36 Pac. 387 945
 Security Trust Co. v. Black River Nat. Bank, 187 U. S. 211, 47 L. ed. 147, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 52 766
 Selfert v. Brooklyn, 101 N. Y. 136, 54 Am. Rep. 664, 4 N. E. 321 262
 Seller v. The Pacific, 1 Or. 409, Fed. Cas. No. 12,644 437
 Senor v. Western Millers Mut. F. Ins. Co. 181 Mo. 104, 70 S. W. 687 585, 587, 589
 Setter v. Alvey, 15 Kan. 157 65
 Sexton v. Phoenix Ins. Co. 132 N. C. 3, 43 S. E. 479 224, 246
 Shallor v. Bumstead, 99 Mass. 112 326
 Sharp v. Farmer, 20 N. C. 255 (4 Dev. & B. L. 122) 250
 Sheanon v. Pacific Mut. L. Ins. Co. 77 Wis. 618, 9 L. R. A. 685, 20 Am. St. Rep. 151, 46 N. W. 799 635
 Sheehy v. Kansas City Cable R. Co. 94 Mo. 574, 4 Am. St. Rep. 396, 7 S. W. 579 365
 Sheffield Furnace Co. v. Hull Coal & Coke Co. 101 Ala. 446, 14 So. 672, 759 760
 Sheldon, Ex parte, 34 Ohio St. 319 950
 v. Van Buskirk, 2 N. Y. 473 628
 Shellar v. Shivers, 171 Pa. 569, 33 Atl. 95 700
 Shelley's Case 446, 449, 629, 630, 631
 Shepardson v. Perkins, 58 N. H. 354 837
 Shepherd's Fold of Protestant Church v. New York, 96 N. Y. 137 818
 Sherlock v. Stuart, 96 Mich. 193, 21 L. R. A. 580, 55 N. W. 845 616
 Sherman v. Sherman, 3 Barb. 385 105
 Sherrill v. Western U. Tele. Co. 116 N. C. 655, 21 S. E. 429 987
 Shields v. Jacob, 88 Mich. 164, 13 L. R. A. 760, 50 N. W. 105 338
 v. Union Cent. L. Ins. Co. 119 N. C. 380, 25 S. E. 951 225 Shinglemeyer v. Wright, 124 Mich. 230, 50 L. R. A. 129, 82 N. W. 887 929
 Shipman v. Rollins, 98 N. Y. 311 153
 Shumate v. Bailey, 110 Mo. 411, 20 S. W. 178 100
 Sibbald v. United States, 12 Pet. 489, 9 L. ed. 1168 192
 Sidsensparker v. Sidsensparker, 52 Me. 481, 83 Am. Dec. 527 607
 Silberman v. Clark, 96 N. Y. 522 759
 Simmons v. Carrier, 60 Mo. 581 491
 v. Western U. Tele. Co. 63 S. C. 429, 57 L. R. A. 607, 41 S. E. 521 992
 Simms v. Garrot, 21 N. C. (1 Dev. & B. Eq.) 397 442
 Simpson v. Justice, 43 N. C. (8 Ired. Eq.) 115 985
 Sims v. Daniels, 57 Kan. 552, 35 L. R. A. 146, 46 Pac. 952 338
 v. Gray, 93 Iowa. 38, 61 N. W. 171 876
 Slinnot v. Davenport, 22 How. 227, 16 L. ed. 243 921
 Sitton v. MacDonald, 25 S. C. 68, 60 Am. Rep. 484 483, 486
 Sizor v. Clark, 116 Wis. 534, 93 N. W. 539 580
 Skiff v. Stoddard, 63 Conn. 198, 21 L. R. A. 102, 26 Atl. 874, 28 Atl. 104 686
 Slaughter v. Gerson, 13 Wall. 379, 20 L. ed. 627 749, 750
 Slaughter House Cases, 16 Wall. 36, 21 L. ed. 394 920, 938
 Sleigheter v. Harrington, 6 N. C. (2 Murph.) 332 979
 Sloan v. McCarty, 134 Mass. 245 37
 Small v. Field, 102 Mo. 104, 14 S. W. 815 90
 v. Foley, 8 Colo. App. 435, 47 Pac. 64 561
 Smith, Re, 104 Iowa. 199, 73 N. W. 605 627
 Re, 146 N. Y. 68, 28 L. R. A. 820, 48 Am. St. Rep. 769, 40 N. E. 497 939
 v. Boston & M. R. Co. 120 Mass. 491, 21 Am. Rep. 538 248
 v. Butler, 85 Tex. 130, 19 S. W. 1085 454
 v. Collins, 90 Ga. 411, 17 S. E. 1013 630
 v. Edwards, 88 N. Y. 92 152
 Smith v. Erie R. Co. 67 N. J. L. 636, 59 L. R. A. 302, 52 Atl. 634 959
 v. Fell, 2 Curt. Eccl. Rep. 667 927
 v. Irwin, 51 N. J. L. 507, 14 Am. St. Rep. 699, 18 Atl. 852 959
 v. London & S. W. R. Co. L. R. 5 C. P. 98 418
 v. Morrison, 22 Pick. 430 560
 v. New York C. R. Co. 43 Barb. 225 557
 v. Packard, 12 Wis. 371 563
 v. Reid, 134 N. Y. 568, 31 N. E. 1082 886
 v. Rollin, 11 R. I. 464, 23 Am. Rep. 509 249
 v. Skow, 97 Iowa, 640, 66 N. W. 893 627
 v. State (Tex. Crim. App.) 65 S. W. 186 505
 v. State, 61 Miss. 759 407
 v. Western U. Tele. Co. 83 Ky. 104, 4 Am. St. Rep. 126 415
 Smithdeal v. Wilkerson, 100 N. C. 52, 6 S. E. 71 465
 Sneek v. Traveler's Ins. Co. 88 Hun, 94, 34 N. Y. Supp. 545 635
 Sneden, Re, 105 Mich. 61, 55 Am. St. Rep. 435, 62 N. W. 1009 790
 Snell, Re, 31 Minn. 110, 16 N. W. 692 784
 Snowden v. Norfolk Southern R. Co. 95 N. C. 93 471
 Snyder v. Hannibal & St. J. R. Co. 60 Mo. 413 247
 v. Martin, 17 W. Va. 276, 41 Am. Rep. 670 691
 Sohn v. Waterson, 17 Wall. 596, 21 L. ed. 737 560, 561
 Solary v. Webster, 35 Fla. 363, 17 So. 646 587
 So Relle v. Western U. Tele. Co. 55 Tex. 308, 40 Am. Rep. 805 991 Souder v. Home Friendly Soc. 72 Md. 511, 20 Atl. 137 554
 Soulard v. St. Louis, 36 Mo. 546 365
 South & North Ala. R. Co. v. Morris, 65 Ala. 193 287
 Southern Loan & T. Co. v. Benbow, 135 N. C. 303, 47 S. E. 435 468
 Spaulding v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co. 30 Wis. 110, 11 Am. Rep. 550, 33 Wis. 582 419
 v. Putman, 128 Mass. 363 39
 Speer v. Kearney County, 32 C. C. A. 101, 60 U. S. App. 38, 88 Fed. 749 553
 Spencer v. Brooks, 97 Ga. 681, 25 S. E. 480 343
 v. Merchant, 100 N. Y. 585, 3 N. E. 682 628
 v. Pt. Pleasant & O. River R. Co. 23 W. Va. 406 368
 v. State, 69 Md. 28, 13 Atl. 809 327
 Spooner v. Travelers' Ins. Co. 76 Minn. 311, 77 Am. St. Rep. 651, 79 N. W. 305 873
 Spreckels v. Nevada Bank, 113 Cal. 272, 33 L. R. A. 459, 54 Am. St. Rep. 348, 45 Pac. 329 668
 Springer v. Chicago, 135 Ill. 552, 12 L. R. A. 609, 26 N. E. 514 843
 Springfield Engine & Threshing Co. v. Green, 25 Ill. App. 106 459
 Sprott v. Reid, 3 G. Greene, 489, 56 Am. Dec. 549 562
 Spurr v. Scoville, 3 Cush. 578 942
 Stage v. Home Ins. Co. 76 App. Div. 509, 78 N. Y. Supp. 555 528
 Stalnton v. Brown, 6 Dana, 248 578
 Stalcup v. Louisville, N. A. & C. R. Co. (1897) 16 Ind. App. 584, 45 N. E. 802 248
 Stanchfield v. Newton, 142 Mass. 110, 7 N. E. 703 934, 935
 Standley v. Roberts, 8 C. C. A. 305, 19 U. S. App. 407, 59 Fed. 836 764
 Stanton v. Embrey, 93 U. S. 548, 23 L. ed. 983 764
 v. Metropolitan R. Co. 14 Allen, 485 248
 Starnes v. Hill, 112 N. C. 1, 22 L. R. A. 598, 16 S. E. 1011 442, 443
 State v. Adams, 58 Kan. 385, 49 Pac. 81 351
 v. Armstrong, 4 Minn. 335 Gll. 251 502
 v. Arnold, 107 N. C. 861, 11 S. E. 990 183
 v. Arthur (N. J. L.) 57 Atl. 156 960
 v. Baldwin, 36 Kan. 1, 12 Pac. 318 914
 v. Ballou, 20 R. I. 607, 40 Atl. 861 325
 v. Barnes, 122 N. C. 1036, 29 S. E. 381 183, 185
 v. Baughman, 111 Iowa. 71, 82 N. W. 452 300

- State v. Best, 108 N. C. 747, 12 S. E. 907 425
 v. Beswick, 13 R. I. 211, 43 Am. Rep. 26 328, 330
 v. Blackburn, 80 N. C. 477 190
 v. Boyd, 2 Hill, L. 288, 27 Am. Dec. 376 407, 408
 v. Bunting, 118 N. C. 1200, 24 S. E. 118 183
 v. Butts, 91 N. C. 524 188
 v. Cadwell, 112 N. C. 854, 16 S. E. 1010 182
 v. Calley, 104 N. C. 858, 17 Am. St. Rep. 704, 10 S. E. 455 253
 v. Cameron, 121 N. C. 572, 28 S. E. 139 188, 189
 v. Chambers, 45 La. Ann. 36, 11 So. 944 930
 v. Clark, 30 Wash. 439, 71 Pac. 20 283
 v. Clenny, 133 N. C. 662, 45 S. E. 525 189
 v. Council, 129 N. C. 511, 39 S. E. 814 186, 195
 v. Crites, 48 Ohio St. 142, 26 N. E. 1052 174
 v. Daniel, 121 N. C. 575, 28 S. E. 255 187
 v. Daugherty, 59 Mo. 104 193
 v. Dierberger, 96 Mo. 666, 9 Am. St. Rep. 880, 10 S. W. 168 296
 v. Dixon, 97 Ind. 125 193
 v. Dodge (Vt.) 56 Atl. 983 798
 v. England, 78 N. C. 552 186
 v. Garibaldi, 44 La. Ann. 809, 11 So. 36 75
 v. Garrett, 60 N. C. 144, 84 Am. Dec. 359 296
 v. Gerhardt, 145 Ind. 439, 33 L. R. A. 313, 44 N. E. 469 616
 v. Goodwill, 33 W. Va. 179, 6 L. R. A. 621, 25 Am. St. Rep. 863, 10 S. E. 285 287, 290
 v. Grubb, 55 Kan. 678, 41 Pac. 951 922
 v. Harris, 114 N. C. 830, 19 S. E. 154 190
 v. Haworth, 24 Utah, 398, 69 Pac. 155 517
 v. Hay, 126 N. C. 999, 49 L. R. A. 588, 78 Am. St. Rep. 691, 35 S. E. 459 939
 v. Hayes, 105 Mo. 76, 24 Am. St. Rep. 360, 16 S. W. 514 141
 v. Higgins, 13 R. I. 330, 43 Am. Rep. 26 330
 v. Hilton, 35 Kan. 338, 11 Pac. 164 914
 v. Hipp, 38 Ohio St. 206 627
 v. Hull, 33 Or. 56, 72 Am. St. Rep. 694, 54 Pac. 159 141
 v. Jefferson, 66 N. C. 311 186, 194
 v. Jim, 12 N. C. (1 Dev. L.) 142 183
 v. Johnson, 67 N. C. 55 184, 185, 186
 v. Kuntz, 47 La. Ann. 106, 16 So. 651 75
 v. Latham, 35 N. C. (13 Ired. L.) 33 470
 v. Lawler, 130 Mo. 366, 51 Am. St. Rep. 576, 32 S. W. 979 347, 348, 352
 v. Lawrence, 57 Me. 574 328, 330
 v. Lee, 114 N. C. 844, 19 S. E. 375 186
 v. Lewis, 20 Nev. 833, 22 Pac. 241 327
 v. Mahner, 43 La. Ann. 496, 9 So. 480 75
 v. Mellor, 13 R. I. 666 330
 v. Moore, 101 Mo. 816, 14 S. W. 182 348
 v. Morledge, 164 Mo. 522, 63 S. W. 226 348, 349
 v. Peake, 130 N. C. 711, 41 S. E. 887 184
 v. Powell, 106 N. C. 635, 11 S. E. 191 184
 v. Price, 110 N. C. 599, 15 S. E. 116 188
 v. Ramseyer (N. H.) 58 Atl. 958 798
 v. Rhodes, 112 N. C. 857, 17 S. E. 164 190
 v. Sarradat, 46 La. Ann. 700, 24 L. R. A. 584, 15 So. 87 75
 v. Scott, 49 La. Ann. 253, 36 L. R. A. 721, 21 So. 271 327, 330
 v. Scott, 72 N. C. 461 183
 v. Shannon, 36 Ohio St. 423, 39 Am. Rep. 599 778
 v. Shugart, 138 Ala. 86, 100 Am. St. Rep. 17, 35 So. 28 798
 v. Southern R. Co. 122 N. C. 1052, 41 L. R. A. 246, 30 S. E. 133 229, 230, 245, 250 State v. Southern R. Co. 125 N. C. 670, 34 S. E. 527 230
 v. Stickney, 53 Kan. 308, 42 Am. St. Rep. 284, 36 Pac. 714 141
 v. Thierault, 70 Vt. 617, 43 L. R. A. 290, 67 Am. St. Rep. 695, 41 Atl. 1030 777, 782
 v. Watkins, 101 N. C. 702, 8 S. E. 346 182
 v. Webber, 107 N. C. 962, 22 Am. St. Rep. 920, 12 S. E. 598 253
 v. Whitcom (Wis.) 99 N. W. 468 207, 208
 v. Williams, 94 N. C. 891 194
 v. Yokum, 11 S. D. 544, 79 N. W. 835 327
 State ex rel. Sturdevant v. Allen, 43 Neb. 851, 62 N. W. 35 337, 338, 339
 Runge v. Anderson, 100 Wis. 523, 42 L. R. A. 239, 76 N. W. 482 474
 Byers v. Bailey, 7 Iowa, 390 173
 Lembke v. Bechdel, 37 Minn. 360, 5 Am. St. Rep. 854, 34 N. W. 334 790
 Blaisdell v. Billings, 55 Minn. 467, 43 Am. St. Rep. 525, 57 N. W. 206 975
 Bateman v. Bode, 55 Ohio St. 224, 34 L. R. A. 498, 60 Am. St. Rep. 696, 45 N. E. 195 474
 Adams v. Burdge, 95 Wis. 390, 37 L. R. A. 157, 60 Am. St. Rep. 123, 70 N. W. 347 939
 Gwynn v. Citizens Teleph. Co. 61 S. C. 83, 55 L. R. A. 139, 85 Am. St. Rep. 870, 39 S. E. 257 115
 Munsey v. Clough, 71 N. H. 594, 67 L. R. A. 949, 53 Atl. 1086 954, 955
 Lamb v. Cunningham, 83 Wis. 90, 17 L. R. A. 145, 35 Am. St. Rep. 27, 53 N. W. 35 203
 Chamberlin v. Daniel, 17 Wash. 111, 49 Pac. 243 285
 Richmond v. Davidson, 114 Wis. 563, 58 L. R. A. 739, 88 N. W. 596, 90 N. W. 1067 817
 Weiss v. District Board, 76 Wis. 177, 7 L. R. A. 330, 20 Am. St. Rep. 41, 44 N. W. 967 203
 Wolfe v. Falley, 9 N. D. 450, 83 N. W. 860 336
 Wear v. Francis, 95 Mo. 44, 8 S. W. 1 170
 Humphrey v. Franklin, 40 Kan. 410, 19 Pac. 801 616
 Dwtinnell v. Gaylord, 73 Wis. 316, 41 N. W. 521 203
 Pelton v. Irwin, 30 W. Va. 404, 4 S. E. 413 692
 Gillis v. Johnson, 18 Mont. 556, 46 Pac. 440 338
 Arnold v. Justus, 84 Minn. 237, 55 L. R. A. 325, 87 N. W. 770 950
 Zillmer v. Kreutzberg, 114 Wis. 530, 58 L. R. A. 748, 91 Am. St. Rep. 834, 90 N. W. 1098 208
 Batz v. Lewis, 118 Wis. 432, 95 N. W. 388 206
 Sanderson v. Mann, 76 Wis. 469, 45 N. W. 526, 46 N. W. 51 205
 O'Malley v. O'Conner, 38 Minn. 243, 36 N. W. 462 952
 Dahlman v. Piper, 50 Neb. 25, 69 N. W. 378 338
 Rose v. Piper, 50 Neb. 42, 69 N. W. 384 337
 Granvold v. Porter, 11 N. D. 309, 91 N. W. 944 337
 Woody v. Rotwitt, 18 Mont. 502, 46 Pac. 370 338
 St. Louis v. Selbert, 123 Mo. 424, 24 S. W. 750, 27 S. W. 624 817
 Whedon v. Smith, 57 Neb. 41, 77 N. W. 384 337
 Hudd v. Timme, 54 Wis. 318, 11 N. W. 785 203
 Bloomfield v. Welr, 5 Wash. 82, 31 Pac. 417 337
 State, use of Abell v. Western Maryland R. Co. 63 Md. 433 234
 State, Canfield, Prosecutor, v. Morrilstown Fire Asso. 23 N. J. L. 195 964
 State Assessors v. Central R. Co. 48 N. J. L. 146, 4 Atl. 578 628

- State Ins. Co. v. Oregon R. & Nav. Co. 20 Or. 563, 26 Pac. 838 185
- State Railroad Tax Cases. See TAYLOR v. SENIOR.
- Staub v. Kendrick, 121 Ind. 226, 6 L. R. A. 619, 23 N. E. 79 648
- Steele v. Rutherford, 70 N. C. 137 226
- Steelsmith v. Gartlan, 45 W. Va. 27, 44 L. R. A. 107, 29 S. E. 978 699
- Steinback v. Diepenbrock, 1 App. Div. 417, 37 N. Y. Supp. 279 280, 553
- Stephens v. Cherokee Nation, 174 U. S. 445, 43 L. ed. 1041, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 722 560
- Stephenson v. Election Comrs. 118 Mich. 396, 42 L. R. A. 214, 74 Am. St. Rep. 402, 76 N. W. 914 339
- Sterling v. Jackson, 69 Mich. 488, 13 Am. St. Rep. 405, 37 N. W. 845 777
- Sternes, Ex parte, 82 Cal. 245, 23 Pac. 38
- Stetson v. Chicago, & E. R. Co. 75 Ill. 74
- Stevens v. Midland Counties R. Co. 10 Exch. 351 459
- Stevenson v. McLean, L. R. 5 Q. B. Div. 346
- Stevens v. People's Mut. Accel. Ins. Asso. 150 Pa. 132, 16 L. R. A. 446, 24 Atl. 662 633
- Stewart v. Gilruth, 8 S. D. 181, 65 N. W. 1065 291
- Stewart-Chute Lumber Co. v. Missouri P. R. Co. 28 Neb. 39, 44 N. W. 48 494
- Stine v. Bennett, 13 Minn. 153, Gil. 138
- Stockman, Re, 71 Mich. 180, 38 N. W. 876
- Stokes v. People, 53 N. Y. 183, 13 Am. Rep. 492 145
- Stone v. Myers, 9 Minn. 303, 86 Am. Dec. 104, Gil. 287 945
- v. Vandermark, 146 Ill. 312, 34 N. E. 150 453
- Straker v. Phenix Ins. Co. 101 Wis. 413, 77 N. W. 752 741
- Strause Bros. v. Aetna F. Ins. Co. 126 N. C. 223, 48 L. R. A. 452, 35 S. E. 471 226
- Strauss v. Phenix Ins. Co. 9 Colo. App. 386, 48 Pac. 822 586
- Strike v. Wisconsin Odd Fellows Mut. L. Ins. Co. 95 Wis. 583, 70 N. W. 819 553
- Stroh v. Detroit, 131 Mich. 109, 90 N. W. 1029 206
- Strohn v. Detroit & M. R. Co. 21 Wis. 554, 94 Am. Dec. 564 744
- Strong v. Lawrence, 58 Iowa, 55, 12 N. W. 74 607
- Strutton v. Young, 15 Ky. L. Rep. 657, 25 S. W. 109 876
- Stuart v. Palmer, 74 N. Y. 183, 30 Am. Rep. 289 975
- v. Western U. Teleg. Co. 66 Tex. 584, 59 Am. Rep. 623, 18 S. W. 351 991
- Stull v. De Mattos, 23 Wash. 71, 51 L. R. A. 892, 62 Pac. 451 283
- Sturges v. Crowninshield, 4 Wheat. 122, 4 L. ed. 529 562
- Sturgis v. Robbins, 62 Me. 289 421
- Stutsman County, Re, 68 Fed. 337 766
- Sutton v. Gay, 4 Pick. 311 39
- Summerfield v. Western U. Teleg. Co. 87 Wis. 1, 41 Am. St. Rep. 17, 57 N. W. 973 992
- Summerlin v. Cowles, 107 N. C. 459, 12 S. E. 234 187
- Supreme Court of Honor v. Turner, 99 Ill. App. 310 635
- Sutphen v. Fowler, 9 Paige 280 942
- Sutton v. Wauwatosa, 29 Wis. 27, 9 Am. Rep. 534 241
- Snydam v. Broadnax, 14 Pet. 67, 10 L. ed. 357 766
- Swan v. Hammond, 138 Mass. 45, 52 Am. Rep. 255 318
- Swarthout v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co. 49 Wis. 625, 6 N. W. 814 165
- Swedringen v. Howser, 37 Kan. 126, 14 Pac. 436 853
- Swiger v. Hayman (W. Va.) 48 S. E. 839
- Syme v. Badger, 92 N. C. 706 451, 454
- T.
- Tarrant v. Webb (1856) 18 C. B. 797 513
- Taylor v. Davis, 110 U. S. 330, 28 L. ed. 163, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 147 980
- Taylor v. Glens Falls Ins. Co. 44 Fla. 273, 32 So. 887 589
- v. Hunt, 118 N. C. 168, 24 S. E. 359
- v. Jeter, 33 Ga. 195, 81 Am. Dec. 202 864
- v. McMillan, 123 N. C. 393, 31 S. E. 730 250
- v. Nostrand, 134 N. Y. 108, 31 N. E. 246 978, 981
- v. St. Louis, 14 Mo. 20, 55 Am. Dec. 89 365
- v. Secor, 92 U. S. 575, 23 L. ed. 663
- Taylor County Case. See WISCONSIN C. R. CO. v. TAYLOR COUNTY.
- Tennessee Coal & R. Co. v. Roddy, 85 Tenn. 400, 5 S. W. 286 497
- Territory v. Santé Fe P. R. Co. 10 N. M. 415, 62 Pac. 985 316
- Terry v. Anderson, 95 U. S. 625, 24 L. ed. 365 561, 563
- Texas & N. O. R. Co. v. Brown (Tex. Civ. App.) 37 S. W. 785 557
- Texas Western R. Co. v. Gentry, 69 Tex. 625, 8 S. W. 98 164
- The New World v. King, 16 How. 469, 14 L. ed. 1019 237, 238
- Thomas v. Kinkead, 55 Ark. 502, 15 L. R. A. 558, 29 Am. St. Rep. 68, 18 S. W. 854 296
- Thomason v. Neeley, 50 Miss. 310 886
- Thompson, Ex parte, 93 Ill. 89 790
- v. Craig, 64 Mo. 312 110
- v. Hart, 58 App. Div. 449, 69 N. Y. Supp. 229 465
- v. Hickey, 50 How. Pr. 434 123
- v. Searcy County, 6 C. C. A. 674, 12 U. S. App. 618, 57 Fed. 1030 765
- v. Traders' Ins. Co. 169 Mo. 12, 68 S. W. 889 527
- Thomson v. Smith, 111 Iowa, 718, 50 L. R. A. 780, 82 Am. St. Rep. 541, 83 N. W. 789 700
- Thorne v. Turck, 94 N. Y. 90, 46 Am. Rep. 128 171
- Thurber v. Crump, 86 Ky. 408, 6 S. W. 145
- Thurston v. St. Joseph, 51 Mo. 510, 11 Am. Rep. 468 666
- Tibby v. Missouri P. R. Co. 82 Mo. 292 366
- Tilden v. Green, 130 N. Y. 29, 14 L. R. A. 33, 27 Am. St. Rep. 487, 28 N. E. 880 234
- 150
- Tills v. Liverpool & L. & G. Ins. Co. (Fla.) 35 So. 171 521, 527
- Tinicum Fishing Co. v. Carter, 61 Pa. 21, 100 Am. Dec. 597 777
- Titus v. Bradford, B. & K. R. Co. 136 Pa. 618, 20 Am. St. Rep. 944, 20 Atl. 517 509
- Todd v. Election Comrs. 104 Mich. 474, 29 L. R. A. 330, 62 N. W. 564, 64 N. W. 496 474
- v. Old Colony & F. River R. Co. 3 Allen, 18, 80 Am. Dec. 49 237
- Tolchester Beach Improv. Co. v. Steinmeier, 72 Md. 316, 8 L. R. A. 848, 20 Atl. 188 459
- Toledo, W. & W. R. Co. v. Beggs, 85 Ill. 84, 28 Am. Rep. 613 251
- v. Brooks, 81 Ill. 250 251
- Toolan Case. See LANSING v. TOOLAN.
- Total v. Bonnetoy, 123 Ill. 653, 5 Am. St. Rep. 570, 14 N. E. 687 836
- Towne v. Rice, 122 Mass. 67 37
- Towns v. Klamath County, 33 Or. 225, 53 Pac. 604 628
- Townsend v. Kendall, 4 Minn. 412, 77 Am. Dec. 534, Gil. 315 863
- v. McDonald, 12 N. Y. 381, 64 Am. Dec. 508 837
- Trade-Mark Case, 100 U. S. 82, 25 L. ed. 550 908, 909, 910, 916, 917
- Travelers' Ins. Co. v. Dunlap, 160 Ill. 642, 52 Am. St. Rep. 355, 43 N. E. 765 635
- v. Fricke, 94 Wis. 258, 68 N. W. 958 203
- Treadway v. Payne, 127 N. C. 436, 37 S. E. 460 451
- Treat v. Bates, 27 Mich. 390 645
- Trenton Mut. Life & F. Ins. Co. v. Johnson, 24 N. J. L. 576 553
- Tripp v. Provident Fund Soc. 140 N. Y. 23, 22 L. R. A. 432, 37 Am. St. Rep. 529, 35 N. E. 316 484

Trodd v. Downs, 2 Atk. 304	447
Tscheider v. Biddle, 4 Dill. 58, Fed. Cas. No. 14,210	358
Tupper v. Thompson, 26 Minn. 385, 4 N. W. 621	883
Turner v. Fidelity & C. Co. 112 Mich. 425, 38 L. R. A. 529, 67 Am. St. Rep. 428, 70 N. W. 898	636
v. New York, 168 U. S. 90, 42 L. ed. 392, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 38	561
v. North Carolina R. Co. 63 N. C. 522	230, 232, 246
Turpin v. Turpin, 1 Wash. (Va.) 75	651
Twitty v. Camp, 62 N. C. (Phill. Eq.) 61	447
Tyler v. Moore, 42 Pa. 374, 1 Monaghan (Pa.) 529, 17 Atl. 216	630
v. Savage, 143 U. S. 79, 36 L. ed. 82, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 340	181
v. Tyler, 19 Ill. 151	318

U.

Underhill v. Dennis, 9 Paige, 202	864
Underwood v. People, 32 Mich. 1, 20 Am. Rep. 633	974, 975
Union Bank v. Valden, 18 How. 503, 15 L. ed. 472	766
Union Nat. Bank v. Byram, 131 Ill. 92, 22 N. E. 842	676
Union P. R. Co. v. Nichols, 8 Kan. 505, 12 Am. Rep. 475	247, 251
United States, Re, 194 U. S. 194, 48 L. ed. 931, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 629	769
v. Adams, 9 Wall. 557, 19 L. ed. 584	193
v. Addyston Pipe & Steel Co. 46 L. R. A. 122, 29 C. C. A. 141, 54 U. S. App. 723, 85 Fed. 271	911, 912
v. Clark, 31 Fed. 710	296
v. E. C. Knight Co. 156 U. S. 1, 39 L. ed. 325, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 249	912
v. Harris, 106 U. S. 629, 27 L. ed. 280, 1 Sup. Ct. Rep. 601	908, 909, 910, 917
v. Joint Traffic Asso. 171 U. S. 505, 43 L. ed. 259, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 25	911, 912
v. Reed, 2 Blatchf. 437, Fed. Cas. No. 16,134	407
v. Reese, 92 U. S. 214, 23 L. ed. 563	908, 910, 916
v. Thompson, 93 Wis. 586, 23 L. ed. 982	189
v. Trans-Missouri Freight Asso. 166 U. S. 290, 41 L. ed. 1007, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 540	911
v. Union P. R. Co. 105 U. S. 263, 26 L. ed. 1021	189
v. White, 4 Utah, 499, 11 Pac. 570	502
United States ex rel. Masslich v. Saunders, 59 C. C. A. 394, 124 Fed. 124	765
Iron County v. Severens, 18 C. C. A. 314, 37 U. S. App. 622, 71 Fed. 768	769
Harless v. United States Ct. App. Judges, 29 C. C. A. 78, 56 U. S. App. 33, 85 Fed. 177	767, 769
United States Exp. Co. v. Backman, 28 Ohio St. 144	415
Urpman v. Lowther Oil Co. 53 W. Va. 501, 97 Am. St. Rep. 1027, 44 S. E. 433	699
Urquhart v. Ogdensburg, 91 N. Y. 67, 43 Am. Rep. 655	259
Utz, Re, 43 Cal. 200	630

V.

Vail v. Mix, 74 Ill. 127	836
Valton v. National Fund Life Assur. Co. 20 N. Y. 32	553
Vance v. Vance, 108 U. S. 514, 27 L. ed. 808, 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. 854	561, 563, 564
Van De Vere v. Kansas City, 107 Mo. 83, 28 Am. St. Rep. 396, 17 S. W. 695	385
Van Hook v. Selma, 70 Ala. 361, 45 Am. Rep. 85	616
Van Horne v. Campbell, 100 N. Y. 267, 52 Am. Rep. 166, 3 N. E. 316	101
Vanover v. Davis, 27 Ga. 354	802
67 L. R. A.

Van Steenburgh v. Thornton, 58 N. J. L. 160, 33 Atl. 380	959
Vanzant v. Waddell, 2 Yerg. 270	921
Varnham v. Council Bluffs, 52 Iowa, 698, 3 N. W. 792	92
Venning v. Steadman, 9 Can. S. C. 210, 775	776
Viany v. Ferran, 5 Abb. Pr. N. S. 110	358
Viele v. Keeler, 129 N. Y. 190, 29 N. E. 78	152
Viliski v. Minneapolis, 40 Minn. 304, 3 L. R. A. 831, 41 N. W. 1050	902
Virginia, Ex parte, 100 U. S. 339, 25 L. ed. 676	74
v. Rives, (Ex parte, Virginia) 100 U. S. 313, 25 L. ed. 667	769
Virginia-Carolina Chemical Co. v. Sloan, 136 N. C. 122, 48 S. E. 577	228
Vivar v. Supreme Lodge, K. of P. 52 N. J. L. 455, 20 Atl. 88	553
Voorhees, Re, 32 N. J. L. 141	950, 952
Vose v. Lancashire & Y. R. Co. (1858) 2 Hurst. & N. 728	513
Vreeland v. New Jersey Stone Co. 29 N. J. Eq. 188	130

W.

Wabash R. Co. v. Brown, 153 Ill. 484, 39 N. E. 273	484
Wade v. Ridley, 87 Me. 368, 32 Atl. 975	927
Wade's Case, 17 Pick. 395	349
Wadsworth v. Boston Elev. R. Co. 182 Mass. 572, 66 N. E. 421	423
v. Western U. Tele. Co. 86 Tenn. 695, 6 Am. St. Rep. 864, 8 S. W. 574	991
Waffle v. New York C. R. Co. 53 N. Y. 11, 13 Am. Rep. 467	643
Walker v. Cronin, 107 Mass. 555	199
v. Gillett, 59 Kan. 214, 52 Pac. 442	343
Wall v. Norfolk & W. R. Co. 52 W. Va. 485, 64 L. R. A. 501, 94 Am. St. Rep. 948, 44 S. E. 294	684
Wallace v. Bentley, 77 Cal. 19, 11 Am. St. Rep. 231, 18 Pac. 788	978
v. Cannon, 38 Ga. 199, 95 Am. Dec. 385	232, 246
v. Merrimack River Nav. & Exp. Co. (1883) 134 Mass. 95, 45 Am. Rep. 301	249
Walla Walla v. Ferdon, 21 Wash. 308, 57 Pac. 796	283
Waller v. Northern Assur. Co. 2 McCrary, 657, 10 Fed. 232	480
Wallingford v. Western U. Tele. Co. 53 S. C. 410, 31 S. E. 275	483, 487
Wally v. Kennedy, 2 Yerg. 555, 24 Am. Dec. 511	921
Walter v. People, 32 N. Y. 147	328
Walters, Re, 84 Hun, 457, 32 N. Y. Supp. 322	939
Walton v. Bristol, 125 N. C. 419, 34 S. E. 544	468, 469
Ward v. Arredondo, Hopk. Ch. 213, 14 Am. Dec. 543	942
v. Jones, 40 N. C. (5 Ired. Eq.) 400	448
v. Wilmington & W. R. Co. 109 N. C. 358, 13 S. E. 926	471
Warder, B. & G. Co. v. Whitish, 77 Wis. 433, 46 N. W. 540	743
Warner v. Beach, 4 Gray, 162	318
v. Benjamin, 89 Wis. 290, 62 N. W. 179	727, 742
v. Durant, 76 N. Y. 133	153
v. Swearingen, 6 Dana, 200	651
Warnock v. Davis, 104 U. S. 775, 26 L. ed. 924	552
Warren v. Henly, 31 Iowa, 31	409
v. Hofer, 13 Ind. 167	864
v. Richmond, 58 Ill. 52	579
Washburn-Halligan Coffee Co. v. Merchants' Brick Mut. F. Ins. Co. 110 Iowa, 423, 80 Am. St. Rep. 311, 51 N. W. 707	585, 589
Washington Ice Co. v. Shortall, 101 Ill. 46, 40 Am. Rep. 196	836
Waterbury v. New York, C. & H. R. R. Co. 21 Blatchf. 314, 17 Fed. 671	237
Waters v. Lilley, 4 Pick. 145, 16 Am. Dec. 333	777
v. Richmond & D. R. Co. 110 N. C. 338, 16 L. R. A. 834, 14 S. E. 802	246
Waters-Pierce Oil Co. v. Texas, 177 U. S. 2842, 44 L. ed. 657, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 518	910, 918

- Watertown v. Mayo, 109 Mass. 315, 12 Am. Rep. 894..... 938, 940
- Watson v. Coast, 35 W. Va. 463, 14 S. E. 249..... 855, 858, 860
- v. Northumberland, 11 Ves. Jr. 153, 358
- v. Smith, 110 N. C. 6, 28 Am. St. Rep. 665, 14 S. E. 640..... 443
- v. Warnock, 31 Ga. 718..... 864
- v. Watson, 56 N. C. (3 Jones, Eq.) 400..... 443
- Watts v. Keller, 5 C. C. A. 394, 12 U. S. App. 274, 56 Fed. 1..... 576
- v. Lehman, 107 Pa. 106..... 361, 362
- v. Porter, 3 El. & Bl. 743..... 687
- Way, Re, 41 Mich. 299, 1 N. W. 1021..... 171
- v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co. 64 Iowa, 48, 52 Am. Rep. 431, 10 N. W. 828, 73 Iowa, 463, 35 N. W. 525..... 251
- v. Foster, 1 Allen, 408..... 248
- Waycross v. Houk, 113 Ga. 963, 39 S. E. 577..... 934, 935
- Wead v. Gray, 78 Mo. 59..... 101
- Weatherby v. Melkielejohn, 56 Wis. 73, 13 N. W. 697..... 837
- Weaver v. Burr, 31 W. Va. 736, 3 L. R. A. 94, 8 S. E. 743..... 860
- v. Wood, 9 Pa. 220..... 358
- Webb v. Archibald, 128 Mo. 299, 28 S. W. 80, 34 S. W. 54..... 654
- Webbe v. Western U. Teleg. Co. 169 Ill. 610, 61 Am. St. Rep. 207, 48 N. E. 670..... 321
- Webber v. Lee, L. R. 9 Q. B. Div. 315..... 777
- Webster v. Cooper, 14 How. 488, 14 L. ed. 510..... 580
- Weed v. Hamburg-Bremen F. Ins. Co. 133 N. Y. 394, 31 N. E. 231..... 525
- v. Page, 7 Wis. 503..... 747
- Weeks v. Weeks, 77 N. C. 421..... 451
- Weston v. Woodcock, 7 Mees. & W. 14..... 362
- Weir v. Marley, 99 Mo. 484, 6 L. R. A. 672, 12 S. W. 798..... 785, 790, 792
- Welch v. Wesson, 6 Gray, 505..... 246
- Welsh v. State, 126 Ind. 71, 9 L. R. A. 666, 25 N. E. 883..... 741
- Wenzel v. Shulz, 78 Cal. 221, 20 Pac. 404..... 74
- West v. Western U. Teleg. Co. 39 Kan. 93, 7 Am. St. Rep. 530, 17 Pac. 807, 992
- v. Wright, 98 Ind. 335..... 745, 746
- Westchester F. Ins. Co. v. Weaver, 70 Md. 536, 5 L. R. A. 478, 17 Atl. 401, 18 Atl. 1034..... 480
- Western & A. R. Co. v. Meigs, 74 Ga. 857..... 92
- v. Patillo, 99 Ga. 97, 24 S. E. 958..... 96
- Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Adams, 75 Tex. 531, 6 L. R. A. 844, 16 Am. St. Rep. 920, 12 S. W. 857..... 321
- v. Crumpton, 138 Ala. 632, 36 So. 517..... 991
- v. Dubois, 128 Ill. 248, 15 Am. St. Rep. 109, 21 N. E. 4..... 483
- v. Eubanks, 100 Ky. 591, 36 L. R. A. 711, 66 Am. St. Rep. 361, 38 S. W. 1068..... 415
- v. Ferguson, 157 Ind. 64, 54 L. R. A. 846, 60 N. E. 674..... 992
- v. Fisher, 107 Ky. 513, 54 S. W. 830
- v. Frith, 105 Tenn. 174, 58 S. W. 118..... 497
- v. Hall, 124 U. S. 444, 31 L. ed. 479, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 577..... 483
- v. Halton, 71 Ill. App. 63..... 992
- v. Henderson, 89 Ala. 510, 18 Am. St. Rep. 148, 7 So. 419..... 991
- v. Indiana, 165 U. S. 304, 41 L. ed. 725, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 345..... 206
- v. McMullen, 58 N. J. L. 155, 32 L. R. A. 351, 33 Atl. 384..... 957, 959
- v. Mellon, 96 Tenn. 72, 33 S. W. 725
- v. Nye & S. Grain Co. (Neb.) 63 L. R. A. 803, 97 N. W. 305..... 486
- v. Procter, 6 Tex. Civ. App. 300, 25 S. W. 811..... 989
- v. Rogers, 68 Miss. 748, 13 L. R. A. 859, 24 Am. St. Rep. 300, 9 So. 823..... 992
- v. Stratemeler, 6 Ind. App. 125, 32 N. E. 871..... 484
- v. Taylor (Tex. Civ. App.) 81 S. W. 69..... 989
- v. Van Cleave, 107 Ky. 464, 92 Am. St. Rep. 366, 54 S. W. 827..... 991
- 67 L. R. A.
- Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Wood, 21 L. R. A. 706, 6 C. C. A. 432, 13 U. S. App. 317, 57 Fed. 471..... 321
- Western Wooden-Ware Asso. v. Starkey, 84 Mich. 76, 11 L. R. A. 503, 22 Am. St. Rep. 686, 47 N. W. 604..... 64
- Westoby v. Day, 2 El. & Bl. 605..... 684
- Weston v. Bear River & A. Water & Min. Co. 5 Cal. 186, 63 Am. Dec. 117..... 667, 668
- v. Charleston, 2 Pet. 449, 7 L. ed. 481..... 207
- Weston Case. See WESTON v. BEAR RIVER & A. WATER & MIN. CO.
- Wheaton v. North British & M. Ins. Co. 9 Am. St. Rep. 235..... 528
- Wheeler v. Jackson, 137 U. S. 245, 34 L. ed. 659, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 76, 561, 563
- v. Worcester, 10 Allen, 603..... 934
- Whitaker v. Bond, 63 N. C. 290..... 250
- White v. Arndt, 1 Whart. 91..... 362
- v. Ballard, 19 Wash. 284, 53 Pac. 159..... 263
- v. Butcher, 97 N. C. 7, 2 S. E. 59..... 191
- v. Madison, 26 N. Y. 117..... 978, 981
- Whitehead v. St. Louis, I. M. & S. R. Co. 99 Mo. 263, 6 L. R. A. 409, 11 S. W. 751..... 245
- Whitesides v. Cooper, 115 N. C. 570, 20 S. E. 295..... 442, 443
- Whitney, Ex parte, 13 Pet. 404, 10 L. ed. 221..... 770
- Whittemore v. Judd Linseed & Spermi Oil Co. 124 N. Y. 565, 21 Am. St. Rep. 708, 27 N. E. 244..... 164
- Whitten v. State, 47 Ga. 297..... 808
- Widaman v. Hubbard, 88 Fed. 806..... 553
- Wiedwald v. Dodson, 95 Cal. 450, 30 Pac. 580..... 253
- Wileman v. Mabree, 45 Mich. 484, 40 Am. Rep. 477, 8 N. W. 71..... 929
- Wilcox v. Cline, 70 Mich. 317, 38 N. W. 555
- v. Continental Ins. Co. 85 Wis. 197, 55 N. W. 188..... 745
- Wilkinson v. Wilkinson, 59 Wis. 560, 18 N. W. 527..... 756
- Williams v. Chaffin, 13 N. C. (2 Dev. L.) 336..... 979
- v. Fitch, 18 N. Y. 551..... 927
- v. Hassell, 74 N. C. 434..... 443
- v. Kenney, 14 Barb. 629..... 902
- v. Knight, 18 R. I. 333, 27 Atl. 210, 630
- v. Mobile & O. R. Co. (Miss.) 19 So. 90..... 248
- v. State, 55 Ga. 391..... 141
- v. Western U. Teleg. Co. 93 N. Y. 162..... 964
- v. Williams, 5 Gray, 24..... 453
- Williamson v. Nealy, 119 N. C. 341, 25 S. E. 953..... 982
- v. Neeves, 94 Wis. 666, 69 N. W. 806..... 756
- Willis v. Atlantic & D. R. Co. 120 N. C. 512, 26 S. E. 785..... 457, 459
- v. Watson, 5 Ill. 66..... 651
- Willis v. Lynn & B. R. Co. 129 Mass. 351..... 642
- v. Wood, 28 Kan. 411..... 853
- Wilson v. Bryan, 90 Ky. 482, 14 S. W. 533, 443
- v. Hamilton, 4 Ohio St. 723..... 415
- v. Isenminger, 185 U. S. 55, 46 L. ed. 804, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 573, 561, 562
- v. Lineberger, 84 N. C. 836..... 190
- v. McKunkin, 11 Rich. Eq. 527..... 630
- v. Norfolk & S. R. Co. 90 N. C. 69, 471
- v. Northwestern Mut. Acci. Asso. 53 Minn. 470, 55 N. W. 626..... 177
- v. Rastall, 4 T. R. 753..... 930
- v. Waterbury, 73 Conn. 416, 47 Atl. 687..... 934
- v. York & M. R. Co. 11 Gill. & J. 58..... 694
- Winchester v. Forster, 3 Cush. 366..... 651
- Winchester Electric Light Co. v. Veal, 145 Ind. 506, 41 N. E. 334, 44 N. E. 353..... 249
- Winifree v. Bagley, 102 N. C. 513, 9 S. E. 198..... 224, 226
- Winship v. New York, N. H. & H. R. Co. 170 Mass. 464, 40 N. E. 647..... 423
- Winston v. Beeson, 135 N. C. 271, 65 L. R. A. 167, 47 S. E. 457..... 798
- Wisconsin C. R. Co. v. Taylor County, 52 Wis. 37, 8 N. W. 833, 204, 205, 206
- Withers v. Sparrow, 66 N. C. 138..... 467
- Wo Lee, Re, 26 Fed. 471..... 971

Wolfer v. Hemmer, 144 Ill. 534, 33 N. E. 751	100, 101
Wood v. Donaldson, 17 Wend. 550	491
v. Kice, 103 Mo. 329, 15 S. W. 623	110
Woodman v. Pitman, 79 Me. 456, 1 Am. St. Rep. 342, 10 Atl. 321	775
Woods v. Woods, 127 Mass. 141	39
Woodworth v. Spring, 4 Allen, 321	863
Worrall v. Munn, 38 N. Y. 137	580
Worrell v. Vinson, 50 N. C. (5 Jones, L.) 91	448
Worthington v. Scribner, 109 Mass. 487, 12 Am. Rep. 736	929
Wrightman v. Boone County, 82 Fed. 412	561
Wynehamer v. People, 13 N. Y. 378	917

Y.

Yardley Case. See FOURTH STREET NAT. BANK v. YARDLEY.
Yeomans v. Riddle, 84 Iowa, 147, 50 N. W. 886	628
Yick Wo v. Hopkins, 118 U. S. 356, 30 L. ed. 220, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1064	806, 939, 971
Yocum v. Siler, 160 Mo. 281, 61 S. W. 208	100, 105, 107, 110
York v. State, 73 Tex. 651, 11 S. W. 869	945

York v. Merritt, 77 N. C. 213	982
Yorkly v. Stinson, 97 N. C. 240, 1 S. E. 454	454
Young v. Com. 101 Va. 853, 45 S. E. 327	798
v. Cowden, 98 Tenn. 588, 40 S. W. 1088	497, 498
v. Highway Comrs. 134 Ill. 569, 25 N. E. 639	644
v. Travelers' Ins. Co. 80 Me. 244, 13 Atl. 896	636
v. Western U. Tele. Co. 107 N. C. 370, 9 L. R. A. 669, 22 Am. St. Rep. 883, 11 S. E. 1044	988, 989
v. Young, 97 N. C. 132, 2 S. E. 78	443
Youngblood v. Birmingham Trust & Sav. Co. 95 Ala. 521, 20 L. R. A. 58, 36 Am. St. Rep. 245, 12 So. 579	249

Z.

Zander v. Feely, 47 Ill. App. 659	982
Zanone v. Mound City, 103 Ill. 552	76
Zimmerman v. So Relle, 25 C. C. A. 518, 49 U. S. App. 387, 80 Fed. 417	765
Zouch v. Chesapeake & O. R. Co. 36 W. Va. 524, 17 L. R. A. 116, 15 S. E. 185	558

STATUTES AND CONSTITUTIONS CITED, CONSTRUED, ETC.

England.

Statutes.

13 Edw. I. chap. 1. Fee-tail estates	101
18 Edw. I. chap. 1. Abolishing subinfeudation	447
27 Hen. VIII. Statute of uses	650
31 Hen. VIII. Statute of wills	650
34 Hen. VIII. Statute of wills	650
37 Hen. VIII. chap. 9. Usury	510
13 Eliz. chap. 8. Usury	510
43 Eliz. chap. 6, § 2. Costs; sheriff; warrant	510
12 Car. II. chap. 34. Removal of restrictions in freehold tenure	447
1 Vict. chap. 26. Wills	104, 651
43 and 44 Vict. chap. 42. Employers' liability act	513

United States.

Constitution.

Art. 1, § 8. Powers of congress	779
Art. 1, § 10. Impairing obligation of contract	562
Art. 4, § 1. Credit to be given judicial proceedings	563
Art. 4, § 2. Delivery of fugitives from justice	949
Amend. 1. Freedom of speech	806
Amend. 4. Unreasonable seizures	171
Amend. 14. Equal protection of the laws	75, 206, 282, 287, 410, 562, 615, 774, 906, 952, 970
Amend. 15. Right of suffrage	909

Statutes.

1789, Sept. 24, chap. 20. Power of Supreme, circuit, and district courts	768
1790, May 26. Proof of judicial proceedings	563
1870, May 31. Enforcement act	908
1888, August 13. Jurisdiction of circuit courts	765
1890, July 2. Sherman anti-trust act	911
1891, March 3, chap. 517, § 12. Power of circuit court of appeals	767
1898, July 1, chap. 541, § 70. Bankruptcy law	554
67 L. R. A.

Statutes at Large.

Vol. 1, p. 81. Power of Supreme, circuit, and district courts	768
Vol. 1, p. 122, chap. 11. Proof of judicial proceedings	563
Vol. 25, pp. 433, 434, chap. 866. Jurisdiction of circuit courts	765
Vol. 26, p. 209, chap. 647. Prohibiting monopolies	912
Vol. 26, p. 829. Power of circuit court of appeals	767
Vol. 30, p. 565. Bankruptcy law	554

Revised Statutes.

§ 688. Power of Supreme Court to issue mandamus	767
§ 716. Power of Supreme, circuit, and district courts	767
§ 905. Proof of judicial proceedings	563
§ 4899. Ownership in unpatented invention	80
§ 3219. State taxation	208
§ 5278. Delivery of fugitive from justice	949
§ 5519. Conspiracy to deprive persons of equal protection of the laws	909

Compiled Statutes, 1901.

P. 508. Jurisdiction of circuit courts	765
P. 553. Power of circuit court of appeals	767
P. 565. Power of Supreme Court to issue mandamus	767
P. 580. Power of Supreme, circuit, and district courts	767
P. 677. Proof of judicial proceedings	563
P. 3200. Prohibiting monopolies	912
P. 3387. Ownership in unpatented invention	80
P. 3451. Bankruptcy law	554
P. 3502. State taxation	208
P. 3597. Delivery of fugitive from justice	949
P. 3714. Conspiracy to deprive persons of equal protection of the laws	909

Alabama.

Statutes.

1900, 1901, p. 1208. Breach of labor contract	286
1900, 1901, p. 1215. Breach of labor contract	287

Arkansas.Constitution.

Art. 1, § 8. Due process of law..... 779

Statutes.

1879, Feb. 27. Claims against counties... 766

1903, April 24, p. 306. Game law..... 774

Statutes, 1903.

Chap. 32, §§ 910-912. Claims against counties..... 766

California.Constitution.

Art. 11, § 13. Uniform taxation..... 205

Statutes.

1897, chap. 142, p. 204. Taking evidence.. 407

Penal Code.

§ 921. Degree of evidence to warrant indictment..... 408

§ 925. Taking evidence..... 407

§ 1385. Dismissal of indictment..... 407

Colorado.Constitution.

Art. 5, § 19. When law to take effect..... 560

Art. 5, § 24. Amendment or extension of law..... 569

Session Laws.

1895, April 29, chap. 106, p. 239. Statute of Limitations..... 560

1899, April 6, chap. 113, p. 248. Statute of Limitations.,..... 560

General Statutes, 1883.

§ 2178. Statute of limitations..... 560

Florida.Statutes.

1893, June 3, chap. 4173, p. 101. Recovery of attorneys' fees.. 521

1899, May 31, chap. 4677, p. 33. Regulation of insurance contracts..... 521, 584

Revised Statutes, 1892.

§ 1059. Filing replications..... 527

§ 1063. Filing plea to the declaration.... 527

Georgia.Statutes.

1893, Dec. 19, p. 173. Amending charter of Atlanta..... 803

Code, 1882.

§ 4282. Incomplete record..... 193

Idaho.Revised Statutes.

§ 2591. Corporations..... 664

§ 2611. Transfer of shares of stock..... 662

§ 2639. Records of corporations..... 664

§ 2640. Stock and transfer book..... 664

§ 4307, subdiv. 4. Levy of writs of attachment..... 661

Illinois.Constitution.

Art. 2, § 13. Compensation for property taken..... 368, 838

Statutes.

1836, January 9. Construction of Illinois & Michigan Canal.. 374

Starr & Curtis's Annotated Statutes.

Chap. 42, § 19. Liability of sanitary districts..... 838

67 L. R. A.

Indiana.Constitution.

Art. 1, § 21. Payment for services or property taken..... 615

Art. 1, § 23. Exclusive privileges..... 613

Burns's Annotated Statutes, 1901.

§ 3927. General power of council..... 615

Iowa.Code, 1851.

§ 1288. Revocation of wills..... 318

Code, 1897.

§ 2433. Return by assessor..... 625

§ 2436. Quarterly instalments..... 625

§ 2437. Certifying list to treasurer..... 626

§ 2438. Tax entry..... 626

§ 2439. Sale for delinquent tax..... 626

§ 2440. Collection by sale of personal property..... 626

§ 2441. Application for remission of tax..... 626

§ 2442. Hearing in support of application..... 626

§ 2444. Trial on appeal..... 626

§ 4617. Understanding of parties..... 632

§ 5006. Prohibiting manufacture and sale of cigarettes..... 625

§ 5007. Tax on sale of cigarettes..... 625

§ 5194. Using force in effecting arrest... 297

§ 5252. Discharge of grand jury..... 300

§ 5319. Grounds for setting aside indictment..... 300

Kansas.Statutes.

1887, chap. 175. Suppression of unlawful trade combinations..... 913

1897, chap. 265. Anti-trust law..... 903

General Statutes 1897.

Chap. 145. Unlawful trust and combination act..... 922

General Statutes, 1901.

§§ 2427-2429. Suppression of unlawful trade combinations..... 913

§ 5681. Charging jury..... 922

§ 5731. Criminal appeal..... 914

§§ 7864-7874. Anti-trust law..... 905

Criminal Code.

§ 236. Charging jury..... 922

§ 293. Criminal appeal..... 914

Kentucky.Constitution.

§ 38. Appropriations to be made by the legislature..... 820

§ 59, subsec. 29. Local and special legislation..... 820

§§ 171-177. Taxation..... 816

§ 179. Forbidding municipality loaning its credit..... 818

§ 196. Common carriers..... 415

§ 230. Appropriations to be made by the legislature..... 820

Statutes.

1904, Feb. 20, chap. 7, p. 33. Appropriation of funds for care of destitute children..... 816

Statutes, 1903.

§ 331c. Destitute children..... 820

§ 3058. Care of indigent poor..... 816

§ 3290. Care of indigent poor..... 816

§ 3490. Care of indigent poor..... 816

§ 3933. Care of indigent poor..... 816

Louisiana.Constitution.

Art. 2. Due process of law..... 74

Art. 156. Compensation for property taken 367

Art. 181. Sale of alcoholic and spirituous liquors..... 74

Statutes.

1892, p. 72, No. 50. Measure of damages..	68
1896, p. 53, No. 45. New Orleans charter..	72
1898, p. 387, No. 171. Levy and collection of licenses	73
1902, p. 228, No. 131. Police power of New Orleans city..	72
1902, p. 451, No. 221. Sale of intoxicating liquors	72

Revised Statutes, 1870.

§ 1211. Sale of intoxicating liquors	72
§ 1212. Granting licenses	73
§ 2778. Sale of intoxicating liquors	72

Revised Civil Code.

Art. 2315. Obligation to repair damage..	69
Art. 2747. Right to dismiss servant	70
Art. 2750. Measure of damages	68

Maine.Statutes.

1842, chap. 9, p. 6, § 5. Liability of railroad company for fire from engine...	417
1893, chap. 79, p. 77. Liability of railroad company for fire from engines	417

Revised Statutes, 1883.

Chap. 51, § 64. Liability of railroad company for fire from engines	417
---	-----

Massachusetts.Bill of Rights.

Art. 12. Law of the land	952
--------------------------------	-----

Constitution.

Chap. 1. § 1, art. 4. Powers of general court	938
---	-----

Statutes.

1877, p. 629, chap. 232. Prohibiting travel on the Lord's day ..	249
--	-----

Revised Statutes, 1836.

P. 417, § 3. Wills	651
--------------------------	-----

General Statutes.

Chap. 84, § 2. Prohibiting travel on the Lord's day	249
---	-----

Public Statutes.

Chap. 213, § 25. Resident of state	951
--	-----

Revised Laws.

Chap. 75, § 131. Quarantine	938
Chap. 75, § 137. Vaccination	938
Chap. 217, § 11. Proof that accused is fugitive from justice	955

Michigan.Constitution.

Art. 10, § 10. Claims against counties....	967
--	-----

Statutes.

1903, No. 307. Board of county auditors..	967
---	-----

Compiled Laws.

§ 4506, subdiv. 7. Superintendents of the poor	968
§ 5391. Liquor law	425
§ 10, 180. Confession to priest	928
§ 10, 181. Confessions to physician	928

Minnesota.General Statutes, 1878.

Chap. 41, § 18. Fraudulent conveyances ..	885
---	-----

General Statutes, 1894.

Chap. 41, § 4222. Prohibiting fraudulent conveyances	600, 884
§ 5136. Action for fraud	877
67 L. R. A.

Mississippi.Revised Code, 1824.

Chap. 104, p. 458, § 26. Construction of devises	103
--	-----

Missouri.Constitution, 1875.

Art. 2, § 21. Compensation for property taken	365
Art. 4, § 46. Prohibiting grants of public money	817
Art. 10, § 3. Uniform taxation	205

Statutes.

1815, 1816, p. 32. Abolishment of fee tails	110
1903, March 24, p. 162. Robbery	347

Revised Statutes, 1825.

P. 216. Remainders in fee simple	103
--	-----

Revised Statutes, 1835.

P. 616. Testamentary power over personal property	652
---	-----

Revised Statutes, 1845.

Chap. 32, §§ 5, 6. Remainders in fee simple	102
Chap. 185, § 1. Wills	652

Revised Statutes, 1855.

Chap. 167, § 1. Wills	652
-----------------------------	-----

Revised Statutes, 1879.

Vol. 1, §§ 3889, 3891. Duties of sheriff....	170
Chap. 71, § 1. Wills	652

Revised Statutes, 1889.

§ 6741. Liens	491
---------------------	-----

Revised Statutes, 1899.

§ 650. Suit to determine interest of parties	649
§ 1893. Robbery in the first degree	351
§§ 4592, 4593. Remainders in fee simple ..	104

Montana.Code of Civil Procedure.

§ 610. Actions	943
§ 637. Service of summons	945
§ 638. Service of summons	941

Nebraska.Compiled Statutes, 1887.

Chap. 54, § 2. Liens	494
----------------------------	-----

New Hampshire.Statutes.

1887, chap. 16, p. 417. Unregistered transfers	685
--	-----

Public Statutes.

Chap. 263, § 8. Delivery of fugitive from justice	949
---	-----

New Mexico.Statutes.

1851, 1852, p. 154, §§ 14, 20. Limitations on legislation	439
1880, chap. 5, p. 45, § 9. Statute of limitations	430
1901, chap. 62, p. 113, § 7. Removal of disabilities of coverage	318
1901, chap. 62, p. 114, § 9. Disposition of estate	318
1901, chap. 81, p. 157, § 39. Provision for after-born child ..	318
1901, chap. 81, p. 158, § 40. Appeals from probate courts	317
1903, chap. 62, p. 121. Statute of limitations	438

Compiled Laws, 1897.

§ 929. Appeal from probate to district court	317
§ 1953. Revocation of wills	317
§ 1994. Estates of deceased person	318
§ 2014. Appeals from probate courts	317
§ 2033. Disposition of estate	318
§ 2914. Actions upon judgments	440
§ 2921. Statute of limitations	438
§ 3771. Limitations on legislation	439
§ 3779. Bill of Rights to remain inviolate	439

New York.Statutes.

1896, chap. 908, p. 864. Corporation tax law	962
--	-----

Revised Statutes, 1829.

Chap. 13, pt. 1, § 3, tit. 1, p. 388. Construing "personal property"	204
P. 724, § 22. Construction of words "heirs" and "issue"	105

Revised Statutes.

Vol. 1 (Edmond's ed.) p. 628, pt. 1, chap. 20, tit. 8, § 70. Prohibiting travel on Sunday	233
---	-----

Birdseye's Revised Statutes.

Vol. 3, art. 1, § 2, subdiv. 4. Construing "personal property"	204
--	-----

Codes and General Laws.

P. 3091, 2d ed. Construing "personal property"	204
--	-----

Code of Civil Procedure.

§ 866. Removal of records	135
---------------------------------	-----

Code of Criminal Procedure.

§ 35. Trial of indictment in city court	135
§ 82-90. Intervention of officers of justice	139
§ 272. Indictment	135
§ 685. Disposal of stolen property	135

Penal Code.

§ 29. Defining "principal"	137
§ 34. Attempt to commit crime	136
§ 94. Removal of public document	135
§ 531. Grand larceny in second degree ..	135

North Carolina.Constitution.

Art. 4, § 7. Terms of supreme court	191
Art. 4, § 8. Jurisdiction of supreme court	186
Art. 10, § 6. Power of married woman as to property	464
Art. 11, § 10. Duty to care for insane	974

Statutes.

1887, chap. 49, p. 100. Terms of supreme court	191
1891, chap. 320, p. 277, § 4. Unjust discrimination by carrier ..	228
1899, chap. 1, pp. 3, 25, 26. Insanity Laws	973
1899, chap. 164, pp. 301, 304. Indictment for unlawful discrimination	230
1901, chap. 5, p. 66. Service on foreign corporations	225
1901, chap. 610, p. 854. Verification of pleading	252
1901, chap. 660, p. 807. Terms of supreme court	191

Revised Statute, 1837.

Chap. 43, p. 259, § 3. Construction of devices	103
--	-----

Revised Statutes.

Chap. 118, § 1. Sunday law	231
----------------------------------	-----

Code, 1883.

§ 194. Action against foreign corporation	225
§ 258. Verification of pleading	252
§ 364. Judgment against garnishee	224
§ 493. Exemption of wages from reach of creditors	226

67 L. R. A.

Chap. 24, § 953. Terms of supreme court ..	191
§ 1101. Defining "rape"	183
§ 1183. Disregarding refinements and informalities	185
§ 1246, subsec. 9. Probate of contract	982
§ 1325. Conversion of fees tail into fees simple	446
§ 1826. Contracts by married women	464
§ 2116, 2118. Year's allowance to widow ..	453
§ 2326. Negligence of railroad company ..	470

North Dakota.Revised Codes, 1899.

§ 491. Form and contents of official ballot	337, 473
§ 497a-512. Regulation of nominations ..	337
§ 498. Nominations by political party	473
§ 501. Nominations by petition of electors ..	473
§ 502. Certificate to contain but one name ..	336
§ 504. Certification of nominations	337
§ 5420. Right to jury trial	291
§ 5630. Appeals in cases tried without jury	269

Ohio.Statutes.

1894, May 17 (91 O. L. p. 285). Construction and operation of railroads	641
---	-----

Bates's Annotated Statutes.

§ 2780-17. Defining "street railroads"	641
§ 3443-8-3443-13. Construction and operation of railroads	641

Oregon.Special Laws.

1903, p. 83. Prosecution of gamblers	170
--	-----

Bellinger & Cotton's Annotated Codes & Statutes.

§ 27. Action to be in name of party in interest	163
§ 393. Real party in interest in equity suit ..	163
§ 605. To whom mandamus may issue	173
§ 612. Pleadings in mandamus proceedings ..	174
§ 788, subdiv. 15. Presumption of performance of official duty	172
§ 1338. Issuance of bench warrant	172
§ 1393. Proof of insanity	330
§ 1611. Arrest without warrant	170
§ 1815. Arrest by order of magistrate	170
§ 1944. Prohibiting gambling	170
§ 1950. Prohibiting gambling	173
§ 1951. Prohibiting gambling	174

Pennsylvania.Constitution, 1873.

Art. 9, § 1. Uniform taxation	205
-------------------------------------	-----

Statutes.

1772 (1 Smith's Laws, p. 370). Landlord and tenant act	354
1863 (P. L. 1864 p. 1125). Landlord and tenant act	354
1867, p. 108, No. 53. Sale of liquors	425

Rhode Island.General Laws, 1896.

Chap. 82, § 22. Defense of insanity	330
Chap. 183. Insurance	480
Chap. 223, § 13. Instructions to jury	327

South Carolina.Statutes at Large.

Vol. 23, p. 748. Damages for mental anguish ..	992
--	-----

Code 1892.

§ 171. Counterclaim	115
§ 186a. Submission of case to jury	115

Code, 1902.

Vol. 1, § 2223. Damages for mental anguish ..	992
---	-----

South Dakota.Revised Code Civil Procedure.

§§ 764, 765. Mandamus 332

Revised Political Code.

§ 1886. Style and form of ballot 333
 § 1889. Error in ballot 333
 § 1892. Style and form of ballot 333
 §§ 1899-1901. Certification of nomination 333
 § 1903. Selection of candidate 333
 § 1908. Filling vacancy on ballot 334
 § 1914. Marking choice of candidate 333

Revised Civil Code, 1903.

P. 844, § 2236. Days of grace 38

Tennessee.Statutes.

1883, chap. 220, p. 296. Liens 489
 1891, chap. 98, p. 215. Liens 489

Milliken & Vertrees's Code.

§ 2778. Liens 490

Shannon's Code.

§ 3540. Liens 492

Texas.Code.

Art. 1230. Service on absent and nonresident defendants ... 945

Criminal Code.

Art. 307. Bribery 142

Vermont.Statutes.

1896, p. 42, No. 49. Power of chancery court to authorize sale of real estate.. 969

Statutes, 1894.

§ 2646. Conveyance by married woman .. 970
 § 2650. Authority of wife as to property . 970

Virginia.Revised Code, 1819.

Chap. 99, p. 369, § 20. Construction of devises 103

Code, 1873.

Chap. 148, § 25. Attachment 691

Washington.Constitution.

Art. 7, § 20. Uniform taxation 283
 Art. 7, § 9. Special taxation for local improvements 283
 Art. 11, § 10. Organization of cities and towns 282
 Art. 11, § 12. Taxation for municipal purposes 283

Ballinger's Annotated Codes & Statutes.

Vol. 2, p. 34, § 108. Common law 511
 § 938, subdivs. 7, 16. Powers of city council 282

67 L. R. A.

Code.

§ 47. Venue of actions affecting real estate 943

West Virginia.Code, 1819.

Chap. 123, § 16. Attachment 692

Code, 1899.

Chap. 53, § 19. Owners of shares of stock 688
 Chap. 53, § 20. Shares of stock deemed personal estate 675
 Chap. 53, §§ 21, 22. Transfer of stock .. 687
 Chap. 53, §§ 35-38. Transfers of stock ... 687
 Chap. 53, § 43. List of stockholders 688
 Chap. 53, § 46. Report to stockholders ... 688
 Chap. 53, § 47. Inspection by committee.. 688
 Chap. 99, § 14. Allowance of discounts by assignee 687
 Chap. 106, § 9. Attachment lien 675
 Chap. 106, § 23. Filing petition 687
 Chap. 116, § 29. Waiver of trial by jury .. 694

Wisconsin.Constitution.

Art. 8, § 1. Uniform taxation 202

Territorial Laws.

1841, No. 4, pp. 20, 21. Construing "personal property" ... 203

Statutes.

1868, chap. 130, p. 132. Property exempt from taxation 202
 1868, chap. 130, p. 138, § 19. Construing "personal property" 202
 1903, chap. 378, p. 601. Exemption of credits from taxation .. 208

Revised Statutes, 1849.

Chap. 15, § 1. Levy of taxes 202
 Chap. 15, § 3. Construing "personal property" 202

Revised Statutes, 1858.

Chap. 5, § 1, subdivs. 14, 15. Rules for construing statutes ... 202

Revised Statutes, 1873.

§ 1034. Levy of taxes 202
 § 1036. Construing "personal property" .. 202
 § 1038, subdiv. 10. Property exempt from taxation 202
 §§ 1053, 1056. Assessment of personal property 202
 § 4972, subdivs. 3, 4. Rules for construing statutes 202

Revised Statutes, 1898.

§ 1034. Levy of taxes 202
 § 1036. Construing "personal property" .. 202
 § 1038, subdiv. 10. Property exempt from taxation 202
 § 1040. Assessment of personal property. 203
 §§ 1053, 1056. Assessment of personal property 202
 § 4972. Rules for construing statutes ... 202

Wyoming.Revised Statutes, 1899.

§ 2695. Common law of England 510
 § 2772. Tenant by sufferance 379

LAWYERS' REPORTS

ANNOTATED.

MASSACHUSETTS SUPREME JUDICIAL COURT.

Ulysses S. G. CHERRY

v.

Charles H. SPRAGUE.

(.....Mass.....)

1. The character of an instrument as a promissory note is not destroyed by the addition to the promise of payment of clauses providing for additional interest after maturity, and for payment of attorneys' fees in case suit is necessary to collection.
2. A promissory note payable in the state where the payee receives it through the mail is a contract of that state, and not of the one where the maker resides, and where the instrument was executed.
3. A reviewing court cannot consider cases and statutes for the purpose of determining what is the law of another state by which the contract in suit is alleged to be governed, where they were not mentioned in the bill of exceptions, and it is apparent that they were not considered by the trial court.

4. In the absence of proof of the law of a sister state the presumption is that the common law is the same as the local law, but not that the statute law of the two states is the same.
5. In the absence of proof as to the law of another state by which a contract is to be enforced, the common law, and not the statute law, of the state where the suit is brought will be applied.
6. A third person placing his name on the back of a promissory note before delivery to the payee is an original promisor or maker, not entitled to demand or notice of nonpayment, and, as to him, no consideration need be proved.

(November 29, 1904.)

NOTE.—How case determined when proper foreign law not proved.

- I. Introduction, 33.
- II. Judicial cognizance of foreign law.
 - a. Specific rules of law of other jurisdiction.
 1. Law of foreign country, 33.
 2. Law of other state, 34.
 - b. General system of law upon which foreign jurisprudence based, 37.
- III. Different theories as to proper practice.
 - a. In general, 38.
 - b. Jurisdiction with respect to which the presumption in favor of common law may be indulged, 40.
 - c. Conflict between presumption in favor of common law and presumption that law of other jurisdiction is same as that of forum, 41.
 - d. Application of lex fort without indulging any presumption, 55.
 - e. Refusal to apply any substantive law, 58.

I. Introduction.

Most of the cases cited in this note could have been appropriately introduced under a more restricted title, such as, The presumption to be indulged with respect to the law of another state or country. Such a title would, perhaps, have served the practical purposes of the note; but the more comprehensive title has been adopted, partly because the question as to judicial cognizance of the laws of another state or country is distinct from the question as to the presumption with reference to those laws, but mainly because cause the doctrine toward which the later decisions tend as to the proper course to be pursued by the court when the proper foreign law is not proved does not rest upon any presumption as to the foreign law, though, as subsequently shown, it is equivalent in its practical operation to the doctrine resting upon the presumption that the law of the foreign jurisdiction is the same as the law of the forum, whether the latter be the common law or the statutory law.

II. Judicial cognizance of foreign law.

a. Specific rules of law of other jurisdiction.

1. Law of foreign country.

The general principles under this head are so well settled that, contrary to the rule usually followed in these notes, the annotator has contented himself with stating them, and citing a few of the many authorities in their support, without attempting to exhaust the authorities upon the subject.

It is well established as a general principle that the courts will not take judicial cognizance of the laws of a foreign country. Armstrong v. Lear, 8 Pet. 52, 8 L. ed. 863; Liverpool & G. W. Steam Co. v. Phenix Ins. Co. 129 U. S. 397, 32 L. ed. 788, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 469.

An exception has been made to this principle, however, in case of maritime ordinances of foreign countries.

Thus, Chief Justice Marshall, in Talbot v. Seeman, 1 Cranch, 1, 38, 2 L. ed. 15, 27, while conceding the general principle as above stated, held, by way of exception, that judicial notice would be taken of French maritime ordinances EXCEPTIONS by defendant to rulings of the Superior Court for Suffolk County made during the trial of an action brought to enforce payment of a promissory note, which resulted in a verdict in plaintiff's favor. Overruled.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. Charles H. Sprague, in propria persona:

The instrument is not a promissory note. If the instrument contains an "additional substantive agreement," or if the amount to be paid cannot be determined from the instrument itself, it is not a note.

Sloan v. McCarty, 134 Mass. 245; Towne v. Rice, 122 Mass. 67; Moore v. Edwards, 167 Mass. 75, 44 N. E. 1070.

The court erred in directing a verdict for the plaintiff on the ground that the defendant was maker of the note.

Moies v. Bird, 11 Mass. 436, 6 Am. Dec. 179.

Messrs. Augustine H. Read, Wilfred J. Gaffney, and Charles A. Mendall, for plaintiff:

The note in question was delivered and the contract made in South Dakota.

Milliken v. Pratt, 125 Mass. 374, 28 Am. Rep. 241; Hill v. Chase, 143 Mass. 129, 9 N. E. 30; Kline v. Baker, 99 Mass. 253; Nashua Sav. Bank v. Sayles, 184 Mass. 520, 100 Am. St. Rep. 573, 69 N. E. 309; M'Intyre v. Parks, 3 Met. 207.

Contracts are to be governed by the law of the place of performance, although executed in a place where the law is different.

which had been promulgated as such in the United States.

So, the duty to take notice of maritime rules and regulations originally adopted by British orders in council of June 9, 1863, and by Congress in 1864, has been repeatedly recognized by the United States Supreme Court. See The Scotia (Sears v. The Scotia) 14 Wall. 170, 20 L. ed. 822; The Belgenland (The Belgenland v. Jensen) 114 U. S. 356, 370, 29 L. ed. 152, 158, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 860; Richelleu & O. Nav. Co. v. Boston Marine Ins. Co. 136 U. S. 408, 421, 34 L. ed. 398, 403, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 934; and numerous cases in the lower Federal courts.

And it was held in The New York, 175 U. S. 187, 44 L. ed. 126, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 67, that judicial notice would be taken of the Canadian act of 1886 for the regulation of navigation, which is in all material respects like the act of Congress of 1885.

An exception to the general rule that a foreign law must be proved in the courts of Louisiana is made when that law was once the law of Louisiana. The laws of France, however, must be proved, because, having been abrogated as the prevailing general law of the province many years prior to the acquisition of Louisiana by the United States, and never thereafter adopted as such, it is not judicially known what French laws in particular were retained by Spain. Pecquet v. Pecquet, 17 La. Ann. 204. It was assumed in this case that the law of Spain would be noticed without proof.

2. Law of other state.

There are also numberless authorities to the effect that the courts of one state will not, in the absence of an express statute of the forum to that effect, take judicial notice of the laws of another state. In other words, the several states of the Union are, for the purposes of the principle now under consideration, foreign to each other. Among other cases that might be cited to this effect, are the following: Hanley v. Donoghue, 116 U. S. 1, 29 L. ed. 535, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 242; Norman v. Norman, 121 Cal. 620, 42 L. R. A. 343, 66 Am. St. Rep. 74, 54 Pac. 143; Brackett v. Norton, 4 Conn. 517, 10 Am. Rep. 179; Poik v. Butterfield, 9 Colo. 325, 12 Pac. 216; Savannah, F. & W. R. Co. v. Evans (Ga.) 49 S. E. 308; Washburn Crosby Co. v. Boston & A. R. Co. 180 Mass. 252, 62 N. E. 590; Phelps v. American Sav. & L. Asso. 121 Mich. 343, 80 N. W. 120; Myers v. Chicago, St. 67 L. R. A.

P. M. & O. R. Co. 69 Minn. 476, 65 Am. St. Rep. 579, 72 N. W. 694; Southern Illinois & M. Bridge Co. v. Stone, 174 Mo. 1, 63 L. R. A. 301, 73 S. W. 453; People's Bldg. Loan & Sav. Asso. v. Backus, 2 Herdman (Neb.) 463, 89 N. W. 315; Taylor v. Slater, 21 R. I. 104, 41 Atl. 1001; Gill v. Everman, 94 Tex. 209, 59 S. W. 531; Murtey v. Allen, 71 Vt. 377, 76 Am. St. Rep. 779, 45 Atl. 752; Eingartner v. Illinois Steel Co. 94 Wis. 70, 34 L. R. A. 503, 59 Am. St. Rep. 859, 68 N. W. 664; and many other cases.

And the foregoing is true of both written and unwritten laws. Ennis v. Smith, 14 How. 400, 14 L. ed. 472; Eastern Bldg. & L. Asso. v. Williamson, 189 U. S. 122, 47 L. ed. 735, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 527.

The somewhat singular result follows from the last principle, that, while a court of one state may, to aid it in ascertaining and interpreting its own law upon a particular subject, take judicial notice of the decisions of another state upon the same subject, it cannot take judicial notice of those decisions for the purpose of ascertaining the law of the state in which they were rendered, though they may be used for that purpose when introduced in evidence. See Ferd. Helm Brewing Co. v. Gimber, 67 Kan. 834, 72 Pac. 859.

So, though the decisions of the courts of another state construing its own statutes are admissible as evidence of the proper construction of such statutes, judicial notice cannot, in the absence of an express statute of the forum to that effect, be taken of those decisions for that purpose, except with the consent or acquiescence of the parties. Hunter v. Ferguson, 13 Kan. 462; Larwell v. Hanover, Sav. Fund Soc. 40 Ohio St. 274; Pacific Exp. Co. v. Pitman, 30 Tex. Civ. App. 626, 71 S. W. 312; Murtey v. Allen, 71 Vt. 377, 76 Am. St. Rep. 779, 45 Atl. 752.

The truth of the last statement is also assumed by many cases that hold that the decisions of the other state may be admitted in evidence to prove the construction of its statutes.

It is said in Hoes v. Van Alstyne, 20 Ill. 201, and repeated in McDeed v. McDeed, 67 Ill. 546, that "courts have uniformly taken notice of the construction given to foreign statutes by the foreign tribunals, and to enable them to do this, they have always been in the habit of looking to the reports of such tribunals." The statement was obiter in both cases, however, as the point in question was whether the testimony of Andrews v. Pond, 13 Pet. 65, 10 L. ed. 61; Bell v. Bruen, 1 How. 182, 11 L. ed. 94; Woodruff v. Hill, 116 Mass. 310; Bottomley v. Metropolitan L. Ins. Co. 170 Mass. 274, 49 N. E. 438.

The law of South Dakota must govern the contract as to its validity, construction, and what the parties are required to do in the performance of it.

Bottomley v. Metropolitan L. Ins. Co. 170 Mass. 274, 49 N. E. 438; Baxter Nat. Bank v. Talbot, 154 Mass. 213, 13 L. R. A. 52, 28 N. E. 163; Fonseca v. Cunard S. S. Co. 153 Mass. 553, 12 L. R. A. 340, 25 Am. St. Rep. 660, 27 N. E. 865; Glidden v. Chamberlin, 167 Mass. 486, 57 Am. St. Rep. 479, 46 N. E. 103; Lawrence v. Bassett, 5 Allen, 140;

Nashua Sav. Bank v. Sayles, 184 Mass. 520, 100 Am. St. Rep. 573, 69 N. E. 309.

No proof being offered to the contrary, the law of South Dakota is presumed to be the same as the common law of this commonwealth.

Cribbs v. Adams, 13 Gray, 597; Kelley v. Kelley, 161 Mass. 111, 25 L. R. A. 806, 42 Am. St. Rep. 389, 36 N. E. 837.

Under the common law of this commonwealth, the defendant was a joint maker of the note, and was not entitled to have a demand made on the maker and notice of nonpayment given to him.

Brooks v. Stuckpole, 168 Mass. 537, 47 N. E. 419.

Consideration is presumed, no proof being witnesses was admissible to prove the foreign law. It is doubtful, in view of the question before the court, whether it was speaking technically when it said that judicial notice could be taken of the construction of the foreign statute, or whether it meant any more than that the decisions of the foreign tribunals, if introduced in evidence, might be examined for the purpose of ascertaining the proper construction of the foreign law.

In Hendryx v. Evans, 120 Iowa, 310, 94 N. W. 853, also, it was said that, while the courts of one state will not take judicial notice of the laws of another, written or unwritten, the opinions of the courts of last resort of another, in construing its statutes, may properly be referred to, and are entitled to very great weight. The decisions of the other state were not introduced in proof; but counsel on both sides cited and relied upon them; so that this decision is not opposed to the rule above stated, but falls within the exception to the rule.

In Herschfeld v. Dixel, 12 Ga. 582, the court said: "I am inclined to think that such will be found to be the practice, that the court on the trial of a cause may proceed on their knowledge of the laws of another state; and it is not necessary in that case to prove them; and their judgment will not be reversed when they proceed on such knowledge, unless it should appear that they decided wrong as to those laws." This position is clearly contrary to the overwhelming weight of authority.

The general principle that the courts of one state will not take judicial notice of the laws of another has been abrogated by a statute in Arkansas. It has been held, however, that such provision does not apply to the private statutes of another state, e. g., a private statute of incorporation. Miller v. Johnston, 71 Ark. 174, 72 S. W. 371.

It is also provided by statute in West Virginia that the courts shall take judicial notice of the laws of other states. See Singer Mfg. Co. v. Bennett, 28 W. Va. 16; Wilson v. Phenix Powder Mfg. Co. 40 W. Va. 413, 52 Am. St. Rep. 890, 21 S. E. 1035. And there is a similar statute in Mississippi.

In Seaboard Air Line R. Co. v. Phillips, 117 Ga. 98, 43 S. E. 494, it was intimated, though not decided, that the provision of the Georgia Code, declaring that public laws of the United States and of the several states as published by authority shall be judicially recognized without proof, places the laws of other states upon 67 L. R. A.

the same footing as the laws of Georgia, both public and private, are placed when so published, and they may, therefore, be resorted to by the court, even though not formally offered as evidence on the trial. The court said, in this connection, that, if a book containing the laws as published by authority is not accessible, then, in the absence of a copy of the law under the great seal of the state, the case would generally have to be determined by a presumption that the common law prevails in the other state.

In Savannah F. & W. R. Co. v. Evans (Ga.) 49 S. E. 308, the court said that the statute referred to in the last case only means that, where the public laws of a foreign state are published by its authority, the authenticity of its publications need not be shown by the introduction of proof of their genuineness, but will be judicially recognized without proof, and given the same effect as though its public laws were proved by the introduction in evidence of a duly authenticated copy. The court also stated that the court of one state cannot take judicial notice of the laws of a sister state. The question in this case was, however, as to the necessity of pleading, and not of proving, the statute of the state.

Howe v. Ballard, 113 Wis. 375, 89 N. W. 136, holds that judicial notice cannot be taken of the statutes of another state not introduced in evidence, under the Wisconsin statute declaring that printed copies of the statute laws of other states, if purporting to be published under the authority of their respective governments, or if commonly admitted and read as evidence in their courts, shall be admitted as presumptive evidence of such acts. Hunt v. Johnson, 44 N. Y. 27, 4 Am. Rep. 631, is to the same effect. And this seems to be the general understanding of the bench and bar upon the subject.

It was also held in Howe v. Ballard that judicial notice could not be taken of the reports of decisions of the courts of other states, under a local statute providing that the unwritten or common law of another state may be proved as facts by parol evidence and books of reports.

State v. Morrill, 68 Vt. 60, 54 Am. St. Rep. 870, 33 Atl. 1070, while conceding that the courts do not, without proof, take notice of the foreign laws, says that they will assume that certain general principles consonant to reason and natural justice, and of universal applicability, are recognized by all civilized nations. The court accordingly indulged the presumption offered to the contrary, and it need not affirmatively appear that there was a consideration for the defendant's placing his name on the back of the note.

Rev. Laws. chap. 73, § 14; Nashua Sav. Bank v. Sayles, 184 Mass. 520, 100 Am. St. Rep. 573, 69 N. E. 309.

Under the laws of South Dakota, the note is a promissory note; the clause providing for an attorney's fee being void, the legality of the note is not affected.

Chandler v. Kennedy, 8 S. D. 56, 65 N. W. 439; National Bank of Commerce v. Feeney, 9 S. D. 550, 46 L. R. A. 732, 70 N. W. 874.

Barker, J., delivered the opinion of the court:

The instrument declared on as a promissory note is of the following tenor:

that the laws of larceny was the same in Canada as in Vermont.

Foreign laws must be proved like other facts; but where the country, now foreign, once made a part of the same empire with that in which the proof is to be administered, the laws common to both at the time of separation do not require proof in either, and they will be presumed to remain the same, unless the contrary be proved. Malpica v. McKown, 1 La. 255, 20 Am. Dec. 279. It was accordingly held in this case that the laws of Spain may be referred to and considered, though not proved as facts. The court said in support of its position: "We have looked into the jurisprudence on this head, and we do not discover that the different states in the Union require proof that the common law prevails in each; or that it has ever been deemed necessary to establish by testimony that the same system governs in England."

Strictly speaking the courts did not in either of the last two cases take judicial cognizance of the law of the foreign jurisdiction, but merely indulged the presumption that it was the same as the law of the forum, or, at least, that it was the same as the law of the forum at the time of and immediately after the separation.

The Federal courts, in the exercise of original jurisdiction, take judicial notice, not only of the laws of the particular state in which the action originates, but also of the laws of any other states, which may properly determine the rights of the parties, whether dependent upon statutes or judicial opinions. Lamar v. Micou, 114 U. S. 218, 29 L. ed. 94, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 857.

And the United States Supreme Court does the same upon appeal from a lower Federal court. The Supreme Court, however, upon writ of error to a state court, only takes judicial notice of the laws of the state from which the case comes, unless the courts of that state themselves take judicial notice of the laws of the other state. In other words, the Supreme Court, upon error to a state court, only takes judicial notice of the same laws as the court of the state from which the case comes. Hanley v. Donoghue, 116 U. S. 1, 29 L. ed. 535, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 242; Renaud v. Abbott, 116 U. S. 277, 29 L. ed. 629, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1194; Chicago & A. R. Co. v. Wiggins Ferry Co. 119 U. S. 615, 30 L. ed. 519, 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 398.

This rule was applied in Hanley v. Donoghue 67 L. R. A.

$218.00. Sioux Falls S. D., April 15, 1895.

Four months after date for value received I promise to pay to the order of U. S. G. Cherry Two Hundred and Eighteen Dollars, with interest at six per cent per annum, at the Union National Bank, Sioux Falls, South Dakota.

Unpaid interest shall bear interest at twelve per cent and, if suit is commenced, the customary attorney's fee shall be added to the amount of the judgment and taxed up as part of the costs in the cause.

Due Aug. 15, '95.

No. 3,682.

[Signed]

Odin Fritz.

[Indorsed]

Charles H. Sprague.

C. Everett Washburn.

U. S. G. Cherry.

upon error to the court of appeals of Maryland in an action upon a judgment recovered in Pennsylvania. And it was there held that the Supreme Court would not take judicial notice of the law of Pennsylvania for the purpose of ascertaining the effect which the judgment had in that state, in order to give it the same effect in Maryland under the Federal Constitution.

Previously to these decisions of the United States Supreme Court there was a misapprehension upon the point which induced some of the state courts to hold that, in a case involving the question as to the effect to be given, under the Federal Constitution, to a judicial record of another state, the court of the state in which the record was presented would take judicial notice of the laws of the latter state bearing upon the effect to which the record was entitled in that state. Hull v. Webb, 78 Ill. App. 617; Kopperl v. Nagy, 37 Ill. App. 23; Ohio v. Hinchman, 27 Pa. 479; Paine v. Schenectady Ins. Co. 11 R. I. 411; Coffee v. Neely, 2 Helsk. 304; Hobbs v. Memphis & C. R. Co. 9 Helsk. 873; Anderson v. May, 10 Helsk. 84; Trowbridge v. Spinning, 23 Wash. 48, 54 L. R. A. 204, 83 Am. St. Rep. 806, 62 Pac. 125.

This position, as pointed out in Hanley v. Donoghue, was based upon the misapprehension that the United States Supreme Court, on a writ of error to review a decision of a court of one state upon the faith and credit to be allowed to a judgment rendered in another, always takes notice of the laws of the latter state, and upon the consequent misapplication of the postulate that the same rule must prevail in the court of original jurisdiction and in the court of last resort. In Ohio v. Hinchman the court said, in support of its position, that it would be a very imperfect and discordant administration for the court of original jurisdiction to adopt one rule of decision, while the court of final resort was governed by another. The foregoing decisions of the United States Supreme Court do not, of course, necessarily require the abandonment of this doctrine by the state courts, though they destroy the foundation upon which it rests. If a particular state court adheres to the doctrine notwithstanding these decisions, the Supreme Court will, doubtless, upon writ of error to that state court, take notice of the laws of the other state, just as do the courts of the state from which the case comes.

The instrument contains an unconditional promise to pay at a day certain the definite sum of $218, with interest at 6 per cent per annum from August 15, 1895, to the order of the plaintiff. If this were all, it would, of course, be a promissory note. But the additional stipulations do not change the promise into a conditional one in any respect, and they relate solely to the manner in which the unconditional promise to pay the definite sum may be enforced if broken. This distinguishes the case from Haskell v. Lambert, 16 Gray, 592; Costello v. Crowell, 127 Mass. 293, 34 Am. Rep. 367; Sloan v. McCarty, 134 Mass. 245; and Moore v. Edwards, 167 Mass. 75, 44 N. E. 1070. In each of those cases the added stipulations made the contract conditional, or the promise one to pay an indefinite amount, or not to pay the sum named absolutely and at all events.

It is settled that the incorporation into an instrument which contains an unconditional promise to pay a definite sum of money of additional stipulations does not of itself necessarily deprive the instrument of the character of a promissory note. A recital that an additional rate of interest will be paid after maturity, and that the maker deposited certain collateral, and a statement of the terms upon which the collateral has been deposited, and on which it may be sold upon nonpayment of the note, does not have that effect. Towne v. Rice, 122 Mass. 67, 73-75, and cases cited. The test is that intimated by Mr. Justice Field in Sloan v. McCarty, 134 Mass. 245. If the additional stipulation relates to the manner in which the unconditional promise to pay a definite sum may be enforced, and does not change the promise from one to pay that sum absolutely and at

b. General system of law upon which foreign jurisprudence based.

The general principle that the courts of one state or country will not take judicial cognizance of the laws of another merely means that they will not take judicial notice of the specific law of the foreign jurisdiction upon a particular subject. It does not preclude the court of one jurisdiction from taking judicial notice of the system of law that is the basis of the jurisprudence of another jurisdiction. Thus, the presumption, discussed in a subsequent section, that the common law prevails in another state which was settled by citizens coming from states where the common law prevailed, rests upon the judicial knowledge that the common law is the basis of the jurisprudence of the states so settled. It will be observed, however, that the courts in such cases do not take judicial notice of the particular rule of common law as held in the other state, but merely indulge the presumption that the common-law rule on the subject in the other state is the same as the rule at the forum. This may or may not be true as a matter of fact; and it is apparent that this presumption will not always produce the same result that would follow from taking judicial cognizance of the specific common-law rule of the other state upon the subject in question.

The right to take judicial notice of the system of law upon which the jurisprudence of a foreign jurisdiction is based, is not limited to foreign jurisdictions which have the same system as the forum.

Thus, a court of Iowa may take judicial notice that the civil law is the basis of the jurisprudence of Mexico, though it may not take judicial notice that, under the law of Mexico, a male infant becomes an adult at the age of fourteen as under the civil law. Banco De Sonora v. Bankers' Mut. Casualty Co. (Iowa) 95 N. W. 232.

So, conversely, the courts of Louisiana, whose jurisprudence is based upon the civil law, may take judicial cognizance of the prevalence of the common law in Indiana. Copley v. Sanford, 2 La. Ann. 835, 46 Am. Dec. 548; Rush v. Landers, 107 La. 549, 57 L. R. A. 353, 32 So. 95. In the last case the court went further and held that it would take judicial notice of the rule of the common law upon the particular point in question, though it would not take cognizance of the statutory modifications of that rule. It accordingly took judicial notice of the common-law rule that a married woman cannot possess personal property independently of her husband, except where a trust has been created for her separate benefit. It will be observed that the rule of which the court took judicial notice in this case was a well-settled rule of the general system of common law, and was not in any sense peculiar to the common law prevailing in Indiana. It is obvious that if, as a matter of fact, the common-law rule on the subject as held in Indiana had differed from the rule as generally accepted elsewhere in common-law jurisdictions, even if that difference had been the result of judicial decisions in Indiana, and not of statutory enactments, judicial notice would not have been taken of it; but the rule as generally held would have been applied. It will be observed that the courts of Louisiana, or of other states or countries whose jurisprudence is not based upon the common law, stand in a somewhat different relation to this question than the courts of states whose jurisprudence is based on that system. The latter, after taking judicial notice that the jurisprudence of another state is based upon the common law, may arrive at the particular rule to be applied to the specific subject by indulging the presumption that the common-law rule in the other state upon the particular subject in question is the same as the common-law rule as held at the forum, or, if the common-law rule has been abrogated by statute at the forum, by indulging the presumption that the rule of the other state is the same as the common-law rule as formerly held at the forum. A court of Louisiana, however, cannot arrive at the true rule of common law to be applied to the subject by indulging any presumption of similarity between the law of the foreign state and the law of the forum. It must, therefore, if it is to apply any common-law rule, take judicial notice of what the common-law rule on the particular subject in question is. As already intimated, however, the court in such case takes judicial notice of the rules of the common law as a general system of jurisprudence prevailing in states of common-law origin, and not of the distinctive rules of the common law of any particular state. See, all events, or change the general nature of the whole contract, the instrument is a promissory note, notwithstanding the additional stipulations relating to the manner of enforcement of the promise if it shall be broken.

In the present instance, as the suit is brought by the original promisee, it is of no importance whether the instrument is negotiable or non-negotiable, and we do not consider or decide that question.

As the instrument was a promissory note, and as it was payable in South Dakota, and was sent to the payee by mail, and received by him in that state, it was a South Dakota, and not a Massachusetts, contract. Nashua Sav. Bank v. Sayles, 184 Mass. 520, 522, 100 Am. St. Rep. 573, 69 N. E. 309, and cases cited.

It is contended upon the plaintiff's brief that by the law of South Dakota the stipulation as to an attorney's fee was void, and the instrument a negotiable promissory note; and, further, that under the statute of that state the 18th day of August, 1895, being a Sunday, the note matured on August 19, 1895, the day on which it was protested for nonpayment. The brief cites in support of these contentions the cases of Chandler v. Kennedy, 8 S. D. 56, 65 N. W. 439, and National Bank of Commerce v. Feeney, 9 S. D. 550, 46 L. R. A. 732, 70 N. W. 874, and S. D. Rev. Civ. Code, 1903, § 2236, p. 844. But the bill of exceptions upon which the case is here contains no statement of these citations, nor of any evidence of the law of South Dakota; and it is apparent that the decision of the court below was made without taking into consideration the cases and the statute mentioned, and that we cannot consider them.

No proof as to the law in South Dakota having been offered, the court below was right in ruling that the common law of that further, as to the Rush Case, 107 La. 549, 57 L. R. A. 383, 32 So. 95, infra, III. c.

III. Different theories as to proper practice.

a. In general.

If a party desires to avail himself of rights or defenses conferred by a law of a foreign jurisdiction that is peculiar to that jurisdiction and differs from the common law and the law of the forum upon the particular subject in question, it is clear that he must prove the foreign law; for the court cannot take judicial notice thereof, and the utmost extent of any presumption that can be indulged, in the absence of proof, is that the common law prevails in the foreign jurisdiction, or that the law of the foreign jurisdiction is the same as the law of the forum, neither of which presumptions meets the exigencies of the hypothetical case.

Again, if a party desires to avail himself of a common-law rule prevailing in the foreign jurisdiction that differs from the common-law rule on the subject prevailing at the forum, he must prove the rule as held in the foreign jurisdiction; since the presumption in favor of the common law, if it be indulged at all, is that the common law of the foreign jurisdiction upon the subject in question is the same as the common law as interpreted at the forum.

The distinction between taking judicial notice of the common-law rule of a sister state and indulging the presumption that the common-law rule in that state is the same as at the forum is obvious. It is illustrated in Crandall v. Great Northern R. Co. 83 Minn. 190, 85 Am. St. Rep. 458, 86 N. W. 10, where the court said that it could not take judicial notice of a rule in another state, but, in the absence of proof to the contrary, would presume that it was the same as the rule at the forum.

The last proposition, i. e., that it is the common law on the subject as interpreted at the forum that is presumed to prevail in the other jurisdiction, is assumed by most of the cases that indulge the presumption in favor of the common law at all (but see Rush v. Landers, 107 La. 549, 57 L. R. A. 353, 32 So. 95), and is expressly declared in CHERRY V. SPRAGUE and the following among other cases that might be cited: Scaling v. Knollin, 94 Ill. App. 443; St. Louis & S. F. R. Co. v. Weaver, 35 Kan. 412, 57 Am. Rep. 176, 11 Pac. 408; Crandall v. Great Northern R. Co. 83 Minn. 190, 85 Am. St. Rep. 458, 86 N. W. 10; Kelley v. Kelley, 161 Mass. 111, 25 L. R. A. 806, 42 Am. St. Rep. 389, 36 N. E. 837; Callender, McA. & T. Co. v. Flint (Mass.) 72 N. E. 345; Houghtaling v. Ball, 19 Mo. 84, 59 Am. Dec. 331. But see, contra, Rush v. Landers, 107 La. 549, 57 L. R. A. 353, 32 So. 95, supra, II. b.

It is to be observed that the presumption is indulged in this form even by the courts that take the view, supported by the great weight of authority, that the common-law rule as held in the other jurisdiction, if proved, will prevail over a different rule prevailing at the forum. The latter subject does not come within the scope of the note, and is merely alluded to in passing. It may be observed here, however, that the Federal courts, in the exercise of original jurisdiction generally determine the common-law rule applicable to a particular subject by reference to the Federal precedents and without reference to the precedents established by the courts of the state which is the situs of the transaction, and the law of which, if statutory, would concededly govern. See, among the many cases upon the subject, Oates v. First Nat. Bank, 100 U. S. 239, 25 L. ed. 580; Brooklyn City & N. R. Co. v. National Bank, 102 U. S. 14, 26 L. ed. 61; Farmers' Nat. Bank v. Sutton Mfg. Co. 17 L. R. A. 595, 3 C. C. A. 1, 6 U. S. App. 312, 52 Fed. 191.

Some of the state courts also, assert the same right to apply the common-law rule as declared at the forum, rather than the common-law rule as declared by the courts of the other state, which is the situs of the transaction, and the law of which, if statutory, would concededly govern. See, among other cases to this effect, National Bank v. Green, 33 Iowa, 140; Roads v. Webb, 91 Me. 406, 64 Am. St. Rep. 246, 40 Atl. 128; Faulkner v. Hart, 82 N. Y. 413, 37 Am. Rep. 574; St. Nicholas Bank v. State Nat. Bank, 128 N. Y. 26, 13 L. R. A. 241, 27 N. E. 849.

This view, however, is opposed to the general state is to be presumed to be the same as that of this commonwealth, and that there is no presumption that the statutory law of the two states is the same. Kelley v. Kelley, 161 Mass. 111, 25 L. R. A. 806, 42 Am. St. Rep. 389, 36 N. E. 837. Therefore we are to determine whether the rulings of the court below should be set aside as contrary to the common law of this state. Examining them with this view, we are of opinion that the defendant has no just ground of exception. His requests that there was no evidence of due presentment, or of due notice to the defendant of nonpayment, and that the instrument became due on August 16, 1895, were given, and he has no exception on those points. His contentions that the validity of the instrument and the question whether he is liable thereon are to be determined by Massachusetts laws are disposed of by the doctrine of Nashua Sav. Bank v. Sayles, 184 Mass. 520, 522, 100 Am. St. Rep. 573, 69 N.

E. 309. His other requests, and his exception to their refusal and to the ruling that under the common law of this state the defendant was a joint maker of the note, and not entitled to demand and notice of nonpayment, are disposed of by our decisions, which show that by the law of this state, aside from statutory enactments, a third person placing his name on the back of a promissory note before delivery to the payee is an original promisor or maker, not entitled to have demand or notice of nonpayment, and that as to him no consideration need be proved. Sumner v. Gay, 4 Pick. 311; Woods v. Woods, 127 Mass. 141; Spaulding v. Putnam, 128 Mass. 363. The same considerations which require the overruling of the exceptions dispose of the questions raised by the demurrer.

Exceptions overruled. Order overruling demurrer affirmed.

understanding and practice of the state courts in this respect, as is apparent from the many cases (e. g., Milwaukee & St. P. R. Co. v. Smith, 74 Ill. 197), that apply the common-law rule as held in another state, though differing from that held at the forum. Some of the cases have expressly repudiated this view. See, especially, Forepaugh v. Delaware, L. & W. R. Co. 128 Pa. 217, 5 L. R. A. 508, 15 Am. St. Rep. 672, 18 Atl. 503; Limerick Nat. Bank v. Howard, 71 N. H. 13, 93 Am. St. Rep. 489, 51 Atl. 641; Alexander v. Pennsylvania Co. 48 Ohio St. 623, 30 N. E. 69.

Support may be found in the cases for four different theories as to the proper course to be pursued by the court when the proper foreign law of a case is not proved or conceded: (1) That the court should indulge the presumption that the common law on the subject prevails in the foreign jurisdiction; (2) that the court should indulge the presumption that the law of the foreign jurisdiction is the same as that of the forum; (3) that, irrespective of any presumption, the law of the forum should be applied as the only law upon the subject before the court; (4) that a party who asserts a right or defense which is properly governed by the law of a foreign jurisdiction should be denied all relief in that respect, unless he proves the foreign law.

As shown in subsequent subdivisions, the first and fourth of the foregoing theories are partial in their operation, and, even when adopted, are not necessarily, nor under all circumstances, exclusive of the second and third theories.

It will be observed that the third theory, though it does not rest upon any presumption as to the law of the foreign jurisdiction, is in practical effect the same as the second theory, which rests upon the presumption that the law of the foreign jurisdiction is the same as that of the forum whether the latter be statutory or common law. With the exception, therefore, of the special class of cases falling within the operation of the fourth theory, the conflict of authority upon this subject is, for practical purposes, represented, upon one hand, by courts which indulge the presumption in favor of the common law whether the law of the forum upon the subject in question be common law or statutory, and, upon the other hand, by the courts which indulge the presumption that the law of the other jurisdiction is the same as the law of the forum whether the latter be statutory or common law. In order to present this conflict as sharply as possible, an attempt has been made, in citing the cases in the next subdivision, to indicate whether the law of the forum upon the particular subject in question was statutory or common law, since it is apparent that the practical results of the two presumptions are the same when the law of the forum is the common law, and that, in order to present an irreconcilable conflict upon this point between a case which formally indulges the presumption in favor of the common law and one which formally indulges the presumption that the law of the other jurisdiction is the same as the law of the forum, it must appear in both cases that the law of the forum upon the subject is statutory and opposed to the common-law rule. As this distinction is rarely, if ever, brought out in the opinions, it is frequently impossible to determine with absolute accuracy from the report of a case whether the law on the subject at the forum was common law or statutory law; but it is believed that the classification of the decisions rendered in the respective states is, at least, sufficiently accurate to show whether the courts of a particular state are committed to the presumption in favor of the common law, even when the law of the forum on the subject is statutory, or in that case indulge the presumption that the law of the other jurisdiction is the same as the law of the forum.

As shown in the next subdivision, the presumption in favor of the common law is in any event limited relatively to the foreign jurisdiction with respect to which it may be indulged: and in some cases the presumption that the law of the foreign jurisdiction is the same as the statutory law of the forum is indulged, even by those courts which ordinarily indulge the presumption in favor of the common law, because the foreign jurisdiction is not one with respect to which the latter presumption may properly be indulged.

While, as already stated, the third theory produces the same practical results as the second, it will be observed that it rests upon a different foundation, and does not involve any presumption at all with respect to the law of the foreign jurisdiction. Some reasons are presented in infra, III. d, why this theory is to be preferred to the second.

The fourth theory has sometimes been stated in terms broad enough to indicate that it is co-ordinate with, and therefore exclusive of, the other theories; but an examination of the cases in which it has been applied discloses that it really operates as an exception to the first or second theory (or the third theory as a substitute for the second) whichever is adopted as the general rule in the particular jurisdiction in which the question arises.

b. Jurisdictions with respect to which the presumption in favor of common law may be indulged.

As shown in the next subdivision, the courts very frequently indulge the presumption, in the absence of proof to the contrary, that the common law prevails in another state. It is obvious, however, that this presumption cannot be indulged—even by the courts which are in general committed to it—with respect to all foreign states and countries. Thus, the presumption cannot be indulged with respect to the law of France, since it is judicially known that the civil law is the basis of the jurisprudence of that country. Ré Hall, 61 App. Div. 266, 70 N. Y. Supp. 406.

Nor with respect to the law of Mexico. Banco De Sonora v. Bankers' Mut. Casualty Co. (Iowa) 100 N. W. 532.

Nor with respect to the law of Asiatic Turkey. Aslanian v. Dostumian, 174 Mass. 328, 47 L. R. A. 496, 75 Am. St. Rep. 348, 54 N. E. 845.

Nor with respect to the law of Russia. Savage v. O'Neill, 44 N. Y. 298.

Upon the other hand, the presumption may be indulged with respect to the law of England. Ibid.

So, the presumption may be undoubtedly indulged with respect to the law of the provinces of Canada whose jurisprudence is judicially known to be based upon the common law.

But in Owen v. Boyle, 15 Me. 147, 32 Am. Dec. 143, the court refused to indulge the presumption that the common law of England prevailed in the province of New Brunswick.

The presumption may, of course, be indulged with respect to all the states of the Union which were originally colonies of England. Norris v. Harris, 15 Cal. 226.

And with respect to states which were carved out of territory belonging to such colonies. Ibid.

The truth of the last two statements is assumed by all of the cases which, under any circumstances, indulge the presumption in favor of the common law, and there is no conflict among them with respect to states belonging to either of these two classes; but there is a considerable difference of opinion, or, at least, of statement, as to the other states or territories with respect to which the presumption may be indulged.

According to the statement in some of the cases, a "common origin" of the other state with the state of the forum is apparently adopted as the criterion. Miller v. McIntyre, 9 Ala. 638; McAnally v. O'Neal, 56 Ala. 299 (indulging the presumption with respect to Georgia); 67 L. R. A.

Bush v. Garner, 78 Ala. 162, and Gluck v. Cox, 75 Ala. 310 (indulging the presumption with respect to Mississippi); Castleman v. Jeffries, 60 Ala. 380 (denying presumption with respect to Texas).

Peet v. Hatcher, 112 Ala. 514, 57 Am. St. Rep. 45, 21 So. 711 (denying presumption with respect to Louisiana), assumes that the presumption may be indulged with respect to states having a common origin, or populated by citizens from states having a common origin, with Alabama.

In Missouri it is held that the presumption can be indulged only with respect to those states which, prior to becoming members of the Union, were subject to the laws of England. Flato v. Mulhall, 72 Mo. 522 (denying presumption with respect to Texas); Sloan v. Torrey, 78 Mo. 623 (denying presumption with respect to Louisiana); Silver v. Kansas City, St. L. & C. R. Co. 21 Mo. App. 5 (denying presumption with respect to Kansas); Witascheck v. Glass, 46 Mo. App. 209; and Bain v. Arnold, 33 Mo. App. 631 (denying presumption with respect to Kansas); Barhydt v. Alexander, 59 Mo. App. 188 (denying presumption with respect to Iowa); Wyeth Hardware & Mfg. Co. v. Lang, 54 Mo. App. 147 (denying presumption with respect to Kansas); Clark v. Barnes, 58 Mo. App. 667 (denying presumption with respect to Arkansas); Searles v. Lum, 81 Mo. App. 607 (indulging presumption with respect to Mississippi).

The limitation of the doctrine in Missouri will, if rigidly adhered to, result in the denial of the presumption with respect to all states and territories formed from the territory included in the Louisiana Purchase of 1803, the Florida Purchase of 1819, and the Mexican Cession of 1848. This limitation, however, is contrary to the weight of authority of the cases which indulge the presumption in favor of the common law at all. The criterion adopted by Judge Field (afterwards associate justice of the United States Supreme Court), while a member of the California supreme court, in the case of Norris v. Harris, 15 Cal. 226, has been generally accepted. After stating that the presumption would be indulged with respect to those states of the Union which were originally colonies of England or were carved out of such colonies, he said: "A similar presumption must prevail as to the existence of the common law in those states which have been established in territory acquired since the Revolution, where such territory was not at the time of its acquisition occupied by an organized and civilized community; where in fact the population of the new state upon the establishment of government was formed by emigration from the original states."

This criterion is, in substance, repeated in Cressey v. Tatom, 9 Or. 541 (indulging presumption with respect to law of Illinois); Miller v. MacVeagh, 40 Ill. App. 532 (indulging presumption with respect to South Dakota); Buchanan v. Hubbard, 119 Ind. 187, 191, 21 N. E. 538 (indulging presumption with respect to Kansas); Crouch v. Hall, 15 Ill. 263 (indulging presumption with respect to Missouri).

So, the presumption that the common law prevails is not indulged as to those states in which there were established civil governments or systems of domestic law prior to their becoming territories or states of the Union, and in such a case, in the absence of anything to the contrary being shown, the court will presume that the foreign law is the same as that which prevails at the forum. The state of Kansas, although territorially a part of the Louisiana Purchase, is not one of the states in which the civil law ever prevailed, and the presumption in favor of the common law may, therefore, be indulged with respect to that state. Buchanan v. Hubbard, 119 Ind. 187, 21 N. E. 538.

It will not be presumed that the English common law is in force in any state not settled by English colonists; and no such presumption will be indulged with respect to the law of the Creek nation of Indians. Davison v. Gibson, 5 C. C. A. 543, 12 U. S. App. 382, 56 Fed. 443.

The usual presumption that the common law prevails in another state does not apply to the Creek nation of Indians; but the usages and customs that constitute their laws must be proved. Du Val v. Marshall, 30 Ark. 230.

And the same is true with respect to the laws of Indian territory. Garner v. Wright, 52 Ark. 385, 6 L. R. A. 715, 12 S. W. 785.

Judge Field, applying the criterion adopted in Norris v. Harris, supra, refused to indulge the presumption with respect to Texas, and also said that it could not be indulged with respect to Florida or Louisiana.

As the jurisprudence of Texas is not founded upon, or derived from, the common law, it cannot be presumed that that law is in force there. Brown v. Wright, 58 Ark. 20, 21 L. R. A. 467, 22 S. W. 1022; Garner v. Wright, 52 Ark. 385, 6 L. R. A. 715, 12 S. W. 785.

In Donegan v. Wood, 49 Ala. 242, 20 Am. Rep. 275, however, the court held that a bill, being payable in Louisiana, must be governed by the law of that state as to the manner of making the demand and protest, and said that the law merchant, which is a part of the common law, would be presumed to be in force in Louisiana.

The court takes judicial notice of the ordinance of Congress for the government of the Northwest Territory as the supreme law of that territory. Bush v. White, 3 T. B. Mon. 104; Holmes v. Mallett, Morris (Iowa) 82.

The names of the states with respect to the law of which the presumption was indulged have been inserted in parentheses after the cases cited in subdivision III. c, which support the presumption in favor of the common law. It will be observed that, with the exception of Missouri, most of the cases which indulge the presumption in favor of the common law at all follow the criterion suggested in the foregoing quotation from Judge Field's opinion. In other words, such courts, with the exception of the courts of Missouri, indulge the presumption with respect to all other states of the Union except Louisiana and Texas and possibly Florida, those states at the time of their acquisition by the United States having been occupied by an organized and civilized community whose jurisprudence was not based upon the common law.

c. Conflict between presumption in favor of common law and presumption that law of other jurisdiction is same as that of forum.

Within the limits discussed in the last section relatively to the states with respect to which the presumption may be indulged, and with the exception of certain classes of cases discussed in subdivision III. e, infra, it may, perhaps, be said that it is more usual for the courts of a state in which the common law prevails upon the particular subject in question to indulge, in form at least, the presumption that the common law also prevails upon the subject in another state if the contrary be not shown, than to indulge the presumption that the law of the other state is the same as that of the forum: though the result is, of course, the same in that class of cases, whichever presumption be indulged. For the reasons explained in subdivision III. a, supra, an attempt has been made, in citing the cases which indulge the presumption in favor of the common law, to point out whether the law of the forum on the subject was statutory or common law, in order to show whether the courts of a particular state indulge that presumption, whether the law of the forum is statutory or common law, or only when the law of the forum is the common law. As the courts themselves rarely allude to the distinction,—though it is frequently necessary to refer to it in order to reconcile the decisions in the same state,—it is often difficult to determine with absolute certainty, from the report of a case, whether the law of the forum on the subject was statutory or common law; but it is believed that the classification of the cases from the respective states is sufficiently accurate and complete for the purposes indicated.

As shown in subdivision III. b, supra, the presumption in favor of the common law is restricted, relatively, to the foreign jurisdictions with respect to which it may be indulged, even by the courts which are in general committed to that presumption.

In some cases, also the presumption is stated in a form which limits its operation to "common-law questions." See, especially, Schlee v. Guckenheimer, 179 Ill. 593, 54 N. E. 302; Dalton v. Talliaferro, 101 Ill. App. 592. It is difficult to determine to what extent the general presumption is qualified by its formal restriction to "common-law questions." Whether a particular subject is governed by the common law or by statute at the forum is obviously not the criterion by which the character of a question as a "common-law question" within this qualification of the rule, is to be determined. In the cases just cited, for instance, the presumption in favor of the common law was indulged, though the common-law rule had been changed by statute at the forum. Nor does the mere fact that a particular question never came before the courts until after the passage of statutes upon the subject to which it relates, suffice to withdraw it from the class of "common-law questions." For example, even assuming that the question as to the right to sell oleomargarine without distinguishing marks or labels had never arisen in the courts of any of the common-law states until statutes had been enacted upon the subject, there would seem to be no reason why a court which is, in general, committed to the presumption in favor of the common law whether the law of the forum is statutory or common law should decline to indulge that presumption with respect to the question referred to.

The qualification suggested by this formal restriction of the presumption to "common-law questions" seems to have been applied to the question as to the rate of interest to be allowed, in case the law of another jurisdiction which should properly govern is not proved.

Thus, Wright v. Delasfield, 23 Barb. 498, while holding generally that no presumption will be indulged that the law of another state is the same as the statutory law of New York, said, although the remark was obiter, that it is an assumption most compatible with truth that interest at some rate is allowed in every state, and that, although the rate of interest is fixed by statute, yet, as some rate is universal, the courts of New York must allow some rate, and, if the parties furnish no better guide to the truth, will assume ours to be the legal interest in computing the amount to be recovered.

And, speaking generally, the courts, whether they ordinarily indulge the presumption in favor of the common law or the presumption that the law of another state is the same as the law of the forum, seem to agree that, in the absence of evidence as to the rate of interest prescribed by a foreign law, the rate allowed at the forum governs. Murphy v. Murphy (Cal.) 78 Pac. 1053; Martin v. Hazzard Powder Co. 2 Colo. 596; Deem v. Crume, 46 Ill. 69; Hall v. Kimball, 58 Ill. 58; Crafts v. Clark, 38 Iowa, 237; Thomas v. Beckman, 1 B. Mon. 29; Cooper v. Reaney, 4 Minn. 528, Gil. 413; Desnoyer v. McDonald, 4 Minn. 515, Gil. 402 (see, however, the further reference to the last two cases, under the heading Minnesota, in this subdivision); Lougee v. Washburn, 16 N. H. 184; National German American Bank v. Lang, 2 N. D. 66, 49 N. W. 414. See, contra, Ingraham v. Arnold, 1 J. J. Marsh. 408; Kermott v. Ayer, 11 Mich. 181, infra, III. c. See, as to the defense of usury, infra, III. e.

It might be supposed that, even among common-law questions, there would be distinctions affecting the propriety of indulging the presumption in favor of the common law. It is, for instance, a matter of common knowledge, if not of judicial knowledge, that most of the states have passed statutes modifying the common-law rule regulating the rights of a husband with respect to the personal property of his wife. And it might be supposed that even courts which ordinarily, and with respect to the most "common-law" questions, indulge the presumption in favor of the common law, would refuse to indulge it with respect to the respective property rights of husband and wife. As a matter of fact, however, very little, if any, authority is found in the cases for making any distinction in this respect between different questions that may be regarded as common-law questions. Many of the cases subsequently cited in this subdivision, for instance, indulge the presumption that the common law prevails in another state with respect to property rights of husband and wife, even though the rule on the subject has been changed by statute at the forum.

Owing to the difference of opinion, discussed in subdivision III. b, supra, even among the courts which are in general committed to the presumption in favor of the common law, as to the states with respect to which that presumption may be indulged, courts of this class, notably the courts of Missouri, frequently render decisions that in effect oppose the decisions of other courts of the same class, and agree with the decisions rendered in similar instances by the courts that are committed to the presumption that the law of another state is the same as the law of the forum, whether the latter is statutory or common law. The explanation of this apparent anomaly is, of course, found in the fact that the particular state whose law was involved, was not one of the states with respect to which, according to the local criterion, the presumption in favor of the common law 67 L. R. A.

could be indulged and the court was therefore driven to the necessity of indulging the presumption that the law of the other state is the same as the law of the forum, or of applying the law of the forum without indulging any presumption whatever. In order to prevent confusion upon this point, the name of the other state or country with respect to which the presumption was indulged, has been inclosed in parentheses following the citation of the respective cases bearing upon the question which of the two presumptions is to be indulged. Alabama.

The courts of Alabama, within the limits discussed in the subdivision III. b, indulge the presumption that the common law prevails in another state when the common law on the subject prevails in Alabama. Goodman v. Griffin, 3 Stew. (Ala.) 160 (S. C.); Dunn v. Adams, 1 Ala. 527 (Ga.); Mims v. Central Bank, 2 Ala. 294 (Ga.); Shepherd v. Nabors, 6 Ala. 631 (Tenn.); Miller v. McIntyre, 9 Ala. 638 (Miss.); Beall v. Williamson, 14 Ala. 55 (Ga.); Averett v. Thompson, 15 Ala. 678 (N. C.); Hinson v. Wall, 20 Ala. 298 (N. C.); Ellis v. White, 25 Ala. 540 (Tenn.); Reese v. Harris, 27 Ala. 301 (Va.); Foster v. Glazener, 27 Ala. 391 (Ga.); Connor v. Trawick, 37 Ala. 289 (Miss.); Borum v. King, 37 Ala. 606 (Ga.); Rutledge v. Townsend, 38 Ala. 706 (Ga.); Howard v. Gilbert, 39 Ala. 726 (Ga.); Haden v. Ivey, 51 Ala. 381 (S. C.); Snow v. Schomacker Mfg. Co. 69 Ala. 111, 44 Am. Rep. 509 (Pa.); Cahalan v. Monroe, 70 Ala. 271 (S. C.); Bradley v. Harden, 73 Ala. 70 (Ga.); Wilkinson v. Buster, 124 Ala. 574, 26 So. 940 (Tenn.).

And the courts of this state also indulge the presumption in favor of the common law when the law of the forum upon the subject is statutory and opposed to the common law, and when, therefore, this presumption is practically, as well as theoretically, opposed to the presumption that the law of the other state is the same as that of the forum. McDougald v. Carrey, 38 Ala. 320 (Ga.); Walker v. Walker, 41 Ala. 353 (Ga.); McAnally v. O'Neal, 56 Ala. 299 (Ga.); Hawley v. Bibb, 69 Ala. 52 (N. Y.); Danner v. Brewer, 69 Ala. 191 (Miss.); Evans v. Covington, 70 Ala. 440 (S. C.); Irwin v. Bailey, 72 Ala. 469 (Ill.; Pa.); Jaffrey v. McGough, 83 Ala. 202, 3 So. 594 (Ga.); Bangs v. Edwards, 88 Ala. 382, 6 So. 764 (Ga.); Roach v. Privett, 90 Ala. 391, 24 Am. St. Rep. 819, 7 So. 808 (Tenn.); Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Williams, 113 Ala. 402, 21 So. 938 (Tenn.); Hubbard v. Sayre, 105 Ala. 440, 17 So. 17 (N. Y.); Birmingham Waterworks Co. v. Hume, 121 Ala. 168, 77 Am. St. Rep. 43, 25 So. 806 (Tenn.).

The last group of cases necessarily negatives the presumption that the law of another state (i. e., of another state which has a common origin, or was settled by people having a common origin, with Alabama) is the same as the statutory law of Alabama, and such presumption is expressly and in terms denied in Downs v. Minchew, 30 Ala. 86.

In Seay v. Palmer, 93 Ala. 381, 30 Am. St. Rep. 57, 9 So. 601, however (an action in Alabama upon a promissory note made in Georgia, and containing a waiver of all rights of exemption and homestead), the court said that, no statute of Georgia in reference to exemptions having been put in evidence, ordinarily the presumption would be that the common law prevails, which allows the debtor no exemptions of property from sale under execution; but, as the rigorous rule of the common law is now the exception, the court would indulge the presumption in favor of the validity of the agreement of waiver arising from its inclusion in the note.

When the other state is not one as to which the presumption in favor of the common law may be indulged conformably to the local criterion, the courts of Alabama either indulge the presumption that the law of the other state is the same as that of Alabama—as in Kennebrew v. Southern Automatic Electric Shock Mach. Co. 106 Ala. 377, 17 So. 545, where the court indulged the presumption that there was a rule in Louisiana like that in Alabama to the effect that there is an implied warranty of fitness in a contract for the sale of machines,—or apply the law of Alabama without indulging any presumption—as in case of Peet v. Hatcher, 112 Ala. 514, 57 Am. St. Rep. 45, 21 So. 711, infra, subd. III. d.

In Donegan v. Wood, 49 Ala. 242, 20 Am. Rep. 275, however, the court indulged the presumption that the rule of the law merchant as to the manner of making demand and protest was in force in Louisiana.

Arkansas.

By an act of the legislature of Arkansas passed in 1899 the courts of that state are required to take judicial notice of the laws of other states of the Union without proof; so that no question can now arise in that state as to the presumption to be indulged with respect to the law of another state, though it may still arise with respect to the law of another country.

Prior to the enactment of that statute, the courts of Arkansas within the limits pointed out in III. b, supra, indulged the presumption that the common law prevailed in another state when the common law on the particular subject in question prevailed in Arkansas. Newton v. Cocke, 10 Ark. 169 (Ky.); Peel v. January, 35 Ark. 331, 37 Am. Rep. 27 (Mo.); Eureka Springs R. Co. v. Timmons, 51 Ark. 459, 11 S. W. 690 (Mo.); St. Louis, I. M. & S. R. Co. v. Brown, 67 Ark. 295, 54 S. W. 865 (Kansas).

And some of the cases in that state indulge the presumption in favor of the common law even when the law of Arkansas on the subject was statutory. Hydrick v. Burke, 30 Ark. 124 (Tenn.); Galvus v. Cannon, 42 Ark. 503 (Miss.); the common law on the subject had been changed by statute in Arkansas at the time of the action though not at the time of the transactions involved); Thorn v. Weatherly, 50 Ark. 237, 7 S. W. 33 (Tenn.).

Tatum v. Hines, 15 Ark. 180, assumed that the existence of a separate estate in the wife depended upon the law of the place of the matrimonial domicile at the time the property was acquired, but held that, if the common law on that subject did not obtain at such domicile, the statute changing it must be proved.

In Cox v. Morrow, 14 Ark. 603 (N. C.; Tenn.; Tex.); Hall v. Pillow, 31 Ark. 32 (Miss.); Grider v. Driver, 46 Ark. 50 (Tenn.); and Louisiana & N. W. R. Co. v. Phelps, 70 Ark. 17, 65 S. W. 709 (La.),—the court apparently takes the position that the law of the other state is presumed to be the same as the law of Arkansas, whether the latter be common law or statutory, if it be not penal.

But such presumption does not prevail as to a penal law of the forum. Grider v. Driver, 46 Ark. 50 (Tenn.); Louisiana & N. W. R. Co. v. Phelps, 70 Ark. 17, 65 S. W. 709 (La.).
67 L. R. A.

-In Johnson v. State, 60 Ark. 308, 30 S. W. 31, the court indulged the presumption that the law of Indian territory, like the statute of Arkansas, made marriages between first cousins invalid; but the laws of Arkansas had been extended by act of Congress over Indian territory.

See also Arkansas cases, cited in III. d, infra, which, without indulging any presumption as to the law of the other jurisdiction, applied the lex fori as the only law before the court.
California.

In California the presumption that the common law prevails in another state has been indulged when the common law on the subject prevailed in California. Thompson v. Monrow, 2 Cal. 99, 56 Am. Dec. 318 (N. Y.); Cavender v. Guild, 4 Cal. 250 (Mo.).

In Brown v. San Francisco Gaslight Co. 58 Cal. 426, and Hill v. Grigsby, 32 Cal. 55, 60, however, the court indulged the presumption that the law of New York with reference to the issuance of letters to, and the powers of, one of two executors named in a will was the same as the law of California, which seems to have been the common law. The latter presumption though it produced the same result as the former, assuming that the law of California was the common law, is more in accord with the general rule upon the subject as adopted in California; for, when the law of that state upon the subject is statutory, whether the statutory rule is the same as the common-law rule or not, the courts indulge the presumption that the law of the other state is the same as the law of California, thus negating the presumption that the common-law rule on the subject prevails in the other state, when that presumption would conflict with the presumption that the law of the other state is the same as the law of California. Hickman v. Alpaugh, 21 Cal. 225 (Or.); Marsters v. Lash, 61 Cal. 622 (Ind.; Minn.); Shumway v. Leakey, 67 Cal. 458, 8 Pac. 12 (Nev.); Mortimer v. Marder, 93 Cal. 172, 28 Pac. 814 (Eng.; Neb.; Or.); Palmer v. Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co. 101 Cal. 187, 195, 35 Pac. 630 (Mo.); Bovard v. Dickenson, 131 Cal. 162, 63 Pac. 162 (Mo.); Re Richards, 133 Cal. 524, 65 Pac. 1034 (Mo.); Pierce v. Southern P. Co. 120 Cal. 158, 40 L. R. A. 350, 47 Pac. 874, 52 Pac. 302 (Fla.); Re Harrington, 140 Cal. 244, 98 Am. St. Rep. 51, 73 Pac. 1000 (Mich.).

It will be observed that the presumption that the law of another jurisdiction is the same as the law of the forum is not, like the presumption in favor of the common law, restricted with respect to the foreign jurisdictions as to which it may be indulged. Thus, it was indulged in Loalza v. Superior Court, 85 Cal. 11, 30, 9 L. R. A. 376, 20 Am. St. Rep. 197, 24 Pac. 707, with respect to the law of Mexico; and in Cavallaro v. Texas & P. R. Co. 110 Cal. 348, 52 Am. St. Rep. 94, 42 Pac. 918, with respect to the law of Louisiana, although, as shown in III. b, supra, the presumption in favor of the common law could not in any view have been indulged with respect to those jurisdictions.

In Montague v. The Henry B. Hyde, 82 Fed. 681 (an action brought in a Federal court sitting in California), it was expressly held that it should be presumed that the general or commercial law had not been so changed by the legislature of New York as to require bills of lading to be signed by the shipper as a condition precedent to his being bound by special stipulations therein limiting the general liability of the carrier; and that there is no presumption that that state has enacted a statute similar to Cal. Civil Code, § 2176, which declares, in substance, that the acceptance by the shipper of a bill of lading or written contract for the carriage of his goods, containing modifications of the general liability of the carrier, is not binding upon the shipper unless signed by him. The court said that it may be that the later decisions of the supreme court of California, commencing with Brown v. San Francisco Gaslight Co. 58 Cal. 426, announce the rule to the effect that, in every case in which there is absence of proof to the contrary, the law of another country or state will be presumed to be the same as that of the forum; but declined to follow such rule.

Colorado.

In Colorado the presumption in favor of the common law is indulged, even when the law of Colorado on the subject is statutory. Wolf v. Burke, 18 Colo. 264, 19 L. R. A. 792, 32 Pac. 427 (Idaho); Wells v. Schuster-Hax Nat. Bank, 23 Colo. 534, 48 Pac. 809 (Mo.).

Sullivan v. German Nat. Bank, 18 Colo. App. 99, 70 Pac. 162, seems to have indulged the presumption in favor of the common law, even with respect to Texas; though this, as shown in III. b, supra, is against the weight of authority, even of those cases which in general indulge that presumption with respect to the law of other states.

In Wolf v. Burke the court quotes with approval from Whitford v. Panama R. Co. 23 N. Y. 465, to the effect that it will be presumed that the common law prevails in another state, but that no such presumption obtains that the other state has passed a statute similar to that of the forum.

And in Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co. v. Betts, 10 Colo. 431, 15 Pac. 821, the court expressly refused to indulge the presumption that there was a statute in New Mexico similar to that of Colorado, making railroad companies liable for killing live stock irrespective of negligence.

The only case in Colorado that at all conflicts with the foregoing decisions is Martin v. Hazard Powder Co. 2 Colo. 596, where it was said that, in the absence of evidence to the contrary, it would be presumed that the rate of interest allowed in Wyoming was the same as that allowed in Colorado; but in this case the result of the decision was to uphold the rate of interest specified in a note, and the presumption as to similarity of laws was, therefore, aided by the presumption in favor of the validity of stipulation for interest. See more especially, as to interest and usury, III. e, infra.

Connecticut.

In Bay v. Church, 15 Conn. 15, the court said that in the absence of to any averment as to the law of New York it is presumed to be the same as that of Connecticut; but the question in this case arose under the law merchant, and it was therefore immaterial which of the two presumptions was adopted.

In Adams v. Way, 33 Conn. 419, it was held that it could not be presumed that, under the law of Wisconsin, a debt was merged in a decree of foreclosure,—especially as similar decrees in Connecticut do not have that effect.

Florida.

In the absence of any express allegation or proof to the contrary, it is always held that the law of another state in reference to commercial transactions is deemed to be the same as in the state where the court which hears the matter 67 L. R. A.

is sitting. Bemis v. McKenzie, 13 Fla. 558 (Ga.). The law on the subject was the common law,—law merchant,—so that it was a matter of practical indifference which presumption was indulged.

In Equitable Bldg. & L. Asso. v. King (Fla.) 37 So. 181, however, the court, after holding that judicial notice could not be taken of the law of Georgia, which by express stipulation in the contract was to determine the rights of the parties, applied a statute of Florida which requires that the husband shall join in the execution of a note or bond and mortgage given by a married woman to a building and loan association.

Georgia.

In Georgia the presumption that the common law prevails in another state is indulged when the common law on the subject prevails in Georgia. Eubanks v. Banks, 34 Ga. 407 (N. C.); Woodruff v. Saul, 70 Ga. 271 (Tenn.); Pattillo v. Alexander, 96 Ga. 60, 29 L. R. A. 616, 22 S. E. 646 (Tenn.); Massachusetts Ben. Life Asso. v. Robinson, 104 Ga. 256, 42 L. R. A. 261, 30 S. E. 918 (Mass.); Charleston & W. C. R. Co. v. Miller, 113 Ga. 15, 38 S. E. 338.

In Jones v. Rice, 92 Ga. 236, 18 S. E. 348, the court indulged the presumption that the common-law rule that a married woman may charge her separate estate to secure a debt of her husband prevailed in North Carolina, although the rule had been changed by statute in Georgia.

In Selma, R. & D. R. Co. v. Lacy, 43 Ga. 461 (Ala.), the court said that no presumption could be indulged that positive statutes of the forum opposed to the common law prevailed in another state.

And in Flournoy v. First Nat. Bank, 79 Ga. 810, 2 S. E. 547, the court indulged the presumption that the common law, according to which usury was not a defense, prevailed in Indiana, although the rule had been changed by statute in Georgia. As shown in III. e, infra, however, even the courts which ordinarily indulge the presumption that the law of another state is the same as the statutory law of the forum make an exception in the case of usury.

Notes made and payable in Tennessee will not be presumed to be void for usury although bearing on their face a greater rate of interest than 6 per cent, which appears by admission in open court to be the legal rate of interest in Tennessee, it not being proved that, by the law of Tennessee, the reservation of a rate in excess of the legal rate renders the contract usurious. Craven v. Bates, 96 Ga. 78, 23 S. E. 202.

Illinois.

In Illinois the presumption in favor of the common law is indulged when the common law on the subject in question prevails in Illinois. Crouch v. Hall, 15 Ill. 263 (Mo.); Belford v. Bangs, 15 Ill. App. 76 (Mich.); Western Transit Co. v. Hosking, 19 Ill. App. 607 (Mass.); David Bradley & Co. v. Peabody Coal Co. 99 Ill. App. 427 (Iowa).

And the presumption in favor of the common law is also indulged, even when the law of Illinois on the subject is statutory. Tinkler v. Cox, 68 Ill. 119 (Ind.); Studebaker Bros. Mfg. Co. 86 Ill. 234 (Mo.); Schlee v. Guckenheimer, 179 Ill. 593, 54 N. E. 302 (Ohio); Hanchett v. Rice, 22 Ill. App. 442 (Wis.); Van Ingen v. Brabrook, 27 Ill. App. 401 (Mo.); Miller v. MacVeagh, 40 Ill. App. 532 (S. D.); Lipe v. McCleavy, 41 Ill. App. 59 (Colo.); Selz v. Guth- man, 62 Ill. App. 624 (Wis.); Dempster v. Stephen, 63 Ill. App. 126 (Canada); Dalton v. Tallaferro, 101 Ill. App. 592 (Iowa); Jo Davless County v. Staples, 108 Ill. App. 539 (Iowa).

In Juilliard v. May, 130 Ill. 87, 22 N. E. 477, the question as to which of the two presumptions is to be indulged when the law of Illinois on the subject is statutory was referred to as though it were an open one. The court said that, in the absence of any allegation or proof of a statute of New York forbidding preferences in assignments for creditors, it must be presumed either that the common law, which allows preferences, obtains in that state, or else that the law of that state is similar to the statute of Illinois which forbids preferences. A decision upon the point, however, was not necessary.

In Strauss v. American Exch. Nat. Bank, 72 Ill. App. 314, the court said: "In the absence of any proof as to what the law of New York is, we must presume it is the same as the law of Illinois." The law of Illinois on the subject, however, was the common law, so that the case, in its result, is not opposed to the cases above cited which indulge the presumption in favor of the common law.

In Shannon v. Wolf, 173 Ill. 253, 50 N. E. 682, the court indulged the presumption that the law of Iowa was the same as the law of Illinois, or, at least, proceeded upon the theory that, the law of Iowa not being proved, the law of Illinois would be applied; but the law of Illinois on the subject was not statutory.

In Leathe v. Thomas, 109 Ill. App. 434, the court, in the absence of proof that the law of Missouri forbade pleas of set-off in an action upon a judgment, applied the rule in Illinois—apparently a non-statutory rule—permitting such set-offs in an action in Illinois upon a judgment recovered in Missouri.

Wood v. Supreme Ruling, F. M. C. 212 Ill. 532, 72 N. E. 783, held that it would not be presumed that the statutes of New Jersey fix any limitation as to the age of persons who may be insured by fraternal beneficial associations. It does not appear whether such a limitation is imposed by the statute of Illinois.

Indiana.

In Indiana the presumption in favor of the common law is indulged when the common law on the subject prevails in that state. Trimble v. Trimble, 2 Ind. 76 (Va.); Titus v. Scantling, 4 Blackf. 89 (Ohio); Gates v. Newman, 18 Ind. App. 392, 46 N. E. 654 (Ill.); Midland Steel Co. v. Citizens' Nat. Bank (Ind. App.) 72 N. E. 290 (Pa.); Penn Mut. L. Ins. Co. v. Nolecross (Ind.) 72 N. E. 132.

And the presumption in favor of the common law is also indulged, even when the law of Indiana on the subject is statutory. Johnson v. Chambers, 12 Ind. 102 (Pa.); Butler v. Myer, 17 Ind. 77 (Ohio); Mendenhall v. Gately, 18 Ind. 149 (Miss.); Crake v. Crake, 18 Ind. 156 (Ohio); Buckingham v. Gregg, 19 Ind. 401; Baltimore & O. S. W. R. Co. v. Reed, 158 Ind. 25, 56 L. R. A. 468, 92 Am. St. Rep. 293, 62 N. E. 488 (Ill.); Smith v. Muncie Nat. Bank, 29 Ind. 158 (Ohio); Schurman v. Marley, 29 Ind. 458 (N. C.); Lichtenberger v. Graham, 50 Ind. 288 (Ky.); Alford v. Baker, 53 Ind. 279 (Ky.); Patterson v. Carrell, 60 Ind. 128 (Ohio); Smith v. Peterson, 63 Ind. 243 (Ky.); Roberts v. Marley, 80 Ind. 185 (Kan.); Rogers v. Zook, 86 Ind. 237 (W. Va.); Supreme Council, O. of C. F. v. Garrigus, 104 Ind. 133, 54 Am. Rep. 298, 3 N. E. 818 (Ky.); Baltimore & O. S. W. R. Co. v. 67 L. R. A.

Jones, 158 Ind. 87, 62 N. E. 994 (Ohio); Baltimore & O. S. W. R. Co. v. Hollenbeck, 161 Ind. 452, 69 N. E. 136 (Ky.).

Some of the earlier cases in this state—Shaw v. Wood, 8 Ind. 518 (Ohio); Blystone v. Burgett, 10 Ind. 28, 68 Am. Dec. 658 (Ill.); Farhni v. Ramsee, 19 Ind. 400; Bierhaus v. Western U. Teleg. Co. 8 Ind. App. 246, 34 N. E. 581 (Ill.)—imply that, in case the law of Indiana on the subject is statutory, it should be presumed that the law of the other state is the same, or, what is practically equivalent thereto, that the law of Indiana should be applied. This position, however, was reluctantly abandoned in Smith v. Muncie Nat. Bank, 29 Ind. 158, though this case involved the defense of usury, which, as shown in III. e. infra, is generally treated as an exception, even by those courts which are in general thoroughly committed to the presumption that the law of another state is the same as the statutory law of the forum.

Cunningham v. Jacobs, 120 Ind. 306, 22 N. E. 335, was an action in Indiana upon an attachment bond given in Illinois. The court said that, in the absence of any showing to the contrary, it must presume that the common law prevailed in Illinois; but nevertheless, while admitting that attachment is the creature of statutory law, indulged the presumption that the court of Illinois had jurisdiction to issue the writ of attachment. It then held, however, that it could not presume the existence of a statute authorizing the bond, but that the bond must be treated as having been executed without statutory authority, and the question was, therefore, whether it was good as a common-law bond.

Several statements are made in Buchanan v. Hubbard, 119 Ind. 187, 21 N. E. 538 (Kan.), which are difficult to reconcile. Thus, the court says: "It is sufficient to say that the laws of a state to whose courts a party appeals for redress furnish in all cases prima facie the rule of decision, and, if either party claims the benefit of a different rule, since the courts are presumed to be acquainted only with their own laws, he who asserts the existence of a different rule as applicable to his case must aver and prove it like other facts of which the courts do not take judicial notice. Following this is a quotation from Crake v. Crake, 18 Ind. 156: "Where a right is sought to be enforced in one state in relation to a subject-matter existing in a foreign state, and no foreign law is proved, and no common-law rule ever prescribed, and no contract exists. . . . The court will apply the law of the state in which it is sitting." Again the court says: "In respect to general principles, the common law is presumed to be in force in most of the states, subject to such modifications as may have resulted from legislation or judicial construction. If these latter are not shown, the court applies the principles of the common law as those principles are interpreted in the state where the trial is proceeding." The question in this case was whether a resulting trust arose in favor of a wife in land in Kansas purchased by her husband with her money. The common-law rule has been modified by statute in Indiana, so that no trust arises in that state except as against the creditors of the wife. The court said, in effect, that the conclusion that a resulting trust must be deemed to have arisen in favor of the wife must follow whether it applied the rules of common law, or assumed that the common law had been modified by statute in Kansas, since, in the absence of any proof showing what modifications had been made, it must be assumed that the common law, as modified and interpreted in that state, is like "our" own. It is not clear whether the court assumed that this would be the result under the Indiana statute, or not.

In Baltimore & O. S. W. R. Co. v. Hollenbeck, 161 Ind. 452, 69 N. E. 136, the court held that the Indiana exemption law had no operation in Kentucky where a debt was garnished, and that, in the absence of evidence to show that there was a similar statute in Kentucky, it must be presumed that the common-law rule on the subject prevailed there.

Iowa.

In Holmes v. Mallett, Morris (Iowa) 82 (Ill.), the presumption in favor of the common law was indulged, the law of Iowa on the subject being the common law; and in Bernard v. Barry, 1 G. Greene, 388, the court said that it would presume that the lex mercatoria prevails in Missouri (where the note in question was made), and in Maryland (where it was indorsed) and, therefore, the indorsers were liable on demand and notice without suit against the maker as required by the Iowa statute.

Most of the Iowa cases, however, have consistently indulged the presumption that the law of another state is the same as the law of the forum, not only when the law of Iowa on the subject was the common law (and the presumption was, therefore, the same in effect as the presumption in favor of the common law); (Crafts v. Clark, 31 Iowa, 77 [Pa.]; Leiber v. Union P. R. Co. 40 Iowa, 688 [Neb.]; Tolman v. Janson, 106 Iowa, 455, 76 N. W. 732 [Ill.]; State v. Nadal, 69 Iowa, 478, 29 N. W. 451 [Mo.]); but also when the law of Iowa on the subject was statutory (and the presumption was, therefore, in some cases at least, practically, as well as theoretically, opposed to the presumption in favor of the common law) (Bean v. Briggs, 4 Iowa, 464 [Ill.]; Sayre v. Wheeler, 31 Iowa, 112 [Mo.]; Sayre v. Wheeler, 32 Iowa, 559 [Mo.]; Stephens v. Williams, 46 Iowa, 540 [Mich.]; Church v. Crossman, 49 Iowa, 444 [N. Y.]; Webster v. Hunter, 50 Iowa, 215 [Ill.]; Peck v. Parchen, 52 Iowa, 46, 2 N. W. 597 [Mont.]; Neese v. Farmer's Ins. Co. 55 Iowa, 604, 8 N. W. 450 [Neb.]; Hadley v. Gregory, 57 Iowa, 157, 10 N. W. 319 [Ind.]; Goodnow v. Litchfield, 67 Iowa, 691, 25 N. W. 882 [N. Y.]; Davis v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co. 83 Iowa, 744, 49 N. W. 77 [Ohio]; Bresser v. Saarman, 112 Iowa, 720, 84 N. W. 920 [Neb.]; Spinney v. Miller, 114 Iowa, 210, 89 Am. St. Rep. 351, 86 N. W. 317 [Ill.]; Hewitt v. Morgan, 88 Iowa, 468, 55 N. W. 478 [Ohio]; Barringer v. Ryder, 119 Iowa, 121, 93 N. W. 56 [Wis.]; Sleverts v. National Benev. Assn. 95 Iowa, 710, 64 N. W. 671 [Minn.]; Goodwin v. Provident Sav. Life Assur. Assn. 97 Iowa, 226, 32 L. R. A. 473, 59 Am. St. Rep. 411, 66 N. W. 157 [N. Y.]; McMillan v. American Exp. Co. 123 Iowa, 236, 98 N. W. 629 [Ind.]; German Bank v. American F. Ins. Co. 83 Iowa, 491, 32 Am. St. Rep. 316, 50 N. W. 53 [Ill.]; Re Capper, 85 Iowa, 82, 52 N. W. 6 [Ind.]).

In Hudson v. Northern P. R. Co. 92 Iowa, 231, 54 Am. St. Rep. 550, 60 N. W. 608, the court said that, as there was no statute in Idaho regulating carrier's contracts which limit the carrier's liability, it would be presumed that the common-law rule by which a carrier may stipulate against liability for loss not due to negligence prevailed there, although such a stipulation is ineffectual under the Iowa statute. It will be observed in this case, however, that the court starts with the statement that there is no statute in Idaho on the subject. How that fact was shown in the case does not appear, but it is obvious that, with such fact before the court, it could not indulge the usual presumption that the law of Idaho on the subject was the same as the law of Iowa. Besides, the common-law rule that was applied in this case was the one which prevents a carrier from contracting against liability for negligence, and that was the statutory rule in Iowa. The decision would, therefore, have been the same, even if the court had indulged the usual presumption that the law of Idaho was the same as the law of Iowa. Kansas.

The courts of Kansas consistently indulge the presumption that the law of another state is the same as that of Kansas, even when the latter is statutory. Kansas P. R. Co. v. Cutter, 16 Kan. 568 (Colo.); Holthaus v. Farris, 24 Kan. 784 (Mo.); Rogers v. Coates, 38 Kan. 232, 16 Pac. 463 (Mo.); Shattuck v. Chandler, 40 Kan. 516, 10 Am. St. Rep. 227, 20 Pac. 225 (Ill.); Missouri P. R. Co. v. Sharitt, 43 Kan. 375, 8 L. R. A. 385, 19 Am. St. Rep. 143, 23 Pac. 430 (Mo.); Heery v. J. L. Mott Iron Works Co. 10 Kan. App. 579, Appx., 62 Pac. 904 (Colo.); Scott v. Beard, 5 Kan. App. 560, 47 Pac. 986 (Mo.); Re Hess, 5 Kan. App. 763, 48 Pac. 596 (Okla.); Thomen v. Sullivan, 9 Kan. App. 887 Appx. 60 Pac. 755 (Ill.); Woolcott v. Case, 63 Kan. 35, 64 Pac. 965 (Cal.); Poll v. Hicks, 67 Kan. 191, 72 Pac. 847 (Ohio); Mutual Home & Sav. Assn. v. Worz, 67 Kan. 506, 73 Pac. 116 (Mo.).

In First Nat. Bank v. Nordstrom (Kan.) 78 Pac. 804, also, the court said that it would be presumed, in the absence of evidence to the contrary, that the law of Iowa as to the negotiability of notes is the same as that of Kansas. So far as appears, however, the common-law rule on the subject prevails in Kansas.

In Roe v. Roe, 52 Kan. 724, 39 Am. St. Rep. 367, 35 Pac. 888, the court indulged the presumption that the law of Colorado with reference to the granting of divorce and alimony is the same as the law of Kansas, there being no evidence on the point.

The general rule is that the laws of a foreign country, or of a sister state, are unknown to the courts in which they may be drawn in question, but, if required to be known, must be proved as facts in the case, except that, in some instances, in the lack of proof of what they are, they may be presumed to be the same as the laws of the forum where drawn in question. Such, also, is the statute of this state (Civil Code, § 370; Gen. Stat. 1897, chap. 97, § 1718; Gen. Stat. 1899, 4633). Alexandria, A. & Ft. S. R. Co. v. Johnson, 61 Kan. 417, 59 Pac. 1063.

In Furrow v. Chaplin, 13 Kan. 107, it was urged that, as the purchase of property by a married woman was made outside of Kansas, it must be presumed that the common law prevailed at the place where the purchase was made; but the court held that it would be presumed that the law of that state was the same as the law of Kansas; and intimated that this presumption would be indulged, even though it had appeared that the purchase was made in another state, though as a matter of fact it did not appear where the purchase was made. By the law of Kansas the property purchased would be the separate property of the wife, and would not become the property of the husband as at common law.

In Shed v. Augustine, 14 Kan. 282, it was held that the courts could not take judicial notice of the usury laws of another state, and that it was error to instruct a jury as to the meaning and effect of those laws in the absence of any evidence concerning them.

Kentucky.

The courts of Kentucky have frequently indulged the presumption in favor of the common law when the common law on the subject prevailed in that state. Johnson v. Bank of United States, 2 B. Mon. 310 (D. C.); Honore v. Hutchings, 8 Bush, 692 (Ill.); Miles v. Collins, 1 Met. (Ky.) 311 (Pa.); Stern v. Freeman, 4 Met. (Ky.) 311 (Pa.); Cope v. Daniel, 9 Dana, 415 (Pa.); Forepaugh v. Appold, 17 B. Mon. 630 (Pa.); Chesapeake & N. R. Co. v. Hanmer, 23 Ky. L. Rep. 1846, 66 S. W. 375.

And the presumption in favor of the common law has also been indulged in this state when the law of Kentucky on the subject was statutory. Moss v. Rowland, 3 Bush, 506 (Mo.); Klenke v. Noonan, 26 Ky. L. Rep. 305, 81 S. W. 241 (Ohio).

The rate of interest in a foreign state, or in any of the sister states, is a fact which, like all others, must be proved and ascertained by the jury. Ingraham v. Arnold, 1 J. J. Marsh. 408.

In Turner v. Johnson, 106 Ky. 460, 50 S. W. 675, the court said that, as there was no allegation that the laws of Missouri assigned to the bond in suit a different effect than the laws of Kentucky, its legal effect must be determined by the law of Kentucky. The latter, however, does not appear to have been statutory.

The opinion in Chesapeake & N. R. Co. v. Venable, 111 Ky. 41, 63 S. W. 35, illustrates the tendency of the courts to ignore the distinction between the presumption that the common law prevails in another state, and the presumption that the law of another state is the same as the law of the forum. The question was as to the measure of damages for personal injuries sustained in another state. The law of the forum on the subject was evidently the common law, and not statutory. The court said: "Whatever may be the rule as to statutory rights, it is well settled that it is unnecessary to plead or prove the law of a foreign state unless it differs from the lex fori. Where a party seeks to recover or defend under a foreign law, such law must be pleaded and proved like any other fact; but, in the absence of averment and proof, the rule is that foreign states, whose system of jurisprudence is derived from the same source as our own, are presumed to be governed by the same law."

Louisiana.

In Louisiana the courts generally either indulge the presumption that the law of another state or country is the same as that of Louisiana, even though the latter be statutory (Patterson v. Garrison, 16 La. 557 [Md.]; Pagett v. Curtis, 15 La. Ann. 451 [S. C.]; Nalle v. Ventres, 19 La. Ann. 373 [Miss.]; Randall's Succession, 26 La. Ann. 163 [Miss.]; McLear v. Hunsicker, 29 La. Ann. 539 [Del.]; Sandidge v. Hunt, 40 La. Ann. 706, 5 So. 55 [Tenn.]; Roehl v. Porteous, 47 La. Ann. 1583, 18 So. 645 [Ala.]); or, without indulging any presumption, apply the law of Louisiana as the only law before the court (Bonneau v. Poydras, 2 Rob. [La.] 1 [France]; Van Wyck v. Hills, 4 Rob. 67 L. R. A.

[La.] 140 [Tenn.]; Stone v. Minor, 6 Rob. [La.] 29 [Miss.]; Allen v. Allen, 6 Rob. [La.] 104, 39 Am. Dec. 553 [Miss.]; Harris v. Alexander, 9 Rob. [La.] 151 [Miss.]; Spears v. Turpin, 9 Rob. [La.] 293 [Miss.]; Campbell v. Miller, 3 Mart. N. S. 149 [Miss.]; Hernandez v. Garetagé, 4 Mart. N. S. 419 [Miss.]; Marshall v. Watrigant, 13 La. Ann. 619 [Ky.]; Kuenzi v. Elvers, 14 La. Ann. 392 [Brazil]; Atkinson v. Atkinson, 15 La. Ann. 491 [Tex.]; Syme v. Stewart, 17 La. Ann. 73 [Miss.]; Crozler v. Hodge, 3 La. 357 [Pa.]; Harris v. Allnutt, 12 La. 465 [Miss.]; Smoot v. Russell, 1 Mart. N. S. 522 [Ala.]; Peabody v. Carrol, 9 Mart. [La.] 295, 13 Am. Dec. 305 [Tenn.]).

In Rush v. Landers, 107 La. 549, 57 L. R. A. 383, 32 So. 95, supra, II. b, however, the court held that, even in the absence of proof, it would take judicial notice that the common law had been adopted in Indiana, though it would not take such notice of statutory modification of that law; and then proceeded to apply the general common-law rule, of which it also took judicial notice, to the property rights of husband and wife. Practically the same course was followed in Martin v. Boler, 13 La. Ann. 369, with respect to the property rights of husband and wife under the laws of another state. There is no reference in the Rush Cases to the Louisiana cases above cited, which have, in the absence of proof of the law of the other state, applied the law of Louisiana, and no suggestion that the decision changes the previous rule, or that any distinction is necessary. Perhaps the rule apparently declared in the earlier cases was assumed to apply only to subjects as to which there was no specific, positive, common-law rule declared by the courts, and not to subjects which, like the property rights of husband and wife, are covered by definite, specific rules announced by repeated decisions of the courts. This distinction, however, or any distinction which rests upon a classification of questions as common-law and non-common-law questions, is exceedingly difficult of application, and will not reconcile the decision in the Rush Case with the earlier decisions. For instance, in Crozler v. Hodge, 3 La. 357, where the law of Louisiana was applied in the absence of proof of the law of Pennsylvania, the question was as to the rights of a surviving partner,—in any view, a common-law question. In Marshall v. Watrigant, 13 La. Ann. 619, in the absence of proof of the law of Kentucky, a statute of Louisiana, forbidding or restricting the emancipation of slaves was applied.

Maine.

The courts of Maine have declared that the law of another jurisdiction would be presumed to be the same as the law of Maine, without suggesting any distinction between subjects as to which the common law prevails in Maine and those as to which the law of Maine is statutory. McKenzie v. Wardwell, 61 Me. 136 (Mass.); Peabody v. Maguire, 79 Me. 572, 12 Atl. 630 (Canada).

In neither of these cases, however, did it appear that the law of Maine on the subject was statutory, and the result, therefore, would, apparently, have been the same even if the presumption in favor of the common law had been indulged.

And in Tillexan v. Wilson, 43 Me. 186 (N. Y.), where the law of Maine on the subject was statutory, the presumption in favor of the common law was indulged.

In Carpenter v. Grand Trunk R. Co. 72 Me. 388, 39 Am. Rep. 840, it was expressly held that the presumption should be indulged that the common law with respect to a passenger's right of "stop over" prevailed in New Hampshire, Vermont, and Canada, and that there was no presumption that the rule had been changed by statute in those jurisdictions, as it had been in Maine.

In Emerson Co. v. Proctor, 97 Me. 360, 54 Atl. 840, however, the presumption was indulged that the law of Maryland, like the statute of Maine, requires the reservation of title by a seller of personal property to be in writing. Maryland.

In State use of Allen v. Pittsburgh & C. R. Co. 45 Md. 41 (an action in Maryland for death occasioned by negligence in Pennsylvania), the court said that, in the absence of anything to the contrary, the presumption is that the common law prevails in the state where the alleged wrong was done, and that the courts of Maryland, acting upon that presumption, afford the common-law remedy for the injury complained of; but that there was no such presumption respecting the positive statute law of Maryland. It was accordingly held that the action would not lie in Maryland, without proof of a statute of the other state giving a right of action in such cases, although there was such a statute in Maryland.

So, in Dickey v. Pocomoke City Nat. Bank, 89 Md. 280, 296, 43 Atl. 83, the court said that the authorities are not uniform as to whether the courts of one state will presume, in the absence of anything to the contrary, that a foreign state has adopted the same statute that is in force where the case is pending; but that it would be carrying such presumption to an unreasonable extent to presume, without proof to that effect, that there is a statute in the District of Columbia, like the statute of Maryland, which makes a complete change of the common-law rule by providing that, after the maturity of a note secured by a mortgage, the title to the note shall be conclusively presumed to be vested in the record holder of the title to the mortgage. Again, the court says: "When a statute thus radically changes the common law of one state, there is no good reason to presume that the legislature of another state has done likewise."

National Bank v. Baltimore & O. R. Co. (Md.) 59 Atl. 134, indulged the presumption that the common-law rule as to the negotiability of bills of lading obtained in Virginia. So far as appears, however, the common-law rule on the subject also prevails in Maryland. Massachusetts.

In Massachusetts the presumption in favor of the common law is ordinarily indulged when the common law on the subject prevails in Massachusetts. Wood v. Corl, 4 Met. 203 (Ohio); Cribbs v. Adams, 13 Gray, 597 (La.; law merchant); Richards v. Barlow, 140 Mass. 218, 6 N. E. 68 (Ill.); Thurston v. Percival, 1 Pick. 415 (N. Y.); Callender, McA. & T. Co. v. Flint (Mass.) 72 N. E. 345 (R. I.).

In a few cases in this state, when the common law on the subject in question prevailed in Massachusetts, and it was, therefore, immaterial for practical purposes which presumption was indulged, the courts have formally indulged the presumption that the law of the other state was the same as the law of the forum. Legg v. Legg, 8 Mass. 99 (Vt.); Dubois v. Mason, 127 67 L. R. A.

Mass. 37, 84 Am. Rep. 335 (R. I.); Hazen v. Mathews, 184 Mass. 388, 68 N. E. 838 (N. Y.).

When, however, the law of Massachusetts on the subject is statutory, so that the presumption that the law of the other state is the same as the law of Massachusetts would produce a result opposed to that which follows from the presumption in favor of the common law, the courts have consistently indulged the presumption that the common law is in force in the other state. Com. v. Graham, 157 Mass. 73, 16 L. R. A. 578, 34 Am. St. Rep. 255, 31 N. E. 706 (Maine); Murphy v. Collins, 121 Mass. 6 (N. Y.); Daniels v. Pratt, 143 Mass. 216, 10 N. E. 166 (N. Y.); Kelley v. Kelley, 161 Mass. 111, 25 L. R. A. 806, 42 Am. St. Rep. 389, 36 N. E. 837 (N. Y.).

In the last three cases it is expressly stated that there is no presumption that the statutes of another state are like those of Massachusetts; and that is also true of CHERRY v. SPRAGUE, Michigan.

In Re High, 2 Dougl. (Mich.) 515, the court indulged the presumption that the common law prevailed in Uruguay, where a will was made.

But it was said in Gordon v. Ward, 16 Mich. 360, that the presumption in favor of the common law cannot be indulged with reference to things which are usually matters of statutory regulation.

The presumption in favor of the common law has also been indulged in this state, even when the law of Michigan on the subject was statutory. Crane v. Hardy, 1 Mich. 56 (N. Y.); Knapp v. Knapp, 95 Mich. 474, 55 N. W. 353 (Wis.); Schroeder v. Boyce, 127 Mich. 33, 86 N. W. 387 (Ind.).

Kermott v. Ayer, 11 Mich. 181, declined to indulge the presumption that the rate of interest in Canada was the same as in Michigan. And O'Rourke v. O'Rourke, 43 Mich. 58, 4 N. W. 531, refused to indulge the presumption that there was a statute in New York like that of Michigan, invalidating contracts made on Sunday.

In Ellis v. Maxson, 19 Mich. 186, 2 Am. Rep. 81, involving the validity of a parol contract for the sale of lands in Illinois, the court said that, if it could make any presumption as to the laws of Illinois, it would be that they conform in substance to the general principles of the common law. The court further said that it was not necessary to consider how universally such a presumption may be indulged, but that it certainly would not presume that the legislature of another state has adopted all of the statutes of the forum.

In Worthington v. Hanna, 23 Mich. 535, however, the court declined to indulge the presumption that the common-law rule as to property rights of husband and wife prevailed in New York, when that presumption would operate to invalidate a mortgage given by a husband to his wife which would be valid by the law of Michigan.

So in Millard v. Truax, 73 Mich. 381, 43 N. W. 328, the court said that it would not presume that a contract valid by the law of Michigan was invalid by the law of Ohio, where it was made.

In Hutchins v. Kimmell, 31 Mich. 126, 18 Am. Rep. 164, Cooley, J., said that it had been held in Michigan that the common law will be presumed to prevail in a foreign country in the absence of proof to the contrary; and, while he thought that it was questionable whether the doctrine was to be applied universally, he said it could not be disputed that the reason of it was applicable to all marriages celebrated in Christian countries in which it may properly be assumed that a general common law on the subject of marriage still prevails.

In Russell v. Pierce, 121 Mich. 208, 80 N. W. 118, the court said that some authorities hold that the presumption is to be indulged, in the absence of proof, that there is no law in a sister state against usury, while others hold that the presumption should obtain that the law of the sister state is the same as that of the forum. The question, however, was not decided in this case.

In Phelps v. American Sav. & L. Asso. 121 Mich. 348, 80 N. W. 120, the court expressly said it could not take judicial notice that there is any usury law in Minnesota.

In Minnesota the presumption in favor of the common law is usually indulged when the common law on the subject prevails in Minnesota. Engstrand v. Kleffman, 86 Minn. 408, 91 Am. St. Rep. 359, 90 N. W. 1054 (Wis.).

In Mohr v. Miesen, 47 Minn. 228, 49 N. W. 862, however, the court formally indulged the presumption that the law of Wisconsin was the same as the law of Minnesota, the law of the latter state upon the subject in question being the common law.

The presumption in favor of the common law has also been indulged in Minnesota even when the law of Minnesota on the subject was statutory. Reiff v. Bakken, 36 Minn. 333, 31 N. W. 348 (Dak.); Pardoe v. Merritt, 75 Minn. 12, 77 N. W. 552 (Neb.).

In Desnoyer v. McDonald, 4 Minn. 515, Gil. 402, and Cooper v. Reaney, 4 Minn. 528, Gil. 413, the court apparently indulged the presumption that the rate of interest in another state was the same as in Minnesota; and in Brimhall v. Van Campen, 8 Minn. 13, Gil. 1, 82 Am. Dec. 118, the court apparently indulged the presumption that there was a law in New York similar to the statute of Minnesota invalidating contracts made on Sunday. These cases, however, so far as they lay down the general rule that the law of the place of the contract will, in the absence of proof, be presumed to be the same as that of the forum, were impliedly overruled by Hoyt v. McNeil, 13 Minn. 390, Gil. 362, which refused to indulge the presumption that there was a statute of limitations in New York and Michigan like that of Minnesota, and were expressly overruled by Myers v. Chicago, St. P. M. & O. R. Co. 69 Minn. 476, 65 Am. St. Rep. 579, 72 N. W. 694,—which refused to indulge the presumption that there was a statute in Wisconsin similar to that of Minnesota creating a cause of action for negligent homicide.

Hoyt v. McNeil, however, seems, in turn, to have been impliedly overruled—at least with respect to the law of limitation of another state—by Mowry v. McQueen, 80 Minn. 385, 83 N. W. 348, which says: "Statutes of limitations are matters of procedure, pleading, and proof; and, in the absence of any allegation to the contrary, we may assume in an action brought in this state that they are the same in Wisconsin as in Minnesota on this particular subject."

Mississippi.

Parties whose rights depend upon the peculiar law of another jurisdiction must fail unless that law be proved. McDonald v. Myles, 12 Smedes & M. 279.

67 L. R. A.

It is now, however, expressly provided by statute in this state that the courts shall take judicial notice of the laws of sister states and foreign countries.

Missouri.

As shown in subdivision III. b, supra, the courts of Missouri only indulge the presumption in favor of the common law with respect to those states which, prior to becoming members of the Union, were subject to the law and jurisdiction of England. Within these limits, the courts of that state consistently indulge the presumption in favor of the common law when the common law on the subject prevails in Missouri. Roll v. St. Louis & C. Smelting & Min. Co. 52 Mo. App. 60 (Ill.); Kratz v. Preston, 52 Mo. App. 251 (Pa.); American Oak Leather Co. v. Wyeth Hardware & Mfg. Co. 57 Mo. App. 297 (Ill.); Davis v. Cohn, 85 Mo. App. 530 (Ill.).

It can only be assumed that an act is criminal in another state or country when it is so by the common law; and, if words charge an act to be done in another state which is not a crime by the common law, in order to make them actionable, the petition must show, and the evidence establish, its criminality by the laws of such other state. Bundy v. Hart, 46 Mo. 463, 2 Am. Rep. 525 (Ind.).

The burden of proving the law of another state rests upon the party claiming rights under it, and, in the absence of such proof, the trial court is authorized to presume that the same rule of law which obtains at the forum obtains in the other state, being founded in the principles of the common law, and not the necessary outgrowth of a local and peculiar statute. Conrad v. Fisher, 37 Mo. App. 352, 8 L. R. A. 147 (Ky.).

In an equity proceeding, until the contrary is shown, it will be presumed that the equity doctrine of a sister state is the same as that of the forum where both have an equity jurisprudence. Johnston v. Gawtry, 11 Mo. App. 322, Affirmed in 88 Mo. 339 (N. Y.).

This presumption in favor of the common law was also indulged in Burdick v. Missouri P. R. Co. 123 Mo. 221, 26 L. R. A. 384, 45 Am. St. Rep. 528, 27 S. W. 453, with respect to the law of Kansas, which, according to the Missouri criterion, though not according to the criterion generally adopted, is excluded from the class of states with respect to which the presumption in favor of the common law may properly be indulged. As the common law on the subject in question prevailed in Missouri, however, it was immaterial for practical purposes whether the presumption in favor of the common law, or the presumption that the law of Kansas was the same as the law of Missouri, was indulged. The latter form of presumption was observed in Haworth v. Kansas City Southern R. Co. 94 Mo. App. 215, 68 S. W. 111, with respect to the law of Arkansas, though the common law on the subject prevailed in Missouri. And this form of presumption was also indulged in Bergner v. Chicago & A. R. Co. 13 Mo. App. 499, Warren v. Lusk, 18 Mo. 102, and Law v. Crawford, 67 Mo. App. 150, with respect to the law of Illinois. As Illinois was formed from the Northwest Territory, it is not apparent why, even according to the strict Missouri criterion, the presumption in favor of the common law could not have been indulged in these cases; but, since the law of Missouri upon the subject in question was the common law, it was immaterial for practical purposes which form the presumption took.

In Selking v. Hebel, 1 Mo. App. 340, the same form of presumption was indulged with respect to the law of Illinois, notwithstanding that the law of Missouri on the subject was statutory, and the form of presumption was, therefore, practically important. But see Crouch v. Louisville & N. R. Co. 42 Mo. App. 248, infra.

With the exception of the Selking Case, the courts of Missouri have consistently indulged the presumption in favor of the common law, even when the law of Missouri upon the subject in question was statutory, if the other state prior to its becoming a member of the Union was subject to the law of England. Houghtaling v. Ball, 19 Mo. 84, 59 Am. Dec. 331 (Ill.); Lucas v. Ladew, 28 Mo. 842 (N. Y.); Meyer v. McCabe, 73 Mo. 236 (Ind.); Morrissey v. Wiggins Ferry Co. 47 Mo. 521 (N. Y.); Benne v. Schnecko, 100 Mo. 250, 13 S. W. 82 (Ky.; Tenn.); State v. Clay, 100 Mo. 571, 13 S. W. 827 (Kan.); McPike v. McPike, 111 Mo. 216, 20 S. W. 12 (Ill.); A. G. Edwards Brokerage Co. v. Stevenson, 160 Mo. 516, 61 S. W. 617 (N. Y.); Goldsmith v. Chicago & A. R. Co. 12 Mo. App. 479 (Ill.); White v. Chaney, 20 Mo. App. 389 (Ky.); Kerwin v. Doran, 29 Mo. App. 397 (Ill.); Cooper v. Standley, 40 Mo. App. 138 (Ill.); Crouch v. Louisville & N. R. Co. 42 Mo. App. 248 (Ill.); Gaylord v. Duryea, 95 Mo. App. 574, 69 S. W. 607 (N. Y.); Price v. Clevenger, 99 Mo. App. 536, 74 S. W. 894 (Ill.).

Kollock v. Emmert, 43 Mo. App. 566 (Kan.); Wyeth Hardware & Mfg. Co. v. Lang, 54 Mo. App. 147, and Brinkman v. Luhrs, 60 Mo. App. 512 (Kan.), which indulged the presumption that the law of Kansas was the same as the statutory law of Missouri, are not opposed to the cases above cited, since Kansas, according to the criterion established in Missouri, is not one of those states with respect to which the presumption in favor of the common law may be indulged. A similar explanation may be made of Barhydt v. Alexander, 59 Mo. App. 188, indulging the presumption that the statute of Iowa with reference to the powers of notaries is the same as that of Missouri, and of Hurley v. Missouri P. R. Co. 57 Mo. App. 676, indulging the presumption that the law of Texas as to the duty of a railroad company to fence its tracks is the same as the statutory law of Missouri. It is clear from the opinions in these cases that the presumption in favor of the similarity of laws was indulged because the usual presumption in favor of the common law could not, according to the strict criterion in Missouri, be indulged with respect to the law of Iowa or Texas, because neither of these states was subject to the law of England before it became a member of the Union.

When the common law on the subject prevails in Missouri, it is immaterial for the practical purposes of the case, whether the foreign state is one with respect to which the presumption in favor of the common law may be indulged or not, since, even if that presumption may not be indulged, the presumption that the law of the other state is the same as the law of Missouri prevails. Thus, it was held in Philpot v. Missouri P. R. Co. 85 Mo. 164, that, in the absence of any evidence as to the age of majority in Texas, it must be presumed to be the same as that fixed by the common law of Missouri.

The cases above cited which have indulged the presumption in favor of the common law when the law of Missouri upon the subject was statutory necessarily negative the presumption 67 L. R. A.

that the law of the other state is the same as the statutory law of Missouri, when the other state was subject to the law of England prior to its admission into the Union. And the latter presumption has been expressly denied in such case. Goldsmith v. Chicago & A. R. Co. 12 Mo. App. 479 (Ill.); Rohan Bros. Boiler Mfg. Co. v. Richmond, 14 Mo. App. 595, Appx.; White v. Chaney, 20 Mo. App. 395 (Ky.); Crouch v. Louisville & N. R. Co. 42 Mo. App. 248 (Ill.); Nenno v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co. 105 Mo. App. 540, 80 S. W. 24 (Ill.); Hazelett v. Woodruff, 150 Mo. 534, 51 S. W. 1048 (Ind.).

In Walte v. Bartlett, 53 Mo. App. 378, the court, assuming, in the absence of proof, on the subject that the rule in Dakota as to the effect of a criminal statute upon a civil liability was the same as in Missouri, held that a statute of Dakota—introduced in evidence—declaring that the reservation of usury should operate as a forfeiture of the entire interest, and declaring the exaction of usury a misdemeanor, did not operate to prevent a recovery of the principal. Nebraska.

In Nebraska the courts indulge the presumption that the law of another state is the same as the law of Nebraska when the common law on the subject prevails in Nebraska. Ruth v. Lowrey, 10 Neb. 260, 4 N. W. 977 (Wyo.); Lord v. State, 17 Neb. 526, 23 N. W. 507 (Pa.); Haggin v. Haggin, 35 Neb. 375, 53 N. W. 209 (Kan.); Bailey v. State, 36 Neb. 808, 55 N. W. 241 (Iowa); Stark v. Olsen, 44 Neb. 646, 63 N. W. 37 (Iowa); East Omaha Street R. Co. v. Godola, 50 Neb. 906, 70 N. W. 491 (Iowa); Staunfield v. Jeutter (Neb.) 96 N. W. 642.

And the presumption that the law of the other state is the same as the law of Nebraska is also indulged, even when the law of Nebraska upon the subject is statutory; and the form of the presumption is, therefore, material. Scroggin v. McClelland, 37 Neb. 644, 22 L. R. A. 110, 40 Am. St. Rep. 520, 56 N. W. 208 (statute of limitations; Ill.); Fitzgerald v. Fitzgerald & M. Constr. Co. 41 Neb. 374, 59 N. W. 838 (Neb.); Chapman v. Brewer, 43 Neb. 890, 47 Am. St. Rep. 779, 62 N. W. 320 (Iowa); Smith v. Mason, 44 Neb. 610, 63 N. W. 41 (Ill.); Stark v. Olsen, 44 Neb. 646, 63 N. W. 37 (by implication; Kan.); Welton v. Atkinson, 55 Neb. 674, 70 Am. St. Rep. 416, 76 N. W. 473 (Ark.); Fisher v. Donovan, 57 Neb. 361, 44 L. R. A. 383, 77 N. W. 778; Pennsylvania Co. v. Kennard Glass & Paint Co. 59 Neb. 435, 81 N. W. 372 (Pa.); Schlitt & Bro. Co. v. Mahoney, 60 Neb. 20, 82 N. W. 99 (Ohio); People's Bldg. Loan & Sav. Assn. v. Backus, 2 Herdman (Neb.) 403, 89 N. W. 315 (N. Y.).

In Council Bluffs Sav. Bank v. Griswold, 50 Neb. 753, 70 N. W. 376, however, the court said: It is true, as a general proposition, that the laws of a sister state will, in the absence of proof, be presumed to be the same as those in force in Nebraska; but that proposition is not without exceptions; and it will be presumed, in the absence of proof to the contrary, that courts of general jurisdiction of other state possess the authority they presume to exercise, and that the methods of procedure pursued by them, although differing from the established practice in Nebraska, are authorized by the laws of the other state.

New Hampshire.

In Ela v. Ela, 70 N. H. 163, 47 Atl. 414, the presumption was indulged that, under the law of Alabama, as under the law of New Hampshire, real property does not pass to the administrator, but descends to the heirs.

In Leach v. Pillsbury, 15 N. H. 137, however, the court refused to indulge the presumption that the law of Louisiana with respect to the distribution of an intestate's estate was the same as the statute of New Hampshire. See further, as to this case, III. c. infra. New Jersey.

In New Jersey the presumption in favor of the common law is generally indulged when the common law on the subject prevails in New Jersey. Reed v. Wilson, 41 N. J. L. 29 (Pa.); Seyfert v. Edison, 45 N. J. L. 393 (Pa.).

In Dittman v. Distilling Co. 64 N. J. Eq. 537, 54 Atl. 570 (W. Va.), however, the court formally indulged the presumption that the law of the other state was the same as that of New Jersey; but the common law on the subject prevailed in New Jersey, and the form of the presumption was therefore immaterial.

The presumption in favor of the common law is also indulged in this state, even when the law of New Jersey on the subject is statutory. Wain v. Wain, 53 N. J. L. 429, 22 Atl. 203 (Pa.); Flagg v. Baldwin, 38 N. J. Eq. 219, 48 Am. Rep. 308 (N. Y.); Bradley v. Johnson, 46 N. J. L. 271 (N. Y.).

In Fred v. Fred (N. J. Eq.) 58 Atl. 611, the court, in the absence of proof of the law of the other state upon the subject, interpreted a decree rendered in Dakota granting alimony, in the light of the practice in New Jersey not to award a gross amount for future support, but to grant an allowance in periodical instalments.

In Leake v. Bergen, 27 N. J. Eq. 360, the plea of usury was defeated, although the contract would apparently have been usurious tested by the law of New Jersey, because the law of the other state upon the subject was not proved.

Dolman v. Cook, 14 N. J. Eq. 56; Campion v. Kille, 14 N. J. Eq. 229; and Andrews v. Torrey, 14 N. J. Eq. 355,—are to same effect as last case.

New York.

In New York the presumption in favor of the common law is indulged when the common law on the subject prevails in New York. Ruse v. Mutual Ben. L. Ins. Co. 23 N. Y. 516 (N. J.); Jennings v. Grand Trunk R. Co. 52 Hun, 227, 5 N. Y. Supp. 140 (Canada); Re Hamilton, 76 Hun, 200, 27 N. Y. Supp. 818 (Pa.); Abell v. Douglass, 4 Denio, 305 (Pa.); Palne v. Noelke, 11 Jones & S. 176 (N. J.); Goodman v. Mercantile Credit Guarantee Co. 17 App. Div. 474, 45 N. Y. Supp. 508 (Tenn.); First Nat. Bank v. Fourth Nat. Bank, 77 N. Y. 320, 33 Am. Rep. 618 (Pa.).

And the presumption is also indulged in favor of the common law, even when the law of New York on the subject is statutory. Zeltner v. Irwin, 25 App. Div. 228, 49 N. Y. Supp. 337 (Pa.); Deyo v. Morss, 30 App. Div. 56, 51 N. Y. Supp. 785 (Pa.); Re Hulbert Bros. & Co. 38 App. Div. 323, 57 N. Y. Supp. 38 (Mo.); Stokes v. Macken, 62 Barb. 145 (Eng.); Sullivan v. Babcock, 63 How. Pr. 120 (N. J.); Throop v. Hatch, 3 Abb. Pr. 23 (Mich.; Ohio); Waldron v. Ritchings, 9 Abb. Pr. N. S. 359 (Pa.); Graves v. Cameron, 9 Daly, 152 (N. J.); Vanderpoel v. Gorman, 140 N. Y. 563, 24 L. R. A. 548, 37 Am. St. Rep. 601, 35 N. E. 932 (N. J.); First Nat. Bank v. National Broadway Bank, 156 N. Y. 450, 42 L. R. A. 189, 51 N. E. 398 (Conn.); Franzen v. Zimmer, 90 Hun, 103, 35 N. Y. Supp. 6; L. R. A.

612 (Minu.); Waters v. Spencer, 44 Misc. 13, 89 N. Y. Supp. 693 (Ill.).

In the absence of proof to the contrary, it is to be presumed that the laws of another state are the same as the laws of New York in respect to contracts relating to personal estate, and as to commercial matters particularly; and that when the common law is known to prevail it is construed there as it is in New York, whether relating to lands or personal property. But no such presumption can be entertained in respect to statute law of New York. Wright v. Delafield, 23 Barb. 408. The court accordingly refused to indulge the presumption that there was a statute in Florida similar to the New York statute respecting trusts.

In Casola v. Kugelman, 33 App. Div. 428, 54 N. Y. Supp. 89, Affirmed in 104 N. Y. 608, 58 N. E. 1085, the court said that it was not at liberty to presume that there is a statutory provision in Maryland similar to that of New York respecting the rights of a special partner as a creditor; and that, if the court were authorized to indulge and presumption, it would be that the special partner's right of recourse against the general partners for his claim is the same as that of any partner at common law.

In the absence of evidence of the law of another state, the common law, as interpreted by the courts of the forum, will be presumed to be in force in that state. The presumption, in the absence of proof to the contrary, that the law of a foreign state is like our own, does not extend to positive statutory law. Waters v. Spencer, 44 Misc. 15, 89 N. Y. Supp. 693.

In Harris v. White, 81 N. Y. 532, the court said: "As a general rule, the courts of one state, in the absence of proof and allegations otherwise, will presume that the laws of another state are like those of their own state. It is doubted, however, whether this presumption will be made of statute law. McCulloch v. Norwood, 58 N. Y. 567; Wilcox Silver Plate Co. v. Green, 72 N. Y. 17. It will not be made of statutes imposing a penalty or forfeiture. Cutler v. Wright, 22 N. Y. 472. And it has been declared that a court cannot take notice judicially of any laws of other states not according to the common law. Holmes v. Broughton, 10 Wend. 75, 25 Am. Dec. 536."

But where a statute of another state governing the particular subject has been proved, it cannot be presumed that the common-law rule is in force there. Moore v. Hegeman, 92 N. Y. 521, 44 Am. Rep. 408.

In Stewart v. Union Mut. L. Ins. Co. 155 N. Y. 237, 42 L. R. A. 147, 49 N. E. 876, it is said that, in the absence of evidence to the contrary, it may properly be assumed that the law of another state is the same as the law of the forum. The law of New York upon the subject in question, however, was the common law, so that this decision does not conflict with the other New York cases, which hold that it will be presumed that the common law prevails in another state.

In Pratt v. Roman Catholic Orphan Asylum, 20 App. Div. 352, 46 N. Y. Supp. 1035,—where the court, speaking of the law of England, said that either no presumption would be indulged as to the law, or that it would be presumed to be the same as the law of New York,—the law of New York on the subject was the common law.

Where the law of a foreign country or another state is a subject of inquiry, the law of the state where the question arises, other than statute law, will be presumed to be the law existing in such state or foreign country, unless evidence is shown as to what the law actually is. Bradley v. Mutual Ben. L. Ins. Co. 3 Lans. 341.

The rule was applied in this case to the law of Louisiana. Query, whether it would not be better to apply the law of the forum in such a case, without indulging any presumption with reference to the foreign law.

North Carolina.

In North Carolina the presumption in favor of the common law is indulged when the common law on the subject prevails in North Carolina. Benbow v. Moore, 114 N. C. 263, 19 S. E. 156 (Tenn.); Griffin v. Carter, 40 N. C. (5 Ired. Eq.) 413 (Va.); Brown v. Pratt, 56 N. C. (3 Jones, Eq.) 202 (Tenn.).

And the presumption in favor of the common law is also indulged in this state, even when the law of North Carolina on the subject is statutory. Cade v. Davis, 96 N. C. 139, 2 S. E. 225 (S. C.); Terry v. Robbins, 128 N. C. 140, 83 Am. St. Rep. 663, 38 S. E. 470 (N. J.); Gooch v. Faucett, 122 N. C. 270, 39 L. R. A. 835, 29 S. E. 362 (Va.).

The majority opinion in Lassitter v. Norfolk & C. R. Co. (N. C.), 48 S. E. 642, treats the question, whether it will be presumed that there is a statute in another state (Virginia) similar to the statute of North Carolina, as though it were an open one in that state; but Walker, J., with whom Connor, J., concurred, dissented from this view, and declared it had been settled by the authorities above cited that there was no such presumption, but that, upon the other hand, the presumption is in favor of the common law.

A marriage celebrated in another state, and solemnized in the manner prescribed by the laws of North Carolina, will be presumed to be valid until the contrary is shown. State v. Patterson, 24 N. C. (2 Ired. L.) 346, 38 Am. Dec. 690.

North Dakota.

In National German American Bank v. Lang, 2 N. D. 60, 49 N. W. 414, the presumption was indulged that the rate of interest in Minnesota was the same as that in North Dakota.

But in Dows v. Glaspel, 4 N. D. 251, 60 N. W. 60, the common law as to the right of a broker to recover for commissions and advances on account of sales and purchases on the board of trade was presumed to prevail in Minnesota. So far as appears to the contrary, however, the common-law rule prevailed in North Dakota.

Oklahoma.

Where it is necessary to plead and prove the statutes of another state or territory, and such statutes are not pleaded and proved, the court will presume that the laws of such other state or territory are the same as the laws of Oklahoma. Greenville Nat. Bank v. Evans-Snyder-Buel Co. 9 Okla. 353, 60 Pac. 249 (Ind. Terr.).

Mansur-Tebbetts Implement Co. v. Willet, 10 Okla. 383, 61 Pac. 1066 (Mo.), is to the same effect.

In Richardson v. Mackay, 4 Okla. 328, 46 Pac. 546, a debtor sought to avail himself of the Oklahoma statute, which admits the completed bar of a statute of another state or territory in which the defendant has previously resided. He did not, however, prove the statute of limitations of the other state, claiming that the presumption of the law is that the statutes of other states upon a particular question are the same 67 L. R. A.

as those of Oklahoma. The court said that the proposition of law asserted as an abstract proposition was correct, but was not applicable to the present case, and it was therefore necessary to prove the statute of the other state.

In the syllabus to Keagy v. Wellington Nat. Bank, 12 Okla. 33, 69 Pac. 811 (Kan.), it is stated that, where a note is executed in Kansas, and suit brought to recover thereon in Oklahoma, and the statute of limitations of Kansas is neither pleaded nor proved, the court will presume that the laws of that state are the same as the laws of Oklahoma. The contrary, however, seems to be held in the opinion, which cites and approves Richardson v. Mackay, 4 Okla. 328, 46 Pac. 546.

Oregon.

The presumption in favor of the common law is indulged in Oregon, even when the law of Oregon on the subject is statutory. Goodwin v. Morris, 9 Or. 322 (Wash. Terr.); Cressey v. Tatom, 9 Or. 541 (Cal.).

Pennsylvania.

In Pennsylvania the courts indulge the presumption that the law of the other state is the same as the law of Pennsylvania, not only when the common law on the subject in question prevails in Pennsylvania (Musser v. Stauffer, 178 Pa. 99, 35 Atl. 709 [Va.]), but also when the law of Pennsylvania on the subject is statutory (Evans v. Cleary, 125 Pa. 204, 11 Am. St. Rep. 886, 17 Atl. 440 [Ill.]).

So, in the absence of proof to the contrary it will be presumed that the law of England is the same as the law of Pennsylvania. Linton v. Moorhead, 209 Pa. 646, 59 Atl. 264.

The law of another state upon a subject coming under notice in the trial of a cause will be presumed to be the same as the law of Pennsylvania upon the same subject. It is incumbent upon him who alleges that it is different to show just what it is to the court, who will judge of the sufficiency of the evidence and its effect, and instruct the jury thereon. Bollinger v. Gallagher, 170 Pa. 84, 32 Atl. 569.

It will not be presumed that the common-law rule, by which a judgment against one or more of the several partners on a partnership note bars a suit against the remaining partners who were not served, prevails in Wisconsin, but rather that the law of Wisconsin upon that subject is like the law of Pennsylvania, which is not the common-law rule. Bennett v. Cadwell, 70 Pa. 253.

In Peter Adams Paper Co. v. Cassard, 206 Pa. 179, 55 Atl. 949, the court, in the absence of evidence to the contrary, indulged the presumption that the law of New York, where the contract in question was made, was the same as that of Pennsylvania, and rendered a married woman incapable of becoming surety for her husband's debt.

The presumption is that, under the law of New York, as under the law of Pennsylvania, a contract in case of usury is to be treated as void only for the excess of interest. Van Auker v. Dunning, 81 Pa. 464.

South Carolina.

In South Carolina the presumption in favor of the common law is indulged when the common law on the subject prevails in South Carolina. Roseman v. Southern R. Co. 66 S. C. 91, 44 S. E. 547 (Ga.).

And Columbian Bldg. & L. Asso. v. Rice, 68 S. C. 236, 47 S. E. 63, after holding that there was no presumption that the law of usury in Virginia is the same as in South Carolina, indulged the presumption that the common law prevailed in Virginia, and, therefore, that there was no legal limitation of the rate of interest in that state, notwithstanding that the common law in that respect had been changed in South Carolina.

South Dakota.

In Sandmeyer v. Dakota F. & M. Ins. Co. 2 S. D. 346, 50 N. W. 353, the court indulged the presumption that the law of Texas was the same as that of South Dakota upon the question whether an instrument which does not purport to be made by an insolvent debtor, nor to include all the property and debts of the assignor, is to be treated as a general assignment for creditors.

In the absence of evidence to the contrary, a court of South Dakota will presume that the law of Illinois is the same as its own as to the liability of married women on their contracts. Commercial Bank v. Jackson, 7 S. D. 135, 63 N. W. 548.

In the absence of any allegation or proof on the subject, it will be presumed that the laws of Pennsylvania are the same as the laws of South Dakota. Thomas v. Pendleton, 1 S. D. 150, 36 Am. St. Rep. 726, 46 N. W. 180. It was accordingly held in this case that a judgment rendered in Pennsylvania upon confession, under a warrant of attorney before the maturity of the note, is insufficient to sustain an attachment in the absence of evidence that the entry of the judgment before maturity was authorized by the law of Pennsylvania.

So, in Morris v. Hubbard, 10 S. D. 259, 72 N. W. 894 (Kan.), and Baird v. Vines (S. D.) 99 N. W. 89 (Mont.), the presumption was indulged that the law of the other state was the same as that of South Dakota, although the latter was statutory.

Upon the first appeal in Meuer v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. 5 S. D. 568, 25 L. R. A. 81, 49 Am. St. Rep. 898, 59 N. W. 945, the court applied the South Dakota statute, authorizing a common carrier to limit its liability for the ordinary negligence of its employees, to a contract made in Wisconsin, the law of the latter state not being proved. Upon a new trial two decisions of the supreme court of Wisconsin, denying the right of a common carrier so to limit its liability, were introduced in evidence; and, upon a second appeal (11 S. D. 94, 74 Am. St. Rep. 774, 75 N. W. 823), counsel for the carrier contended that the evidence was insufficient as proof of a law of Wisconsin upon the subject, because it was insufficient to overcome the presumption that the law of Wisconsin is the same as the law of South Dakota. The court said, in effect, however, that that contention was based upon the erroneous assumption that the court on the former appeal decided that it would presume that the statute law of Wisconsin was the same as the statute law of South Dakota; whereas, in fact, the court simply held on that appeal that it would presume that the law of Wisconsin was the same as the law of South Dakota, not that it had a statute similar to that of South Dakota. Again, the court said: "We are inclined to the opinion that it would be more technically accurate to say that the appellate court will not presume that the law of another state is different from the law of the state in which the contract is sought to be enforced. The party asserting or claiming that it is different assumes the burden of proving that such is the fact. But in no event will the court presume that the statute law of another state is the same as the statute law of this state. The contention of appellant that the plaintiff was required to show that Wisconsin had a different statute upon the subject is therefore not tenable." And, again: "There was no presumption that there was any statute in force in the state of Wisconsin like the statute in force in this state. While a court trying the case in this state, in the absence of proof that the law of Wisconsin was different from that of this state, would not presume it was different, or, as generally stated, would presume the law of Wisconsin was the same, yet it will not presume that the state of Wisconsin has any statute upon the subject." It will be observed that the distinction with respect to the form of the presumption simply bears upon the "burden of proof" in the sense of the weight of proof. In other words, the distinction is only important when evidence of the foreign law has been introduced, and the court or jury is to pass upon the sufficiency of that evidence.

Tennessee.

In Tennessee the courts indulge the presumption that the law of another state is the same as that of Tennessee, not only when the common law on the subject in question prevails in Tennessee (Lewis v. Woodfolk, 2 Baxt. 25 [La.]; Loud v. Hamilton [Tenn.] 45 L. R. A. 400, 51 S. W. 140 [Ala.]), but also when the law of Tennessee on the subject is statutory (Bagwell v. McTighe, 85 Tenn. 616, 4 S. W. 46 [Mo.]; Pennsylvania R. Co. v. Naive [Tenn.] 64 L. R. A. 443, 79 S. W. 124 [Pa.]).

There is, however, no presumption that the statutes of other states respecting penalties and forfeitures are similar to those of Tennessee. Hubble v. Morristown Land & Improv. Co. 95 Tenn. 585, 32 S. W. 965 (N. J.); Allen-West Commission Co. v. Carroll, 104 Tenn. 489, 58 S. W. 314 (Mo.; usury). See also infra, III. e.

Texas.

In Texas the courts sometimes formally indulge the presumption that the common law, or, at least, that the law merchant, prevails in another state when the subject is governed by that law in Texas. Locke v. Huling, 24 Tex. 311 (La.; law merchant); Green v. Rugely, 23 Tex. 539 (La.; law merchant).

But more frequently, even when the law of Texas is the same as the common law, the presumption takes the form of a presumption that the law of the other jurisdiction is the same as the law of Texas. Stevenson v. Pullman Palace-Car Co. (Tex. Civ. App.) 26 S. W. 112 (Mexico); Southern P. Co. v. Graham, 12 Tex. Civ. App. 565, 34 S. W. 135 (N. Mex.); Paul v. Chenault (Tex. Civ. App.) 44 S. W. 682 (Tenn.); Herndon v. Vick, 18 Tex. Civ. App. 583, 45 S. W. 852 (Me.); Southern P. R. Co. v. d'Arcals, 27 Tex. Civ. App. 57, 64 S. W. 813 (Cal.); National Bank of Commerce v. Kenney (Tex.) 83 S. W. 368 (Mo.).

And there are no cases in Texas which indulge the presumption that the common law prevails in another state when the law of Texas is statutory or written law.

Usually when the law of Texas on the subject is statutory, the court formally indulges the presumption that the law of the other state is the same as that of Texas. Pauska v. Daus, 31 Tex. 67 (Mexico); Houston & T. C. R. Co. v. Baker, 57 Tex. 422 (Ga.); James v. James, 81

Tex. 373, 16 S. W. 1087 (Ind. Terr.); Burgess v. Western U. Tele. Co. 92 Tex. 125, 71 Am. St. Rep. 833, 46 S. W. 794 (Va.); Missouri, K. & T. R. Co. v. Cooreham, 10 Tex. Civ. App. 186, 30 S. W. 1118 (Mo.); Silliman v. Thornton, 10 Tex. Civ. App. 303, 30 S. W. 700 (Miss.); Franks v. Hancock, 1 Posey Unrep. Cas. (Tex.) 554 (Mo.); Southern Ins. Co. v. Wolvorton Hardware Co. (Tex.) 19 S. W. 615 (Ind. Terr.); Blethen v. Bonner (Tex. Civ. App.) 52 S. W. 571 (Mass.); Thurmond v. Bank of Georgia (Tex. Civ. App.) 27 S. W. 317 (Ga.); Goddard v. Reagan, 8 Tex. Civ. App. 272, 28 S. W. 352 (Tenn.); Caledonia Ins. Co. v. Wenar (Tex. Civ. App.) 34 S. W. 385 (N. Y.); Ft. Dearborn Nat. Bank v. Berrott, 23 Tex. Civ. App. 662, 57 S. W. 340; Clardy v. Wilson, 24 Tex. Civ. App. 196, 58 S. W. 52 (Tenn.); Texarkana & Ft. S. R. Co. v. Gray (Tex. Civ. App.) 65 S. W. 85 (Ark.); Boyd v. Boyd (Tex. Civ. App.) 78 S. W. 39 (Ark.); Hilburn v. Harris, 2 Tex. Civ. App. 395, 21 S. W. 572 (Tenn.).

In Bradshaw v. Mayfield, 18 Tex. 21 (Tenn.), the court said that in some of the states it is presumed that the common law prevails in certain other states, and that on a common-law question such law should be assumed to be the same as that of the forum; but that in Texas the fact that the common law prevails in another state must be conceded or established by proof,—especially where marital rights are in question. The court said, in this connection: "Where one state presumes the common law is in force in another on the subject of marital rights, it presumes further that the law is the same as in the state where the court tries the cause. But the common law is not, and never has been, in force in this state on the subject of marital rights. If the common law were admitted to be in force in Tennessee, we could not presume it to be the same there as here; for here on that subject it never was of force."

In Tempel v. Dodge, 89 Tex. 71, 32 S. W. 514, 33 S. W. 222 (Conn.), the court expressly says that, in the absence of proof, it will be presumed that the law of another state is the same as the law of Texas, and not that the common law prevails in the other state.

A court of Texas will not take judicial notice of the laws of another state with respect to the appointment of guardians, and, in the absence of evidence as to the laws of that state, must presume that they are the same as the laws of Texas. Gill v. Everman, 94 Tex. 209, 59 S. W. 531 (Ky.).

It will be presumed, in the absence of proof to the contrary, that the law of Mexico is the same as that of Texas with respect to the liability of an employer for negligence resulting in injuries to an employee, the civil law having originally prevailed in both jurisdictions. Mexican C. R. Co. v. Marshall, 34 C. C. A. 138, 91 Fed. 938; Mexican C. R. Co. v. Glover, 46 C. C. A. 334, 107 Fed. 356.

Utah.

Rudy v. Rio Grande Western R. Co. 8 Utah, 165, 30 Pac. 366, held that it could not be presumed that the Utah statute, or one similar to it, had been adopted in Colorado. The statute in this case provided that a passenger refusing to prepay his fare may be ejected at any stopping place the conductor of the company may elect. The decision in this case was, however, expressly overruled by American Oak Leather Co. v. Union Bank, 9 Utah, 87, 33 Pac. 246 67 L. R. A.

(Mich.), where the court adopted the rule that, in the absence of proof to the contrary, the laws of another state are presumed to be the same as the laws of the forum on the same subject. The presumption was accordingly indulged in this case that there was a statute in Michigan like the Utah statute prescribing the manner of the execution of chattel mortgages. The court quotes the statement in Sutherland on Statutory Construction, § 184, to the effect that the law of another state in certain cases is applied by comity when proved, and, if not proved, there is no comity invoked, and the lex fort governs. It said that this was simply another statement of the rule above stated.

So, in Dignan v. Nelson, 26 Utah, 186, 72 Pac. 936, the presumption was indulged that the law of the other state was the same as that of Utah, although the latter was statutory.

Vermont.

In this state the presumption is indulged in favor of the common law, even when the law of Vermont on the subject is statutory. State v. Shattuck, 99 Vt. 403, 40 L. R. A. 428, 60 Am. St. Rep. 936, 38 Atl. 81 (N. H.).

In Woodrow v. O'Conner, 28 Vt. 776, the court said that in the absence of evidence to the contrary, it will be presumed that there is no distinction between the law of Vermont and the law of Canada. The law of Vermont, however, was nonstatutory.

The presumption is that upon a common-law question, the common law of a sister state is the same as our own, and the courts cannot take judicial notice of any law of a sister state at variance with our own. Ward v. Morrison, 25 Vt. 593 (N. Y.).

In Piedmont & A. Life Ins. Co. v. Ray, 75 Va. 821, the court said that, in the absence of proof of a difference between the law of Texas and that of Virginia, as to the effect of a writ of error as a supersedeas, it will be presumed that they are the same.

Washington.

In Yeaton v. Eagle Oil & Ref. Co. 4 Wash. 183, 29 Pac. 1051 (Cal.), it was said that the courts of one state will presume that the common law of a sister state is the same as its own, but that that is the extent to which such presumption can extend; and that as to purely statutory regulations unknown to the common law no such presumption can arise; and that it will not be presumed that the statute law of another state, purely as such, is the same as our own. Upon a rehearing, however, the court said that a decision on that point was unnecessary, and that the question whether or not a statute law of a sister state will be presumed to be the same as the statute law of Washington would be considered as an open question.

In Dormitzer v. German Sav. & L. Soc. 23 Wash. 132, 62 Pac. 862 (Kan.), the court said that, in the absence of proof of the law of another state in relation to the property rights of husband and wife as to property acquired during the marriage, it has been held to be the same as that of the state where the proceeds of such property has been reinvested.

In the absence of proof to the contrary, the law of another state will be presumed to be the same as that of Washington; and, since there is no law in the latter state authorizing the sale of stock of stockholders of a foreign corporation doing business in the state upon execution on a judgment in the state against such stockholders, the presumption is that there is no law on the subject in the foreign country. Daniel v. Gold Hill Min. Co. 28 Wash. 411, 68 N. W. 884. It was accordingly held in this case that the sale under execution in the foreign country was invalid.

But where a special act of incorporation enacted in another state is proved by a duly authenticated copy, it will not be presumed that the Constitution of the other state contains a provision similar to that of Washington, which prohibits the legislature from creating corporations by special acts. Fidelity Ins. Trust & S. D. Co. v. Nelson, 30 Wash. 340, 70 Pac. 961.

West Virginia.

It is expressly provided by statute in this state that the courts shall take judicial notice of the laws of another state. See supra, II. a, 2. The question as to the presumption to be indulged with respect to the law of another state, therefore, does not arise in this state.

Wisconsin.

In Wisconsin the courts indulge the presumption that the law of another state is the same as the law of the forum, not only when the common law on the subject prevails in Wisconsin (Slaughter v. Bernards, 88 Wis. 111, 59 N. W. 576 [Md.]), but also when the law of Wisconsin on the subject is statutory (Walsh v. Dart, 12 Wis. 635 [N. Y.]; Second Nat. Bank v. Smith, 118 Wis. 18, 94 N. W. 664 [Ind.]).

In MacCarthy v. Whitcomb, 110 Wis. 113, 85 N. W. 707, an action brought in Wisconsin for personal injuries sustained by a railroad employee in Illinois, the court indulged the presumption that the law of Illinois was similar to that of the statute of Wisconsin abolishing the fellow-servant rule in certain cases of injury to railroad employees. The court pointed out that the action was not based upon the statute of another state, but upon a cause of action cognizable at common law.

In Schoenberg v. Adler, 105 Wis. 645, 81 N. W. 1055, however, the court said that, with reference to certain classes of statutes, the presumption may be indulged that the statute of another state is the same as that of the forum, but that such presumption is not to be indulged as to penal statutes; and it was held that the presumption was not to be indulged with reference to a statute of Wisconsin which declares that all contracts resting, in whole or in part, upon gambling transactions shall be void. See also infra, III. e.

And a similar exception is made in Hull v. Augustine, 23 Wis. 383, with reference to usury statutes. See infra, III. e.

Canada.

In Black v. Moore, 36 Can. L. J. 724, the court indulged the presumption that the statute of Elizabeth with reference to fraudulent transfers, which was in force at the forum, was also in force in Massachusetts.

In Canadian F. Ins. Co. v. Robinson, 31 Can. S. C. 488, the court said that the law governing the contract must be presumed to be that of the lex fori, unless the lex loci was proved to be different; and accordingly applied a statutory law of the forum to the point in question.

Effect of presumption in favor of validity of contract or judicial record.

The presumption in favor of the common law, or the presumption to the effect that the law of the other state is the same as the law of the forum, as the case may be, sometimes encounters an opposing presumption in favor of the validity of a contract; and, while it is impossible to trace the distinction suggested through the cases, the choice between the first two presumptions has in some cases been influenced by the fact that one of them would coincide with, and the other would antagonize, the presumption in favor of the validity of the contract. Thus, while the courts of Iowa generally indulge the presumption that the law of the other state is the same as the law of Iowa, whether the latter be statutory or common law, it was held in Fred Miller Brewing Co. v. De France, 90 Iowa, 395, 57 N. W. 959, that it could not be presumed that the law of Wisconsin, like the law of Iowa, forbids the sale of intoxicating liquors, and prevents recovery of the purchase price thereof.

So in Worthington v. Hanna, 23 Mich. 530, the court said that there was no principle which would justify it in holding anything void under the foreign law which is lawful at the forum until the variance is shown; and that to that extent a conformity between the laws of the forum and the laws of the other state may be presumed. The court accordingly declined to indulge the presumption that the common-law rule, giving a husband all his wife's personal property, prevailed in New York, since the indulgence of such presumption would have operated to invalidate a mortgage given by the husband to the wife. See also Millard v. Truax, 73 Mich. 381, 41 N. W. 328, supra, III. c.

A court of Michigan cannot presume that there is anything in the law of Indiana incapacitating a married woman to make notes which she might make according to the law of Michigan. Wheeler v. Constantine, 39 Mich. 62, 33 Am. Rep. 355.

Upon the same ground, courts have refused to indulge the presumption that there was a statute of frauds in another state where a contract was made like that at the forum, where the result of indulging such presumption would have been to defeat a contract. Miller v. Wilson, 146 Ill. 523, 37 Am. St. Rep. 186, 34 N. E. 1111; Raphael v. Hartman, 87 Ill. App. 634; Kling v. Fries, 83 Mich. 275; Roethke v. Philip Best Brewing Co. 83 Mich. 340; White v. Knapp, 47 Barb. 549; Wilcox Silver Plate Co. v. Green, 9 Hun. 347, Affirmed in 72 N. Y. 17.

In Shannon v. Wolf, 173 Ill. 253, 50 N. E. 682, however, the court said that it could not be presumed that an instrument which was fraudulent and void by the law of Illinois is valid and enforceable by the law of Iowa. The law of Illinois was the common-law rule, which renders a chattel mortgage void if possession be retained by the mortgagee after maturity.

The following cases refer the decisions adverse to the plea of usury to the presumption in favor of the validity of the contract: Martin v. Martin, 1 Smedes & M. 176; Cutler v. Wright, 22 N. Y. 472; Pomeroy v. Ainsworth, 22 Barb. 118; City Sav. Bank v. Bidwell, 29 Barb. 325; Rooney v. Southern Bldg. & L. Asso. 119 Ga. 941, 47 S. E. 345.

Other decisions upon this subject, however, are referred to an exception, in the case of statutes creating a penalty or forfeiture, to the general rule that the law of another state is presumed to be the same as the law of the forum. See infra, III. e.

A court of Kentucky cannot take judicial notice of a statute of Louisiana, where the contract in suit was made and was to be performed, whereby attorneys are prohibited from purchasing litigious rights; and, if the defendant intends to invoke the protection of such statute, he must allege and prove it. Labatt v. Smith, 4 Ky. L. Rep. 422.

Where the laws of another state or country are unknown, it cannot be presumed that they are restrictive or prohibitory of the exercise of the natural right of a man to give that which is his own in any manner in which he can make his intention intelligible. Crozier v. Bryant, 4 Bibb, 174. The question in this case was as to the validity of a parol gift of property, made in New Jersey. It does not appear whether or not a parol gift would be valid by the law of Kentucky.

If the defendant in an action in England upon a note made in Scotland seeks to avail himself of a defense which would not be available by the law of England, he must show that the law of Scotland differs in that respect from the law of England. Brown v. Gracey, Dowl. & R. N. P. 41.

In Male v. Roberts, 3 Esp. 163, Lord Eldon said that he was not warranted in saying that a contract of an infant is void by the law of Scotland because it is void by the law of England; that the law of the country where the contract arose must govern the contract, and what that law is should be given in evidence as a fact. Thompson v. Ketcham, 8 Johns. 189, 5 Am. Dec. 332, is to the same effect as the last case.

In Thatcher v. Morris, 11 N. Y. 437, however, it was said generally that, where a party seeks to enforce in the courts of New York a contract which is forbidden and declared void by its laws, he must aver and prove where it was made, and that by the laws of that place it was authorized and valid. This was an action to recover prize money drawn on lottery tickets. The complaint did not state where the tickets were sold, or purchased by the plaintiff, and, therefore, did not negative their purchase in New York.

Where a title is claimed to be valid under the laws of another state, where it was acquired, those laws must be produced in evidence, or proved; otherwise, the validity of the title will be made to depend upon our own laws. Atkinson v. Atkinson, 15 La. Ann. 491.

In Harvey v. Merrill, 150 Mass. 1, 5 L. R. A. 200, 15 Am. St. Rep. 159, 22 N. E. 49, a contract made in Illinois for the purchase and sale of commodities for future delivery was held illegal and void in accordance with the common law of Massachusetts, there being no evidence of the law of Illinois on the subject, except proof of one statutory provision of that state, which did not apply to the particular contract in question.

But see infra, III. e.

Where property is seized the burden rests upon him who makes the seizure to show proper legal process; and the courts will presume that a wanton seizure of property in another state, unauthorized by the order of any tribunal, was contrary to the laws of that state. Hall v. Younts, 87 N. C. 285.

In some cases the presumption in favor of the validity and regularity of a judgment rendered by a court of general jurisdiction in another state has been allowed to prevail over the presumption in favor of the common law, or the presumption that the law of the other state is the same as the law of the forum. Dodge v. 67 L. R. A.

Coffin, 15 Kan. 277 (see, especially, the dissenting opinion, which, upon this point, concurred with the majority), Kansas P. R. Co. v. Cutter, 16 Kan. 568; Council Bluffs Sav. Bank v. Griswold, 50 Neb. 753, 70 N. W. 376. But see, contra, Dainese v. Hale, 91 U. S. 13, 23 L. ed. 190, holding that defendant in an action to recover the value of goods, who defends upon the ground that he acted by virtue of jurisdiction conferred by the law of Turkey upon the Counsel General of Egypt, must prove the law of Turkey in that respect; Re Capper, 85 Iowa, 82, 52 N. W. 6, applying the usual presumption that the law of another state is the same as the law of Iowa, notwithstanding that it negated the jurisdiction of a court of Indiana to grant probate of a will; Kelley v. Kelley, 161 Mass. 111, 25 L. R. A. 806, 42 Am. St. Rep. 389, 36 N. E. 837, applying the usual presumption in favor of the common law, notwithstanding that it negated the jurisdiction of a court of chancery of New York to annul a marriage, and notwithstanding that such jurisdiction had been conferred by statute upon the courts of Massachusetts; Angle v. Manchester, 3 Herdman (Neb.) 252, 91 N. W. 501, holding that a party who relies upon a judgment procured in another state in a manner unknown to the laws and rules of proof of the courts of Nebraska must allege and prove the laws of the other state, which authorizes and validates the judgment; and Rape v. Heaton, 9 Wis. 328, 76 Am. Dec. 269, indulging the presumption that the law of another state in which a judgment was rendered, was the same as the law of Wisconsin with reference to service of process, although such presumption operated to defeat an action upon the judgment. And see also Thomas v. Pendleton, 1 S. D. 150, 36 Am. St. Rep. 726, 46 N. W. 180 supra, III. c.

An order granted in North Carolina, ex parte and without notice to wards, authorizing a sale of personal property by a guardian, does not, in the absence of proof of the law of North Carolina authorizing such order, protect the guardian from personal liability for the value of the property in an action in South Carolina. Moore v. Hood, 9 Rich. Eq. 311, 70 Am. Dec. 210.

Whether a warrant of attorney is sufficient, under the laws of another state, to authorize the appearance entered thereunder, is a question to be determined from the evidence as to the laws of that state. Snyder v. Critchfield, 44 Neb. 66, 62 N. W. 806.

The question whether a court of one state will take judicial notice of the laws of another state, in which a judgment was rendered, has already been discussed. See supra, II. a, 2.

d. Application of lex fori without indulging any presumption.

As shown in III. b, supra, there is considerable difference of opinion, even among the courts which in general indulge the presumption in favor of the common law, with respect to the states as to which the presumption may be indulged. Thus, as already seen, the courts of Missouri, which in case of another state formed from territory previously subject to the law of England, consistently indulge that presumption, whether the law of Missouri on the point in question is statutory or common law, refuse to indulge it with respect to some states, e. g., Iowa and Kansas, that are generally regarded as within its scope. None of the courts, however, apply the presumption universally with respect to all foreign jurisdictions, nor even with respect to all states of the Union; and therefore cases frequently arise, even before courts which are in general thoroughly committed to the presumption in favor of the common law, in which that presumption cannot be indulged. In such cases, assuming that the particular question involved is not of the exceptional kind, discussed in III. e, infra, to which the courts will refuse to apply any substantive law, these courts, generally indulge the presumption that the law of the other jurisdiction is the same as the law of the forum, whether the law of the forum be statutory or common law. In other words, they apply, by way of exception in cases in which the usual presumption in favor of the common law cannot be indulged, the same presumption which other courts apply uniformly to the exclusion of the presumption in favor of the common law. The cases of this class are shown in III. c, supra, under the particular state heading to which they belong.

It will be observed that in its practical operation the presumption that the law of another jurisdiction is the same as that of the forum, is equivalent to the doctrine which, in the absence of proof of the proper foreign law, applies the law of the forum as the only possible applicable law, without indulging any presumption as to the law of the other jurisdiction. There is a decided tendency to substitute this doctrine for the presumption that the law of the other jurisdiction is the same as the law of the forum, both upon the part of the courts that have hitherto adopted the latter presumption as the general rule, and upon the part of the courts that have hitherto adopted that presumption by way of exception in cases in which the presumption in favor of the common law could not be indulged because the other state was not a common-law state.

It will be observed by referring to III. c, supra, that the courts of Alabama ordinarily indulge the presumption in favor of the common law, whether the law of Alabama on the subject is common law or statutory law. In Peet v. Hatcher, 112 Ala. 514, 57 Am. St. Rep. 45, 21 So. 711, however, the court, after declining to indulge such presumption with respect to Louisiana because that state did not have a common origin with Alabama, and was not populated by people coming from states having such common origin, said: "It may be well said that, as we judicially know no other law of the case than our own, the parties litigant, by failing to produce the lex loci contractus [Louisiana], impliedly agree that it is the same as the lex fori, be the latter common law or statute. Thus, it may be regarded as settled in this state that, when a contract made in a state or country wherein we cannot presume the existence of the common law is sought to be enforced in the courts of this state, and the lex loci is not produced, we will apply to it our own law." There are other parts of opinion that apparently refer the decision to the presumption that the law of Louisiana is the same as the law of the forum; but it is apparent from the foregoing quotation that the presumption is not a necessary part of the doctrine applied in this case.

Judge Field in Norris v. Harris, 15 Cal. 226, said that, since the court could not take judicial notice of the laws of Texas, and could not 67 L. R. A.

indulge the usual presumption in favor of the common law, it must, as a matter of necessity, look to its own laws as furnishing the rule of decision upon which it may act.

So, in Monroe v. Douglass, 5 N. Y. 447, the courts said that it is a well-settled rule, founded on reason and authority, that the lex fori, or, in other words, the laws of the country to whose courts a party applies for redress, furnish in all cases, prima facie, the rule of decision; and, if either party wants the benefit of a different rule or law, as, for instance, the lex domicilii, lex loci contractus, or lex loci rei sitæ, he must aver and prove it.

The courts of New York cannot take notice of the laws of Russia unless they are proved; and, in the absence of proof, the law of New York must of necessity furnish the rule for the guidance of its courts. Savage v. O'Neil, 44 N. Y. 298.

In the absence of proof of the law of marriage in France, it will not be presumed that it is different from that of New York, which recognizes the validity of a marriage per verba de presenti. Hynes v. McDermott, 82 N. Y. 41, 37 Am. Rep. 538.

In Bath Gaslight Co. v. Claffy, 151 N. Y. 24, 36 L. R. A. 664, 45 N. E. 390, which was an action in New York for rent upon a lease made and performable in Maine between Maine corporations, the court said that, as the law of Maine on the subject did not appear in the record, it was the duty of the court to determine the case according to the law of New York as established, or, in the absence of controlling authority, as justice, having regard to all interests, may seem to the court to require.

Prima facie, the law of a neighboring state is like our own, and when it is not proved to be otherwise, our courts act on their own laws. Robinson v. Dauchy, 3 Barb. 20. The law of New York on this subject was evidently the common law.

In Huth v. New York Mut. Ins. Co. 8 Bosw. 538, it was said that, if the contract in question could be regarded as a Chinese contract, the court, since it was without information as to the law which would govern it in China, must interpret and decide upon it in accordance with the law of New York.

In Scottish Commercial Ins. Co. v. Plummer, 70 Me. 540, the court said that a stipulation in a bond that it should be controlled by the law of New York was of no practical value, since no points of difference are shown between the law of Maine and the law of New York, and, therefore, the court, in construing the bond, must proceed according to the law of Maine.

The lex fori is to be applied in determining the right of a married woman to property and her right to sue therefor, in the absence of proof of the foreign law which should properly govern the case. Bollinger v. Gallagher, 144 Pa. 205, 22 Atl. 815.

In Sibley v. Young, 26 S. C. 415, 2 S. E. 814, the court, in the absence of proof of the laws of Georgia where the contract was made, applied the common-law rule that a note under seal is not negotiable.

It is incumbent upon a party who would avail himself of the law of another state to show what that law is, and, until that is done, the court will decide the question according to the law of the forum. Gist v. Western U. Teleg. Co. 45 S. C. 344, 55 Am. St. Rep. 763, 23 S. E.

143. The question in this case was as to the validity of a contract for the sale of "futures," made and to be performed in New York. Such contracts are expressly forbidden by the South Carolina statute; and it was held that, in the absence of proof of the law of New York on the subject, the question must be determined by the law of South Carolina.

As shown in III. c. supra, the courts of Texas decline to indulge the presumption in favor of the common law with respect to any of the other states; and generally adopt the presumption that the law of the other state is the same as the law of Texas, whether the latter is statutory or unwritten law.

Blethen v. Bonner, 93 Tex. 141, 53 S. W. 1016, however, clearly adopts the doctrine that, in the absence of evidence of the law of another state, the courts of Texas must apply the law of Texas (lex fori), as distinguished from the doctrine based upon the presumption that the law of the other state is the same as the law of the forum. The court said: "If one seeks in our courts to support a claim to property different from that secured by the laws of Texas, it is reasonable that he should be required to inform the court what the law is that he seeks to have enforced in this jurisdiction. It is true that in many of the states,—perhaps in the greater number,—in the absence of evidence, the courts will presume the common law to be in force in a sister state; but the rule stated above is established in this state by an unbroken line of decisions, and we believe it furnishes a safer guide than the indulgence in presumption, for we know that frequent, radical changes have been made by the legislatures of most of the American states in the rules of the common law, especially those which govern the rights of married women." In this case the court applied the community laws of Texas to the question as to the respective rights of husband and wife in property acquired while they were domiciled in Massachusetts, the law of the latter state not being proved.

In Crosby v. Huston, 1 Tex. 203, the court said that where the foreign law, or the law of another state, is not established by proof, the rights of the parties must be determined by the laws of the forum, for the plain reason that they present the only known rule of decision.

In the absence of allegation of the facts of a foreign law governing a contract, and what that law is, the court cannot judicially know of them, and the lex fori governs the case from necessity, for no other law can be presumed. Armendlaz v. De La Serna, 40 Tex. 291.

In Davison v. Gibson, 4 C. C. A. 543, 12 U. S. App. 362, 56 Fed. 443, an action brought in the United States courts in the Indian territory, involving the respective property rights of a husband and wife who were citizens of the Creek Indian nation, the court, having held that it could not be presumed that the common law prevailed in that nation, said that the court, having no means of ascertaining what the law or custom of the Creek nation was on the question, should have applied the law of the forum, which was embodied in Mansfield's Digest, put in force in the Indian territory by the act of Congress of May 2, 1891. It was so held, notwithstanding that the marriage took place before the act of Congress above referred to. The court said it would undoubtedly be more rational to presume that the law or custom of the nation on this subject was in harmony with the statute adopted by Congress, and that the act of Congress was merely declaratory of the previously existing law, than to presume that the English law, utterly at variance with the habits and known customs of Indians, was in force there. By the statute which was applied in this case, all property acquired by the wife, either before or after marriage, is her separate estate and property, and descends and is distributed to her children in equal parts.

See also American Oak Leather Co. v. Union Bank, 9 Utah, 87, 33 Pac. 246, supra, III. c.

When reliance is placed by any party upon a difference between the law of England and the law of a foreign state with reference to a matter of commercial law, e. g., the right to a lien upon a vessel for damage to cargo, he is bound, by witnesses or books of authority, to show that there is such a difference; otherwise the law of England will be applied. Smith v. Gould, 4 Moore, P. C. C. 21.

In Lloyd v. Guilbert, L. R. 1 Q. B. 115, 129, Mr. Justice Willes said that a party who relies upon a right or an exemption by foreign law is bound to bring such law properly before the court, and to establish it in proof. Otherwise, the court, not being entitled to notice such law without judicial proof, must proceed according to the law of England.

The following cases also illustrate the tendency upon the part of the courts to adopt this doctrine, without indulging any presumption as to the law of the other jurisdiction. Garner v. Wright, 52 Ark. 381, 6 L. R. A. 715, 12 S. W. 785 (Ind. Terr.); Brown v. Wright, 58 Ark. 20, 21 L. R. A. 467, 22 S. W. 1022 (Tex.); Champlon v. Wilson, 64 Ga. 184; Chumaseo v. Gilbert, 24 Ill. 293; Shannon v. Wolf, 173 Ill. 253, 50 N. E. 682 (Iowa); Bean v. Briggs, 4 Iowa, 464 (Ill.); Roots v. Merriwether, 8 Bush, 401 (Ill.); Peabody v. Maguire, 79 Me. 572, 12 Atl. 630 (Canada); Dakin v. Pomeroy, 9 Gill, 1; Jones v. Palmer, 1 Dougl. (Mich.) 379 (N. Y.); Flato v. Mulhall, 72 Mo. 522 (Tex.); White v. Chaney, 20 Mo. App. 389 (Ky.); Clark v. Barnes, 58 Mo. App. 667 (Ark.); Latham v. de Loisel, 3 App. Div. 525, 38 N. Y. Supp. 270.

Thus far the doctrine seems to have been applied only as a substitute for the presumption that the law of the other jurisdiction is the same as the law of the forum, and only when that presumption would otherwise have prevailed over the presumption in favor of the common law, either because the courts of the forum do not indulge the latter presumption with respect to any of the states, or because they do not indulge it with respect to the particular state in question. It does not seem improbable, however, that this doctrine will eventually displace the presumption in favor of the common law, even with respect to states of common-law origin as to which that presumption has been hitherto indulged by many of the courts. It will be observed that this doctrine is in practical harmony with all those cases which indulge the presumption that the law of the other jurisdiction is the same as the law of the forum even when the latter is statutory and opposed to the common law. It is not inharmonious with the decisions in those cases in which the common law on the subject prevailed at the forum, whether the presumption indulged was in favor of the common law or to the effect that the law of the other jurisdiction was the same as the law of the forum, though, on the other hand, cases of this class are not inharmonious with the presumption in favor of the common law. The only cases that are squarely opposed to the doctrine now under consideration are those that indulge the presumption in favor of the common law when the law of the forum upon the particular subject in question is statutory, and opposed to the common law.

As shown in III. c, supra, cases of the latter class are numerous, and, excluding the cases that indulge the presumption that the law of the other state is the same as the law of the forum because the other state is not a common-law state, probably outnumber the cases that indulge the presumption in favor of the similarity of laws and those that apply the lex fori without indulging any presumption.

This doctrine, which applies the lex fori without indulging any presumption as to the foreign law, may be applied without reference to the character or history of the jurisprudence of the other state or country whose law, if proved, would concededly govern, and—with the exception of the class of questions considered in the next subdivision, which are exceptions to any general rule that may be formulated on the subject—may be applied without reference to the nature of the question involved. Upon the other hand, the presumption in favor of the common law is, at best, of limited scope relatively to the other jurisdictions, if not with respect to the nature of the questions, as to which it may be indulged; and its limits in this respect are shifting and uncertain. Moreover, this presumption, even when confined, as in Missouri, to states previously subject to the law of England, is often a very violent one, and contrary to the actual, if not the judicial, knowledge of the courts by which it is indulged. For example, the presumption indulged by the courts of Missouri, that the common law prevails in New York with respect to the property rights of husband and wife, is certainly a very violent one. In this particular instance it would be more in accordance with the actual facts to indulge the presumption that the law of New York is the same as the statutory law of Missouri on the subject. The latter presumption, however, is also a violent one in many instances; and for that reason many of the courts prefer the presumption in favor of the common law, even when the law of the forum is statutory. If the doctrine under discussion be adopted, no presumption is necessary. According to this doctrine, if the law of the foreign jurisdiction is not proved, the law of the forum is applied, simply because it is the only law before the court bearing upon the subject. The only alternative—assuming that judicial notice cannot be taken of the foreign law, and that no presumption can properly be indulged with respect to the same—is to deny all relief to the parties whose rights would have been determined by the foreign law if that had been proved; and this course, as shown in III. e, infra, is taken in exceptional cases and with respect to some classes of questions. As a general rule, however, the courts, while not undertaking to guarantee to the parties the same relief to which they would be entitled under the proper foreign law, if proved in the case, prefer to grant some relief rather than turn the parties out of court. As already shown, the only relief which it can grant is that to 67 L. R. A.

which the parties would be entitled under the rules of the common law, or under the law of the forum. The effect of the doctrine now under discussion is to grant the same relief to which the parties would be entitled by the law of the forum, whether that law is the common law, or a statutory law opposed to the common law; and this, too, without indulging any presumption whatever as to the foreign law, or making any distinction as between foreign jurisdictions; in other words, it furnishes a general and almost universal rule, which is only subject to certain exceptions, discussed in the next subdivision, based upon the distinctive or peculiar nature of the local law of the forum.

This doctrine has been discussed independently of the practically equivalent doctrine, which rests upon the presumption that the law of the other jurisdiction is the same as that of the forum whether the latter be common law or statutory, in order to bring out the fact that a court, which regards as insuperable the objections to the presumption that the law of another jurisdiction is the same as the law of the forum when the latter is statutory and opposed to the common-law rule, is not necessarily driven to the alternative of indulging the equally objectionable presumption that the common law prevails in the other jurisdiction; or of refusing to apply any substantive law at all; but may, without indulging any presumption whatever as to the law of the foreign jurisdiction, apply the substantive rule of law of the forum that fits the case, upon the ground that, by failing to prove the proper foreign law, the parties tacitly accept the law of the forum, as the arbiter of their rights and obligations.

e. Refusal to apply any substantive law.

When a right or defense claimed by a party properly depends upon the law of another jurisdiction which is not proved, the court may, conceivably, decline to apply any substantive law thereto, and dispose of the point by merely applying the rule of practice at the forum, to the effect that the party having the affirmative must fail unless he establishes the facts upon which his right or defense depends; in other words, if the right or defense of a party depends upon a foreign law,—the existence and provisions of which are questions of fact,—he must prove that law or be denied all relief in the premises. Some of the cases use language broad enough to indicate that this is the general rule. Thus, in Gunderson v. Gunderson, 25 Wash. 459, 65 Pac. 791, the court said that it is a general rule that, if one relies upon the laws of a foreign state or country, he must allege in the pleading and prove as facts what those laws are. It is apparent, however, that the court did not mean that, if the party fails to make such proof, he must necessarily fail in the action, but merely that his rights in such case will be determined by the law of the forum, or at least by the common law, since it held that, in the absence of proof of the law of Oregon governing property relations of husband and wife, it would be presumed that the law was the same as the statute of Washington on the subject.

Leach v. Pillsbury, 15 N. H. 137, was a proceeding by a creditor of the father of a person who died intestate in Louisiana, to attach funds of the estate in the hands of a trustee upon the ground that the father of the decedent succeeded thereto. The court held that it could not be presumed, in the absence of evidence to that effect, that the laws of Louisiana regulating the descent of intestate estates are like the laws of New Hampshire, by which the father inherits the estate, if the deceased leaves no descendants. The conclusion was that, as the court could make no such presumption, there was no ground upon which the trustee could be charged. But an examination as a whole of the cases which have declined to apply any substantive law to a claimed right or defense discloses that this doctrine applies only in exceptional cases, and that as a rule when the proper law is not proved, the courts adopt one of the three courses already discussed, namely: (1) Indulge the presumption that the common law on the point in question prevails in the other jurisdiction; (2) Indulge the presumption that the law of the other jurisdiction is the same as the law of the forum; (3) apply the law of the forum—4. e., the substantive law of the forum upon the point in question—as the only law before the court. For example, when an action is brought upon an ordinary commercial contract governed by the law of another jurisdiction, the court will not ordinarily deny the plaintiff all relief, if he fails to prove the foreign law applicable to the case; but proceeding upon one or the other of the theories already discussed, will either give him such relief as he would be entitled to by the common law, or such relief as he would be entitled to by the law of the forum.

So, in case of an action for tort which would create a cause of action at common law, it is not incumbent upon the plaintiff to prove, in the first instance, that the lex loci delicti creates such a cause of action; if it does not, that is a matter of defense. Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co. v. Dickey, 1 Kan. App. 770, 41 Pac. 1070; Mexican C. R. Co. v. Mitten, 13 Tex. Civ. App. 653, 36 S. W. 282; Mackey v. Mexican C. R. Co. 78 N. Y. Supp. 966; Wooden v. Western N. Y. & P. R. Co. 126 N. Y. 10, 13 L. R. A. 458, 22 Am. St. Rep. 803, 26 N. E. 1050. See also, MacCarthy v. Whitcomb, 110 Wis. 113, 85 N. W. 707, infra.

When, however, the plaintiff's cause of action is not one which is recognized at common law, but is one which, if it exist at all, is created by statute, it is incumbent upon the plaintiff, in the first instance, to prove that there is such a statute in the foreign jurisdiction, even though there be such a statute at the forum; and this seems to be true whether the courts of the forum, in general indulge the presumption in favor of the common law or the presumption that the law of another state is the same as the law of the forum, be the latter statutory or common law. Cases of the class under consideration are, therefore, an exception to the rule last referred to.

No presumption will be indulged in an action for negligent homicide occurring in another state, that there is a statute in that state similar to the statute of the forum creating a cause of action for death. Selma, R. & D. R. Co. v. Lacy, 43 Ga. 461 (Ala.); Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Williams, 113 Ala. 402, 21 So. 938; State use of Allen v. Pittsburgh, & C. R. Co. 45 Md. 41; Myers v. Chicago, St. P. M. & O. R. Co. 69 Minn. 476, 65 Am. St. Rep. 579, 72 N. W. 694; Leonard v. Columbia Steam Nav. Co. 84 N. Y. 48, 38 Am. Rep. 481; McDonald v. Mallory, 77 N. Y. 546, 83 Am. Rep. 664; Wooden v. Western N. Y. & P. R. Co. 126 N. Y. 10, 13 L. R. A. 67 L. R. A.

458, 22 Am. St. Rep. 803, 26 N. E. 1050. It will be observed by referring to III. c. supra, that the respective states in which the cases last cited were decided adhere, in general, to the presumption in favor of the common law, even when the common law on the subject has been displaced by statute at the forum. These decisions, therefore, might properly be referred to that general presumption, since there was no action at common law for a negligent homicide. It is apparent, however, from the language used in these cases, that, even if the courts had been committed to the general presumption that the law of another state is the same as that of the forum, they would have made an exception in case of a statute of the forum creating causes of action which did not exist at common law; and it will be observed that in Wisconsin, where the presumption that the law of another state is the same as that of Wisconsin is generally indulged, whether the latter be common law or statutory, the court, in MacCarthy v. Whitcomb, 110 Wis. 113, 85 N. W. 707, while indulging the presumption that the law of Illinois was similar to the statute of Wisconsin abolishing the fellow-servant rule in certain cases, distinguishes such a statute from one which creates a cause of action for death, and clearly implies that no presumption would be indulged with respect to a statute of the latter kind.

The doctrine which operates to deny all relief to a party whose rights properly depend upon a foreign law, unless he proves that law, is also sometimes applied to affirmative defenses. Thus, even those courts which generally indulge the presumption that the law of the other state is the same as the law of the forum, even when the latter is statutory, refuse to indulge such presumption with respect to a statute which, like a usury statute, creates a penalty or forfeiture. Hubble v. Morristown Land & Improv. Co. 95 Tenn. 585, 32 S. W. 965; Bird v. Olmstead (Tenn. Ch. App.) 53 S. W. 978; Allen-West Commission Co. v. Carroll, 104 Tenn. 489, 58 S. W. 314; Hull v. Augustine, 23 Wis. 383. See also Phelps v. American Sav. & L. Asso. 121 Mich. 343, 80 N. W. 120; Walte v. Bartlett, 53 Mo. App. 378; Van Auken v. Dunning, 81 Pa. 464,—supra, III. c.

In Mutual Home & Sav. Asso. v. Worz, 67 Kan. 506, 73 Pac. 116, however, the court upheld the plea of usury to a building and loan association contract, even upon the assumption that it was a Missouri contract, upon the ground that, in the absence of proof to the contrary, the statute of Missouri relating to usury would be presumed to be similar to the statute of Kansas. It appears, however, that the court was of the opinion that the contract was a Kansas contract, and was properly governed by the law of that state.

Of course, in states which are committed to the presumption in favor of the common law, the plea of usury may be defeated by indulging the presumption in favor of the common law, since there was no usury at common law. (See Smith v. Muncie Nat. Bank, 29 Ind. 158.) In some cases the same result as regards usury is attributed to the presumption in favor of the validity of a contract. See Flournoy v. First Nat. Bank, 79 Ga. 810, 2 S. E. 547; Graven v. Bates, 96 Ga. 78, 23 S. E. 202; Leake v. Bergen, 27 N. J. Eq. 360; Columbian Bldg. & L. Asso. v. Rice, 68 S. C. 236, 47 S. E. 63,—supra, III. c.

The exception, in case of a statute of the forum creating a penalty or forfeiture, to the general rule adopted in many of the states, that the law of another state will be presumed to be the same as the law of the forum whether the latter is common law or statutory, applies to other defenses, as well as to the defense of usury. Thus, the court in Schoenberg v. Adler, 105 Wis. 645, 81 N. W. 1055, applying this exception, held that there was no presumption that there was a law in another state like the statute of Wisconsin declaring that all contracts resting in whole or in part upon gambling transactions shall be void. See also Bartlett v. Collins, 109 Wis. 477, 83 Am. St. Rep. 928, 85 N. W. 703.

So the court in Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Way, 83 Ala. 542, 4 So. 844, although unable to indulge the presumption in favor of the common law, declined to indulge the presumption that the law of Germany, like the law of Alabama, invalidates "future" contracts not contemplating actual delivery.

In Flagg v. Baldwin, 38 N. J. Eq. 219, 48 Am. Rep. 308, a similar result was reached, though it was referred in this case to the general presumption in favor of the common law, notwithstanding that the common law on the subject had been changed by statute in New Jersey.

But see Harvey v. Merrill, 150 Mass. 1, 5 L. R. A. 200, 15 Am. St. Rep. 159, 22 N. E. 49, supra, III. c, which reaches a contrary result as to this class of contracts by indulging the presumption in favor of the common-law rule as held in Massachusetts.

So O'Rourke v. O'Rourke, 43 Mich. 58, 4 N. W. 531, refused to indulge the presumption that there was a statute in New York like that of Michigan invalidating contracts made on Sunday.

And Adams v. Gay, 19 Vt. 358, expressly refused to indulge the presumption that there was a law in New Hampshire like that of Vermont invalidating contracts made on Sunday.

A contrary decision was rendered in Brimhall v. Van Campen, 8 Minn. 13, Gil. 1, 82 Am. Dec. 118, with reference to Sunday laws; but this case has been overruled. See supra subdivision III. c.

In Hill v. Wilker, 41 Ga. 449, 5 Am. Rep. 540, the court said that it would be presumed that the law of Kansas where the contract in suit was made was the same as that of Georgia, and invalidated contracts made on Sunday. The court said in support of this position: "We are sustained in this presumption by the fact that a contrary view would suppose the people of Kansas to have annulled the decalogue, and to have permitted by law the disregard of Christian obligations."

Sayre v. Wheeler, 32 Iowa, 559, also indulged the presumption that the law of Missouri, like the statute of Iowa, renders contracts made on Sunday void.

In Thompson v. Ketcham, 8 Johns. 189, 5 Am. Dec. 332, it was held that, if defendant, whose contract was governed by the law of Jamaica, relied upon the defense of infancy, he must show that infancy is a defense by the law of that country. G. H. P.

KANSAS SUPREME COURT.

KEENE SYNDICATE, Plff. in Err.,
v.

WICHITA GAS, ELECTRIC LIGHT, & POWER COMPANY.

(.....Kan.....)

*A corporation, engaged in the business of generating and furnishing electricity for public and private use, leased to a rival corporation in the city, for a period of ten years, machinery and appliances used in generating electricity, obligating itself by the provisions of said lease not to engage in the business of furnishing electric light and power to public or private consumers in the city during said period, and

*Headnote by ATKINSON, J.

NOTE.—For other cases in this series as to validity of contracts in restraint of trade when selling business, see Western Wooden Ware Assn. v. Starkey, 11 L. R. A. 503; Gamewell Fire Alarm Teleg. Co. v. Crane, 22 L. R. A. 673, and note; Cowan v. Fairbrother, 32 L. R. A. 829; Lufkin Rule Co. v. Fringell, 41 L. R. A. 185; Anchor Electric Co. v. Hawks, 41 L. R. A. 189; Trenton Potteries Co. v. Oliphant, 46 L. R. A. 255; Stelchen v. Fehleisen, 51 L. R. A. 412; Pohlman v. Dawson, 54 L. R. A. 913; and Swigert v. Tilden, 63 L. R. A. 608. 67 L. R. A.

not to dispose of any of its property, machinery, or appliances retained by it for producing or generating in said city electric light and power. Held, in an action on said lease to recover rents from the lessee, that the lease is in contravention of public policy, and that no action to recover rents can be maintained thereon by the lessor or its assignee.

(May 7, 1904).

ERROR to the District Court for Sedgwick County to review a judgment in favor of defendant in an action brought to enforce payment of rent alleged to be due and unpaid. Affirmed.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Messrs. Thomas B. Wall, Ros Harris, and J. V. Daugherty, for plaintiff in error:

The public policy of the state must be determined from its Constitution, laws, and judicial decisions.

From Bemis v. Becker, 1 Kan. 227, to Hardy v. Jones, 63 Kan. 8, 88 Am. St. Rep. 223, 64 Pac. 969, it has never been the policy of this court to encourage frauds by releasing the fraudulent party from the obligations of his contract.

The stipulation in the lease is not in violation of any statute, Federal or state. To justify the court in sustaining the demurrer it must appear from the petition that the lease or contract is malum in se, or malum prohibitum.

The leased property has earned the amounts set forth in the said several causes of action; the contract has thus been executed so far as the amounts due are concerned; it must follow then, even if the consideration of the lease was illegal, a recovery can be had.

Hardy v. Jones, 63 Kan. 8, 88 Am. St. Rep. 223, 64 Pac. 969; Evans v. Trenton, 24 N. J. L. 764; Detroit v. Redfield, 19 Mich. 376; Boggs v. Caldwell County, 28 Mo. 586; Garrett v. Boone County, 92 Ind. 518; Spearman v. Tezakana, 58 Ark. 348, 22 L. R. A. 855, 24 S. W. 883; United States v. Brindle, 110 U. S. 688, 28 L. ed. 286, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 180; Brown v. Atchison, 39 Kan. 37, 7 Am. St. Rep. 515, 17 Pac. 465.

The plaintiff in this action has agreed to do no unlawful thing; it is the owner of the property, and, as such, is entitled to have the value of the use of the property, and might recover for its destruction.

McKinney v. Andrews, 41 Tex. 363.

It would be grossly unjust, and inequitable to permit the defendant in error to evade its obligation, and thus get something for nothing on the ground that it, as it claims, engaged in a transaction voluntarily and knowingly that might be in violation of some rule of public policy. To permit the defendant in error to make such a defense is permitting it to use the rule it invokes to accomplish a fraud, rather than prevent it.

Wonsettler v. Lee, 40 Kan. 367, 19 Pac. 862; Kansas & N. M. Land & Cattle Co. v. Thompson, 57 Kan. 792, 48 Pac. 34; Pullman's Palace Car Co. v. Central Transp. Co. 171 U. S. 138, 43 L. ed. 108, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 808; Bath Gaslight Co. v. Claffy, 151 N. Y. 24, 36 L. R. A. 664, 45 N. E. 390; Alexandria, A. & Ft. S. R. Co. v. Johnson, 58 Kan. 175, 48 Pac. 847; Blue Rapids Opera House Co. v. Mercantile Bldg. & L. Asso. 59 Kan. 778, Appx., 53 Pac. 761; Greenville Compress & Warehouse Co. v. Planters' Compress & Warehouse Co. 70 Miss. 669, 35 Am. St. Rep. 681, 13 So. 879; Vought v. Eastern Bldg. & L. Asso. 172 N. Y. 508, 92 Am. St. Rep. 761, 65 N. E. 496; Carson City Sav. Bank v. Carson City Elevator Co. 90 Mich. 550, 30 Am. St. Rep. 454, 51 N. W. 641; Brunswick Gaslight Co. v. United Gas, Fuel, & Light Co. 85 Me. 532, 35 Am. St. Rep. 385, 27 Atl. 525.

Messrs. Houston & Brooks, for defendant in error:

The modern rule that contracts between private individuals in partial restraint of 67 L. R. A.

trade, based upon sufficient consideration and reasonable in their scope and operation, are not void, does not apply to corporations engaged in furnishing that which is a matter of public concern to the inhabitants of a city.

Chicago Gaslight & Coke Co. v. People's Gaslight & Coke Co. 121 Ill. 530, 2 Am. St. Rep. 124, 13 N. E. 169; Greenhood, Pub. Pol. Rule DLVI. 1st ed. p. 672.

The common law will not permit persons to obligate themselves by a contract either to do or not to do a particular thing when the thing to be done or omitted is in any degree injurious to the public.

West Virginia Transp. Co. v. Ohio River Pipe Line Co. 22 W. Va. 617, 46 Am. Rep. 527; Western U. Teleg. Co. v. American U. Teleg. Co. 65 Ga. 160, 38 Am. Rep. 781; Raymond v. Leavitt, 48 Mich. 447, 41 Am. Rep. 170, 9 N. W. 525; Stewart v. Erie & W. Transp. Co. 17 Minn. 395, Gil. 348; Wright v. Ryder, 36 Cal. 342, 95 Am. Dec. 186; Morris Run Coal Co. v. Barclay Coal Co. 68 Pa. 173, 8 Am. Rep. 159; Atcheson v. Mallon, 43 N. Y. 149, 3 Am. Rep. 678; Hooker v. Vandewater, 4 Denio, 349, 47 Am. Dec. 258; Arnot v. Pittston & E. Coal Co. 68 N. Y. 558, 23 Am. Rep. 190; Stanton v. Allen, 5 Denio, 434, 49 Am. Dec. 282; Saratoga County Bank v. King, 44 N. Y. 87; Anderson v. Jett, 89 Ky. 375, 6 L. R. A. 390, 12 S. W. 670; Firemen's Charitable Asso. v. Berghaus, 13 La. Ann. 209.

Whatever tends to prevent competition between those engaged in a public employment or business, impressed with a public character, is opposed to public policy, and therefore unlawful.

People ex rel. Peabody v. Chicago Gas Trust Co. 130 Ill. 268, 8 L. R. A. 505, 17 Am. St. Rep. 319, 22 N. E. 798; Gibbs v. Consolidated Gas Co. 130 U. S. 396, 32 L. ed. 979, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 553; Greenhood, Pub. Pol. 1st ed. 643-655, 670-672; Chicago Gaslight & Coke Co. v. People's Gaslight & Coke Co. 121 Ill. 530, 2 Am. St. Rep. 124, 13 N. E. 169.

If the contracting parties are not engaged in a quasi public business, yet are handling a commodity of common utility, or of common consumption or use among the people, a contract which tends to create a monopoly is void as against public policy.

Tuscaloosa Ice Mfg. Co. v. Williams, 127 Ala. 110, 50 L. R. A. 175, 85 Am. St. Rep. 125, 28 So. 669; Clark v. Needham, 125 Mich. 84, 51 L. R. A. 785, 84 Am. St. Rep. 559, 83 N. W. 1027; Culp v. Love, 127 N. C. 457, 37 S. E. 476; Cummings v. Union Blue Stone Co. 164 N. Y. 401, 52 L. R. A. 262, 79 Am. St. Rep. 655, 58 N. E. 525; Chapin v. Brown Bros. 83 Iowa, 156, 12 L. R. A. 428, 32 Am. St. Rep. 297, 48 N. W.

1074; Bishop v. Palmer, 146 Mass. 469, 4 Am. St. Rep. 339, 16 N. E. 299; Saratoga County Bank v. King, 44 N. Y. 87; Settler v. Alvey, 15 Kan. 157.

A corporation cannot disable itself from performing the public duties which it has undertaken, and by agreement compel itself to make public accommodation or convenience subservient to its private interests.

Gibbs v. Consolidated Gas Co. 130 U. S. 396, 32 L. ed. 979, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 553; Thomas v. West Jersey R. Co. 101 U. S. 83, 25 L. ed. 952; People ex rel. Peabody v. Chicago Gas Trust Co. 130 Ill. 268, 8 L. R. A. 497, 17 Am. St. Rep. 319, 22 N. E. 798; Visalia Gas & Electric Light Co. v. Sims, 104 Cal. 326, 43 Am. St. Rep. 105, 37 Pac. 1042; Morawetz, Priv. Corp. 2d ed. § 656.

A corporation cannot lease or alienate any franchise or any property necessary to perform its obligations and duties to the state without legislative power.

Black v. Delaware & R. Canal Co. 22 N. J. Eq. 130; Stockton v. Central R. Co. 50 N. J. Eq. 52, 17 L. R. A. 97, 24 Atl. 964; 1 Clark & M. Priv. Corp. § 177; 7 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, p. 747; State v. Nebraska Distilling Co. 29 Neb. 700, 46 N. W. 160; State ex rel. Snyder v. Portland Natural Gas & Oil Co. 153 Ind. 483, 53 L. R. A. 413, 74 Am. St. Rep. 314, 53 N. E. 1089; Thomas v. West Jersey R. Co. 101 U. S. 71, 25 L. ed. 950.

The contract in suit is in violation of chapter 265 of the laws of 1897, known as the anti-trust law.

Texas & P. Coal Co. v. Lawson, 89 Tex. 394, 32 S. W. 871, 34 S. W. 919; Harding v. American Glucose Co. 182 Ill. 551, 64 L. R. A. 738, 74 Am. St. Rep. 189, 55 N. E. 599; San Antonio Gas Co. v. State, 22 Tex. Civ. App. 118, 54 S. W. 291; Texas Brewing Co. v. Templeman, 90 Tex. 277, 38 S. W. 27; Fuqua v. Pabst Breicing Co. 90 Tex. 298, 35 L. R. A. 241, 38 S. W. 29, 750.

No court, either of law or equity, will lend its assistance to give effect to a contract void as against public policy.

Settler v. Alvey, 15 Kan. 157; Ainsworth v. Miller, 20 Kan. 222; Gerlach v. Skinner, 34 Kan. 86, 55 Am. Rep. 240, 8 Pac. 257; Korman v. Henry, 32 Kan. 49, 343, 3 Pac. 764, 4 Pac. 262; Hinnen v. Newman, 35 Kan. 709, 12 Pac. 144; Bartle v. Nutt, 4 Pet. 184, 7 L. ed. 825; Mayes v. Cherokee Strip Live Stock Asso. 58 Kan. 716, 51 Pac. 215; Hallam v. Huffman, 5 Kan. App. 303, 48 Pac. 602; Armstrong v. Toler, 11 Wheat. 278, 6 L. ed. 473; Sheldon v. Pruessner, 52 Kan. 580, 22 L. R. A. 709, 35 Pac. 201; McBlair v. Gibbs, 17 How. 236, 15 L. ed. 134; Gould v. Kendall, 15 Neb. 549, 19 N. W. 483; Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. v. Wabash, St. 67 L. R. A.

L. & P. R. Co. 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 578, 9 C. C. A. 659, 27 U. S. App. 1, 61 Fed. 993; Shipley v. Reasoner, 80 Iowa, 548, 45 N. W. 1077; Robinson v. Patterson, 71 Mich. 141, 39 N. W. 21; Richardson v. Buhl, 77 Mich. 632, 6 L. R. A. 457, 43 N. W. 1102; Burck v. Abbott, 22 Tex. Civ. App. 216, 54 S. W. 315; McMullen v. Hoffman, 174 U. S. 639, 43 L. ed. 1117, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 839; Cansler v. Penland, 125 N. C. 578, 48 L. R. A. 441, 34 S. E. 683; Oscanyan v. Winchester Repeating Arms Co. 103 U. S. 261, 26 L. ed. 539; Bowman v. Phillips, 41 Kan. 364, 3 L. R. A. 631, 13 Am. St. Rep. 292, 21 Pac. 230.

Atkinson, J., delivered the opinion of the court:

On the 14th day of May, 1897, the Wichita Electric Railway & Light Company, a corporation under the laws of Kansas, with its place of business at the city of Wichita, entered into a contract or lease in writing with the Wichita Gas, Electric Light, & Power Company, a corporation under the laws of Kansas, with its place of business at the city of Wichita. By the terms of the contract or lease the former leased to the latter for a period of ten years, at an annual rental of $3,000, payable semiannually, certain machinery and appliances, in the city of Wichita, adapted to and used by the lessor for the purpose of generating electricity for light, heat, and power. On the 20th day of March, 1900, the Keene Syndicate, a corporation, purchased of the lessor, the Wichita Electric Railway & Light Company, the property included in and covered by said lease, and also its interest in said lease, taking a written assignment thereof. The lessee, the Wichita Gas, Electric Light, & Power Company, being in default of three years' rent in August, 1900; the Keene Syndicate, as assignee of the Wichita Electric Railway & Light Company, commenced its action in the district court of Sedgwick county to recover the rent, the amount claimed due it from the lessee. The petition of plaintiff presented seven causes of action, and attached thereto was a copy of the said written contract or lease. The first six causes of action were each a specific claim for recovery upon one of the semiannual payments of rent. Each cause of action made reference to said contract or lease, and made it a part thereof. The seventh and last cause of action in the petition was by plaintiff intended to state a claim for recovery of defendant upon a quantum meruit for the use of the machinery delivered to defendant under the lease, and by defendant received and used. This last or seventh cause of action made reference to the preceding causes of action.

adopted portions of each, and made them a part thereof, which adoption had the effect to include also in the seventh cause of action the contract or lease attached to and made a part of the petition. The seventh cause of action became thereby also an action for recovery on the contract or lease, and not a cause of action for recovery on a quantum meruit, as was contemplated by plaintiff. Defendant filed a demurrer to the petition, which was sustained by the court. Plaintiff elected to stand upon its petition, and judgment was entered against it for costs. Plaintiff brings error.

Does the petition on its face disclose a cause of action,—a right of plaintiff to recover from defendant? It is charged by defendant that the petition discloses the contract or lease sued upon to be against public policy and void. The district court found the contract sued upon to be void for that reason. Whether or not the petition on its face disclosed the contract or lease to be against public policy and void is the only question before us for our determination. The petition of plaintiff, by its averments, in addition to embodying the facts above stated with reference to location, corporate existence, the execution of the lease, the leasing of the machinery for the term and consideration mentioned, and the assigning of the lease by the lessor to plaintiff, may fairly be said to also disclose, by its averments, that the lessor and the lessee, at the time the lease was entered into, were rival public utility corporations, in the city of Wichita, engaged in generating and furnishing electricity for public and private use for light, heat, and power. The petition also, in substance, avers that the assignor of plaintiff, the Wichita Electric Railway & Light Company, had delivered to defendant all the property described in the lease, under and by virtue of said lease, and had duly performed all the conditions, agreements, and stipulations in said lease to be by it performed. The contract or lease, attached to and made a part of the petition, and upon which the action for recovery is based, contains the following language: "The said first party hereby binds and obligates itself not to engage in the business of furnishing electric light and power to private or public consumers within the city of Wichita, during the period covered by this agreement, except for the purpose of operating the street railway now owned by the first party, and said first party furthermore agrees not to dispose of any of the apparatus, machinery, appliances, etc., retained by it, for producing or generating electric light and power in said city of Wichita." The above language quoted from the contract or lease, applied to and construed with the averments of the petition of which the contract or lease formed a part, fairly discloses that the lessor obligated itself not to engage in the business of furnishing electric light and power to private and public consumers within the city of Wichita during the period of ten years covered by the lease, and further agreed that during said period of ten years it would not dispose of any of its machinery or appliances, retained by it, for the purpose of being used to generate electric light and power in the city of Wichita. The effect of which, if carried out, would be that the lessor, for said period of ten years, would abandon the exercise of its corporate power to generate and furnish electric light and power for public and private use in the city of Wichita, withdraw itself from the field of competition with the lessor, its former competitor in the business, for said period of ten years, and refrain from the sale of property to others who might thereby become competitors of the lessor in the said field of competition during said period of ten years. But it is not necessary, for the determination of this case, to inquire whether the effect of the agreement between the lessor and the lessee was in fact detrimental to the city of Wichita or its citizens. The inquiry should be, and the true rule is, that agreements which, in their necessary or contemplated operation upon the actions of the parties to them, tend to restrain their natural rivalry and competition, and thus to result in the disadvantage of the public or of third parties, are against the principles of sound public policy, and consequently void. Atcheson v. Mallon, 43 N. Y. 147, 3 Am. Rep. 678.

In Western Wooden-Ware Asso. v. Starkey, 84 Mich. 76, 11 L. R. A. 503, 22 Am. St. Rep. 686, 47 N. W. 604, an action to enjoin the association from engaging in a certain business, and from using certain premises in carrying on said business, in violation of a contract with plaintiff, which contract provided that the association would not engage in or carry on the business in controversy for a period of five years, and would not within said period use the said premises or sell them, or permit them to be sold or used, without the consent of plaintiff, the court denied the injunction, and held the contract void as against public policy. Referring more particularly to that feature of the case wherein the association had contracted not to use or permit the premises to be used, nor sell the premises for use, in competition with plaintiff, an element in that case not unlike one of the elements in the case at bar, Mr. Justice Long, speaking for the court, said: "In the present case the defendants . . . were not only to remain out of such business for the full time specified, but the premises which had been used to carry on the manufacturing by them, though not sold and conveyed under the contract, could not be again used for such time by them or any other party for the same business. I do not think it needs the citation of authorities to show that contracts of this nature have frequently been condemned by the courts and held void as unreasonable restraints of trade, and therefore void on the ground of public policy." Among the contracts declared illegal under the common law because opposed to public policy, were contracts in general restraint of trade, and contracts between individuals to prevent competition and keep up the price of articles of utility.

It is well settled that in the law of contracts the first purpose of the court is to look to the welfare of the public, and, if the enforcement of the agreement would be detrimental to its interest, no relief should be granted to the party injured, and that even though it might result beneficially to one of the parties who made and violated the agreement. In Gibbs v. Consolidated Gas Co. 130 U. S. 396, 32 L. ed. 979, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 553, the court said: "Courts decline to enforce contracts which impose a restraint, though only partial, upon business of such character that restraint to any extent will be prejudicial to the public interest." The rule that contracts and agreements, when contrary to public policy, will not be enforced, is one of the great preservatives of a state. It has been the uniform rule of this court, and, indeed, of all courts, to hold that contracts tainted with illegality are absolutely void. Hawley v. Kansas & T. Coal Co. 48 Kan. 593, 30 Pac. 14; Hinnen v. Newman, 35 Kan. 709, 12 Pac. 144. Plaintiff, the assignee of the lessor, the Wichita Electric Railway & Light Company, is in no better position to recover than the lessor, as the illegal consideration appears upon the face of the contract or lease. Saratoga County Bank v. King, 44 N. Y. 87; Setter v. Alvey, 15 Kan. 157. Whether plaintiff could maintain an action against defendant on a quantum meruit or otherwise, independently of the contract, need not be here considered. That question, in the view we have taken of the seventh cause of action of the petition, is not in the record before us. The contract or lease sued upon being in contravention of public policy, no action for a recovery upon it can be maintained.

The judgment of the District Court will be affirmed.

All the Justices concur.

Petition for rehearing denied.

LOUISIANA SUPREME COURT.

B. J. WOLF et al., Appts.,
v.

NEW ORLEANS TAILOR-MADE PANTS COMPANY et al.

(.....La.....)

- *1. Where an exception of no cause of action was sustained, with leave to amend, and plaintiff amended his petition in obedience to the order of the court, he thereby waived his right to question the correctness of the ruling on the exception.
2. Where a commercial traveler engaged his services to plaintiffs for the term of one year, and when about one half the term had expired sought other employment, and engaged his services to defendant company, which at the time had no information that his term would not expire for five or six months, and when, after he had quit the services of plaintiffs, they informed defendant company of the terms of the contract, and thereupon the employee offered to release his new employers, but at the same time expressed his determination not to return to the plaintiffs,—Held, that plaintiffs have no cause of action against defendant company for damages, because it did not release or discharge the employee.

(June 6, 1904.)

APPEAL by plaintiffs from a judgment of the Civil District Court for the Parish of Orleans in favor of defendants in an action brought to recover damages for inducing plaintiffs' employee to leave his employment. Affirmed.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. Henry L. Lasarus, for appellants:

An action will not lie for breach of contract, both against those who fail to observe their obligations resulting from the contract, and against those who inspire or aid the obligor in the commission of the breach.

For every right, and for every injury done a man in his person, reputation, or property, the party hath a remedy.

*Headnotes by LAND, J.

NOTE.—As to liability for inducing servant to break his contract, see cases in notes to Chambers v. Baldwin, 11 L. R. A. 548, and Boysen v. Thorn, 21 L. R. A. 238; also Flaccus v. Smith, 54 L. R. A. 640.
67 L. R. A.

Comyns, Dig. Action upon the Oase; 1 Bacon, Abr. p. 102, Actions on the Case; Civil Code, arts. 2315, 2324.

The present cause of action, as disclosed by the pleadings and the evidence, has its primary foundation in the great and immutable principle of right and justice proclaimed from Mount Sinai: "Thou shalt not covet thy neighbor's servant."

Dickson v. Dickson, 33 La. Ann. 1263; Graham v. St. Charles Street R. Co. 47 La. Ann. 218, 27 L. R. A. 416, 49 Am. St. Rep. 366, 16 So. 806, 47 La. Ann. 1659, 49 Am. St. Rep. 436, 18 So. 707; Bl. Com. p. 142; Wood, Mast. & S. §§ 230, 231; 14 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, p. 800; Lumley v. Gye, 2 El. & Bl. 217; Bowen v. Hall, L. R. 6 Q. B. Div. 333; Evans v. Walton, L. R. 2 C. P. 622; Ashby v. White, 2 Ld. Raym. 938; Angle v. Chicago, St. P. M. & O. R. Co. 151 U. S. 14, 38 L. ed. 63, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 240; Walker v. Cronin, 107 Mass. 555; Haskins v. Royster, 70 N. C. 601, 16 Am. Rep. 780; Chipley v. Atkinson, 23 Fla. 216, 11 Am. St. Rep. 367, 1 So. 934; Noice v. Brown, 39 N. J. L. 572; Lucke v. Clothing Cutters' & T. Assembly No. 7507, K. of L. 77 Md. 396, 19 L. R. A. 408, 39 Am. St. Rep. 430, 26 Atl. 505; Perkins v. Pendleton, 90 Me. 166, 60 Am. St. Rep. 253, 38 Atl. 96; Jones v. Stanly, 76 N. C. 355; Lally v. Cantwell, 30 Mo. App. 528.

Before negotiations between defendant and Bratman were concluded defendants were in possession of information from B. J. Wolf & Sons that there was a subsisting contract; and that they had from Bratman the contract itself.

On petition for rehearing.

The court erred in holding and determining, as a question of fact, that Bratman would not have returned to the employ of plaintiffs and observed the conditions of his contract had defendants, after notice of the existence of the contract and its provisions, released him from the tentative agreement between them.

This court erred, as a question of law, in holding that the amendment under directions of the trial court, and under the protest of the plaintiffs, was, in law, an abandonment of their primary cause of action.

Where there is error apparent upon the face of the record, advantage may be taken of it in the reviewing tribunal without a formal bill of exception being reserved.

3 Enc. Pl. & Pr. p. 404; Harrison v. Waymouth, 3 Rob. (La.) 340; State ex rel. Schlater v. Twenty-Third Dist. Judge, 40 La. Ann. 809, 5 So. 407; Exchange & Bkg. Co. v. Yorke, 4 La. Ann. 138; Scott v. Lawson, 10 La. Ann. 547; Sedgwick v. Dawkins, 18 Fla. 335; Gates v. Hayner, 22 Fla. 325; Zimmerman v. Cowan, 107 Ill. 67 L. R. A.

631, 47 Am. Rep. 476; Blake v. Pitcher, 46 Md. 462; Moline Plow Co. v. Webb, 141 U. S. 616, 35 L. ed. 879, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 100; Post v. Pearson, 108 U. S. 418, 27 L. ed. 774, 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. 799; Coughlin v. District of Columbia, 108 U. S. 7, 27 L. ed. 74, 1 Sup. Ct. Rep. 37; State v. Judy, 60 Ind. 138; Doctor v. Hartman, 74 Ind. 230; Black v. Howell, 56 Iowa, 630, 10 N. W. 216.

One who maliciously, i. e., knowingly and wilfully, with a view to his own benefit and detriment to another, causes, or assists, or encourages, another to violate his contract with his employer, is liable, not only for all actual losses sustained, but also for exemplary damages.

Cooley, Torts, 2d ed. p. 330; Pollock, Torts, 1887, pp. 269, 270, and note, 450-452; Pigvott, Torts, 1885, p. 352; Wood, Mast. & S. § 230; Bishop, Non-Contract Law, § 370; 14 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, p. 800; 16 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, 2d ed. p. 1109; Webber v. Barry, 11 Am. St. Rep. 474, note, 66 Mich. 127, 33 N. W. 289; Lumley v. Gye, 2 El. & Bl. 217; Bowen v. Hall, L. R. 6 Q. B. Div. 333; Evans v. Walton, L. R. 2 C. P. 622; Ashby v. White, 2 Ld. Raym. 938; Temperton v. Russell [1893] 1 Q. B. 715; Allen v. Flood [1898] A. C. 1; Quinn v. Leatham [1901] A. C. 495; Walker v. Cronin, 107 Mass. 564; Angle v. Chicago, St. P. M. & O. R. Co. 151 U. S. 13, 38 L. ed. 62, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 240; Noice v. Brown, 39 N. J. L. 572; Barr v. Essex Trades Council, 53 N. J. Eq. 101, 30 Atl. 881; Frank v. Herald, 63 N. J. Eq. 443, 52 Atl. 152; Bisby v. Dunlap, 56 N. H. 456, 22 Am. Rep. 475; Lally v. Cantwell, 30 Mo. App. 524; Haskins v. Royster, 70 N. C. 601, 16 Am. Rep. 780; Jones v. Stanly, 76 N. C. 356; Jackson v. Stanfield, 137 Ind. 592, 23 L. R. A. 588, 36 N. E. 345, 37 N. E. 14; Daniel v. Swearingen, 6 S. C. N. S. 297, 24 Am. Rep. 471; Huff v. Watkins, 15 S. C. 82, 40 Am. Rep. 680; Chipley v. Atkinson, 23 Fla. 206, 11 Am. St. Rep. 367, 1 So. 934; Lucke v. Clothing Cutters' & T. Assembly No. 7507, K. of L. 77 Md. 396, 19 L. R. A. 408, 39 Am. St. Rep. 421, 26 Atl. 505; London Guarantees & Acci. Co. v. Horn, 101 Ill. App. 355; Lee v. West, 47 Ga. 311; Sherwood v. Hall, 3 Sumn. 127, Fed. Cas. No. 12,777; Plummer v. Webb, 4 Mason, 380, Fed. Cas. No. 11,233; Perkins v. Pendleton, 90 Me. 166, 60 Am. St. Rep. 252, 38 Atl. 96; Hewitt v. Ontario Copper Lightning Rod Co. 44 U. C. Q. B. 297; Morgan v. Andrews, 107 Mich. 33, 64 N. W. 869; Webber v. Barry, 66 Mich. 127, 11 Am. St. Rep. 466, 33 N. W. 289; Dickson v. Dickson, 33 La. Ann. 1263; Graham v. St. Charles Street R. Co. 47 La. Ann. 218, 27 L. R. A. 416, 49

Am. St. Rep. 366, 16 So. 806, 47 La. Ann. 1657, 49 Am. St. Rep. 436, 18 So. 707; Old Dominion S. S. Co. v. McKenna, 30 Fed. 48; Nashville, C. & St. L. R. Co. v. McConnell, 82 Fed. 65; J. S. Brown Hardware Co. v. Indiana Stove Works, 96 Tex. 453, 73 S. W. 800.

An action lies against one who continues to employ the servant of another after he has knowledge or notice that he is such servant, whether he knew that fact or not when he first employed him. The gist of this action is the retention of the servant after knowledge of the fact that his services are due to another.

Webber v. Barry, 66 Mich. 127, 11 Am. St. Rep. 466, 33 N. W. 289; Faucet v. Beavres, 2 Lev. 63; Blake v. Lanyon, 6 T. R. 221; Evans v. Walton, L. R. 2 C. P. 615; Everett v. Sherfey, 1 Iowa, 356; Ferguson v. Tucker, 2 Harr. & G. 182; Butterfield v. Ashley, 6 Cush. 249; Stowe v. Heywood, 7 Allen, 118; Sargent v. Mathewson, 38 N. H. 54; Morris v. Neville, 11 Lea, 271; Wood, Mast. & S. § 240.

Messrs. Dinkelspiel & Hart, for appellees:

This court cannot finally pass upon the issues not decided in the court below, because of dismissal of the pleading raising the same.

Grover's Succession, 49 La. Ann. 1050, 22 So. 313; St. Charles Street R. Co. v. Fidelity & D. Co. 109 La. 491, 33 So. 574.

The action of the plaintiffs against their former employee, Bratman, is limited to the damages provided in art. 2750, Rev. Civ. Code; that is, the forfeiture of all the wages that might be due him, and the repayment of what he had received during the time of his engagement.

Union Oil Co. v. Marrero, 52 La. Ann. 357, 26 So. 766.

This is their entire measure of damages, and they have no other remedy than an action for damages.

Healy v. Allen, 38 La. Ann. 867; Healey v. Dillon, 39 La. Ann. 503, 2 So. 49; Levine v. Michel, 35 La. Ann. 1121; Mirandona v. Burg, 49 La. Ann. 656, 21 So. 723; Larousini v. Werlein, 48 La. Ann. 13, 18 So. 704; State ex rel. New Orleans v. New Orleans & C. R. Co. 37 La. Ann. 589; New Orleans v. New Orleans & N. E. R. Co. 44 La. Ann. 64, 10 So. 401.

The word "laborer" applies to all kinds of employees, except menial servants.

M'Phillin v. Gillise, 8 La. 181; Beokman v. New Orleans Cotton Press Co. 12 La. 67; Sherburne v. Orleans Cotton Press, 15 La. 360; Lartigue v. Peet, 5 Rob. (La.) 91; Decamp v. Hewitt, 11 Rob. (La.) 290, 43 Am. Dec. 204; Angello v. Rivollet, 2 La. Ann. 652; Callean v. Stafford, 18 La. Ann. 67 L. R. A.

556; Orphan Asylum v. Mississippi Marine Ins. Co. 8 La. 181.

There is no allegation in the petition to the effect that actual damages were caused the plaintiffs by the acts of the defendants.

Wood, Mast. & S. § 237, p. 457.

An action cannot, in general, be maintained for enticing a third person to break his contract with the plaintiff; the consequence, after all, being only a broken contract, for which the party to the contract may have his remedy by suing upon it.

Cooley, Torts, 2d ed. p. 581; Bird v. Randall, 1 W. Bl. 387.

The enticing away of a servant from his employment under contract of hire is made an actionable tort by statute in England, and in several of the states.

Jones v. Blocker, 43 Ga. 331; Soidmore v. Smith, 13 Johns. 322; Birby v. Dunlap, 56 N. H. 456, 22 Am. Rep. 475; Haskins v. Royster, 70 N. C. 601, 16 Am. Rep. 780; Jones v. Stanly, 76 N. C. 355; Huff v. Watkins, 20 S. C. 477; Hartley v. Cummings, 5 C. B. 247; Anonymous, Loft, 493; Hart v. Aldridge, Cowp. pt. 1, p. 54.

The better current of American authority is that such an act as this, without a statute, and in the absence of peculiar surrounding circumstances, is not actionable.

Chambers v. Baldwin, 91 Ky. 121, 11 L. R. A. 548, 34 Am. St. Rep. 165, 15 S. W. 57; Bourlier Bros. v. Macauley, 91 Ky. 135, 11 L. R. A. 550, 34 Am. St. Rep. 171, 15 S. W. 60; Kline v. Eubanks, 109 La. 241, 33 So. 211; Jaggard, Torts, p. 636; Smith v. Drew, 5 Mass. 514.

Land, J., delivered the opinion of the court:

The present litigation is the sequel of a suit bearing the same title, which was dismissed because brought in the names of the partners instead of the partnership. See 52 La. Ann. 1357, 27 So. 893.

A new suit was instituted in the name of the partnership. Defendants pleaded the prescription of one year, and the plea was maintained. Plaintiffs appealed, and this court reversed the judgment of the district court, and remanded the cause for further proceedings. See 110 La. 427, 34 So. 590.

The original petition is set out in full in 52 La. Ann. 1357, 27 So. 893.

The case presented by the petition is that plaintiffs had in their employ one H. Bratman, an experienced traveling salesman or drummer, under a written contract for his exclusive services for one year, commencing May 14, 1898, and expiring on May 13, 1899, the said Bratman receiving a fixed commission on sales made by him in lieu of salary or wages; that in November, 1898, defendants combined, confederated, and conspired to secure the services of said Bratman, and to entice him from his employment with plaintiffs, and that their said employee, induced by dishonest and sinister motives, yielded to the persuasion of his codefendants in committing a breach of his contract with plaintiffs; that, being advised of the negotiations pending between the defendants, plaintiffs, on November 12, 1898, gave defendant company, officers, and stockholders notice by letter of their contract with Bratman, and its terms and conditions; that, notwithstanding said notice, said defendants employed Bratman, and induced him to violate his contract with petitioners, to their damage and injury, and to the benefit and advantage of defendant company; that the relations and contract obligations between plaintiffs and Bratman were disturbed and violated by the wrongful and malicious intervention of said defendants; and that thereby said Bratman was wrongfully prevented from performing his contract duties with plaintiffs; and that defendants employed said Bratman after notice and with the knowledge of the existence of said contract.

The petition further alleged, in substance, that while Bratman was employed by plaintiffs a certain territory was assigned to him, which he worked in the interests of plaintiffs, and wherein they enjoyed a large and profitable business; that said territory has been invaded by said Bratman in the interest of said defendants, and by their direction, and the former trade of plaintiffs therein diverted to the defendant corporation; that plaintiffs used every reasonable effort to secure the services of a competent drummer in said territory to hold their said trade therein, but were unable to do so, and said trade was diverted by said defendants to the prejudice and wrong of plaintiffs.

The petition further charges that defendants made repeated efforts to entice and seduce from the employ of plaintiffs other clerks and salesmen, whose services had been advantageous and profitable to plaintiffs, with the view of diverting a part of the business which they had established.

Petitioners further represented that, as they had no representative in said territory, for the reasons stated, during the unexpired term of said Bratman, "there is no way in which they can estimate the exact measure of damages sustained by them in consequence of the wanton, malicious, and dishonest conduct on the part of the defendants herein as aforesaid, and the result of their said conspiracy," save by taking as a basis the quantity of goods sold by Bratman under his prior contract from December 1, 1897, to May 13, 1898.

67 L. R. A.

On this basis plaintiffs estimated their loss to be $1,796, and they also claim $3,500 as "punitive and statutory damages" and "damages by way of punishment, punitive and exemplary," for the unlawful conduct and acts of defendants, "inspired by wanton, selfish, and malicious motives."

Defendants filed a number of exceptions, including one of no cause of action, and the judgment rendered thereon decreed: "That the exceptions of no cause of action be maintained in so far as to order plaintiffs to amend their petition so as to make it conform, as to measure of damages, with the provisions of article 2750 of the Revised Civil Code of Louisiana and act No. 50 of 1892, p. 72, § 2, and that in default of such amendment within ten days from the date of this judgment plaintiffs' demand be dismissed, at their cost."

Plaintiffs, within the delay, filed an amended and supplemental petition, in obedience to the order of the court, in which they alleged that Bratman had received $1,418.49 on account of his salary, but they prayed for judgment as in their original petition.

Defendants again excepted, one of the grounds being that plaintiffs had not obeyed the order of court, and judgment was rendered as follows: "It is ordered that said exceptions be maintained in so far as to order plaintiffs to further amend their petition herein, within ten days, by setting forth the amount of commissions earned by and paid to defendant as salary during the term of his employment, and that, in default of said amendment being filed, plaintiffs' demand be dismissed, with costs."

Plaintiffs filed a second amended petition reiterating and affirming all of the allegations contained in their original and first amended petition, but, in obedience to the court's order, alleged that Bratman earned commissions as salary in the sum of $1,672.56; that between May 1 and November 5, 1898, he had been paid $1,510.44, and $165 prior to said May 1st, making a total of $1,675.44 paid. They further alleged that they were entitled to recover double the amount paid as statutory damages, and also exemplary and punitive damages, the whole amounting to the full sum of $5,000. Wherefore plaintiffs prayed for judgment as in their original petition.

Defendants again excepted, but their exceptions were overruled, and, reserving the benefit of their exceptions, answered, pleading the general issue, and averring that they employed Bratman in the usual course of business, specially denying any notice or knowledge at the time of his alleged contract with plaintiffs, and that they enticed said Bratman from his employment with plaintiffs for any purpose. Further answering, defendants specially denied that their employment of Bratman caused any damages to plaintiffs, or, if it did, they averred that such damages were too remote and speculative to form a basis for recovery.

There was judgment in favor of the defendants, and plaintiffs have appealed.

In ruling on the exceptions of no cause of action the court held as a matter of law that plaintiffs had no right to recover the damages alleged in the petition, but were confined to the damages provided by article 2750 of the Civil Code and act No. 50 of 1892, p. 72, and the court sustained the exceptions, with leave to plaintiffs to amend their petition in accordance with the order of court.

Plaintiffs had their option to amend or not to amend. Having elected to amend, and by so doing acquiesced in the judgment, they waived whatever right they may have had to contest the ruling of the court. Originally, the sustaining of a demurrer put the plaintiff out of court, but the practice grew up in courts of equity to allow amendments on certain conditions. If the conditions were not complied with, the decree became final and effective.

The present rules of practice in chancery are set forth as follows:

"If a demurrer to a bill is sustained with leave to amend, and the amendment is not made within the time limited, the bill must be dismissed. Where a bill is amended after demurrer thereto has been sustained, the amendment operates as a waiver of the right to question the correctness of the ruling sustaining the demurrer." 6 Enc. Pl. & Pr. p. 428. The same rules apply at common law. Id. 359, 360, and notes.

A plaintiff has the right to stand by his original pleadings and appeal from the decree pronouncing them insufficient in law, or to acquiesce in the decree by availing himself of the leave contained therein to amend. He cannot do both, and must make his election at the proper time.

In this very case the court on the trial of the cause excluded all evidence to prove the kind of damages claimed in the original petition, to wit, loss of profits and exemplary or punitive damages. On the evidence the claim of plaintiff was limited to the damages fixed by the Code and the statute.

On the facts of the case defendant company, when they engaged the services of H. Bratman, did not know that he had a time contract with plaintiffs. It is true that they were notified of the contract before Bratman commenced working for them, and that he offered to release them if they so desired. But the defendants referred the matter to their counsel, and on his advice decided to carry out their contract with Bratman, who testified that he had no intention of returning to plaintiffs' service. Albert Lob had a number of conversations with Bratman, and testified that the latter said that his time was up on November 15th. Bratman had misunderstandings with plaintiffs, and was seeking new employment.

Godfrey Lob testified that Bratman twice stated in the presence of the attorney that he would not go back to Wolf & Sons.

Boiled down, the question before the court is whether the defendant company and stockholders are liable for damages for not releasing or discharging Bratman when they were informed of his time contract with plaintiffs.

Article 2750 of the Civil Code provides that the laborer who leaves his employer, before the time of his engagement has expired, without just cause of complaint, shall forfeit all the wages that may be due to him, and shall, moreover, be compelled to repay all the money he has received, either as due for his wages or in advance thereof, on the running year, or on the time of his engagement.

This article fixes the damages as between the laborer and his employer, but has no application to third persons.

Act No. 50 of 1892, p. 72, is a criminal statute, and its object is to enforce labor contracts or contracts of labor, and to punish third persons who wilfully interfere therein, entice away, knowingly employ, or induce a laborer, before the expiration of his contract, to leave his employer or the place rented. The statute provides that the third person violating its provisions shall be fined, and "shall be liable in double the amount of damages in a civil action which such employer or landlord may suffer by such abandonment."

In Kline v. Eubanks, 109 La. 242, 33 So. 211, we held that the civil action provided by that statute would not lie until after a criminal conviction. We also considered the case under Civil Code, art. 2315, which provides that "every act of man that causes damage to another obliges him by whose fault it happened to repair it;" and we held that no action was maintainable under said article where a third person had knowingly employed and enticed away a laborer before the expiration of the term of his contract.

We approved the doctrine that "an action cannot, in general, be maintained for inducing a third person to break his contract." In addition to the authorities cited by us in that case, we extract from Cooley on Torts, 2d ed. *497, the following statement of the accepted jurisprudence in our sister states, viz.: "An action cannot, in general, be maintained for inducing a third person to break his contract with the plaintiff; the consequence, after all, being only a broken contract, for which the party to the contract may have his remedy by suing upon it. But if the third person was induced to break his contract by deception, it may be different. If, for example, one were to personate a vendee of goods, and receive and pay for them as on a sale to himself, the vendee would have his action against the vendor, but he might also pursue the party who, by deceiving one, had defrauded both." The same author, under the title of Injuries to Family Rights and under the head of Master and Servant says: "The wrongs which the master may sustain in that relation at the hands of others are substantially confined to being deprived of services. . . . The principles which govern the recovery have been sufficiently indicated in speaking of parent and child." Under the subtitle of Action by the Parent, the same learned author says: "Loss of service to the parent may be occasioned by enticing the child away, by forcibly abducting the child, by beating or otherwise purposely injuring the child." It is apparent that the doctrine announced by Cooley originated at a time when the child and the servant were on the same footing, and "when serfdom and villenage very largely prevailed." *222. The civil law is different. Our Code says: "A man is at liberty to dismiss a hired servant attached to his person or family without assigning any reason for so doing. The servant is also free to depart without assigning any cause." Civil Code, art. 2747.

The English authorities cited by plaintiffs' counsel have not been followed in this country, and we do not think have any application to employees in commercial pursuits.

Our ruling in Kline v. Eubanks is in accord with the weight of jurisprudence in this country, and more in consonance with the spirit of free labor. In that case we expressed the opinion that the act of 1892 applied only to agricultural laborers and tenants, and we may add that this is a matter of common knowledge.

While the Mosaic law, cited by counsel, declares that "thou shalt not covet thy neighbor's servant," it does not impose a pecuniary penalty for disobedience. It may also be noted that in the time of Moses servants were slaves, and were classed with the ox and the ass.

It is therefore ordered, adjudged, and decreed that the judgment appealed from be affirmed.

Petition for rehearing denied June 29, 1904.

37 L. R. A.

STATE of Louisiana ex rel. Edward GALLE
v.

City of NEW ORLEANS, Appt.

(.....La.....)

- *1. The business of selling intoxicating liquors is made lawful by the Constitution and statutes of this state, and the right of any citizen to engage in it is one, the enjoyment of which is subject to such conditions only as may be imposed or authorized by the general assembly in the legitimate exercise of the police power of the state.
2. The police power of the state, like other governmental authority, is to be used for the common welfare, impartially and without unjust discrimination; and whilst, as between liquor selling and other callings less harmful to the public, the former may be discriminated against, there is no warrant for unjust discrimination as between individuals engaged in the same business.
3. The discretion vested in the city of New Orleans with respect to granting permission to open and conduct barrooms is not unlimited, and does not give that body absolute control of the matter; and, where the refusal to grant such permission is arbitrary, discriminatory, and unjust, a writ of mandamus will issue.
4. An applicant for a barroom license, to whose character no objection is found, ought not to be refused permission to engage in that business, in a neighborhood where others are so engaged, on the objection of a minority of the property holders, or on the ground that no more barrooms are needed.

(Nicholls, J., dissents.)

(April 11, 1904.)

A PPEAL by defendant from a judgment of the Civil District Court for the Parish of Orleans in favor of relator in a mandamus proceeding to compel the granting of a license to carry on a barroom. Affirmed. The facts are stated in the opinion.

*Headnotes by MONROE, J.

NOTE.—As to extent of discretion in granting liquor licenses, see also note to Sherlock v. Stuart, 21 L. R. A. 580.

As to power of city to single out a certain saloon and arbitrarily declare it a nuisance and order it closed, see De Blanc v. New Iberia, 56 L. R. A. 285.

As to power of city to declare all places where liquors are sold to be nuisances, see Lauget v. Bushnell, 58 L. R. A. 266.

As to right to provide for destruction without jury trial of intoxicating liquors kept for illegal sale, see Kirkland v. State, 65 L. R. A. 76.

As to extent of police power in regulating sales of intoxicating liquors generally, see notes to State v. Fulker, 7 L. R. A. 183; State v. Creeden, 7 L. R. A. 295; and Tragesser v. Gray, 9 L. R. A. 780; also the other cases in this series of Altensburg v. Com. 4 L. R. A. 543; McCullough v. Brown, 23 L. R. A. 410; Com. v. Fowler, 33 L. R. A. 839; and State v. Gerhardt, 33 L. R. A. 313.

Messrs. H. G. Dupré and Samuel L. Gilmore, for appellant:

The court or board charged with the duty of issuing licenses is invested with a sound judicial discretion, to be exercised in view of all the facts and circumstances of each particular case, as to granting or refusing the license applied for.

Black, Intoxicating Liquors, § 170; Re Hoover, 30 Fed. 51; Sparrow's Petition, 138 Pa. 116, 20 Atl. 711; United States ex rel. Hover v. Ronan, 33 Fed. 117; Batters v. Dunning, 49 Conn. 479; Ailstock v. Page, 77 Va. 386; Perkins v. Ledbetter, 68 Miss. 327, 8 So. 507.

The right to sell intoxicating liquors is not one of the privileges and immunities of citizens of the United States.

Barthemeyer v. Iowa, 18 Wall. 129, 21 L. ed. 929; Mugler v. Kansas, 123 U. S. 623, 31 L. ed. 205, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 273; Crowley v. Christensen, 137 U. S. 91, 34 L. ed. 623, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 13.

The act of the licensing board or court vested with the power of issuing licenses is not merely ministerial, but it acts in a judicial capacity.

17 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, 2d ed. p. 254, § 17; Black, Intoxicating Liquors, § 170; Perkins v. Ledbetter, 68 Miss. 327, 8 So. 507; Sherlock v. Stuart, 96 Mich. 193, 21 L. R. A. 580, 55 N. W. 845; United States ex rel. Hover v. Ronan, 33 Fed. 117; Wiggins v. Varner, 67 Ga. 583; Re Bickerstaff, 70 Cal. 35, 11 Pac. 393; Ex parte Christensen, 85 Cal. 208, 24 Pac. 747.

A writ of mandamus will not lie to control or interfere with matters resting purely in the discretion of those against whom the writ would be directed.

Dundar v. Frazer, 78 Ala. 529; Hopson's Appeal, 65 Conn. 140, 31 Atl. 531; Polk County v. Johnson, 21 Fla. 578; State ex rel. Reynolds v. Tippecanoe County, 45 Ind. 501; Leighton v. Maury, 76 Va. 865; State ex rel. Noble v. Cheyenne, 7 Wyo. 417, 40 L. R. A. 710, 52 Pac. 975; Perry v. Salt Lake City, 7 Utah, 143, 11 L. R. A. 446, 25 Pac. 739, 998.

The state expects her servants to do their duty, and she frames laws accordingly, and, hence, she feels that the rights of those of her citizens who wish to enter the liquor business are as amply safeguarded by the final action of a municipal council as if she had granted to them the right of successive appeals from the council's decision up to the supreme tribunal of the land.

Swift v. People, 162 Ill. 534, 33 L. R. A. 472, 44 N. E. 528; Re Hoover, 30 Fed. 51.

The fact that a certain section is a residence district justifies the licensing board in refusing to locate a barroom therein.

Swift v. People, 63 Ill. App. 453; People 67 L. R. A.

ex rel. Jones v. Bennett, 4 Misc. 10, 23 N. Y. Supp. 695; People ex rel. McNutt v. Mills, 91 Hun, 144, 36 N. Y. Supp. 273.

The liquor business stands on an absolutely different basis from any other vocation.

Black, Intoxicating Liquors, § 34; Crowley v. Christensen, 137 U. S. 86, 34 L. ed. 620, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 13; Ex parte Christensen, 85 Cal. 213, 24 Pac. 747; Shea v. Muncie, 148 Ind. 31, 46 N. E. 138; State ex rel. Kyger v. Holt County Justices, 39 Mo. 524; State ex rel. Noble v. Cheyenne, 7 Wyo. 417, 40 L. R. A. 716, 52 Pac. 975.

The court cannot apply, in this case, the principles which it has enunciated in the market, stable, and dairy cases.

Perry v. Salt Lake City, 7 Utah, 143, 11 L. R. A. 446, 25 Pac. 739, 998; Muller v. Buncombe County, 89 N. C. 171; State ex rel. Noble v. Cheyenne, 7 Wyo. 417, 40 L. R. A. 716, 52 Pac. 975; Sherlock v. Stuart, 96 Mich. 193, 21 L. R. A. 580, 55 N. W. 845; Gundling v. Chicago, 177 U. S. 183, 44 L. ed. 725, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 633.

Messrs. Dinkelspiel & Hart, for appellee:

The business of keeping a barroom is not one prohibited in the city of New Orleans. This being so, it is incompetent for the city council, by ordinance or otherwise, to punish anyone for carrying on this lawful business.

State v. Quaid, 43 La. Ann. 1076, 26 Am. St. Rep. 207, 10 So. 183; Shreveport v. Maloney, 107 La. 193, 31 So. 702.

The fact that the authorities charged with the duty of issuing liquor licenses wrongfully or arbitrarily refused to grant a license to the applicant is not equivalent to a proper license, and affords him no justification or defense for engaging in the traffic without a license; he has his remedy by mandamus, and this remedy he must successfully pursue before he can legally begin selling.

Brook v. State, 65 Ga. 437; Kadgihn v. Bloomington, 58 Ill. 229; Kansas v. Flanders, 71 Mo. 281; State v. Jamison, 23 Mo. 330; Zanone v. Mound City, 103 Ill. 552; Black, Intoxicating Liquors, § 119.

The use of the word "may" did not vest a discretion in the county court that could not be controlled by mandamus.

McLeod v. Scott, 21 Or. 94, 26 Pac. 1061, 29 Pac. 1; Potter v. Homer, 59 Mich. 8, 26 N. W. 208.

The only power vested in the council was to inquire whether the applicant for the liquor license had complied with the requisites of the law, and whether the protest against him was sufficient in law to overcome the effect of his application.

Amperse v. Kalamazoo, 59 Mich. 78, 26 N. W. 222, 409; State ex rel. Adamson v. Lafayette County Court, 41 Mo. 221; Ex parte Candee, 48 Ala. 386; Prospect Brewing Co.'s Petition, 127 Pa. 523, 17 Atl. 1090; 11 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, p. 662; Yick Wo v. Hopkins, 118 U. S. 356, 30 L. ed. 220, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1064.

If a license has been refused to a properly qualified person without any reason whatever, or without any reason which is valid and sufficient in law, but in the arbitrary or capricious exercise of the power vested in the licensing authorities, then redress may be had by the process of mandamus.

Black, Intoxicating Liquors, § 172; Re Sparrow (Pa.) 20 Atl. 692; McQuillin, Mun. Ord. § 193; Soon Hing v. Crowley, 113 U. S. 703, 28 L. ed. 1145, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 730; Deehan v. Johnson, 141 Mass. 23, 6 N. E. 240; State v. Mahner, 43 La. Ann. 496, 9 So. 480; McDonoughville v. James Band, No. 14,958 (La.) Feb. 1st, 1904.

Monroe, J., delivered the opinion of the court:

The respondent has appealed from a judgment making peremptory a writ of mandamus commanding it to grant to the relator the right to open and carry on a barroom. Whether the judgment appealed from is correct or incorrect depends upon the interpretation which shall be placed upon certain provisions of state and municipal law, there being no dispute as to the facts.

The present charter of the city of New Orleans (Act Gen. Assem. No. 45, p. 53, of 1896), § 14, confers on the council the power, inter alia, to adopt and enforce such ordinances as may be necessary and proper "(1) to preserve the peace and good order of the city." Section 15, amended and re-enacted by act No. 131, p. 228, of 1902: "(10) To regulate the police of theaters, public halls, dance houses, concert saloons, taverns, hotels, houses of public entertainment, shops for retailing alcoholic liquors, houses of prostitution and assignation, and to close such houses from certain limits; and shall have power to exclude the same, and to close houses and places for the sale of intoxicating liquors when the public safety may require it, and to authorize the mayor and police to close such places; . . . (14) . . . to exercise general police power in the city of New Orleans." Section 21 of the act provides that "the council shall not grant any privilege for the opening of any barroom, saloon, concert saloon, or dance hall, except upon the consent of a majority of the bona fide householders or property holders within 300 feet, measured along the street fronts, of the proposed location of such barroom, saloon, concert saloon, or dance hall, and that it shall revoke any privilege on the petition of a like number of such persons, any prior license or privilege to the contrary notwithstanding."

Acting under the authority thus conferred, the council adopted an ordinance (No. 12,636, C. S.) which reads:

"Be it ordained . . . that hereafter it shall not be lawful for anyone to set up or establish any barroom, saloon, concert saloon, dance hall, beer house, or place where liquors are sold at retail, by the glass, to be consumed then, without the permission of the council previously applied for in writing, which shall be accompanied by the written consent of a majority of the bona fide property holders, within 300 feet, measured along the street front, of the proposed location of such barroom, saloon, concert saloon, dance hall, beer house, or place where liquors are sold at retail, by the glass," etc. The ordinance further provides that the petition of the applicant for either of the privileges enumerated shall be accompanied by a certificate from the city engineer showing that it has been signed by the requisite number of property holders, that violation of the ordinance shall be punishable by fine or imprisonment, and that such privileges shall be revocable at the pleasure of the council.

The council also adopted an ordinance (No. 13,481, C. S.) which reads: "Be it ordained . . . that, from and after the promulgation of this ordinance, no application for a barroom privilege shall be considered by the council unless accompanied by the treasurer's receipt, showing that he deposited with said treasurer the amount of the license due for barroom business at the date of the application."

Apart from the provisions of the respondent's charter which have been quoted, there were embodied in the Revised Statutes, when and before that charter was adopted, certain provisions in regard to the sale of intoxicating liquors, some of which were amended and re-enacted by act No. 221, p. 451, of 1902, as follows:

"Section 1. Be it enacted that §§ 1211 and 2778 of the Revised Statutes of 1870 be amended and re-enacted so as to read: "That the police juries of the several parishes of the state, the municipal authorities of the several villages, towns, and cities, and the city council of the city of New Orleans, shall have the exclusive power to make such rules and regulations for the sale, or the prohibition of the sale, of intoxicating liquors, as they may deem advisable, and to grant, or withhold, licenses for drinking houses and shops within the limits of a city, parish, ward of a parish, town, or village, as a majority of the legal voters of any city, parish, ward of a parish, town, or village may determine by ballot, and the said ballot shall be taken whenever deemed necessary by the police juries, of the several parishes, the municipal authorities of the several towns, and the city council of the city of New Orleans: Provided, said election shall not be held oftener than once a year, and, when so held, the effect of said election shall continue in force until another election in the parish, ward of a parish, city, town, or village, is held on the same question; and provided further, that whenever [at] an election held under this section, the majority of the votes cast in said ward, if only a ward election has been held, or a majority of the votes cast in the parish, if an election has been held for the whole parish, shall be against granting the licenses for the sale of intoxicating liquors, said vote or decision shall control the action of said ward, city, town, or village, within the limits of the said ward, or parish, as the case may be, as fully and completely as if said election had been held by authority of said city, town, or village.

"Sec. 2. That all laws in conflict with this act be, and the same are, hereby repealed."

By another provision of the Revised Statutes (§ 1212), the state relinquishes the right to grant licenses in any town, city, or parish where they are not granted by the local authorities. Beyond this the general law (act No. 171, p. 387, of 1898) providing for the levying and collection of licenses applies, in terms, to barrooms, and requires that licenses shall be paid therefor as for any other business.

In his petition to the court, the relator alleges that, notwithstanding his compliance with the law, and notwithstanding the fact that its duty in the premises is purely ministerial, the council of the city of New Orleans refuses to grant him permission to open and conduct a barroom, and he prays for a writ of mandamus. To this the respondent answers that it carefully considered the relator's application, and, "in view of the protest of a respectable minority of the property holders, and of the fact that a similar application had been recently denied, and the further fact that a sufficient number of barrooms already existed in said vicinity, and for other good and substantial reasons rejected the same." It denies that the relator can engage in the business of selling liquor at retail without its permission, and emphatically denies that the consent of a majority of the property holders living within 300 feet of the proposed barroom entitles him, of right, to such permission; and it avers that the granting or withholding of the same is a matter entirely within its discretion, and with respect to which it cannot be controlled by mandamus. It also denies that the relator made the deposit with the treasurer as required by ordinance 13,481. Upon the trial it was admitted, or proved without attempt at contradiction, that the relator presented a petition to the city council for permission to open and conduct a barroom at the corner of North Rampart and Iberville streets; that the petition so presented was accompanied by the written consent of 22 out of a total of 39 persons holding property within 300 feet of the proposed location, as certified by the city engineer; that 10 such persons thereafter protested against the granting of the permission; that the application was unfavorably acted on by the council, but that such action was not based upon any objection to the character of the applicant; and that there are several barrooms already established within 300 feet of the proposed location. The defendant offered to show by what considerations different members of the council and protesting property holders were influenced in refusing and opposing the granting of the permission desired by the relator, but some of the evidence upon that subject, having been objected to as irrelevant was excluded.

The main facts relied on by the respondent having been disclosed, however, no action is here invoked with respect to the ruling thus made. Those facts are substantially as follows: The clubhouse of the Young Men's Gymnastic Club is within half a square of the site selected for the proposed barroom. The Eye, Ear, Nose, & Throat Hospital, a charitable institution, is diagonally opposite, on Rampart street. A number of gentlemen holding property on Rampart street have organized themselves into a commission for the purpose of improving the condition of the street, concerning which respondent's counsel says in his brief: "Rampart street, from the second block down to Esplanade avenue, is essentially a residence street, and, . . . whilst there are barrooms in the first block, and some scattering ones below, the buildings are occupied in a majority of instances as residences, and there is a constantly increasing tendency in that direction. Another barroom, on a block now free from saloons, would be likely to give a setback to the development of the avenue."

Per contra, it appears that relator proposes to establish his barroom at the northeast corner of Rampart and Iberville streets; that on Rampart street between Iberville and Canal—being that part to which respondent refers as the "first block," immediately south of and adjacent to said corner—there are already several barrooms, and that on Rampart street, to the north of the square in which relator proposes to establish his barroom, for some 8 or 10 squares, to Esplanade avenue, there are quite a number of barrooms, grocery stores, stables, undertaker's shop, soda-water factory, etc. The Young Men's Gymnastic Club, whose clubhouse is on the same square with the proposed site, has a barroom for the use of its members. It does not appear that the respondent or the property holders have attempted to close any barroom now open on Rampart street, which street, it may be said, is 100 feet wide, or more; and the hospital, on the opposite side, diagonally, cannot be much, if any, farther from the barrooms already established than from the site selected by the relator.

The Constitution of this state contains these provisions pertinent to the matter at issue, to wit:

"Art. 2. No person shall be deprived of life, liberty, or property except by due process of law." "Art. 181. The regulation of the sale of alcoholic and spirituous liquors is declared a police regulation, and the general assembly may enact laws regulating their sale and use." Interpreting the word "liberty," as used in the connection in which it is found in article 2, the court of appeals of New York has well said: "Liberty, in its broad sense, as understood in this country, means the right not only of freedom from actual, servitude, imprisonment, or restraint, but the right of one to use his faculties in all lawful ways, to live and work where he will, to earn his livelihood in any lawful calling, and to pursue any lawful trade or avocation." Re Jacobs, 98 N. Y. 98, 50 Am. Rep. 636; People v. Marx, 99 N. Y. 386, 52 Am. Rep. 34, 2 N. E. 29; Ex parte Virginia, 100 U. S. 339, 25 L. ed. 476.

Our organic law therefore secures to every citizen the right to earn his livelihood in any lawful calling, unless he is deprived of that right by due process of law, and it recognizes the business of selling intoxicating liquors as a lawful calling by conferring upon the general assembly the right to regulate rather than to prohibit it; and conformably to the mandate thus conferred, the general assembly recognizes it as a lawful calling by including it among other callings, for the pursuit of which it authorizes the issuance of licenses, and by making no attempt to prohibit it, or to authorize its prohibition by any municipal corporation in the state. On the contrary, it has re-enacted, in part, since the adoption of the latest amendment to the charter of the city of New Orleans, a statute which, applying to the city in terms as specific as those of the charter provides that "the city council of the city of New Orleans shall have the exclusive power to make such rules and regulations for the sale, or the prohibition of the sale, of intoxicating liquors as they may deem advisable, and to grant, or withhold, licenses from drinking houses and shops . . . as a majority of the legal voters may determine by ballot." Act No. 221, p. 451, of 1902, supra.

If we assume the different laws thus mentioned to be in all respects competent legislation, the question of prohibition vel non in New Orleans must be referred to the legal voters, to be decided by them at an election to be held for that purpose. In default of action by the legal voters prohibiting the liquor business, the question whether a particular individual shall engage in the business is to be decided by the city council in the event of, and after, favorable action by a majority of the persons holding property within 300 feet of the place where the business is to be conducted; unfavorable action by such property holders being conclusive. The power to regulate the business, if it be not prohibited by the voters, and to enforce the prohibition, if it be prohibited, is likewise vested in the council. The legal voters having taken no action, the selling of liquor in New Orleans is a legitimate business, recognized by the Constitution and authorized by law, in which some thousands of persons are engaged, but in which the right of the relator to engage is denied by the city council, notwithstanding that he has done all that the law requires in the matter, and that no objection to his character is suggested.

It is wholly immaterial, for the purposes of the question presented, that it has been held that the right to sell intoxicating liquors is not inherent in a citizen of a state or of the United States (Orowley v. Christensen, 137 U. S. 86, 34 L. ed. 620, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 13), and equally immaterial that in another state it has been held that such right is derived from the common law (Welsh v. State, 126 Ind. 71, 9 L. R. A. 606, 25 N. E. 883), since in Louisiana it is a right conferred by the written law of the state, the enjoyment of which is subject to such conditions only as may be imposed or authorized by the general assembly in the legitimate exercise of the police power of the state.

The police power of the state can, however, be exercised only in the enactment and enforcement of laws, and the lawmaking power is restricted within the limitations imposed by the Constitution of the United States and its own Constitution, and those which are said to be inherent in American institutions, and, like other governmental authority, is to be used for the common welfare,—impartially and without arbitrary or unjust discrimination to the prejudice of private rights and individual liberty. These propositions are interwoven among the principles upon which our system of government is founded, and are supported by the following among other authorities, to wit:

"It belongs to that department" [the legislative] says the Supreme Court of the United States in a leading case, "to exert what are known as the police powers of the state, and to determine primarily what measures are appropriate or needful for the protection of the public morals, the public health, or the public safety. It does not at all follow that every statute enacted ostensibly for the promotion of these ends is to be accepted as a legitimate exertion of the police powers of the state. There are, of necessity, limits beyond which legislation cannot rightfully go." . . . The courts are not bound by mere forms, nor are they to be misled by mere pretenses. They are at liberty—indeed, are under a solemn duty—to look at the substance of things whenever they enter upon the inquiry whether the legislature has transcended the limits of its authority. If, therefore, a statute purporting to have been enacted to protect the public health, the public morals, or the public safety has no real or substantial relation to those objects, or is a palpable invasion of rights secured by the fundamental law, it is the duty of the courts to so adjudge, and thereby give effect to the Constitution." Mugler v. Kansas, 123 U. S. 623, 31 L. ed. 205, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 273.

In Giozza v. Tiernan, 148 U. S. 657, 37 L. ed. 599, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 721, the Supreme Court of the United States sustained a statute of Texas requiring a bond of $5,000 to be given by all persons engaged in the business of selling intoxicating liquors by retail, and said: "This statute affects all persons in Texas engaged in the sale of liquors in exactly the same manner and degree. Whether considered as imposing restrictions upon the sale, in the exercise of the police power of the state, or as levying taxes upon occupations, under authority of the legislature in that behalf, petitioner was not arbitrarily deprived of his property nor denied of the equal protection of the laws."

In Eden v. People, 161 Ill. 296, 32 L. R. A. 659, 52 Am. St. Rep. 365, 43 N. E. 1108, the supreme court of Illinois held that the police power does not justify a statute which makes it unlawful for barbers to do business on Sundays, without interfering with any other class of business, and, in so doing, said: "The fundamental principle upon which liberty is based . . . is equality under the law of the land." 47 L. R. A.

Assuming to be acting in the exercise of its police power, the council of New Orleans passed an ordinance prescribing the limits within which dairies might be conducted "by permission," and making it unlawful to keep more than two cows without such permission. This court held that the ordinance was illegal, because it did not affect all citizens engaged in the same business in the same way; because the discretion vested by the ordinance in the council was in no way regulated or controlled, and might be controlled by partisan considerations, race prejudice, or personal animosity, and exercised in the interest of a favored few. State v. Mahner, 43 La. Ann. 496, 9 So. 480. It has likewise been held that a market ordinance adopted in the exercise of the police power "must be impartial, making no discriminations and creating no monopolies (State v. Sarradat, 46 La. Ann. 700, 24 L. R. A. 584, 15 So. 87;)" that an ordinance prohibiting the stabling of more than two horses without permission of the council was unequal in its operation, repugnant to the 14th Amendment of the Constitution of the United States, and void (State v. Kuntz, 47 La. Ann. 106, 16 So. 651); that an ordinance, the effect of which was to permit four livery stables, already established, to be maintained in the business part of a town, whilst others were to be relegated to the suburbs, was neither "lawful," "fair," "general," "reasonable," "impartial," nor "consistent with public policy" (Orowley v. West, 52 La. Ann. 526, 47 L. R. A. 652, 78 Am. St. Rep. 355, 27 So. 53); that a similar ordinance concerning barrooms was void for similar reasons (Mandeville v. Band, 111 La. 806, 35 So. 915).

In State v. Garibaldi, 44 La. Ann. 809, 11 So. 36, it was held that an ordinance prohibiting the establishment of private markets without permission previously obtained on petition accompanied by the consent of a majority of the persons holding property within 600 feet of the site of any proposed market was void, in so far as it purported to delegate to private citizens the police power vested in the city council; and in Noel v. People, 187 Ill. 587, 52 L. R. A. 287, 79 Am. St. Rep. 238, 58 N. E. 616, it was held that a statute vesting in a board of pharmacy the right to determine who should and who should not sell the usual domestic and proprietary remedies, without in any way regulating the discretion vested in such board, was void.

It has also been held by the supreme court of Illinois that, "under a general ordinance of a city for licensing dramshops, the city authorities have no right to make an arbitrary discrimination in granting licenses. They cannot grant the same to a avored few, and refuse it to another who has in all respects complied with the ordinance and laws of the state, and who is admitted to be in every respect a suitable person. The business of dealing in liquor is recognized by the Constitution as a legitimate business, and a license to keep a grocery or dramshop is placed in the same category with licenses to carry on any other lawful business, and it must be dealt with according to law, and special privileges are not to be granted to particular persons.

. . . Ordinances must be general in their character, and operate equally upon all persons within the municipality, of the same class, to whom they relate. They must not be in violation of any law, contrary to public policy, or unnecessarily oppressive, and must not unjustly and arbitrarily discriminate between citizens of the same class." Zanone v. Mound City, 103 Ill. 552.

The case at bar differs from some of those which have been cited, in that they concerned harmless callings, whilst that in which the relator proposes to engage is usually regarded as pernicious. That fact, no doubt, furnishes a sufficient reason for discriminating against the calling, but it affords no justification for discriminating between persons similarly situated who may be, or may desire to become, engaged in that calling. The relator occupies the same relation to any other barkeeper that the trade of the barber does to that of the baker, and the principle applied as between the two trades is equally applicable as between the two individuals engaged in the same business or trade. A statute of this state imposing conditions upon the business of selling intoxicating liquors, though such conditions be more onerous than those imposed upon another business, may be sustained because the business of selling intoxicating liquors more seriously affects the health, morals, and general welfare of the public than another business; but where, as in this case, the state legalizes the business of selling liquors, and an individual citizen is denied the right to engage in it in a place and under conditions where and under which others having no better qualifications than he are so engaged, the law, if any there be, authorizing such denial, has no just foundation in reason or in the police power of the state, for it deprives one citizen of the right to earn his livelihood by means of a lawful calling, whilst according that right to others similarly situated, and, in so doing, deprives him of the equal protection of the law, and of his liberty, without due process of law, and oversteps those restrictions upon legislation which are said to be inherent in the nature of American institutions.

67 L. R. A.

The answer concedes, and the fact is, that the relator's application was considered and acted on by the council, and the defense that he failed to comply with the requirements of ordinance No. 13,481 is not insisted on. Our conclusion, then, is that the reasons assigned by the respondent are insufficient to support its refusal to grant to the relator permission to engage in the business of keeping a barroom at the place mentioned in the petition, and that the writ of mandamus was properly issued. The judgment appealed from is accordingly affirmed at the cost of the respondent.

Provosty and Land, JJ., concur in the decree holding that, under the statute, the discretion as to the granting or withholding of a license is confided exclusively to the property holders.

Nicholls, J., dissents.

Petition for rehearing denied June 6, 1904.

Thomas CRICHTON et al., Appts.,

v.

WEBB PRESS COMPANY, Limited.

(.....La.....)

- *1. Where the same five persons compose both the directorate and the body of the stockholders of a corporation, two of these persons cannot, by joining with a third, enter into contracts with the corporation, or fix their own salaries, or vote allowances to themselves, over the protest of their two other associates. It is not possible for a person to be on both sides of a contract, and equity will not permit the members of a corporation, whether as directors or as stockholders, to vote to themselves the money of the corporation over the protest of their associates.
2. Ordinarily there is no trust relation between the stockholder and the corporation, but the reason is that ordinarily the stockholder has no mandate to administer the affairs of the corporation; but, if stockholders undertake to discharge the functions of directors and conduct the affairs of the corporation, they become subject to the same trust relation which precludes directors from contracting with themselves to the detriment of the corporation.
3. Where the majority of the stockholders of a corporation, who were also the sole managers of its business, have gone on, over the protest of the minority, and dealt with themselves, and the court, on the complaint of the minority of the stockholders, cannot approve the basis upon which the business has been carried on, a situation is presented with which the court must deal as best it can under the circumstances, even though its intervention involves the proposition of reforming the contract between the corporation and the majority of stockholders, or revising the basis for the apportionment of the profits of the business.

*Headnotes by PROVOSTY, J.

NOTE.—As to right of stockholders to vote salaries to themselves as officers, see also, in this series, Eaton v. Robinson, 29 L. R. A. 100, and Miner v. Belle Isle Ice Co. 17 L. R. A. 412.

As to right of stockholders who are also directors to vote in stockholders' meeting on question in which directors are personally interested, see Hodge v. United States Steel Corp. 60 L. R. A. 742.

4. On complaint of the minority stockholders, and on proper showing, the court will order the board of directors of a corporation to declare a dividend.

(June 6, 1904.)

APPEAL by plaintiffs from a judgment of the Judicial District Court for the Parish of Webster in favor of defendant in a suit to compel the declaration of a dividend by a corporation of which plaintiffs were stockholders. Reversed.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Messrs. Alexander & Wilkinson, Stewart & Stewart, and Sutherland & Barret, for appellants:

No royalty should be paid the Webbs for the use of their patent on the 80-inch press. The 80-inch press patent is an infringement of the 90-inch press patent, and in a suit for royalties that defense could be and will be successfully urged. The 80-inch press is but another way of applying the same principle of the 90-inch press.

Galvin v. Grand Rapids, 53 C. C. A. 165, 115 Fed. 511.

By the express terms of the patent itself, S. J. Webb was only given the exclusive use of that patent for seventeen years from December 15, 1902. It did not relate back. Before the issuing of this patent, he had no right to demand or receive a royalty for its use.

Brown v. Duchesne, 19 How. 183, 15 L. ed. 595; Marsh v. Nichols, 15 Fed. 914; Rein v. Clayton, 3 L. R. A. 78, 37 Fed. 358.

The Webbs, as directors or as stockholders, have no right to fix the amount of royalty to be paid them as individuals.

Wardell v. Union P. R. Co. 103 U. S. 651, 26 L. ed. 509; Curtin v. Salmon River Hydraulic Gold Min. & Ditch Co. 130 Cal. 345, 80 Am. St. Rep. 132, 62 Pac. 552; Twinkllick Oil Co. v. Marbury, 91 U. S. 587, 23 L. ed. 329; Thompson v. Williams, 76 Cal. 153, 9 Am. St. Rep. 187, 18 Pac. 153; Thomas v. Brownville, Ft. K. & P. R. Co. 109 U. S. 522, 27 L. ed. 1018, 3 Sup. Ct. Rep. 315; Pauly v. Pauly, 107 Cal. 8, 48 Am. St. Rep. 98, 40 Pac. 29; Wickersham v. Crittenden, 93 Cal. 17, 28 Pac. 788; 3 Thomp. Corp. §§ 3929, 4042, 8478; Cook, Corp. § 649, p. 1263.

The agents of a corporation, and even a 67 L. R. A. majority of the members, cannot arbitrarily withhold profits earned by the company, or apply them to any use which is not authorized by the company's charter.

Morawetz, Priv. Corp. § 447; Fougeray v. Cord, 50 N. J. Eq. 185, 24 Atl. 499; 2 Cook, Corp. p. 1010, note 3.

Until the patent is issued the inventor has no property interest in the invention, and no power over its use.

Gayler v. Wilder, 10 How. 477, 13 L. ed. 504; Brown v. Duchesne, 19 How. 183, 15 L. ed. 595; Marsh v. Nichols, 15 Fed. 914, Affirmed in 128 U. S. 605, 32 L. ed. 538, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 168; Durham v. Seymour, 161 U. S. 238, 40 L. ed. 684, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 452; Kirk v. United States, 163 U. S. 49, 41 L. ed. 66, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 911.

The patent law is designed to protect only original invention. The law requires more than a change of form, or juxtaposition of parts, or of the external arrangement of things, to give patentability.

Reckendorfer v. Faber, 92 U. S. 347, 23 L. ed. 719; Galvin v. Grand Rapids, 53 C. C. A. 165, 115 Fed. 511.

The stockholders had no right or power, under the charter, to take upon themselves the management of the corporate affairs.

7 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, p. 701; Beatty v. Marine Ins. Co. 2 Johns. 109, 3 Am. Dec. 401; Head v. Providence Ins. Co. 2 Cranch, 160, 2 L. ed. 242; Bank of United States v. Dandridge, 12 Wheat. 64, 6 L. ed. 552; 1 Cook, Corp. § 11, p. 34; Morawetz, Priv. Corp. § 238; Humphreys v. McKissock, 140 U. S. 304, 35 L. ed. 473, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 779; Smith v. Hurd, 12 Met. 371, 46 Am. Dec. 690; De La Vergne Refrigerating Mach. Co. v. German Sav. Inst. 175 U. S. 53, 44 L. ed. 69, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 20; Electrio R. Co. v. Jamaica & B. R. Co. 61 Fed. 679; Jones v. Williams, 139 Mo. 1, 37 L. R. A. 702, 61 Am. St. Rep. 436, 39 S. W. 486, 40 S. W. 353; Sellers v. Greer, 172 Ill. 549, 40 L. R. A. 591, 50 N. E. 246.

If a majority of stockholders take control of a company's business and direct its policy, they thereby take upon themselves the correlative duty of diligence, good faith, and fair dealing to the other stockholders.

Mecker v. Winthrop Iron Co. 17 Fed. 48; Thomp. Corp. § 4461.

On petition for rehearing.

If the Webbs, before they applied for and obtained the patent on the 80-inch press, had sold such presses to others, then their vendees of such specific things could continue to use them or sell them to others, after the patents were applied for and obtained, without liability to the Webbs.

Andrews v. Hovey, 124 U. S. 694, 31 L. ed. 557, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 676; Wade v. Metcalf, 129 U. S. 202, 32 L. ed. 661, 9 Sup. Ct.

Rep. 271; Dable Grain Shovel Co. v. Flint, 137 U. S. 41, 34 L. ed. 618, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 8.

The patentee has no exclusive right of property in his invention except under and by virtue of the statutes securing it to him, and according to the regulations and restrictions of those statutes.

Gayler v. Wilder, 10 How. 477, 13 L. ed. 504; Brown v. Duchesne, 19 How. 183, 15 L. ed. 595; Marsh v. Nichols, S. & Co. 128 U. S. 605, 32 L. ed. 538, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 168.

Messrs. Wise, Randolph, & Rendall, with Mr. Lynn Kyle Watkins, for appellee.

Provosty, J., delivered the opinion of the court:

This suit is brought by two minority stockholders to compel the defendant corporation to declare a dividend. Incidentally, and in order to increase the dividend, the further relief is prayed that certain allowances of salary and certain contracts allowed and made by the majority to and with themselves be annulled. The individuals composing the majority are made parties defendant, together with the corporation itself. The history of the case is this:

In May, 1895, the two brothers, Samuel J. and Robert D. Webb, obtained a patent for a cotton compress of the invention of S. J. Webb. They valued it at $50,000. Not having command of the capital or credit required to put the invention to an actual test by building one of the compresses and putting it in operation, they offered to sell a half interest in the patent to one of the plaintiffs and certain other parties. The latter preferred an arrangement by which they should go security for the Webbs for the building of the press, and in consideration thereof should have an option to buy within a limited time. This was done, and the press was built. It proved successful; but the option was permitted to run out without having been availed of,—why, is not explained. After the option had expired, the two Webbs sold to the two plaintiffs, Thomas and James Crichton, a 16-per-cent interest in the patent for $8,000. The Webbs and the Crichtons then proceeded to exploit the patent by launching a business of compress building, under the firm name of S. J. Webb & Bro. The venture proved in a high degree successful. In the very first year, 1895, a net profit of $16,942.26 was realized. It was then deemed advisable to organize a corporation to carry on the business, and this was accordingly done. The date of the incorporation was the 2d of January, 1896. The incorporators were the same parties who were owners of the patent, 67 L. R. A.

with the addition of J. Y. Webb, a nephew of S. J. and R. D. Webb, who took one share. The name of the corporation was S. J. Webb Company, Limited. Its capital stock was fixed at $100,000, divided into shares of $100. The entire stock was subscribed by the incorporators, owners of the patent, and in the same proportion in which they were owners, except, as already stated, that one share was taken by J. Y. Webb. It may be as well to mention here that the parties continued thereafter to hold the stock in the same proportion,—that is to say, as follows: Thomas Crichton, 10 shares; James E. Crichton, 6 shares; R. D. Webb, 20 shares; S. J. Webb, 63 shares; and J. Y. Webb, 1 share,—and that they so hold it up to the present time. It may also be mentioned here that shortly thereafter J. Y. Webb acquired an interest in the patent corresponding with his interest in the corporation; that is to say, a 1-per-cent interest.

While the immediate purpose of the organization was to exploit this patent, the scope of the corporation was not so limited, but was made more comprehensive; the language of the charter being as follows: "That the purpose and object of this corporation is to buy, sell, build, erect, operate, lease, or rent out compresses or compress machinery under such patent rights as this company may buy, lease, or acquire the agency of, or use and own in its own corporate right, and to procure, own, manufacture, or cause to be manufactured or be made such machinery as may be necessary or useful for carrying out the purposes stated, and to own such necessary warehouses, tools, equipments, lands and property, real and personal, for the furtherance of the business of the corporation."

The charter provided that the stockholders should meet at the office of the company on the first Monday of January of each year without special call; that postponed and called meetings of the stockholders could be held on due notice by the president, setting forth the object of the meeting. The charter also provided that a board of directors, to consist of five stockholders, three of whom should constitute a quorum, should be elected at the regular meeting on the first Monday of January of each year; the first board, however, to be composed of the five incorporators, viz., S. J., R. D., and J. Y. Webb, and Thomas and James Crichton, who should hold office until their successors were elected and had qualified. The charter further provided that the board of directors should conduct the business and affairs of the company and elect the officers of the company, and fix their salaries, and should prescribe the powers and duties of the officers, with the condition, however, that their said acts in respect to the powers and duties and salaries of the officers should be subject to ratification by the stockholders. The officers were to be a president, a vice president, a secretary, and a treasurer, and such other officers as the board of directors might deem necessary to conduct the business of the company.

On the day of the organization, January 2, 1896, the board of directors met and elected the following officers: S. J. Webb, President; Thomas Crichton, Vice President and Treasurer; R. D. Webb, Secretary,—and adopted resolutions to the following effect:

First. A resolution leasing the compress patent from the owners thereof. That is to say, the two Webbs, S. J. and R. D., and the two Crichtons, leased the patent to the corporation, whereof they themselves held the entire stock, except the one share held by J. Y. Webb. The rental was fixed at $5,000 for each compress the company should sell or build, or cause to be sold or built, and $1,000 for each "movement" the company should put, or cause to be put, into a Morse or any other compress; payment to be made upon erection of the machinery.

Second. A resolution authorizing the president and the secretary to make and sign all contracts for the company.

Third. A resolution accepting the proposition of S. J. Webb to work for the company during the year 1896 for $150 a month, "reserving to himself the right to all new inventions or improvements of whatsoever nature he may make."

Fourth. A resolution to the effect that S. J. and R. D. Webb "should have all the profits on any press of their patent in Cleburne, Texas."

On the next day, a meeting of the stockholders was held, and all the proceedings of the meeting of the board of directors of the preceding day were approved and ratified. J. Y. Webb was not at that time a part owner of the patent, but, as already stated, he afterwards acquired an interest in it corresponding with his interest in the corporation; that is to say, a 1-per-cent interest. The necessity of such an interest being transferred to him in the patent arose from the fact that the agreement to pay $5,000 per press to the owners of the patent was not intended by the parties to be carried out, but was a mere convenient arrangement for transferring the net profits of the company, which would approximately be of that amount per press, from the company to the owners of the patent; in other words, from the stockholders as stockholders to themselves as individuals. As shall be seen presently, the profits of the company on the 90-inch press soon fell below $5,000 per press, so that, if that contract had been genuine, 67 L. R. A.

the company would soon have had to retire from it, which it had the right to do at any time under the terms of the contract, unless it chose to run with the certainty of a loss.

No other meeting, either of stockholders or of directors, seems to have taken place until the 30th of November of the same year, 1896, when there was a meeting of stockholders. S. J. and R. D. Webb had in the meantime attended to the business of the company and with brilliant success. At that meeting resolutions were adopted to the following effect:

First. A resolution changing the name of the corporation to that of Webb Press Company, Limited; the charter and business of the company to remain unchanged and unaffected.

Second. A resolution transferring to the corporation the assets of the partnership of S. J. Webb & Bro., by which the business had been conducted previous to the organization of the corporation.

Third. A resolution levying an assessment upon the stockholders in proportion to their holding, so as to produce a sum of $5,000; each stockholder to furnish for his share of the assessment his note falling due March 1, 1897.

The stockholders did not meet again until the 29th of January, 1901, which meeting was very important, and will be duly noticed. The only meetings of the board of directors were in February, March, and December, 1898. At these meetings, the following resolutions were adopted:

First. A resolution ratifying certain contracts entered into by the president and the secretary of the company.

Second. A resolution fixing at $3,700 and $3,000, respectively, the salaries of S. J. and R. D. Webb, "reserving all inventions or discoveries to themselves, same as if not employed by the company."

Third. A resolution authorizing S. J. Webb "to place new presses as he thought best."

The regular stockholders' meetings of January, 1897, 1898, 1899, 1900, and 1901, were not held, owing to the absence of a majority of the stock; i. e., of S. J. Webb, or of the stock held by him. During all this time the affairs of the company under the management of S. J. and R. D. Webb continued highly prosperous.

During this same time S. J. Webb had made numerous improvements to the compress, and had utilized them in the business of the company; and finally he had invented what he considered to be a new compress, known in this case as the "80-inch press," to distinguish it from the patented press known as the "90-inch press." Out of these inventions, or as a result of them, have grown, in the main, the differences between the parties, who have been unable to agree what amount, if any, the Webbs should charge the corporation for the use of their inventions.

Some of the improvements were put on in the very first year of the company's business; that is to say, in 1896. Others were added as made. The Crichtons would not admit that the use of these improvements was beneficial to the company, nor that the charges made for them by the Webbs were reasonable; but the Webbs had the business of the company in hand, and went on using the improvements, and the questions of the right to use them and of the proper amount to charge for their use remained open.

In 1899 the Webbs solicited and obtained the consent of the Crichtons that the company should build one of the 80-inch presses, as an experiment; the Webbs agreeing to hold the company harmless against any loss. The result proved highly satisfactory, and demonstrated the superiority of the 80-inch press over the 90-inch.

The record does not show at what time of the year 1899 the first 80-inch press was built, but by the 1st of January, 1900, the time for the regular meeting of the stockholders, three 80-inch presses had been built; and it had become evident to the Webbs, who had entire and exclusive charge of the company's business, that the 80-inch press would have to supersede the 90-inch entirely. In fact, after the trial and demonstrated success of the 80-inch press, the company built only one 90-inch press, and the record does not show whether the contract for it had not been entered into previously.

The invention of this new press brought an unforeseen complication in the business of the company. The Crichtons were part owners of the 90-inch patent, for the lease of which the company was under contract to pay $5,000 per press, and they owned no interest in the new invention; and naturally the Webbs, owners of the new invention, wanted to be paid for the use of it. They had not yet obtained a patent, and did not obtain one until December 16, 1902, seven months after the institution of this suit, which was filed May 3, 1902; but, all the same, the thing was theirs, and they were not disposed to let the company have the use of it without payment. They demanded the same rental which the company was under contract to pay for the use of the 90-inch patent. The Crichtons insisted that the 90-inch patent was a good press, which had practically driven all competitors from the field, and that the company should go on using it. They objected to the use of the 80-inch invention, and especially objected to paying so large a rental. The 67 L. R. A.

Webbs, on their side, insisted that the 80-inch press was a better press in every way, stronger, safer, and cheaper, and that if it was not adopted by the company they would have to dispose of it to others, and that it would easily drive the 90-inch press out of the market; and we may mention here that the testimony leaves no doubt that such was the fact. Also, we may say here, as well as later, that their right to exact payment for the use of their invention cannot be doubted. It was theirs, and, of course, they could exact payment for the use of it. Not only there is nothing in the patent law that could prevent their doing so, but § 4899, U. S. Rev. Stat., U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3387, impliedly recognizes a right of ownership in an unpatented invention.

The net profits on the three 80-inch presses erected in 1899, after deduction of the $15,000 rental to the Webbs and the proportionate share of these three presses in the general expenses of the company, such as salaries, etc., was $3,380.63. The net profit on the six 90-inch presses erected in the same year, after deduction of $6,000 for royalties on improvements, and the proportionate share of these six presses in the general expenses of the company, such as salaries, etc., was $21,381.23.

It is thus seen that the profits from the 80-inch press were very much larger; that the 80-inch press yielded a profit of $1,126.88 per press, after deduction of $5,000 per press by way of royalty, whereas the 90-inch press yielded a profit of only $3,563.54 per press after a deduction of only $1,000 per press by way of royalty. So that, if the owners of the 90-inch patent had held the company to the payment of the $5,000 agreed to be paid for the lease of the patent, the company, by building the 90-inch presses, would have been operating at a net loss of $1,436.46 for every press it would have sold. The difference between the parties, then, could not be, and was not, in connection with the relative merits of the two presses, nor in regard to which press it was to the best interest of the company, as a company, to adopt and advocate, but it was simply and purely in view of the fact that the Crichtons were part owners of the 90-inch press and had no interest in the 80-inch invention, and that while the company, as a company, would lose $1,436.46 per press by building the 90-inch presses, and, per contra, gain $1,126.88 per press by building the 80-inch press, they (the Crichtons) would individually gain more if the company would adhere to the 90-inch pattern.

By the time the 1st of January, 1900, came around, when the regular annual meeting of the stockholders should take place, the question of using the 80-inch press in the business of the company and what charge should be made for it had reached the acute stage. Unfortunately S. J. Webb, the main party in interest, was absent, and no final agreement could be arrived at in the matter. All that could be done was to adopt a modus vivendi until his return. He was to be back by March 1st; that is to say, in two months. It was agreed that the Crichtons should then be let out of the company, on a full and final settlement of the 90-inch press business, and that in the meantime the company should go on selling and advocating the sale of both presses, and the business of the two presses be kept separate on the books as far as possible, and the Webbs take all the profits of the 80-inch press business.

But S. J. Webb did not return by the 1st of March, as expected, nor until the following January, being busy at the foundries seeing to the construction of presses and traveling over the country selling presses. During the year 1900, owing to sharp competition, the profits of the company on the 80-inch press business had fallen below $5,000 per press, so that there could no longer be any question of paying to the Webbs that amount per press for the use of their invention, and the necessity of arriving at some definite and final agreement in the matter had become all the more imperative.

The regular meeting of the stockholders of January 1, 1901, failed for the same cause which had prevented the meeting of the previous January,—the absence of S. J. Webb. But a meeting was called for January 29, 1901, and the Crichtons were duly notified to attend. Knowing, however, what business it was proposed to bring up before the meeting, and also knowing that they would be outvoted by the Webbs, they stayed away. The meeting took place without them. Important matters were voted on, but not the question of superseding the 90-inch press by the 80-inch press in the business of the company. That question was left for a subsequent meeting, which was called for the 9th of February, and the Crichtons were again duly notified to attend. The meeting was duly held, and again the Crichtons kept away.

At the first of these meetings, that of January 29th, the following resolutions were adopted:

First. A resolution directing that the certificates of stock to which each stockholder was entitled be issued to him.

Second. A resolution approving and directing the secretary to pay an account of J. S. Webb for $6,821.30, without stating what the account was for; also, an account of S. J. Webb & Bro. of $520, for tools, tackle, etc., and $7,000 "for profit made on the press sold in Cleburne, Texas."

Third. A resolution approving and directing the secretary to pay the account of S. J. Webb & Bro. of $26,000 for royalties for use of improvements in twenty-three 90-inch presses.

Fourth. A resolution approving and directing the secretary to pay the account of S. J. Webb & Bro. of $15,000 for royalties on three 80-inch presses erected in 1899.

At the meeting of February 9th the following resolutions were adopted:

First. A resolution reading as follows: "The question of the company selling, building, using, and making contracts for the 80-inch compresses and other inventions and improvements other than presses covered by U. S. patent 539,496, issued May 21, 1895 (the 90-inch press patent), was discussed. It was unanimously voted to continue this year, selling, building, using, and making contracts for the 80-inch press and other inventions and improvements, and pay to S. J. Webb & Bro. all the profits made from this part of the business of the company."

Second. A resolution reading as follows: "It was unanimously resolved to pay to S. J. Webb & Bro. all the profits of the business of the year 1900, last year, that accrued from selling, building, using, and making contracts for the 80-inch compress and other inventions and improvements, exclusive of presses covered by the U. S. patent 539,496 (90-inch press), issued May 21, 1895, to S. J. and R. D. Webb, and to pay to the owners of the latter patent all the profits that may accrue from selling, building, using, and making contracts for compresses under same."

Third. A resolution disposing of a few matters of business detail, as to which there was, and is now, no dispute.

By these resolutions the Webbs, holding a majority of the stock, decided in their own favor every issue between them and the Crichtons. Anticipating such a result, and foreseeing that there would no longer be any profits for them, the Crichtons had asked to be let out of the company upon a settlement which would leave out of computation the amounts claimed by the Webbs for royalties on their improvements and for the use of the 80-inch invention, which amounts the Webbs, as managers of the company, had caused to be charged up against the company on the books. The Webbs were willing to let the Crichtons retire from the company, but they insisted that the settlement should be made according to the books of the company; that is to say, including the disputed charges. They were willing, in addition, to allow the Crichtons $1,200 for their interest in the discredited 90-inch patent. In the alternative, they were willing to sell to the Crichtons an interest in the 80-inch invention corresponding with that which they held in the 90-inch patent. They fixed the price at the same figure of $50,000 at which the 90-inch patent had been valued. This would have removed the bone of contention and ended all controversy. The Crichtons refused to buy such an interest, assigning as their reason that they would have no assurance that S. J. Webb would not produce some new invention to supplant the 80-inch press, which, in turn, they would have to buy, and so on ad infinitum.

Not succeeding in obtaining an amicable settlement, the two Crichtons brought a suit for the appointment of a receiver to manage the affairs of the company. That suit was filed on October 26, 1901. The petitioners alleged that the Webbs voted enormous and exorbitant salaries to each other, and voted and paid over to S. J. Webb and to Webb & Bro. large sums of money by way of royalties for the use of so-called improvements, which allowances were unauthorized and unjustifiable under the charter, but were grossly excessive; and that all this was done for the sole purpose of absorbing the revenues of the company and defrauding the petitioners.

They alleged, further, that the Webbs were holders of a majority of the stock of the company, and had the management of its affairs entirely in their own hands, as well as all the funds of the company, and were so conducting the business of the company as to divert to themselves all the profits of the company, which were large, and so as to defraud the petitioners of their rights, all of which amounted to gross mismanagement of the affairs of the company and made the appointment of a receiver necessary.

The Webbs denied these allegations, and averred that they had managed the affairs of the company well, and with the consent and approval of the plaintiffs, and in accordance with the charter, and finally averred as follows: "Your respondents aver that there is no necessity for a receiver to be appointed, and that the complainants have legal recourse in other ways, if legal means are necessary for settlement, which your respondents deny, and aver that, if a receiver is appointed, it will ruin the business of the company and prostrate the most flourishing compress corporation in the world, and destroy assets of great value to your respondents, without any benefit to the plaintiffs."

That suit resulted in a judgment in favor of defendants. The plaintiffs appealed to this court, but the appeal was dismissed for informalities. That was in February, 1902.

The present suit was filed May 3, 1902. As already stated, it is for a dividend, and 67 L. R. A.

incidentally for a settlement of the affairs of the corporation up to date, with a view of ascertaining what the amount of this dividend should be, and also for the annulment of certain contracts made by the majority with themselves, and also of certain allowances of expense accounts and salaries and royalties by the majority to themselves.

The allegations are virtually the same as in the suit for the appointment of the receiver. The nullity of the allowances is claimed on the ground that the majority could not vote to themselves the property of the company, or could not make contracts with themselves to the detriment of the company.

Exceptions were filed to the form of the proceeding, but they are not now insisted on; the defendants seeming to be willing that the court should, as far as possible, pass upon the merits of the controversy.

The Webbs, as a matter of course, deny that the allowances of salary are too large, or that the charges for royalties for use of the improvements and of the new 80-inch press invention are excessive; and they insist that the action of the stockholders at the meetings of January 20, and February 9, 1901, is conclusive, and that the Crichtons have neither in law nor in fact any ground of complaint. They contend that the Crichtons consented to the arrangement by which all the profits of the company arising from the exploitation of the 80-inch invention, or of the other inventions or improvements, should go to them (the Webbs), and they contend that up to the filing of the present suit the Crichtons had made no claim to participation in these profits.

At the request of the plaintiffs the court appointed experts to make a statement of the financial position of the company as appearing on the books. The report of these experts is in the record, and is conceded to be a correct statement from the books. The disputed items, having been charged upon the books, are included in the report, and affect its totals and balances, so that, if any of them are rejected, the figures will have to be recast. 14585

Under these facts and under the pleadings the questions arising are, first, as to whether the court should order a dividend; second, in case a dividend is ordered, what should be the amount thereof; third, as to the salaries of the Webbs for managing the affairs of the company; fourth, as to their expense accounts; fifth, as to what amount should be allowed them for royalties on the improvements to the 90-inch press; sixth, as to the resolution allowing S. J. and R. D. Webb $5,000 per press on the three 80-inch presses erected in 1899; seventh and last, as to whether they should be allowed to take the entire profits of the business of the 80-inch press, and, if not, then how much they should be allowed for the use of their invention.

Preliminary to taking up the discussion of these matters, it is necessary to dispose of the contention of defendant that all these points have already been finally decided by the corporate authorities.

That contention is evidently without force. Evidently a person cannot be judge in his own case, cannot be on both sides of a contract, cannot vote to himself the money of his associates in a corporation. Defendants admit that this is so in the case of a director, but contend that it is not so in the case of a stockholder, because the same trust relation which exists between a director and the corporation in which he is director, precluding him from acting for the corporation in any matter in which his interest is adverse to that of the company, does not exist between the stockholder and the company. Undoubtedly no trust relation ordinarily exists between the stockholder and the corporation; but the reason is that ordinarily the stockholder is a stranger to the management of the affairs of the corporation, which is the province of the directors. If, however, in any particular case the stockholders have authority to manage the affairs of the corporation,—in other words, to discharge the functions of directors, and undertake to do so,—they, for all the purposes of the affairs thus managed, become directors in fact, and occupy, for the purposes of such affairs, precisely the same relation of trust which directors ordinarily hold towards the corporation. This trust relation is not a matter of statutory law, or of technical law, but is simply the logical consequence of the impossibility of being judge in one's own case, or of being on both sides of a contract.

It is therefore a question of no importance whether the stockholders of this company had, or had not, authority under the charter to manage the affairs of the company. The stockholders and the directors were the same five persons, and it is a perfectly plain proposition that they could not assume, or devert themselves of, this trust relation towards the company as they might change their coats. As a matter of fact, however, the stockholders did not have authority to manage the affairs of the company. It is a fundamental principle of the law of corporations that stockholders have no mandate to act for the corporation. 101 Cyc. Law & Proc. 700; Cook, Corp. 4th ed. p. 34. § 11. A corporation whose affairs could be managed indifferently by its stockholders or by its directors would be a non-descript and highly anomalous corporation. 67 L. R. A.

Of course, the charter might so provide; but no charter would be so interpreted unless a construction more in consonance with what ordinarily obtains were impossible. In the present case the charter does contain a clause which, taken literally, expresses that idea; but the context of that clause shows that its purpose was merely to regulate the proportion of vote that should be required at the meetings of stockholders to decide the different questions with which the stockholders might have to deal, and also, if taken literally, it would conflict with another clause by which it is provided that the affairs of the company are to be conducted by the directors. However, the question, we repeat, is of no importance since the Webbs, no more as stockholders than as directors, could be final judges in their own case, and vote to themselves the money of the corporation, over the objection and protest of their associates in the corporation.

In justice to the Messrs. Webb, we hasten to add that the implication of moral wrong attaching to the act of voting on a matter in which one has a personal interest does not arise in this case, inasmuch as they constituted a majority both of the stockholders and the directors, and were sole managers of the affairs of the company, and therefore had to pass upon all questions pertaining to the business of the company, including those in which they had a personal interest. Necessarily, however, their decision, on all questions where their personal interest came in conflict with that of the corporation, was made subject to review by a court of equity at the suit of their complaining associates, as in the present case.

Proceeding to adjudicate upon the disputed points, the court finds that a dividend should have been declared, and should now be ordered. The company began business with a capital of $26,000, to which was added the notes of the stockholders to the amount of $5,000. Its profits, according to the report of the experts, amounted in November, 1902, to $294,683.55. While the business of the company has increased very largely, and the actual cash in bank is very low, yet the court thinks a dividend of $50,000 could be safely declared, and the court will so order.

The court finds that the general expenses, amounting to $38,864.55, are charged in lump sums without detail of items. The court is morally convinced that the charges are legitimate; but there is no evidence of the fact beyond the charge itself. On this point the case will have to be remanded, with instructions to the lower court to require detailed accounts to be furnished, and with further instructions that unless, upon inspection, these accounts are found to be grossly exaggerated, there will be no ground for interference by the court.

The royalties for the use of the improvements to the 90-inch press are overwhelmingly shown to be just and fair, and are approved, and the $5,000 per press allowed on the three 80-inch presses erected in 1899 is not so far out of the way as to justify the court in interfering with the action of the stockholders. There was still left to the company a fair margin of profit.

The salaries as fixed are not too large, but the resolutions fixing them can, as a matter of course, have operation only for the future. There cannot be any retroactive increase of salary, or voting of back pay.

We do not think the Webbs have established their claim to take the entire profits of the 80-inch press business. This would mean the entire profits of the company from and after the demonstrated success of this 80-inch invention in 1899; for, thereafter, as we have stated, the company built only one 90-inch press, and the building of presses was the company's only source of profit. R. D. Webb testifies, and counsel for defendant says, that there were other profits; but what was, or could have been, their source we are not told. Counsel refers to certain exhibits in the record as showing $14,000 of other profits; but, so far as we can see, these exhibits show only what collections the company has made on notes given for presses sold in previous years and what property it has on hand. If profits appear on these exhibits, we are not sufficiently skilled in bookkeeping to be able to distinguish them from among the other items. If the Webbs were permitted to take all the profits of the 80-inch press business, the situation would be that the company had been operating solely for their interest from and after the beginning of 1900, barring what interest the Crichtons might have had in the liquidation of the 90-inch press business. Of course, the Crichtons might have made an agreement to that effect; but we do not find that they did.

The only agreement which we find they made was the one entered into at the meeting of January, 1900, to the effect that they should be settled with on the return of S. J. Webb in the following March, and be let out of the company, and that in the meantime the company should exploit both presses, and all the profits of the business of the 80-inch press go to the Webbs. True, this agreement seems to have been permitted to stand until the return of S. J. Webb in the following January; and just before the meeting of January 29, 1901, the Crichtons were still willing to retire from the company on a fair settlement, and take no share in the profits of the 80-inch press business; but the agreement was not in itself a settlement, or even a definitive or unconditional agreement or contract, but merely a tentative measure towards the settlement, a plan of settlement, and it was never carried out. Taking out of this agreement, as the present contention of the Webbs would do, the provision for a settlement and a letting out of the company, and it reduces itself to the proposition that the Crichtons consented that the company should be operated for the sole and exclusive benefit of the Webbs, and they to get absolutely nothing in return.

We do not find that the Crichtons ever intended anything of that kind. Their idea was to be settled with and let out of the company. As we read their conduct, it was that of intelligent business men, recognizing the logic of the situation, and indisposed to make unnecessary trouble, but at the same time insisting upon the full measure of their substantial rights, and not relinquishing or waiving one iota thereof.

The situation was that this invention belonged exclusively to the Webbs, and the Webbs had adopted it into the business of the company, and were fully resolved to continue with it, and they had the power to do so, and for the use of it were demanding $5,000 per press, and not a cent less; that is to say, something more than the total profits of the company per press. So that it would be a mere question of keeping up that state of things long enough for all the accumulated profits of the company, as well as all its original capital stock, and all else it might possess, to pass to, and become the exclusive property of, the Webbs. Under this condition of affairs, the Crichtons had not much choice. It was either to be let out of the company on a fair settlement of the 90-inch press business, or a lawsuit. As sensible men they chose the former, and they hoped for it until the meeting of February, 1901, the majority by formal resolution committed the company to doing business for the exclusive benefit of the Webbs; and then they had recourse to the other alternative, and instituted the receivership suit.

If the Crichtons were consenting unconditionally and unqualifiedly, as contended, to these profits going to the Webbs, it is not apparent why they kept away from the meeting of February 9, 1901, where the resolution voting these profits to the Webbs was to be passed, and was actually passed. All the other disputed points had been settled at the meeting of January 29th, and this meeting of February 9th was for the purpose of settling this 80-inch press business, and of disposing of some matters as to which there was no dispute. The very fact that the Webbs thought it necessary to pass this formal resolution, notwithstanding the absence of the Crichtons, shows that they did not consider that the matter had been finally settled by any definitive agreement. The adoption of that resolution in the absence of the Crichtons means that the Webbs intended that the matter should be settled and put at rest by force of a vote of the stockholders. So true is this that we find their counsel contending before this court that the resolution did have that effect; that, there being no trust relation between the stockholders and the corporation, the Webbs could thus vote to themselves all the profits of this 80-inch press business; and that their act in doing so was final and binding on the Crichtons.

As proof of the agreement of the Crichtons to relinquish their right to participate in the profits of this 80-inch press business, counsel for defendant points with great confidence to the attitude of the Crichtons in the receivership suit. Now, if the renunciation of the Crichtons to such participation was not more unequivocal previous to that suit than it was in or by that suit, the Webbs have little indeed to stand upon in their present contention. The allegations of that suit were that the Webbs were managing the affairs of the company in their own private interest, and that a receiver was necessary to manage the affairs of the company in the interest of all the stockholders; and the prayer was that a receiver be appointed to manage the affairs of the company for the benefit of all the stockholders. There was not one word of disclaimer of the right to participate in the profits of the 80-inch press business. The company had then been exploiting the 80-inch press exclusively for nearly two years. The answer to the suit was that the appointment of a receiver was unnecessary, because the "affairs of the company were being conducted for the benefit, advantage, and profit of the stockholders, without preference or favor to any one," and that the appointment of a receiver would "prostrate the most flourishing compress company in the world;" that is to say, that the company, as a company, was "the most flourishing compress company in the world," and was being administered for the benefit of all the stockholders without discrimination. Now, if the company, as a company, was taking no part of the profits of the business it was conducting, but the Webbs were taking them all, how could it, as a company, be "the most flourishing compress company in the world?" And if the Webbs were taking all the profits of this business, and the Crichtons none of it, how could it be said that the company was being administered "for the benefit of the stockholders, without preference or favor to any one of them."

67 L. R. A.

It was pending that suit that the resolution of January 17, 1902, was adopted, upon which, also, defendant's able counsel places much reliance. That resolution reads as follows: "Moved by Robert D. Webb, and seconded by J. E. Crichton, that the company proceed at once to collect by law, if necessary, the Bierce note for $2,500, and interest thereon; it being fully understood and agreed that, as this note is a part of the assets of the company (made before the date of this note) in which all the stockholders are interested, and that Bierce threatens to claim damages to amount of $10,000 under contract with him, and if he should sustain his claim in toto or in part the said damages and expenses of said suits be paid out of said assets in which all the stockholders are interested. The motion unanimously adopted."

In our opinion, however significant that resolution might be if standing alone, it proves nothing against the Crichtons, when read in the light of the surrounding circumstances. Pending this receivership suit, the business of the corporation had to go on, and there was but one basis on which it could proceed, and that was the basis which the majority of the stockholders had established. The Crichtons were not bound to sulk in their tents, and refuse to participate in the business of the company. The resolution might have been worded more guardedly, but we do not think that it must necessarily be construed into approval by the Crichtons of a situation against which they were judicially protesting. It recognizes the existence of a certain state of things, but does not necessarily agree to, or approve, or ratify, it.

On the question of what amount the company should be required to pay to the Webbs for the use of this 80-inch invention, the court has hesitated long, realizing that it is a delicate thing to dictate to the owners of this invention what they shall have to accept for the use which the company has been making of it. They were unwilling to accept from the company less than $5,000 per press, and now the court is compelling them to accept less. But, under the circumstances, no other course is open; since the other alternative would be that the Webbs would be left to decide their own case, to vote to themselves the money of the corporation,—an alternative totally inadmissible.

In estimating this amount the court has not the benefit of such proof as was administered in connection with the value of the use of the improvements to the 90-inch press. There, under the evidence, the court had no hesitation; here, the court finds itself compelled to grope its way to an equitable decision.

The court would remand the case if it had reason to suppose that any good could be accomplished thereby. But the situation is not the same as in the matter of the improvements to the 90-inch press. There, after payment of the royalties demanded by the Webbs, a wide margin of profit was still left to the company. Here, if the royalty demanded were paid, there would be little, if any, profit left to the company. Possibly there would not be enough to pay the royalty. Under these circumstances, there is nothing for the court to do but to fix, as best it can, what proportion of the profits x should go to the owners of the invention and what proportion to the company for exploiting it.

The facts to be taken into consideration are, on one side, that the Webbs were under no obligation, legal or moral, to let the company have the benefit of this invention, but were at perfect liberty to dispose of it to others, or to organize another company to exploit it, or to retire from the management of the affairs of the company and exploit it themselves; and that any one of these courses, especially that of retiring from the management of the affairs of the company and exploiting the invention themselves, would have been fatal to the company, so that they were in a position to dictate terms to the company.

The facts on the other side are that it was of very great advantage to the Webbs to exploit this invention by and through the company, rather than to undertake to start a new business. The company had been carrying on a prosperous business, extending to every part of the cotton-growing region, and was widely and favorably known, and was operating with a large capital. Its reputation, business standing, credit, and good will was worth a great deal to the Webbs in undertaking to exploit this 80-inch invention. All the capital of the Webbs was invested in the company, and could not be available to them for a new business until after liquidation of the existing company and settlement with the Crichtons. They themselves were owners of 83 per cent of the company, and were very largely interested, therefore, in not breaking it up.

The question is, what amount the parties, respectively—the Webbs representing both their interest in the invention and their interest in the company, and the Crichtons representing their interest in the company—would likely have been willing to agree to, under the circumstances; or, rather, what amount it would have been equitable for them to agree to. The Webbs furnished the invention, and the company furnished all else, including the services of the Webbs themselves, who as the salaried employees of the company owed to it their time and their business capacity and energies.
67 L. R. A.

Under all the circumstances, those mentioned here and all others weighing more or less in the case, the court has concluded that a division of the profits of the 80-inch press business on the basis of one third to the company and two thirds to S. J. and R. D. Webb would be fair and equitable. By "profits" is meant "net profits."

The court takes into consideration the fact that the stockholders of the company receive the additional benefit of a liquidation of the 90-inch press business through the instrumentality of the company and in due course of business, instead of by, a judicial, or other more or less expensive mode of, liquidation.

It goes without saying that the court cannot and does not make a contract for the parties, but only deals with the situation in so far as it is an accomplished fact, and that this apportionment of the profits is to operate only so long as the present situation shall continue; either the company or the Webbs being at liberty to put an end to it at anytime by ceasing to use the 80-inch invention in the company's business.

It is therefore ordered, adjudged, and decreed that the judgment appealed from be set aside; that the case be remanded for further trial in accordance with the views hereinabove expressed on the question of the expense accounts of S. J. Webb and R. D. Webb, as managers of the affairs of the corporation; that the profits realized from the 80-inch press business, exclusive of the three 80-inch presses built in 1899, be divided between the company and S. J. and R. D. Webb in the proportion of one third to the former and two thirds to the latter; that the resolutions fixing the salaries of S. J. Webb and R. D. Webb be made to operate only from their respective dates; that the board of directors of the corporation are hereby ordered to declare at once and pay to the stockholders, in the proportion in which they are entitled to same, a dividend of $50,000; that the report of the experts as found in the record be recast, so as to conform to the present opinion and judgment, and to such judgment as may hereafter be rendered upon the items of the expense accounts of S. J. Webb and R. D. Webb, and in all other respects it be approved; and that the defendant corporation pay the costs of this suit.

Breaux, Ch. J., concurs in the decree.

Petition for rehearing overruled June 29, 1904.

GEORGIA SUPREME COURT.

NASHVILLE, CHATTANOOGA, & ST.
LOUIS RAILWAY, Plff. in Err.,

v.

J. T. MILLER.

(.....Ga.....)

- *1. The fact that a person other than the wrongdoer, as a mere gratuity, pays to one injured as the result of his negligence a sum of money equal to the amount he would have earned had he been able to work during the period of disability, will not mitigate the damages due by the wrongdoer to the injured party for lost time.
- *2. The rule just stated is applicable, though the person making the payment is the employer of the injured party.

*Headnotes by COBB, J.

NOTE.—Mitigation of damages for personal injury by fact that injured person has received from some source other than the wrongdoer money because of the injury.

- I. In actions by injured person.
- Insurance money, 87.
 - Wages, 89.
 - Other gratuities, 90.
- II. In actions for wrongful death.
- Property received from deceased, 91.
 - Insurance money, 92.
 - Pensions and subscriptions, 94.
 - Remarriage, 95.
- III. Payments made at instance of wrongdoer, 95.

- I. In actions by injured person.
- Insurance money.

Perhaps the provision by the injured person himself against the consequences of an accident by contracting for insurance most fully tests the principles on which the wrongdoer might claim a mitigation of damages because of payments by a stranger of any of the conditions under which the claim might be made. The theory of the recovery is to compensate the injured person for the loss inflicted upon him by the injury. He has no right to make a profit out of his misfortune, and can only claim to be made whole. Therefore if, because of insurance money paid him under a contract which he himself made, he has suffered no pecuniary loss, a superficial consideration might lead to the conclusion that he could not require the wrongdoer to answer for a loss which he had in fact not suffered, and that the extent of the recovery would be compensation for the physical suffering and for the pecuniary loss, including premiums paid for the insurance, from which should be deducted the money paid on the policy. Further consideration will indicate, however, that the question involved is the duty of the wrongdoer to answer for the damage wrought by his wrongful act. That damage is represented by the whole loss so caused, and it is no concern of his how the loss shall be divided among persons who are strangers to him. The law entitles the one upon whom the injury is inflicted to maintain the action against him, and to recover for

3. Quære, whether the wrongdoer can plead the payment to diminish the amount of his liability, when, under the terms of the contract of employment, the injured party had a legal right to demand it.
4. When a petition in an action for personal injuries contains allegations which in a general way show that the plaintiff has lost time, and evidence which fixes the time lost and the value of such time with certainty is admitted without objection, a charge that plaintiff is entitled to recover for lost time such an amount as the evidence authorizes will not be held to be erroneous, though there is in the petition no distinct claim for damages on account of lost time.
5. None of the evidence objected to was inadmissible for any of the reasons assigned.
6. An allegation in a petition that the all the loss inflicted, and the wrongdoer cannot investigate the contract or other relations existing between the injured person and third persons, or take advantage of the fact that, as between themselves, they have agreed to apportion the burden in such a way that the wrongdoer's payment will not reach to one on whom the loss will ultimately fall.

In Regan v. New York & N. E. R. Co. 60 Conn. 134; 25 Am. St. Rep. 306, 22 Atl. 503, which was an action to recover for the negligent destruction of property by fire set out by defendant, defendant claimed the right to have the damages reduced by the amount of insurance which had been received by the property owner. That class of cases is not within the scope of this annotation, but the remarks of the court are so pertinent that they throw sufficient light upon the subject under discussion to warrant reference to them. The court says: "If the defendant is entitled to have the insurance money deducted from the amount otherwise due, it must be because it owns or has some legal claim to the money. How happens it that the defendant is entitled to this money? Not because it ever paid the premium or any part of it, nor because the policy was intended for its benefit, nor upon its request, nor because there is any privity between it and the insurance company. . . . How, then, can the defendant claim, as it does, the exclusive benefit of the insurance? It came to the plaintiff from a collateral source wholly independent of the defendant, and which as to him was res inter alios acta. The defendant, in our judgment, has no more claim to the insurance money than it would have to money obtained upon a subscription paper which the friends of Regan (the property owner) may have procured to make good his loss."

So in Harding v. Townshend, 43 Vt. 536, 5 Am. Rep. 304, which was an action for an injury caused by a defect in a highway, defendant claimed to have the amount received by plaintiff on an accident insurance policy deducted from the recovery, but the court says: "There is no technical ground which necessarily leads to the conclusion that the money received by the plaintiff of the accident insurance company should operate as a defense, or inure to the benefit of the defendant. The insurer and the defendant are not joint tortfeasors or joint debt-plaintiff "has suffered and will continue to suffer great pain" is sufficient to authorize the admission of evidence that mental pain has been suffered, and, when such evidence is admitted, there is no error in charging the jury that, in assessing the damages, they may take into consideration the mental pain suffered by the plaintiff.

7. The charge as a whole was free from error. The verdict was warranted by the evidence, and was not excessive. No sufficient reason has been shown for reversing the judgment.

(June 10, 1904.)

ERROR to the Superior Court for Dade County to review a judgment in favor of plaintiff in an action brought to recover damages for personal injuries alleged to ors, so as to make a payment or satisfaction by the former operate to the benefit of the latter. Nor is there any legal privity between the defendant and the insurer, so as to give the former a right to avail itself of a payment by the latter. The policy of insurance is collateral to the remedy against the defendant, and was procured solely by the plaintiff and at his expense, and to the procurement of which the defendant was in no way contributory. It is in the nature of a wager between the plaintiff and a third person, the insurer, to which the defendant was in no measure privy, either by relation of the parties, or by contract, or otherwise. It cannot be said that the plaintiff took out the policy in the interest or behalf of the defendant; nor is there any legal principle which seems to require that it be ultimately appropriated to the defendant's use and benefit." And, in answer to the objection that plaintiff was not entitled to more than one recovery, the court said defendant was not in a position to raise that question, since it was primarily liable for the injury.

In Bradburn v. Great Western R. Co. L. R. 10 Exch. 1, 44 L. J. Exch. N. S. 9, 31 L. T. N. S. 464, 23 Week. Rep. 48, in which the claim was made that the amount received on an accident-insurance policy must be deducted from the recovery, Bramwell, B., said, one is dismayed at this proposition. And it is further said that the plaintiff is entitled to retain the benefit for which he has paid, in addition to the damages which he recovers on account of defendant's negligence. And Pigott, B., says he does not receive that sum of money because of the accident, but because he has made a contract providing for the contingency; an accident must occur to entitle him to it, but it is not the accident, but his contract, which is the cause of his receiving it.

In Hicks v. Newport. A. & H. R. Co. 4 Best & S. 403, note, there had been an intimation that, in actions by the personal representative, money received as accident insurance should be deducted. And the court in Bradburn v. Great Western R. Co. L. R. 10 Exch. 1, 44 L. J. Exch. N. S. 9, 31 L. T. N. S. 464, 23 Week. Rep. 48, distinguishes the Hicks Case on the ground that in that case the recovery was not by the injured person, but by his next of kin, and that in such case it was quite correct to deduct the insurance. It is further said, if the person claiming 67 L. R. A.

have been caused by defendant's negligence. Affirmed.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Messrs. Payne & Tye, R. J. McCamy, and J. McCamy for plaintiff in error.

Messrs. Rosser & Brandon, for defendant in error:

The sums paid by the United States government to its injured employees incapacitated for work is in the nature of insurance. Such a sum received from the government would be immaterial in determining the amount that the plaintiff ought to recover from the railway company in this case.

Western & A. R. Co. v. Meigs, 74 Ga. 857; Missouri P. R. Co. v. Jarrard, 65 Tex. 560; Ohio & M. R. Co. v. Dickerson, 59 Ind. 317; Pennsylvania Co. v. Marion, 104 Ind. 239, 3 damages was put by the death of his relative into possession of a large estate, there was no loss; he was a gainer by the event; and, similarly, whatever comes into possession of the family who have suffered by the death of their relative, by reason of his death, must be taken into account.

It is now well settled that money received on accident-insurance policies by injured persons does not diminish the amount of the recovery against the wrongdoer. Missouri, K. & T. R. Co. v. Rains (Tex. Civ. App.) 40 S. W. 635; Missouri, K. & T. R. Co. v. Flood (Tex. Civ. App.) 79 S. W. 1106; Carroll v. Missouri P. R. Co. 88 Mo. 239, 57 Am. Rep. 382; Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Carothers, 23 Ky. L. Rep. 1673, 65 S. W. 833, 66 S. W. 385.

So money received from an accident insurance policy for a personal injury is not pro tanto a discharge of the liability of the one responsible for the injury. Pittsburg, C. & St. L. R. Co. v. Thompson, 56 Ill. 138.

But in Congdon v. Howe Scale Co. 66 Vt. 255, 29 Atl. 253, evidence that plaintiff held accident-insurance policies was allowed to be brought out upon the cross-examination, where he took the stand for the purpose of proving the extent of his injuries. This, however, was not placed upon the ground that such fact might be considered in mitigation of damages; but it is said that it is not shown that the evidence was not admissible for some purpose.

Where the employee of one person is injured by the negligence of another for whom the employer is performing labor, and receives benefits under a policy obtained by his employer, which are expressly agreed to be without prejudice it is not an exercise of an option given by statute to pursue either the employer or the person causing the accident, but not both. Oliver v. Nautilus Steam Shipping Co. 72 L. J. K. B. N. S. 857 [1903] Weekly Notes, 132.

Of the same character as insurance money proper are the sick benefits and other aid received from benefit societies, fraternal societies, and other organizations of that class.

Therefore, sick benefits received by plaintiff from a source other than defendant are not to be considered in assessing the damages. Baltimore City Pass. R. Co. v. Baer, 90 Md. 97, 44 Atl. 992.

Whether or not the relief received from a department organized or maintained by the one responsible for the accident shall be deducted

N. E. 874; Klein v. Thompson, 19 Ohio St. 569; The D. S. Gregory, 2 Ben. 226, Fed. Cas. No. 4,100; Cunningham v. Evansville & T. H. R. Co. 102 Ind. 478, 52 Am. Rep. 683, 1 N. E. 800; Alston v. Stewart, 2 Monaghan (Pa.) 51; 2 Rorer, Railroads, p. 859, § 8; 1 Sutherland, Damages, 3d ed. p. 406, § 158.

Mr. Ben J. Conyers also for defendant in error.

Cobb, J., delivered the opinion of the court:

Miller was a railway mail clerk, and received injuries as the result of a collision between the train upon which he was working and another train. He brought his action for damages against the railway company, and from the recovery depends upon the contract; and the cases will be found in subd. III. infra.

b. Wages.

The principles which have been applied to cases of insurance would seem to control the determination of the question whether or not the fact that the wages of the injured person have not in fact been stopped during his disability should be considered in mitigation of damages. The weight of authority is represented by NASHVILLE, CHATTANOOGA & ST. L. R. CO. v. MILLER in holding that it should not be. But the courts are not unanimous upon this question.

If plaintiff is not injured to such an extent that he is prevented from continuing his employment and earning his full salary, of course no allowance can be made for loss of time. Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Carothers, 23 Ky. L. Rep. 1673, 65 S. W. 833, 66 S. W. 385.

And in Lee v. Western U. Tele. Co. 51 Mo. App. 375, which was an action for damages for the erroneous transmission of a telegram, by reason of which plaintiff was compelled to perform a fruitless journey, the court held that he could not recover for lost time when his salary was paid by his employer during the whole time; but the evidence tended to show that the business was that of the employer, and that the right of action was in him, and not in the plaintiff.

However, the New York court of appeals has directly committed itself to the proposition that no allowance can be made for lost time if the wages were not stopped.

In Drinkwater v. Dinsmore, 80 N. Y. 390, 36 Am. Rep. 624, it was held that no recovery could be had for the loss of time if plaintiff had been paid his wages during the period of his disability. The court says plaintiff was entitled to recover only his pecuniary loss. Before the plaintiff can recover for the loss of wages he is bound to show that he lost the wages in consequence of the injuries, and how much they were. Defendant has a right to show that he was under contract with his employer, that his wages went on without service, or that his employer paid his wages from mere benevolence. In such case plaintiff cannot claim that defendant wrongfully caused him to lose his wages, and the loss of wages would form no part of his damages. So no recovery can be had for the expense of a 87 L. R. A.

at the trial it was conceded that he was entitled to recover; the sole issue in the case being as to the amount of damages which should be awarded him. The jury returned a verdict for $4,000. The defendant made a motion for a new trial upon numerous grounds, and complains that the court erred in overruling the same.

1-3. Error is assigned upon the following charge: "It is immaterial whether the government paid the plaintiff anything or not. That would not affect the rights of the plaintiff in this case to recover against the railroad company." Error is further assigned upon the refusal of the judge to give in charge a written request which was as follows: "Plaintiff admits in his testimony that he received from the government his nurse where such services were rendered gratuitously; so with the doctor's bill.

The court thereby reversed the decision of the lower court, 16 Hun, 250. There the court says: "The plaintiff is entitled as a part of his damages, to the value of the time he lost. Can this be reduced by showing that he received this amount from some other hand? We think not. The law imposed this part of the plaintiff's damages upon the defendant, as a consequence of the injury he caused him, and no mitigation of the amount can come to him from any mere voluntary payment of a portion by a third party not in the interest of the defendant. The plaintiff must recover his loss and the defendant must pay it. He can take no benefit from the gratuity of others. He has caused an injury and consequent loss, and he must pay, no matter how benevolent others have been."

In Montgomery & E. R. Co. v. Mallette, 92 Ala. 210, 9 So. 363, where it appeared that time had actually been lost because of the injury, but there was nothing to show that the wages of the injured person were not paid, or were diminished to any extent, during that period, the court held that no allowance for lost time could be made. The court says non constat but that during this period, and notwithstanding the disability, he received fully as much as he would have done had he not been disabled at all. Yet the trial court assumed that he was personally damaged by this loss of time, and authorized the jury to include in their verdict the time so lost. The court continues: "This part of the charge was manifestly bad;" and the only cure would have been in its withdrawal from the jury.

So the court of appeals of Missouri held that where mere compensation for loss caused by a personal injury is sought, no recovery can be had for loss of time if the wages of the injured person are paid during the time he is incapacitated from work. Ephland v. Missouri P. R. Co. 57 Mo. App. 147.

But that decision is overruled by a later one in the supreme court, which held that the fact that the salary of an injured person is continued by his employer during the time of his inability to perform services is no ground for diminution of the damages to be paid by the one who caused the injury. Williams v. St. Louis & S. F. R. Co. 123 Mo. 573, 27 S. W. 387.

The fact that the salary of the injured person went on during the time he was disabled without regular salary during the time he did not work on account of his injury. This being so, I charge you that he cannot recover anything on this account for time lost, as claimed in his declaration." King, an assistant division railway mail superintendent, testified as follows: Plaintiff "returned to work about June 10, 1903,—about the time his year expired. If he had not gone back to work he would have been granted further time, but his pay would have stopped. The government pays them for one year when they are disabled from work. This is done on the physician's certificate for no period longer than sixty days consecutively, and not to exceed one year in total." The amount thus received by the plaintiff was $1,400. While the statute or regulation of the Postoffice Department under which this payment was made does not appear in the record, nor is it cited in the briefs of counsel, the payment was evidently made under the provisions of § 1424 of the postal laws and regulations, which reads as follows: "Whenever a railway postal clerk shall be disabled while in the actual discharge of his duties by a railroad or other accident beyond his power to control, he shall send to the division superintendent a certificate of his attending physician or surgeon sworn to before an officer authorized to administer oaths, who has an official seal, setting forth the nature, extent, and cause of his disability, and the probable duration of the same; and such further evidence as to the character abatement is no ground for reduction of damages to be allowed against the recovery. Ohio & M. R. Co. v. Dickerson, 59 Ind. 317. The court says in such cases damages are assessed according to uniform principles, and are not to be affected by the mere accidental business relations of the person injured. The liberality of his employer offers no reason why he should not be compensated for the injury he has sustained.

In Elmer v. Fessenden, 154 Mass. 427, 28 N. E. 299, which was an action for slander, the court held that plaintiff was not prevented from recovering the value of time lost because of defendant's wrongful act because a stranger saw fit to pay him for the same time, either by way of gift, or upon consideration.

The fact that the wages of the injured person are continued, either because of his contract, or as a matter of grace, does not entitle the defendant to a mitigation of damages. Missouri P. R. Co. v. Jarrard, 65 Tex. 560; International & G. N. R. Co. v. Haddox (Tex. Civ. App.) 81 S. W. 1036.

It thus appears that the New York and Alabama courts are out of harmony with the trend of the decisions elsewhere.

c. Other gratuities.

The courts have experienced some difficulty in case of other gratuities besides the voluntary payment of wages, so that there is a conflict of opinion with reference to the allowance in this class of cases as well as in the other. It would seem that if, under the general rules of law, one who inflicts a personal injury upon another is bound to restore him as nearly as possible to his former condition, the liability would include nurses and doctor's bills; and that the wrongdoer could not take advantage of the fact that the injured person had been fortunate enough to have such services rendered gratuitously. The basis of recovery is fixed by general principles, and not by the accidental circumstances which may exist in a particular case. And so the majority of the courts have held that the fact that the injured person had not actually been compelled to pay for doctors' and nurses' services could not be considered in mitigation of damages.

In an action to recover damages for assault and battery it appeared that the township had gratuitously paid for the services rendered in the treatment of plaintiff's injuries, and it was contended that plaintiff could not, therefore, recover the amount from defendant; but the court said: "We do not think the payment by the trustees inured to the benefit of defendant, or can be held to diminish his liability. It was not intended as a satisfaction of any part of plaintiff's claim against him, and we think it ought not to be held to have that effect." It is true that there may be no legal duty resting upon plaintiff to return the money expended for his benefit; but the court continues: "We see no good reason why he ought not to be allowed to recover from the party whose wrong caused the loss, and thus be placed in possession of the means to enable him to return the money voluntarily if in conscience he should see proper to do so." Klein v. Thompson, 19 Ohio St. 569.
67 L. R. A.

The fact that nursing and care were gratuitously bestowed upon the injured person does not prevent an allowance for their value as damages against the one causing the injury. The D. S. Gregory, 2 Ben. 226, Fed. Cas. No. 4,100; Pennsylvania Co. v. Marion, 104 Ind. 239, 3 N. E. 874; Brosnan v. Sweetser, 127 Ind. 1, 26 N. E. 555.

So the fact that services of a physician are rendered gratuitously to an injured person is no ground for withdrawing from consideration the value of such services as an element of damages to be awarded for the injury. Indianapolis v. Gaston, 58 Ind. 224; Ohliger v. Toledo, 20 Ohio C. C. 142.

So defendant cannot take advantage of the fact that plaintiff's doctor's bill and expenses were paid by a beneficial society. Alston v. Stewart, 2 Monaghan (Pa.) 51.

In Varnham v. Council Bluffs, 52 Iowa, 698, 3 N. W. 792, the court, in deciding that the value of nurses' services were not rendered non-recoverable by the fact that they were gratuitous, says it does not follow that plaintiff could not recover because the services were rendered gratuitously. The defendant ought not to benefit by the generosity of the daughter (who rendered the service), or on account of the relation between the plaintiff and her nurses.

And the principle of that case was followed in Berlinger v. Dubuque Street R. Co. 118 Iowa, 135, 91 N. W. 931; and Yeager v. Spirit Lake, 115 Iowa, 593, 88 N. W. 1095.

That the brothers of a person injured by the negligence of another pay her nurses and doctor's bills does not prevent her from receiving their value from the one responsible for the

of the disability as may be necessary shall be furnished. The division superintendent will forward the certificate, with his recommendation, to the general superintendent of the railway mail service, who will submit the matter to the Postmaster General, who may, in his judgment, the facts justifying such action, grant such disabled clerk leave of absence with pay for periods of not exceeding sixty days each, and not exceeding one year in all."

In considering whether the assignments of error under consideration are well taken, it is necessary to determine whether the payment referred to in the testimony was of such a character as to preclude the plaintiff from claiming compensation for lost time against the railway company. When one engaged in any calling or avocation from which he derives a pecuniary benefit is compelled to give up for a time the performance of his duties, as the result of an injury inflicted upon him by a wrongdoer, he is entitled, as a general rule, to demand compensation for the time thus lost at the hands of the wrongdoer who inflicted the injury. The general rule is that, where a wrongdoer causes time to be lost, he will not be heard to say that the person injured has suffered no pecuniary loss, because he has received, as a direct result of being injured, contributions which in amount aggregate more than what would have been earned during the time; nor will his liability be diminished to the extent of contributions which were less than what would have been earned. If, from injury. Denver & R. G. R. Co. v. Lorentzen, 24 C. C. A. 592, 49 U. S. App. 81, 79 Fed. 291. The court says the liability of the defendant for the expenses in question rested upon the ground that they were rendered necessary by its neglect of duty, and that this liability was not altered, no matter what arrangement plaintiff might have made for their payment.

Money raised by charitable subscription, and paid to the injured person, is not to be taken into consideration in assessing his damages. Norristown v. Moyer, 67 Pa. 356.

And in McLaughlin v. Corry, 77 Pa. 109, 18 Am. Rep. 432, it is assumed, for purposes of argument, that donations of friends and neighbors cannot be taken into consideration in assessing damages for negligent injuries.

But in Goodhart v. Pennsylvania R. Co. 177 Pa. 1, 55 Am. St. Rep. 705, 35 Atl. 191, it is held that no recovery can be had for nursing and attendance by the members of the household of the injured person, unless they are hired servants. The court says: "The care of his wife and minor children in ministering to his needs involves the performance of the ordinary offices of affection which is their duty; but it involves no legal liability on his part, and therefore affords no basis for a claim against a defendant for expenses incurred."

It would seem that in that case the court wholly missed the point of the controversy. It was the duty of the wrongdoer to provide the nurse, and the members of the household of the injured person owed it no duty in that regard. It could not require them to serve it gratuitously, and it had no concern with how the allowance which the law required it to make for such service should be distributed as between the injured person and those rendering the service.

In Peppercorn v. Black River Falls, 89 Wis. 38, 46 Am. St. Rep. 818, 61 N. W. 79, the court, without extending discussion, held that a minor child injured through defendant's negligence was not entitled to recover for moneys paid out or expenses incurred by her brother in her behalf for medical attendance and medicines in consequence of the injury. The court says that it may be that the physician so in attendance and the person so furnishing medicine might have recovered therefor as for necessities, but these things give her no right of action for moneys voluntarily paid and liabilities voluntarily incurred by her brother or her father.

67 L. R. A.

In that case, also, it would seem that the court relieved defendant of a burden which rightfully belonged to it merely because those interested in the welfare of the injured child had seen that it was supplied with needed attention.

II. In actions for wrongful death.

a. Property received from deceased.

Under the statutes which permit the widow and children, or next of kin, of a person killed by the negligence of another to maintain an action to recover the damages for the injury inflicted upon them by such death, the recovery is usually limited to the loss which they can show that they have sustained. Among the elements of loss which the jury are usually permitted to consider is the amount of future accumulation of which plaintiffs may be supposed to have been deprived by the premature death of their relative. Under these circumstances, it has been insisted on behalf of defendants in such actions that the property which is presently placed in possession of the plaintiffs because of the death should be considered in mitigation of damages. This contention has, however, not prevailed with the courts.

So it is held that the fact of inheritance of an estate from a deceased person is not to be considered in assessing the damages. Stahler v. Philadelphia & R. R. Co. 199 Pa. 386, 85 Am. St. Rep. 791, 49 Atl. 273.

In Chicago & N. W. R. Co. v. Moranda, 93 Ill. 302, 34 Am. Rep. 1681, the court, in holding that the poverty of plaintiffs in an action for damages for negligently killing their intestate was not a proper matter for consideration, says if, immediately after this disaster, the plaintiffs had by inheritance from other sources become at once wealthy, it would not have abated one cent from the amount of their lawful demand in the case.

One negligently causing the death of another is not, in an action by the next of kin of deceased, entitled to have the damages reduced by the amount which plaintiff has received from the estate of deceased. Terry v. Jewett, 17 Hun. 305, Affirmed in 78 N. Y. 338.

In Illinois C. R. Co. v. Barron, 5 Wall. 90, 18 L. ed. 591, exception was taken to the refusal of the trial court to instruct the jury that, if they believed that the plaintiffs for whose benefit the action was brought had received, in consequence of decedent's death, and out of the motives of affection, philanthropy, or as the result of a contract, the plaintiff has received from one other than his employer any sums, the reception of which are directly attributable to the fact that he has been injured, the person causing the injury will not be allowed to urge the payment of such sums in mitigation of the damages claimed against him. Thus, it has been held that the damages will not be reduced by any amount of insurance received in consequence of the wrongdoer's act. See Western & A. R. Co. v. Meigs, 74 Ga. 857 (5); Cunningham v. Evansville & T. H. R. Co. 102 Ind. 478, 52 Am. Rep. 683, 1 N. E. 800. Nor will the fact that medical attention and nursing have been rendered gratuitously preclude the injured party from recovering the value of such services (Brosnan v. Sweetser, 127 Ind. 1, 26 N. E. 555; Pennsylvania Co. v. Marion, 104 Ind. 239, 3 N. E. 874; Varnham v. Council Bluffs, 52 Iowa, 698, 3 N. W. 792), though it has been held that no recovery can be had for the value of services of this character rendered by members of the family, unless an agreement to pay for them be shown (Goodhart v. Pennsylvania R. Co. 177 Pa. 1, 55 Am. St. Rep. 705, 35 Atl. 191). Ought the rule to be different where the employer, from motives of humanity, sympathy, business interest, and the like, pays to the injured employee, as a mere gratuity, for a given time, an amount which he would have been authorized to demand if he had performed the services of his employment, but which he had no right to demand unless estate inherited by them from him, a pecuniary benefit greater than the maximum amount of damages which would have been allowed under the statute, then, as matter of law, they have received no pecuniary injury for which compensation can be recovered in the action. The Supreme Court of the United States affirmed the judgment without expressing opinion upon the refusal to give this instruction, thereby indicating that in its opinion it was without force.

Conversely, in an action under the civil damage act for making the plaintiff's intestate intoxicated, by reason of which he wandered into danger and was killed, the fact that deceased had accumulated property which went to plaintiffs upon his death is no ground for mitigation of damages. Houston v. Gran, 38 Neb. 687, 57 N. W. 408.

To illustrate the interpretations which have been placed upon the statutes, attention is called to Blake v. Midland R. Co. 18 Q. B. 95, which was an action by a widow of a merchant to recover for his death. The trial judge instructed the jury to take so much per annum as the wife might be supposed to enjoy of his fixed income from the benefits of his business and from his investments, consider this as an annuity, find its present worth, and deduct from it the gross amount which she would receive as her share in his estate, and award the balance as compensation under the statute. The decision in the case was reversed because it was not confined strictly to compensation, but permitted the recovery of a solatium, and nothing was said by the court in bank upon the phase of the case in which the receipts of the widow were deducted as shown above.

There is a qualification of the above rule in case the sole income of decedent was from an invested estate.

So it is held that, if the only aid plaintiffs have received from decedent has come from the income of the invested estate, the fact that the estate upon the death of the deceased devolved upon plaintiff may be considered in mitigation of damages. San Antonio & A. P. R. Co. v. Long, 87 Tex. 148, 24 L. R. A. 637, 47 Am. St. Rep. 87, 27 S. W. 113. There is language in that case which would lead to the conclusion that, in the opinion of the court, if the plaintiff has received a greater benefit by the death than he would have received from the continuation of the life, there can be no recovery. The court says: "It will not do to say, as some of 67 L. R. A.

the courts have said, that to permit a defendant in a case of this character to show that the plaintiff had received a pecuniary benefit resulting from the death of the deceased would enable a wrongdoer to protect himself against the consequences of his wrong. Except for willful misconduct or gross negligence, exemplary damages are not allowed by the statute. In other cases actual damages only are given, and the recovery is free from any element whatever of a penal nature. The argument is not a legitimate application of the principle that a wrongdoer cannot take advantage of his own wrong. Its main support rests upon a sentiment,—a consideration which should not be resorted to in order to change the provisions of the written law. The statute is intended, in case of mere ordinary negligence, to give compensation for a pecuniary loss; and the question is, What is the amount of this loss, if any?" Reversing (Tex. Civ. App.) 26 S. W. 114, which held that the acquisition of property by plaintiffs on account of the death of their mother cannot be shown in diminution of damages because the property would have ultimately vested in plaintiffs had the mother died a natural death. But the case was limited to its particular facts in Gulf, C. & S. F. R. Co. v. Younger, 90 Tex. 387, 38 S. W. 1121.

However, the next of kin, who, upon the death of their intestate, receive the property which he had accumulated, cannot increase their recovery from one who negligently caused his death by any sum which would represent accumulations which he might have made because of increase from such property. Having received the property, the responsibility as to accumulations must rest upon them. Demarest v. Little, 47 N. J. L. 28.

And in Pym v. Great Northern R. Co. 4 Best & S. 396, 32 L. J. Q. B. N. S. 377, it was held that, if the income of deceased was drawn wholly from an estate which upon his death descended to the plaintiffs, they are not deprived of their right of action if, because of the death, the income is distributed in a different manner than formerly so that some of the plaintiffs suffer from the loss of the ancestor.

b. Insurance money.

Some confusion was thrown into this branch of the subject by an early English case.

In Hicks v. Newport, A. & H. R. Co. 4 Best & S. 408, note, Lord Campbell, in charging the the services were performed? In Texas it has been held that an amount paid by an employer, whether paid as the result of a direct undertaking or as a mere gratuity, cannot be pleaded in mitigation of damages. Missouri P. R. Co. v. Jarrard, 65 Tex. 560. In an Indiana case the same rule was laid down, though it does not appear distinctly whether the payment was made as the result of a contract or as a gratuity. Ohio & M. R. Co. v. Dickerson, 59 Ind. 317. It has been held by the courts of last resort of New York and Alabama, and by intermediate courts in Missouri, that where an employer pays to his employee, during the period of his disability, an amount which would be equal to his wages earned if he had been at work, the employee cannot seek compensation for lost time against a wrongdoer who causes the time to be lost. See Drinkwater v. Dinamore, 80 N. Y. 390, 36 Am. Rep. 624; Montgomery & E. R. Co. v. Mallette, 92 Ala. 210, 9 So. 363 (6); Lee v. Western U. Teleg. Co. 51 Mo. App. 375 (6), 385; Ephland v. Missouri P. R. Co. 57 Mo. App. 147 (4), 160. A ruling to the same effect seems to have been made by Lore, Ch. J., on circuit in Delaware. Ohlinsky v. Hoopes & T. Co. 1 Marv. (Del.) 273, 40 Atl. 1127 (6). None of these cases seem to lay any stress upon the question as to whether the payment was a gratuity, or was required by the contract of employment. The cases referred to above are cited in the different text-books on Damages. These text writers do not agree as to what is the correct rule, jury in a nisi prius case, told them to deduct from the damages allowed any sum received upon the policy insuring against the accident which caused the death; but that in case of general insurance the reduction would be only in respect to the premiums that would be paid by the family, or which would be paid by himself if this fatal accident had not happened.

The doctrine that any insurance money should be deducted has not been generally followed; but the courts have not been able to free themselves entirely of the idea that some attention should be given to it.

Thus, in Grand Trunk R. Co. v. Jennings, L. R. 13 App. Cas. 800, 37 Week. Rep. 403, the court, after stating that, if the income of the widow was from property which had been settled upon her by the deceased, and which she would have received in any event, she cannot be considered as injured so far as such income is concerned, and that money received from a policy on his life is different. The pecuniary benefit which accrued to her upon his death from such money consists in the accelerated receipt of a sum of money the consideration of which had already been paid by him out of his earnings. In such case the extent of the benefit may fairly be taken to be represented by the use or interest of the money during the period of accumulation. And this benefit might be compensated by comparing the probable earnings with the premiums which would have been paid for the maintenance of the policy.

In Grand Trunk R. Co. v. Beckett, 16 Can. S. C. 713, Appx., the court affirmed a judgment of a divided court (13 Ont. App. Rep. 174) holding that insurance upon the life of deceased should not be deducted from the damages awarded. In the lower court Chief Justice Hagarty argued, however, that the statute says that, if death is caused by wrongful act, the one responsible therefor must pay the widow and children the pecuniary injury sustained by them, and that, if the benefit exceeds the injury, there was nothing to recover. So that, if a large increase of fortune accrues to plaintiff as a result of the death, it must be taken into account in the estimate of the damages. But Burton, J., said that, if that view is correct, then the insurance has in fact been effected for the benefit of the one to whose negligence the death is attributable, and the family lose the payments and interest which have been expended to procure that result.

67 L. R. A.

In Ladd v. Foster, 31 Fed. 827, where the attempt was made to reduce the amount of recovery for the negligent killing of a person by the amount which the estate received for life insurance, it appeared that the recovery was one under a statute making the amount to be recovered a part of the estate, and that the estate would be increased by the amount paid by the insurance, so that it would in fact profit to that extent by the death. The court says that it understands that the claim of the set-off had been abandoned by counsel so that it was disallowed, but it discusses the question to some extent, showing that the English cases permitted the deduction, while the American courts have taken another view of the matter; and the court doubts whether the principle applicable in case of insurance paid to the injured person himself, and which it states the Supreme Court of the United States had refused to set off against his claim for damages for personal injuries, was applicable in case the recovery was sought by, and the set-off claimed against, the estate of the injured person.

But the American courts have uniformly held that insurance money should not be considered or deducted.

In Sherlock v. Ailing, 44 Ind. 184, which is among the earliest cases in which the question arose, the court said that the argument urged in support of allowing a deduction of insurance money from the amount to be awarded as damages is that the damages are recoverable for the death, and when that death brings money which might not otherwise come to the party, a pecuniary benefit to the extent of the amount received has accrued to the party from the death; that, if the wrongful act causing the death, has been the occasion of pecuniary benefit, the pecuniary damage cannot be ascertained without deducting from the whole damage the pecuniary benefit. If the argument is sound, it would apply to a case where the pecuniary benefit resulted by descent or devise. It proposes to use, as a defense to damages resulting from the wrongful act of the defendants, by way of set-off, recoupment, or in mitigation of such damages, pecuniary benefits received by the injured party, to which the defendants had not contributed, and not resulting from, or connected with, the act causing the death,—benefits which it is fair to presume would have been realized at a future day without the aid of their wrongful act. To allow such a defense would defeat actions under but Mr. Watson distinctly takes the position that the sounder view is that which would preclude the wrongdoer from taking advantage of the employer's having, from reasons satisfactory to himself, paid to his injured employee an amount which would have been equal to his wages if he had performed the services for the period during which he was disabled. See Watson, Damages for Personal Injuries, § 479; 1 Sutherland, Damages, 3d ed. § 158; 2 Rorer, Railroads, p. 859; 1 Joyce, Damages, § 231; Voorheis, Damages, p. 61. See also the article written by Mr. Watson, the author of the work above cited, in 8 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, 2d ed. p. 649. We think the view taken by Mr. Watson, and which seems also to be concurred in by Mr. Sutherland and Mr. Rorer, is sounder than that which appears to be approved by the other text writers. The wrongdoer may show, in defense to a claim for lost time, that no time has been lost; and this, of course, is right and just, because, if no time has been lost, no compensation is due from anybody on account of lost time. But if time has been lost as the result of a tort, sound sense, common justice, and, it may be, public policy would demand that the tortfeasor be prohibited from making a defense founded upon the proposition that he has been guilty of a wrong,—it may be, a grievous and outrageous wrong,—but that some third person, not only not in sympathy with the wrongdoer, but despising him and his act, has, from some worthy motive, paid to the injured person an amount which, if it the law, when the party killed had, by his prudence and foresight, made provision or left means for the support of his wife and children, and the wrongdoer would thus be enabled to protect himself against the consequences of his own wrongful act. No case has been found recognizing the doctrine claimed, and we are not willing to be the first to sanction it.

And the rule is that insurance money cannot be deducted. Galveston, H. & S. A. R. Co. v. Cody, 20 Tex. Civ. App. 520, 50 S. W. 135; Houston & T. C. R. Co. v. Weaver (Tex. Civ. App.) 41 S. W. 846; Kellogg v. New York C. & H. R. R. Co. 79 N. Y. 72; Baltimore & O. R. Co. v. Wightman, 29 Gratt. 431, 26 Am. Rep. 384; Coulter v. Pine Twp. 164 Pa. 543, 30 Atl. 490; North Pennsylvania R. Co. v. Kirk, 90 Pa. 15; Lipscomb v. Houston & T. C. R. Co. 95 Tex. 5, 55 L. R. A. 869, 93 Am. St. Rep. 804, 64 S. W. 923; Illinois C. R. Co. v. Prickett, 210 Ill. 140, 71 N. E. 435, Affirming 109 Ill. App. 468, where the court says it is a novel proposition, unsupported by law or justice, that a widow's pecuniary loss on account of the death of her husband through the negligence of his employer is to be gauged by the amount of insurance which he had been considerate enough to provide.

And this is true of accident insurance as well as general life insurance. Tyler S. E. R. Co. v. Rasberry, 13 Tex. Civ. App. 185, 34 S. W. 794. The court says: "The deceased provided, in case of accidental death, for certain sums of money to be paid to his wife and mother, for the insurance of which he paid a sum equal to the risk. Ought these sums to be set off against the damage caused by the negligent act of the appellant? Suppose that, on account of the death of her husband, some relative bound for her support should provide for it by payment to her of a sum of money at once. Would it be contended that such sum should be set off against admitted damages? It is not believed that advantages incidental to the death ought to be set off against such damages as would naturally flow from the delinquent act causing the death; there are no equities in favor of the wrongdoer, and it cannot be regarded in any other light than a set-off."

The damages which a widow is entitled to recover for the negligent killing of her husband should not be reduced by an insurance on his life, received by her. Western & A. R. Co. v. Meigs, 74 Ga. 857. The court says, if her re- 67 L. R. A.

covery could be thus reduced, it might be insisted that, where the husband's life was insured for more than she was allowed to recover under the law as its actual cash value, the defendant could claim a balance against the family of the deceased on the idea that the killing of the husband and father was a positive pecuniary benefit to them.

A mother suing for damages for the negligent killing of her son is not bound to allow as a set-off money which she had received from an insurance company because of his death. Clune v. Ristine, 36 C. C. A. 450, 94 Fed. 745. The court says, when an action is brought against a wrongdoer he is not entitled to have the damages consequent upon the commission of his wrongful act reduced by proving that the plaintiff has received compensation for the loss from a collateral source wholly independent of himself.

In Althorff v. Wolfe, 22 N. Y. 355, where an action was brought against a property owner for throwing snow from the roof of his dwelling into the street in such a manner that it struck and killed plaintiffs intestate, the defendant requested an instruction that, if the jury should find for plaintiff, they should take into consideration the money received by plaintiff as insurance on the life of deceased, which was refused. The question of the correctness of this refusal is not discussed at length by the court, but it is covered by the general statement, "It is not contended that there are any other available exceptions in the case," after the court finished the discussion of the principal point involved as to the responsibility of the defendant for acts of his servant; Affirming 2 Hill. 344, where the court says: The widow was entitled to the whole amount of the policy of insurance. It was for her benefit alone; and it was secured for the payment of a premium to which defendant did not contribute. The benefits growing out of the right of action here sought to be enforced are not given to her by the statute, but are given to the widow and next of kin, and do not arise upon the common-law liability. They are therefore res inter alios acta.

c. Pensions and subscriptions.

In an action for the benefit of the widow and children of a man negligently killed, evidence is not admissible as to possible pensions which may be received because of services rendered by decedent to the Federal government. St. Louis, had come from the wrongdoer, would have equaled the damages which would have been assessed against him. There is nothing in the record to show that the government, in its contract of employment with railway postal clerks, stipulates for the payment of salary during periods of disability; and, so far as the record discloses, when such an employee is disabled from work, he cannot, as a matter of right, demand anything from the government by way of compensation during the period of disability. There is nothing in the testimony of the witness King to indicate that payments are made in such cases otherwise than as a matter of grace. If we look at the postal law or regulation above quoted, it is perfectly clear that the payment is a mere gratuity on the part of the government. We are therefore not confronted in the present case with the necessity for deciding the question as to what would be the rule in the event that the injured employee, under his contract of employment, had a right to demand of his employer the amount which he would have earned as wages during the period he was disabled. On this question we now make no authoritative ruling, but we do rule that where an employer pays to an injured employee, as a matter of grace, the amount which he would have earned as wages if he had not been disabled, a wrongdoer who brings about the disability has no concern with this transaction between the employer and the employee, and the amount so paid is not to be regarded as in any sense com-

I. M. & S. R. Co. v. Maddry, 57 Ark. 306, 21 S. W. 472. The court says that, if the right to the pensions affected the issues in the case, it should have been brought to the attention of the jury by instructions from the court, and not by the testimony of witnesses. But the court states that it is of opinion that there was no error in the statement by the trial court, in connection with the ruling on the evidence, that the jury would be instructed that, in considering the damages, they should not take into consideration any pensions which they might have received from the government in consequence of the loss of life of their intestate.

So the amount of a pension which the widow of a deceased fireman receives because of his death cannot be taken into consideration in mitigation of damages for negligently causing the death. Geary v. Metropolitan Street R. Co. 73 App. Div. 441, 77 N. Y. Supp. 54.

4 Sutherland, Damages, § 1265, cites Grey-mouth-Point, E. R. & C. Co. v. McIvor, 16 New Zealand, L. R. 258, as holding that neither the probability at the time of the death, that a fund would be raised by public subscription for the benefit of the family, nor the fact that since the death and before action brought a more or less definite trust of the fund has been created, under which plaintiffs will, in all probability, participate, can be considered in estimating damages to be allowed to the family of a deceased for his negligent killing.

d. Remarriage.

The loss which may result to one because of the deprivation of the services of his or her wife or husband as the case may be is regarded as a proper element of damage. And it has been argued that it was no longer available if the loss had been supplied by another person's voluntarily filling the place of the deceased person. But this contention has not prevailed.

In an action by an administrator for the benefit of the husband and children of a wife negligently killed, the damages cannot be mitigated by the fact that the husband had taken a new wife, who rendered the services in the family for the loss of which the action is being prosecuted. Davis v. Guarnieri, 45 Ohio St. 470, 4 Am. St. Rep. 548, 15 N. E. 350. The court says the only loss to be repaired is pecuniary loss, and the only theory of redress is that supplied by the statute, which does not seem to admit of any 67 L. R. A.

theory of set-off or compensation with which the wrongdoer is in no manner connected.

In case of the death of a wife the fact that another woman has taken her place in the home is not a ground for diminution of damages. Gulf, C. & S. F. R. Co. v. Younger, 90 Tex. 387, 38 S. W. 1121.

The facts that the widow has remarried, and that her second husband is alive, cannot be taken into consideration in mitigation of damages for the killing of the first one. Philpott v. Pennsylvania R. Co. 175 Pa. 570, 34 Atl. 856; Georgia R. & Bkg. Co. v. Garr, 57 Ga. 277, 24 Am. Rep. 492.

So it is not competent to show that plaintiff is engaged to be married again. Dimmey v. Wheeling & E. G. R. Co. 27 W. Va. 32, 55 Am. Rep. 292.

III. Payments made at instance of wrongdoer.

In some instances money has been paid to the injured person at the instance, or by procurement, of the wrongdoer, or from a source organized or maintained by him. In such cases the right to deduct the payments will depend principally upon the purpose of their payment or manner in which it was made. The further element of who is plaintiff in the action may have to be taken into consideration.

Thus, money paid for the care of the injured person during his life by the one causing the injury is not to be considered in assessing the damages to be paid the next of kin under the statute. Murray v. Usher, 46 Hun, 404, 11 N. Y. S. R. 789, Affirmed in 117 N. Y. 542, 23 N. E. 564.

So the facts that defendant paid the nurse's and doctor's bills and funeral expenses, and took a collection for the benefit of the injured person, cannot be considered in diminution of the damages to be paid to his widow. Linden v. Anchor Min. Co. 20 Utah, 134, 58 Pac. 355.

The defendant cannot relieve himself from statutory liability by continuing wages as a gratuity.

Thus, with respect to wages paid by the person himself whose negligence caused the injury, the court, in Chandler v. Smith (C. A.) 68 L. J. Q. B. N. S. 909 [1899] 2 Q. B. 506, said that the statute making the employer liable only in case injuries had been such as to cause at least two weeks loss of wages did not have reference to the wages which were continued out of feelings of generosity and compassion.

pensation for lost time. Hence there was no error in the charge complained of, nor in refusing the instruction requested.

4. Complaint is also made that the court's charge in reference to lost time was erroneous, for the reason that there was no allegation in the petition claiming compensation for lost time. The petition did not in terms ask damages for lost time. It did allege that the plaintiff "was confined to his bed for many weeks;" that he was "earning $1,400 at the time of his injury;" that "his capacity to labor has been largely and permanently impaired." He claimed damages in the sum of $500 for doctor's bills, medicine, and nurse hire; laying the aggregate damages which he claimed to have sustained in the sum of $10,000. Under these general allegations the plaintiff offered evidence to show that he had lost time, and the evidence set forth with certainty the time lost, to wit, one year, less two days. In Savannah, F. & W. R. Co. v. Holland, 82 Ga. 258, 14 Am. St. Rep. 158 (4), 10 S. E. 200, it was held that it was not necessary that punitive damages should be claimed eo nomine in a petition; that it was enough if the facts alleged and the proof be such as to warrant the as-essment. In the present case the general allegations of the petition were sufficient to show that time had been lost, and any defect in reference to specific details should have been taken advantage of by special demurrer. The evidence in reference to lost time having been admitted without objection, there was no error in the charge that plaintiff was entitled to recover for lost time if the evidence authorized it. In Western & A. R. Co. v. Patillo, 99 Ga. 97, 24 S. E. 958, there was neither allegation nor evidence in reference to lost time, and it was therefore manifest error to instruct the jury on the subject. In the present case there was ample evidence admitted without objection, and the allegations of the petition, though general, were sufficient to cover the subject in the absence of a special demurrer.

5. In four grounds of the motion for a new trial, complaint is made of rulings of the court on the admission of evidence. In two of them it is alleged that it was error to admit certain evidence in reference to the character of the injuries sustained by the plaintiff, on the ground that there was no allegation to authorize the admission of such evidence. In another ground the evi-

The facts that a municipal corporation had procured an accident insurance policy for one of its firemen, for which it had paid out of funds furnished by insurance companies as provided by statute, and that the amount of it was paid to his widow when he was killed through the negligence of the municipality, does not absolve it from liability for the injury caused to her by its negligence. Kansas City v. McDonald, 60 Kan. 481, 45 L. R. A. 429, 57 Pac. 123.

The bulk of the cases under this branch of the subject have arisen out of payments made by relief societies which were departments of, or connected in some way with, the corporation causing the injury. In such cases the contract under which the payment was made has usually fixed the question of the liability of the corporation.

A relief association which is an adjunct of a railway system may stipulate in its contracts that in case benefits are claimed from it the liability of the railway company for negligent injuries forming the basis of the claim shall be waived. Owens v. Baltimore & O. R. Co. 1 L. R. A. 75, 35 Fed. 715; Pittsburgh, C. C. & St. L. R. Co. v. Hosea, 152 Ind. 412, 58 N. E. 419.

And if, as a condition to receiving aid from a benefit department of the corporation which caused the injury, plaintiff signs a release of all liability for the injury, he cannot afterward maintain an action against the corporation for the injury. Graft v. Baltimore & O. R. Co. (Pa.) 6 Cent. Rep. 633, 8 Atl. 206.

But if the action for the negligent killing of a person is, under the statute, to be brought by his personal representative for the benefit of his next of kin, the defendant cannot claim a mitigation of damages because one of the beneficiaries has received a benefit from a relief department maintained by it, since the question of the right of the beneficiary to share in the recovery must be determined at the time the distribution is made. Boulden v. Pennsylvania R. Co. 205 Pa. 264, 54 Atl. 906.

And where an injured employee received from a benefit society connected with the railroad company which caused his injury, but which was a distinct organization, a benefit during the time of his disability, it was held that the railroad company was not entitled to have the amount deducted from the damages in an action by the next of kin of the injured person, who died from his injuries, and held it responsible for the injury. Farmer v. Grand Trunk R. Co. 21 Ont. Rep. 299. The court in that case made a distinction between such benefit and accident insurance, holding that the latter should be deducted.

Where by the state laws the action for negligent killing is to be brought by the personal representative for the benefit of the widow, children, and next of kin, the signing of a release by the widow as beneficiary in a contract with a relief department of the corporation responsible for the accident, as required by the terms of the contract before a benefit will be paid under it, will not defeat the right to recover against the corporation for the tort in her capacity as administratrix for the benefit of the beneficiaries named in the statute. Cowen v. Ray, 47 C. C. A. 352, 108 Fed. 320; Pittsburgh, C. C. & St. L. R. Co. v. Hosea, 152 Ind. 412, 58 N. E. 419. In the latter case the ground for this ruling is expressly stated to be that the right of action of the injured person, and that created by the statute for the benefit of his family, are distinct. And the court says, it follows, therefore, that, whatever may be said with regard to the power of the intestate to contract away his right of action against the wrongdoer, he surely had no power to bargain away his family's right of action, given by statute against the one wrongfully causing the death.

H. P. F.

dence objected to was by a witness that the plaintiff complained of a great deal of pain, the objection being that it was hearsay; and, in still another ground, evidence of the plaintiff's wife was objected to, to the effect that the plaintiff returned home from his first trip after the injury, and immediately went to bed, and that she had to rub him quite often. The allegations of the petition were sufficiently broad to authorize the admission of the evidence first above referred to, and the other evidence was not inadmissible for any reason assigned in the motion for a new trial.

6. The judge charged the jury that, in determining the damages to be assessed, they could take into consideration the mental suffering that the plaintiff had undergone as a result of the injury. Objection is made to this charge on the ground that there were no allegations in the petition to authorize any charge on the subject of mental pain. The petition alleges that the plaintiff was confined to his bed for many months on account of the injury, and that "he has suffered and will continue to suffer great pain." This allegation in reference to pain was sufficiently broad to authorize the introduction of evidence in regard to mental pain, and, evidence to this effect having been introduced, there was no error in charging on the subject.

7. The motion for a new trial contains numerous exceptions to the charge, but, when the extracts excepted to are considered in the light of the entire charge, we do not think they were erroneous for any reason assigned, nor was any error committed which required the granting of a new trial. The charge, taken as a whole, seems to have fairly and fully submitted the issues to the jury. If the judge did not go into detail as fully as defendant's counsel desired, this should have been made the subject of special requests, or at least the attention of the judge should have been called thereto. We find no error of law which in our opinion would authorize a reversal of the judgment. The remaining question grows out of that ground of the motion which complains that the verdict is excessive. Under the view we have taken of the case, the evidence authorized a finding of $1,400 for lost time. The evidence also authorized a finding for the physical suffering which the plaintiff underwent, and this would itself be sufficient to justify the remainder of the verdict, even if nothing was allowed for mental suffering, and the jury had determined the issue in reference to permanent disability in favor of the company.

Judgment affirmed.

All the Justices concur.

MISSOURI SUPREME COURT.

Edward GANNON et al., Respts.,
v.

William ALBRIGHT, Appt.

(.....Mo.....)

1. The use of the word "heirs" in conveying an interest by will after the statute has made the use of such word unnecessary to convey a fee-simple estate does not cast a doubt upon the intention of the deviser to devise a fee simple.
2. The use of the word "bequeath" in making a devise of real estate does not indicate an intention to convey less than the fee-simple estate when used in connection with the word "devise."
3. Following a devise of real estate in terms broad enough to convey a fee simple with a provision that the land shall not be sold, "at least not before" the devisee becomes of age, gives a power of alienation, at least by implication, and renders a subsequent limitation over of the estate void.
4. A devise to certain persons named,

"and unto their heirs and assigns forever," is not cut down, either expressly or by implication, from a fee simple to a fee tail by a subsequent declaration that, if either should die without "issue," his share should go over to others.

5. A fee-simple estate devised to one with contingent limitation over in case he should die without issue becomes absolute and incontestable in his assignee upon his death leaving children surviving him.
6. If the devise of a fee tail is to be implied from the limitation over of the estate in the event that the devisee should "die without leaving any issue" the words must be taken as referring to an indefinite failure of issue, which will render the limitation over void for remoteness.
7. Under a statute providing that, in case of a limitation over in a devise upon the death of the first taker without issue, the word "issue" must be taken to mean issue living at the death of the person named; an estate tail by implication cannot be created by a limitation over after such failure of issue, but, in case the first taker has issue living at his death, his estate in fee is absolute.
8. Where, because of a statutory provision that a limitation over in a de-

NOTE.—For other cases in this series as to what is necessary to create an estate tail, see Pennington v. Pennington, 3 L. R. A. 816, and Hertz v. Abraham, 50 L. R. A. 361.
67 L. R. A.

vise in case of the death of the first taker without issue shall be referred to the time of the first taker's death, no estate tail can be implied from such a provision in the devise, the right of the first taker to the fee simple in case he dies leaving issue is not affected by further statutory provisions abolishing fee tails, and providing that, in cases where by the common law such estate would exist under the terms of the instrument, the first taker should have a life estate, and the next in succession a fee simple.

9. If a will making a limitation over after the death of the first taker without issue is susceptible of a construction that will make it apply to a definite failure of issue at the time of his death, such construction will be adopted in preference to one requiring an indefinite failure of issue.
10. The word "remainder" in a statute providing that, in case of the limitation of a remainder upon failure of issue, the word "issue" must be construed as issue living at the death of the life tenant, is broad enough to include an executory devise which is to take effect upon such failure of issue.

(Brace, Marshall, and Valliant, JJ., dissent.)

(June 7, 1904.)

APPEAL by defendant from a judgment of the Circuit Court for St. Louis County in favor of plaintiffs in an action brought to recover possession of certain real estate. Reversed.

The facts are stated in the opinions.

Mr. T. E. Skinker, for appellant:

The will conferred upon the two sons, Michael, Jr., and Joseph, a fee simple, coupled with an absolute power of alienation. For this reason the devise over is void.

4 Kent, Com. 10th ed. *270; 2 Washb. Real Prop. 6th ed. 667; Tiedeman, Real Prop. § 398; Jackson ex dem. Brewster v. Bull, 10 Johns. 19; Jackson ex dem. Livingston v. Robins, 15 Johns. 169, 16 Johns. 537; Helmer v. Shoemaker, 22 Wend. 137; Van Horne v. Campbell, 100 N. Y. 287, 53 Am. Rep. 168, 3 N. E. 316, 771; Ide v. Ide, 5 Mass. 500; Melson v. Doe, 4 Leigh, 408; Riddick v. Cohoon, 4 Rand. (Va.) 547; Cook v. Walker, 15 Ga. 457; Pickering v. Langdon, 22 Me. 413; Ramsdell v. Ramsdell, 21 Me. 288; Jones v. Bacon, 68 Me. 34, 28 Am. Rep. 1; Rona v. Meier, 47 Iowa, 607, 29 Am. Rep. 493; McKenzie's Appeal, 41 Conn. 607, 19 Am. Rep. 525.

At the least, the will conferred upon the two sons, Michael, Jr., and Joseph, a fee simple, determinable, as to each, upon his dying without issue living at the time of his death; and, as they both died leaving issue, after having conveyed the land, their issue, the plaintiffs, have no interest in the land, and cannot recover.

67 L. R. A.

Gen. Stat. 1866, § 5, p. 442; Yocum v. Siler, 160 Mo. 281, 61 S. W. 208; McRee v. Means, 34 Ala. 349; Newsom v. Holesapple, 101 Ala. 682, 15 So. 644; Couch v. Gorham, 1 Conn. 36; Alfred v. Marks, 49 Conn. 473; Morgan v. Morgan, 5 Day, 517; Russ v. Russ, 9 Fla. 105; Gibson v. Hardaway, 68 Ga. 370; Harris v. Smith, 16 Ga. 545; Mattheus v. Hudson, 81 Ga. 120, 12 Am. St. Rep. 305, 7 S. E. 286; Daniel v. Daniel, 102 Ga. 181, 28 S. E. 167; Summers v. Smith, 127 Ill. 645, 21 N. E. 191; Strain v. Sweeney, 163 Ill. 603, 45 N. E. 201; Smith v. Kimbell, 153 Ill. 368, 38 N. E. 1029; Jones v. Miller, 13 Ind. 337; Smith v. Hunter, 23 Ind. 580; Pate v. French, 122 Ind. 10, 23 N. E. 673; Boling v. Miller, 133 Ind. 602, 33 N. E. 354; Ross v. Ross, 135 Ind. 367, 35 N. E. 9; Hart v. Thompson, 3 B. Mon. 482; Daniel v. Thomson, 14 B. Mon. 662; Mitchell v. Campbell, 94 Ky. 347, 23 S. W. 656; Coleman-Bush Invest. Co. v. Figg, 95 Ky. 403, 25 S. W. 888; Webb v. First Baptist Church, 90 Ky. 117, 13 S. W. 362; Crozier v. Cundall, 99 Ky. 202, 35 S. W. 546; Buck v. Paine, 75 Me. 582; Hersey v. Purington, 96 Me. 166, 51 Atl. 865; Dallam v. Dallam, 7 Harr. & J. 220; Hilleary v. Hilleary, 26 Md. 274; Gambrill v. Forest Grove Lodge, 66 Md. 17, 5 Atl. 548, 10 Atl. 595; Deveomon v. Shaw, 70 Md. 219, 16 Atl. 645; Backus v. Presbyterian Asso. 77 Md. 50, 25 Atl. 856; Anderson v. Brown, 84 Md. 261, 35 Atl. 937; Richardson v. Noyes, 2 Mass. 56, 3 Am. Dec. 24; Ide v. Ide, 5 Mass. 500; Brightman v. Brightman, 100 Mass. 238; Jordan v. Roach, 32 Miss. 481; Eaton v. Straw, 18 N. H. 320; Downing v. Wherrin, 19 N. H. 9, 49 Am. Dec. 139; Pinkham v. Blair, 57 N. H. 226; Den ex dem. Harris v. Taylor, 5 N. J. L. 413; Den ex dem. Sinickson v. Snitcher, 14 N. J. L. 53; Seddel v. Wills, 20 N. J. L. 223; Wilson v. Wilson, 46 N. J. Eq. 321, 19 Atl. 132; Den ex dem. Van Middlesworth v. Schenk, 8 N. J. L. 29; Drummond v. Drummond, 26 N. J. Eq. 234; Den ex dem. Wurdell v. Allaire, 20 N. J. L. 6; Groves v. Coa, 40 N. J. L. 40; Fosdick v. Cornell, 1 Johns. 440, 3 Am. Dec. 340; Jackson ex dem. Burhans v. Blanshan, 3 Johns. 292, 3 Am. Dec. 485; Wilkes v. Lion, 2 Cow. 333; Heard v. Horton, 1 Denio, 165, 43 Am. Dec. 659; Miller v. Macomb, 26 Wend. 229; Hill v. Hill, 4 Barb. 419; Hatfield v. Sneden, 54 N. Y. 280; Pendleton v. Pendleton, 6 N. C. (2 Murph.) 82; Jones v. Spaight, 4 N. C. (1 Car. Law Repos.) 544; Taylor v. Maris, 90 N. C. 619; Buchanan v. Buchanan, 99 N. C. 308, 5 S. E. 430; Kelly v. Williams, 113 N. C. 437, 18 S. E. 693; Wright v. Brown, 116 N. C. 26, 22 S. E. 313; Parish v. Ferris, 6 Ohio St. 563; Niles v. Gray, 12 Ohio St. 320; Durfee v. MacNeil, 58 Ohio St. 238, 50 N. E. 721; Row- land v. Warren, 10 Or. 129; Hauer v. Sheetz, 2 Binn. 532; Toman v. Dunlop, 18 Pa. 73; Hill v. Hill, 74 Pa. 173, 15 Am. Dec. 545; Mangum v. Piester, 16 S. C. 316; Gordon v. Gordon, 32 S. C. 563, 11 S. E. 334; Lewis v. Claiborne, 5 Yerg. 369, 26 Am. Dec. 270; Booker v. Booker, 5 Humph. 505; Stones v. Maney, 3 Tenn. Ch. 731; Brown v. Brown, 86 Tenn. 277, 6 S. W. 869, 7 S. W. 640; Armstrong v. Douglass, 89 Tenn. 219, 10 L. R. A. 85, 14 S. W. 604; Randall v. Josselyn, 59 Vt. 557, 10 Atl. 577; Bells v. Gillespie, 5 Rand. (Va.) 23; Randolph v. Wright, 81 Va. 608; Tomlinson v. Nickell, 24 W. Va. 148; Jackson ex dem. St. John v. Chew, 12 Wheat. 153, 6 L. ed. 583; Jackson ex dem. Kip v. Kip, 2 Paine, 366, Fed. Cas. No. 7,138; Lippett v. Hopkins, 1 Gall. 454, Fed. Cas. No. 8,380; Abbott v. Essex Co. 18 How. 202, 15 L. ed. 352; Pells v. Brown, Cro. Jac. 590; Barker v. Suretees, 2 Strange, 1175; Porter v. Bradley, 3 T. R. 143; Roc ex dem. Sheers v. Jeffery, 7 T. R. 589; Doe ex dem. Barnfield v. Wetton, 2 Bos. & P. 324; Doe ex dem. King v. Frost, 3 Barn. & Ald. 546; Ex parte Davies, 9 Eng. L. & Eq. 88.

Mr. Henry T. Kent for respondents.

Gantt, J., delivered the opinion of the court:

This is an action of ejectment. Michael J. Gannon is the common source of title to the lot in suit. Upon the construction of the fourth clause of the will of Michael J. Gannon the rights of both sides to this controversy depend. The said clause is in these words: "Fourth. I give, devise, and bequeathe unto my two sons, Michael J. Gannon, Jr., and Joseph E. Gannon, and unto their heirs and assigns forever, my farm lying and being in the county of St. Louis and state of Missouri, which lies in the southern limits of Kirkwood, containing 80 acres, be the same more or less. It is my will that the same shall not be sold,—at least, not before the younger of the two, that is, Joseph E. Gannon, becomes of lawful age; and, should either of them die without issue, then the survivor, his heirs and assigns, to take, own, and have the part and portion hereby bequeathed to the one so dying. And in the event both should die without leaving any issue, then it is my will that my surviving heirs (with the exception of my son, John T. Gannon, who has had his share) shall have such property like and like." Following the cardinal rule of construction, it is our duty to ascertain, if possible, the intention of the testator, and in so doing mere technical rules must yield to the obvious intent and purpose of the testator. Among the more important canons of construction that have uniformly found favor in this court is the rule that, when the words of a will at the outset clearly indicate a disposition by the testator to give the entire estate absolutely to the first donee or devisee, the estate will not be cut down to a less estate by subsequent or ambiguous words inferential in their intent. Small v. Field, 102 Mo. 104, 14 S. W. 815. There are some propositions in the construction of this will that are, or ought to be, free of doubt. First, by the words, "I give, devise, and bequeathe to my two sons, Michael J. Gannon, Jr., and Joseph E. Gannon, and unto their heirs and assigns forever, my farm," etc. In the absence of qualifying words or subsequent limitation, a fee simple absolute was given by these two sons to the tract in question. This is so by the most rigid technical rules of the common law, and everywhere recognized by the English and American courts, and, unembarrassed by technical rules and refinements, the ordinary man would unhesitatingly say that this was the plain meaning of the testator. On this proposition we are all agreed, and, indeed, it is not seriously controverted by counsel. It is true that it is urged that these words, "and unto his heirs and assigns forever," were not necessary, since our statute has dispensed with the use of the word "heirs" in conveying or devising an estate of inheritance, and it is argued that by the use of these unnecessary words the testator evinces a lack of confidence in the force of the words previously used, and for that reason casts a doubt on their meaning. We are unable to concur in such a view. While it is true that our statute no longer requires the word "heirs" to pass a fee simple, the use of these words in no manner casts any doubt upon the intention of a grantor or deviser who uses them to grant or devise a fee simple. It is doubtful whether any competent or skilful conveyancer ever dispenses with them in conveying a fee. Why should the use of words so long approved, and so absolutely necessary at common law to effectuate such a purpose, indicate a different purpose merely because the statute permits other and less words to have the same effect? Notwithstanding our statute has dispensed with the word "heirs" in devising a fee, this court has often commended its use. In Chew v. Keller, 100 Mo., loc. cit. 370, 13 S. W. 395, Judge Black, speaking for this court, held that the words "to them and their heirs forever" created a fee simple; saying: "Stronger language could not have been used to show and disclose a purpose and intent to confer upon Levin Baker and the other named persons an absolute and unconditional fee. The estate is given to 'them and their heirs forever.' This expression, though unnecessary to create a fee, is an appropriate one for that purpose, and that the word 'heirs' is here used in its ordinary legal sense as one of limitation only cannot be doubted." When, in addition to the words, "unto them and their heirs forever," the testator adds the significant words "and assigns," it seems to us that, instead of suggesting a doubt of his intention, no more suitable language could have been chosen by Michael Gannon to give his said sons an absolute fee simple, and they emphasize his intention to give them his whole estate in said tract. Wolfer v. Hemmer, 144 Ill. 554, 33 N. E. 751. Neither does the use of the word "bequeath" in any manner weaken the force of the other words. "Bequeath" has been judicially construed by many of the ablest courts of this country to be synonymous with "devise" when used with reference to a gift of real estate. Dow v. Dow, 36 Me. 211; Laing v. Barbour, 119 Mass. 523, and cases cited. In this court it has been so held. Shumate v. Bailey, 110 Mo. 411, 20 S. W. 178; Yocum v. Siler, 160 Mo. 281, 61 S. W. 208. In Greenwood v. Verdon, 1 Kay & J. 74, before Sir W. P. Wood, Vice Chancellor, the gift was to his son, John Verdon, and to his heirs and assigns forever, and from and after the death of John without issue, then over to the surviving legatees. The vice chancellor said: "There are several points about this will which do not admit of question. First, there is clearly an estate in fee simple limited to John Verdon, in remainder after the death of the testator's wife, in the first part of the will; for the limitation is not merely to him and his heirs, but to him and 'his heirs and assigns forever.' . . . The first limitation here being not only to the son 'and his heirs,' which has often been restrained to a particular line of heirs, but the limitation is in the largest words to him, 'his heirs and assigns forever.' I could not, however, rely upon those words alone; but, as they are used, and I have to consider whether or not the estate so limited is cut down to an estate tail, I have to construe the effect of those words upon the subsequent gift on the death of John Verdon without issue." After reviewing many English cases, the vice chancellor summed up as follows: "The answer to this special case must be that under the will of John Verdon, John Verdon the son took an estate in fee simple, subject to be defeated by an executory devise in the event of his dying without issue living at the death of the last surviving legatee, and, there being issue living at that period, the estate in fee became absolute." These views sufficiently indicate our opinion that the first sentence of the fourth clause of the will clearly and in unambiguous language devised a fee in this tract to the two sons. So that we must reject the argument that a fee simple was not created by these words.

But it is argued with great earnestness by counsel that, while these words, standing alone, might be sufficient to create a fee simple, yet, when considered in connection with the subsequent words of the will, they in fact create a fee tail. Let us consider, then, the words "unto them and their heirs and assigns forever" with the subsequent clauses of this fourth item of the will. Did the testator intend to give his said two sons an absolute fee or a fee defeasible upon the death of both without issue, or did he intend to create an estate tail? Two views are maintained by defendant. The first is that by the gift of an absolute fee in most appropriate language in the first instance, and understanding and intending thereby that they had the absolute power of alienating the land thus devised to them, then he added the clause, "it is my will that the same shall not be sold, at least, not before the younger of the two, Joseph E. Gannon, becomes of age," he gave and intended to give an additional power to sell when Joseph reached his majority. Keeping in mind, as we do, that he had already granted an estate to them, in which the power of sale attached as a necessary incident, and that he understood that he had done so, and that it was therefore his intention to do so, the clause restraining the sale until Joseph arrived at age must be construed and read as if he had said, "I give my said sons full power to sell and convey said land when Joseph, the younger of the two, becomes of lawful age." To our minds it seems absolutely clear that he understood he had already granted them a fee simple with the power to sell, and he only desired the land should not be sold during the minority of Joseph, but after that it was his will that no restraint should exist on their power to sell and convey. It is to be observed in this connection that the restriction is not to the sale of a mere life estate, but to a sale of the land itself. No such restriction was necessary if he had given them a mere life estate. We understand it is settled law that, where an estate is devised to one and his heirs and assigns forever, and there is added, either by express words or by implication, an absolute power of alienation, the limitation over is void. In our opinion, the words of this restraining clause give an express power to sell, but, if not, there is clearly given such power by implication.

In Redfield on Wills, vol. 2, p. 277, it is said: "It is a settled rule of American as well as English law that where the first devisee has the absolute right to dispose of the property in his own unlimited discretion, and not a mere power of appointment among certain specified persons or classes, any estate over is void as being inconsistent with the first gift." Void as a remainder because of the preceding fee, after which a remainder cannot be limited; void as an executory devise because a valid executory devise cannot subsist under an absolute power of disposition in the first taker. Thus Chancellor Kent says (vol. 4, p. 270): "If, therefore, there be an absolute power of disposition given by the will to the first taker, as if an estate be devised to A in fee, and if he dies possessed of the property without lawful issue, the remainder over, or remainder over of the property which he, dying without heirs, should leave, or without selling or devising the same,—in all such cases the remainder over is void as a remainder because of the preceding fee, and it is void by way of executory devise because the limitation is inconsistent with the absolute estate or power of disposition expressly given or necessarily implied by the will." Jones v. Bacon, 68 Me. 34, 28 Am. Rep. 1; McKenzie's Appeal, 41 Conn. 607, 19 Am. Rep. 525; Rona v. Meier, 47 Iowa, 607, 29 Am. Rep. 493; Kelley v. Meins, 135 Mass. 231, and cases cited; Howard v. Carusi, 109 U. S. 725, 27 L. ed. 1089, 3 Sup. Ct. Rep. 575; 2 Washb. Real Prop. 6th ed. 667; Roth v. Rauschenbusch, 173 Mo. 582, 61 L. R. A. 455, 73 S. W. 664; Wolfer v. Hemmer, 144 Ill. 554, 33 N. E. 751; Ball v. Hancock, 82 Ky. 107; Combs v. Combs, 67 Md. 11, 1 Am. St. Rep. 359, 8 Atl. 757; Hossey v. Hossey, 37 N. J. Eq. 21; Wead v. Gray, 78 Mo. 59; Van Horne v. Campbell, 100 N. Y. 287, 53 Am. Rep. 166, 3 N. E. 316, 771.

If we are right in this position, plaintiffs cannot recover. Let us next inquire whether an estate in fee tail was intended to be created in these two sons and the heirs of their body; and, first, Was there an estate tail created by express words? The contention is that the word "heirs," expressed or implied, is just as essential to the creation of an estate tail as of an estate in fee simple, the difference being that in the creation of a fee tail a particular class or line of heirs must be indicated, while in fee simple it is to the heirs general. As understood by all lawyers, what are known as "fee-tail estates" had their origin in the statute 13th Edw. I., chap. 1 (1285). The name "fee tail" was borrowed from the feudists, amongst whom it signified any mutilated or truncated inheritance from which the heirs general were cut off, or, as some say, because ownership of the subject was cut in two parts, one going to the donee and the heirs of his body, and the other remaining as a reversion in the donor. 2 Bl. Com. 112, note (M); 1 Thomas's Co. Litt. 512-525 (6). 67 L. R. A.

The familiar forms of creating such estates were: "Grant to A and the heirs of his body," or "grant to A and the heirs male of his body," or "grant to A and the heirs male of his body on Mary, his now wife, to be begotten." 2 Bl. Com. 113, 114; 2 Minor, Inst. 80. In conveyances inter vivos the word "heirs" was necessary to create the estate, whereas in wills any words manifesting the testator's intent were sufficient. Thus, a grant by deed to a man and his issue of his body, or to his issue, or to his offspring, would pass only a life estate, for want of proper words of inheritance, whereas in a will the same words would create an estate tail. 2 Bl. Com. 114, 115. In all of the foregoing examples it is to be observed that the grant or devise is to the heirs of the body, or to the issue or offspring, and these are cases wherein by express words a fee tail is created. Leaving out for the present any consideration of the creation of estates tail by implication, it is too obvious for serious discussion that there is no express gift by the testator to the heirs of the bodies of Michael J. Gannon, Jr., and Joseph, nor to their issue. But the contention is that the word "heirs" is explained by the subsequent use of the word "issue," and they must be read together, and, so used, they are synonymous with "heirs of his or their bodies," and, thus interpreting the words "unto them and their heirs and assigns" as "heirs of their bodies," an estate tail is created by express words. To us this seems a most unnatural and forced construction of the words "unto their heirs and assigns forever;" words which, we have already seen, have a settled meaning in the law, and carry on their face a clear, unambiguous intention of passing or creating a fee simple.

In order to reach this conclusion the word "assigns" in said clause must be stricken out of the will and utterly disregarded, in the face of the settled rule that in construing any document, deed, or will we must give effect to every word, if it be possible without contravening the intention of the grantor or devisor. In addition to striking out the word "assigns," we must interpolate the words "heirs of his or their bodies," and both to reach an intention in conflict with a plain, unambiguous, intention to devise a fee simple to these two sons. To accomplish this, the first devise given to the natural objects of the testator's bounty is made secondary to the ulterior and contingent devise over found in a subsequent clause. We do not question that courts may transpose the words of a will if necessary to reach the true intention of the testator, but we insist that it must be presumed that the testator used the words he intended to use in their plain and ordinarily accepted legal sense, and we are not justified in interpolating other words, and words of entirely different import. By resorting to such a course we import an ambiguity in the will, and then substitute words which the testator did not use to remove that ambiguity. We submit there is no occasion for resorting to such refinements to avoid the force and effect of a plain devise of a fee simple to the two sons, and hence we say that there in nothing the language of this will to justify the construction that an estate tail was limited by express words. Such a construction is only reached because the plain and ordinary signification of the words "to them, and their heirs and assigns forever," puts them in a supposed conflict with the subsequent contingent disposition of the land in suit. But there is no such conflict. The obvious purpose was to give the two sons a fee simple in the land, defeasible if they should die without issue or children living at the death of the survivor of the two sons named, and, if they should die leaving no issue living at the death of either or both, then an executory devise over to the other heirs of the testator,—a disposition entirely legal, if the testator had not already annexed to the fee devised to them the absolute power of disposal; but, as that contingency never happened, and never can happen, because both of said sons left children, the plaintiffs in this case, surviving them, the fee simple became absolute in the two sons and their grantees, the defendant and others, even if the power of sale was not superadded.

But we are now brought to the further contention that a fee tail was devised by implication. We conceded that under the statute de donis a fee tail may be created by implication, and in this case, if a fee tail is to be implied, it must be by construing the words "dying without issue" to mean an indefinite failure of issue, and consequently the executory devise over is void for remoteness. Such was the case of Farrar v. Christy, 24 Mo. 453. That was the construction of a deed made in 1832, in which the grant was "to have and to hold the premises aforesaid, with all the appurtenances thereunto belonging to them and their heirs forever, upon condition that, should either of the grantees herein named die without leaving legal heirs of their body, the survivor shall inherit the whole of the property hereby conveyed: and should both grantees die without leaving legal heirs as aforesaid, the property hereby conveyed shall revert to the other legal heirs of the said William and Martha T." It was conceded that these words, "should die without legal heirs of their body," created a fee tail by implication under the statute de donis. At the date of 67 L. R. A.

that decision, moreover, § 6 of chapter 32, Rev. Stat. 1845, had not been enacted, and the words "dying without issue," without further limitation, at the time were held and construed by both the English and American courts to mean an indefinite failure of issue, and by implication to create a fee tail in the first taker or ancestor named. It is too plain for discussion that the majority of the court in Farrar v. Christy, did not and could not have had § 6 of chap. 32, Rev. Stat. 1845, under consideration in deciding that cause. Judge Leonard dissented.

Harbison v. Swan, 58 Mo. 147, is also relied on as controlling the construction of this will. It is true that the will in that case was made in 1846, and the testator died in 1852, but it is to be observed that this court, in deciding that case, based its decision on Farrar v. Christy, and the common law, and made no reference whatever to § 6 of chap. 32, Rev. Stat. 1845, and it cannot be said that said section was construed by the court. The will was construed with reference to the common law and the act of 1825 alone, and the attention of the court was not called to the act of 1845 by counsel in the case. Moreover, there were no words in that will from which a power to sell could be implied, and in that respect it differs materially from the will under consideration. Conceding that prior to the act of 1845 the words "dying without issue" had been construed to mean an indefinite failure of issue at any time, and that many of the courts of England and of this country held these words created an estate tail by implication, what effect is to be given those words since the act of 1845 (Rev. Stat. 1845, chap. 32, § 6) went into effect? Obviously, they were enacted to settle forever the construction to be placed upon the words "dying without heirs" or "without issue" in the future by our courts, and that they should not be construed in deeds and wills thereafter made to mean an indefinite failure of issue, and by implication to create estates tail, but henceforth they should be construed to mean "heirs of issue" living at the death of the person named as ancestor. Granting that, if § 5, chap. 32, of the act of 1845, stood alone, those words would create an estate tail under the statute de donis, and that the case of Farrar v. Christy, falling under the act of 1825, was properly decided, still it was competent for the legislature to pass the act of 1845, and thereby modify the act of 1825, and, in effect, command that, whereas these words had been held by the courts prior to the act of 1845 to create a fee tail, yet in the future those words should no longer be held to mean an indefinite failure of issue, but a failure of issue living at the death of the ancestor named, and thereafter their use should not have the effect of creating a fee tail by implication, but that an executory devise over after these words should be good. If this is not its meaning, what effect is to be ascribed to this statute? The section on its face shows it was the work of a trained lawyer, familiar with the conflicting views of the courts of England and this country as to the meaning of the words "dying without issue," and evinces a determination to settle by positive statutory enactment the meaning of those words in all future deeds and wills in this state, and that thereafter, when the question arose as to whether these words created a fee tail under the statute de donis, they should be construed to mean "issue living at the death of the ancestor" named, and no implication of a fee tail should arise to be at once destroyed by converting it into a life estate. If we do not so construe this § 6 of chapter 32 of the act of 1845, we in effect deny its authority, which we have no right or power to do. But we are told that fee tails never have existed in this state, having been abolished in 1816, when Missouri was a territory, and therefore we are not to inquire whether these words create an estate in fee tail in Missouri since the act of 1845, as there can be no estates tail in Missouri, but whether by the common law it was a case wherein the devisees would have been seised in fee tail. Chancellor Kent, in his Commentaries, vol. 4, p. 280, states that in Virginia, by statute in 1819 (1 Rev. Code 1819, chap. 99, § 26, p. 369), and in Mississippi Rev. Code 1824 (chap. 104, § 26, p. 458), and in North Carolina by statute in 1827 (1 Rev. Stat. 1837, chap. 43, § 3, p. 259), the rule in the construction of devises as well as deeds, with contingent limitations depending upon the dying of a person without heirs or without heirs of the body, or issue or issue of the body, or children, was declared to be that the limitation should take effect on such dying without heirs or issue living at the time of the death of the first taker, or born within ten months thereafter; and says it is further declared "that, when a 'remainder shall be limited to take effect on the death of any person without heirs, or heirs of his body, or without issue, the word 'heirs' or 'issue' shall be construed to mean heirs or issue living at the death of the person named as ancestor.'" The great chancellor then adds: "These provisions sweep away at once the whole mass of English and American adjudications on the meaning, force, and effect of such limitations. The statute speaks so peremptorily as to the construction which it prescribes, that the courts may not, perhaps, hereafter feel themselves at liberty to disregard its direction, even though other parts of the will should contain evidence of an intention not to fix the period of the devisee's death for the contingency to happen, and that the testator had reference to the extinction of the posterity of the devisee, though that event might not happen until long after the death of the first taker. They might be led to regard any such other intent collected from the whole will if such a case should happen not to be consistent with the positive rule of construction given by the statute to the words 'heirs and issue.' Yet when we consider the endless discussions and painful learning, and still more painful collisions of opinions, which have accompanied the history of this vexatious subject, it is impossible not to feel some relief, and to look even with some complacency, at the final settlement in any way of the litigious question by legislative enactment." Accordingly we have a statute in this state almost in totidem verbis with the statutes mentioned by Chancellor Kent, and it seems impossible to escape the logic of that distinguished jurist and chancellor that the courts are bound by this statutory construction; and accordingly when we find a devise as in this case of a fee simple to the first taker by apt, appropriate, and long approved words, and thereafter a gift over on condition that he die without issue. "Dying without issue" must be held to mean "dying without issue living at his death" and therefore a definite failure of issue is provided, and the executory devise over is good, and the first taker takes a fee defeasible upon his dying without issue living at his death. If he die with such issue living, the estate in fee is absolute. If he die without issue living at his death, it goes over to the executory devisee to whom it is limited. It is true that estates tail have never existed in this state, as they were abolished in 1816 by the territorial act of that year, and the act of 1825 (Rev. Stat. 1825, p. 216) provided "that in cases where by the common law any person or persons who would then be or might hereafter become seised in fee tail," such person was to have a life estate only and the remainder pass in fee simple to the one next in line; and the act of 1845 practically continued that provision, but correctly referred estates tail to the statute de donis. The estates tail disposed of by those enactments were such as were defined by the statute de donis; but surely it will not be contended that legislative power was exhausted by those acts. By the same legislative power it was entirely competent by subsequent enactment to declare what meaning should be given by the courts to certain words when thereafter used in wills and deeds, and this is what was done by § 6, chap. 32,* of the act of 1845, passed contemporaneously with the enactment of § 5, for the first time commanding and directing that, if the words "dying without heirs or heirs of the body" or "issue" should be used, those words should be construed to mean "dying without issue living at the time of the death of the person named as ancestor." If the legislature had the power to pass that statute,—and this will not be questioned,—the courts must read that statute into all instruments executed since its passage and containing those words. The only question left for the courts to determine is whether an instrument construed as the legislature has directed that it shall be done would create an estate tail under the statute de donis if so read. By all the canons of construction §§ 5 and 6, chap. 32, of the act of 1845 (now §§ 4592, 4593, Rev. Stat. 1890), must be read together, and when so read they direct that, in cases "where by the common or statute law of England any person or persons would now or might hereafter become seised in fee tail such person shall only have a life estate with remainder in fee simple to the one next in line;" but the courts, in determining whether an instrument would have created a fee tail at common law, shall construe the words "dying without issue," when used in such instrument, to mean "dying without issue living at the death of the person named as ancestor." There is no conflict between the two sections, and both can be made effective. The one abolishes estates tail, and the other prescribes the meaning and construction of certain words for the government of our courts in determining whether an estate tail by implication is created by the instrument to be construed. In this connection it is well to note that other states have adopted provisions similar to ours in this respect, notably New York, New Jersey, and Michigan.

Jarman on Wills, vol. 1, p. 521, discussing the creation of estates tail in England by implication from the use of the words "dying without issue," says: "No implication of an estate tail can arise from words importing a failure of issue, in a will made or republished since the year 1837, unless an intention to use the phrase as denoting an indefinite failure of issue be very distinctly marked, as Stat. 1 Vict. chap. 26, § 29, provides that such words shall be held to mean a failure of issue in the lifetime or at the death of the person referred to, unless a contrary intention shall appear by the will. . . . Under this clause, coupled with the preceding section, which makes a devise confer an estate in fee without words of inheritance, it will generally happen, in cases in which, according to the old law, the prior devisee would have been tenant in tail, by the effect of words devising over the property on the failure of his issue, that he will, under the new rule of construction, take an estate in fee simple, subject to an executory devise in the event of his dying without leaving issue at his death; and this, no doubt, was the effect contemplated and designed by the legislature."

Underhill on Wills, vol. 2, p. 870, after a full discussion of the same subject, says: "The doctrine of the creation of an estate tail by implication, above explained, has no application whatever where an estate is a fee simple, with a limitation over upon failure of issue, and it appears either from the will itself, or where the common-law rule is modified by statute, that the failure of issue referred to is the failure of issue living at the death of the first taker. If the primary devisee has an estate in fee which is defeasible upon a definite failure,—i. e., of issue living at his death, it becomes indefeasible in him on his having issue who survive him, and he may provide for such issue by devising the fee to them."

Accordingly we hold that the statute of 1845 read into this will renders it impossible that the words "dying without issue" should have the effect of creating an estate tail, and thereby cutting down the estates of Michael J. Gannon, Jr., and Joseph to life estates only; remainder in fee to plaintiffs, their children.

But, independently of the statute, there is much room for holding that, even under the English and American decisions, the will contains enough to show an intention on the part of the testator that the words "dying without issue" referred to issue living at the death of the survivor of said two sons. If the language of the will is susceptible of a construction that will make it apply to a definite failure of issue, that construction should be adopted. The first limitation is to the survivor of these two sons, meaning clearly issue living at the death of the one of these two sons who should die first, and the next limitation is, "and in the event both should die without leaving any issue, then it is my will that my surviving heirs (with the exception of my son, John T. Gannon, who has had his share) shall have such property like and like." Surviving when? Manifestly when both die without leaving any issue. The words "leaving" and "surviving" refer in point of time to the death of the survivor of the two sons. Then, too, John T. Gannon, who was living at the time the will was made, is excluded from participation; showing in this additional manner the time in the mind of the testator.

But it is also said that the word "remainder," in chap. 32, § 6, Rev. Stat. 1845, is a technical word, and does not include an executory devise. We think this is too narrow a construction to place upon this word in the connection in which it is used. The preceding § 5 in that act refers alike to "conveyances or devises," and § 6 speaks of remainders limited by deed or "otherwise." The word "remainder" is often used by text writers to include an "executory devise," and this court has construed this word, in this identical § 6 of the act of 1845, to have that significance. Fearne on Remainders, p. 150, says: "The term 'remainder' is sometimes used in a lax sense to denote any kind of subsequent interest or the limitation thereof." Chancellor Kent, in his Commentaries, vol. 4, p. 274, says: "A devise in fee, with remainder over upon an indefinite failure of issue, is an estate tail, and, in order to support the remainder over as an executory devise, and to get rid of the limitation as an estate tail, the courts have frequently laid hold of slender circumstances in the will to elude or escape the authority of adjudged cases." Blackstone uses the words as synonymous. 2 Bl. Com. 173. But in Sherman v. Sherman, 3 Barb. 385, the statute of New York (Rev. Stat. 1829, § 22, p. 724), which our legislature evidently adopted when it enacted chap. 32, § 6, Rev. Stat. 1845, came before the court for construction, and it was held that the word "remainder" included "executory devise," and the limitation over was held to be a good executory devise, and, moreover, that the statutory definition, and not the common-law meaning, of the words "dying without heirs of his body or without issue" should control. That statute was afterwards adopted by Michigan, and in Mullreed v. Clark, 110 Mich. 229, 68 N. W. 138, 989, came under review by the supreme court, and it was held to give an executory devise; and that decision is peculiarly applicable here, because in that case the devise was to James Phillips, but, if he should die without heirs, then over, and the court held that "James Phillips took a fee defeasible at his death without issue living at that time." If he had issue then living, the fee became absolute. If none then living, it went over to the devisees named in the will. But the point is that the word "remainder" applied in full force to executory devises. But in Faust v. Birner, 30 Mo. 417, in construing the will of John Birner, this court held that the words "dying without issue" must, in this state, since the Revised Statutes of 1845 went into effect, be construed to mean dying without issue living at the death of the ancestor named, and that act applied to executory devises; saying: "This is a good executory devise to the brothers." Again, in Naylor v. Godman, 109 Mo. 550, 19 S. W. 56, this court, through Judge Sherwood, quoted this identical § 6, chap. 32, of 67 L. R. A.

the act of 1845, and held it applied to an executory devise; and it was so held in Yocum v. Siler, 180 Mo. 289, 61 S. W. 208.

To sum up, then, we hold that the will of Michael J. Gannon does not create an estate tail by express words; that there is no express limitation therein to "the heirs of the body," or to the issue of the two sons, Michael and Joseph; that it does not create an estate tail by implication, because, both by the language of the will, and especially by the positive command of the statute of 1845, the words "die without issue" mean dying without issue living at the death of said Michael and Joseph, and therefore mean a definite failure of issue, and hence no fee tail can be implied from their use; and, finally, that by the said fourth clause of the will the said two sons took a fee simple, subject to be defeated upon their dying without issue living at their death, and, as both died leaving children, the plaintiffs herein, the contingency upon which their fee simple was to be defeated, never happened, and never can happen, and their estate in fee became absolute, and their warranty deeds conveyed defendant's grantors the fee-simple title. A different conclusion was reached in the construction of this same clause in the will of Michael J. Gannon by division No. 1 of this court, in Edward Gannon et al. v. Gustave Pauk et al., at the October term of this court (not yet officially reported); but, upon reconsideration of the said clause in this case by the court in banc we are not satisfied with the opinion of division No. 1 construing said clause, and must decline to accept it as the proper construction of this will, and the judgment of the Circuit Court must be, and is, reversed.

Robinson, Ch. J., and Burgess and Fox, JJ., concur.

Valliant, J., dissenting.*

Being unable to concur in the interpretation placed by the opinion of the majority of the court upon the clause of the will of Michael J. Gannon, deceased, which is involved in the discussion of this case, and in the interpretation therein given to our statutes relating to fee-tail estates, I consider the subject of sufficient importance to set out my views of the law.

*Two cases were brought to recover land devised by the will construed in the above case,—the above case against Albright and one against Gustave Pauk. The appeal in the Pauk Case was heard by the first division of the supreme court and decided in favor of the plaintiffs on March 17, 1904. The opinion in that case was filed by the judges of the first division as a dissenting opinion in this case, and is published herewith. Moreover, a petition for rehearing was filed in the Pauk Case, which was overruled by the divisional court October 27, 1904. The divisional judges therefore seem to assume the attitude of adhering to their former ruling in defiance of the opinion of the court in banc.

This is a suit in ejectment. Michael J. Gannon, the common source of title, died in 1870, leaving a will devising the land in question to his two sons, Michael and Joseph, in the following words: "Fourth. I give, devise, and bequeathe unto my two sons Michael J. Gannon, Jr., and Joseph E. Gannon, and unto their heirs and assigns forever, my farm lying and being in the county of St. Louis and state of Missouri, which lies in the southern limits of Kirkwood, containing eighty (80) acres, be the same more or less. It is my will that the same shall not be sold,—at least, not before the younger of the two, that is, Joseph E. Gannon, becomes of lawful age; and, should either of them die without issue, then the survivor, his heirs and assigns, to take, own, and have the part and portion hereby bequeathed to the one so dying. And in the event both should die without leaving any issue then it is my will that my surviving heirs (with the exception of my son, John T. Gannon, who has had his share) shall have such property like and like." It is stipulated that whatever title Michael J. Gannon, Jr., and Joseph E. Gannon took under the will was conveyed by them, and has passed by mesne conveyances to the defendant Gustave Pauk. Michael J., Jr., died in 1887, leaving children living at the time of his death; and Joseph E. died in 1893, also leaving children living at the time of his death. These children of Michael J., Jr., and Joseph E. are the plaintiffs in this suit.

The decision in the case will turn on the construction to be given to the clause in the will above quoted. The plaintiffs contend that the estate devised was what by the common law would be an estate tail, which, under our statute, is reduced to an estate for life in the first taker, with the remainder in fee to the next in line. The defendants contend that the estate devised to the two sons of the testator was a fee, determinable as to each upon his dying without issue living at the time of his death; and, as both died, leaving issue, after having conveyed the land, the contingency on which the fee was to determine never occurred, and the estate became absolute. The trial court took the plaintiffs' view of the case, and entered judgment accordingly, from which judgment the defendants appeal.

If the first sentence of this clause was all there was of it, there could be no question about it. In language more expressive of a purpose to give an absolute fee, than necessary, the testator makes the devise in the first sentence, and concludes it with a period. Whether, by the use of the words "and unto their heirs and assigns forever," the testator intended to emphasize a purpose to give an absolute fee, is a question that we can answer only after reading the whole clause,—perhaps the whole will. The mere use of such words unnecessarily does not always indicate such a purpose. In fact, it not unfrequently suggests a lack of knowledge of words necessary to express a given purpose; it often evinces a lack of confidence of the writer in the force of the words previously used, and for that reason casts a doubt on their meaning. One who knows his own purpose, and knows how to express it, is less liable to multiply his words than one less informed. The consequence is that when we see words unskilfully used, especially technical words, we are less certain of the meaning intended than we would be if the words were used with skill. That is the reason that we are required, when we come to construe a will, to give less force to the forms of expression than we do in construing some other instruments, and to gather, if we can, in spite of the sometimes inappropriate use of technical words, the real purpose of the testator. The words, "I give . . . and bequeathe unto my two sons, Michael J. Gannon, Jr., and Joseph E. Gannon, . . . my farm lying and being in the county of St. Louis," etc., were sufficient, if left alone, to carry a fee simple to the devisees. If that was the design of the testator, then the addition of the words "and unto their heirs and assigns forever" really gives no force to the preceding sentence, and only suggests that the testator was not sure as to the meaning of the words already used, or even of the words unnecessarily added. Those words in this will are just as apt to an estate tail, if that was the intention, as they are to an estate in fee, if that was the intention. The word "heirs," expressed or implied, is as essential to the creation of an estate tail, as of an estate in fee simple; the only difference being that, in the one, particular heirs must be indicated, while in the other general heirs are meant. Did the testator intend to give his sons an absolute fee, or a fee determinable upon the death of both without issue, or did he intend to create a fee tail?

It is not contended by the respondents that the testator intended to give an absolute fee, but the argument is that, having granted an estate in fee, and conferred with it the power of absolute disposal of the property, an absolute estate was thereby created, and the attempted limitation over was void. The legal principle announced in that proposition is correct, and the authorities cited by the learned counsel sustain it. "If, therefore, there be an absolute power of disposition given by the will to the first taker, as if an estate be devised to A in fee, and if he dies possessed of the property, without lawful issue, the remainder over, or remainder over of the property, which he, dying without heirs, should leave, or without selling or devising the same, in all such cases the remainder over is void as a remainder, because of the preceding fee; and it is void by way of executory devise, because the limitation is inconsistent with the absolute estate, or power of disposition expressly given or necessarily implied by the will." 4 Kent, Com. 14th ed. p. 270; 2 Washb. Real Prop., 6th ed. 667; Yocum v. Siler, 160 Mo. 281, 61 S. W. 208; Roth v. Rauschenbusch, 173 Mo. 582, 61 L. R. A. 455, 73 S. W. 664. To apply that doctrine to this will, however, we would have to assume, first, that the estate devised to the first takers was an estate in fee simple, which is one of the main points in dispute; and, second, that the language of the will, expressly or by necessary implication, confers an absolute power of disposal of the property on the two sons. Passing for the present over the first point, let us see if the power of disposition is expressly or by implication conferred. Taking the text just quoted, wherein the rule is correctly stated, we see that the power of disposition referred to is not that which might be implied as an attribute of the estate granted, but, in order to have the effect of cutting off the executory devise, it is a power given by the will in addition to the estate. A power of disposition is implied in every grant of a fee simple, yet the power so implied will not render void an otherwise valid executory devise; but, when the fee is granted, and, besides that, the power of disposition is added, then there can be no limitation over. There is no such added power in this will. The most that can be claimed for the language used in reference to that point is that it indicates that the testator understood that the power to sell was incident to the estate already granted, and he aimed to restrict that power. The language is: "It is my will that the same shall not be sold,—at least, not before the younger of the two, that is, Joseph E. Gannon, becomes of lawful age." There is therefore no such power of disposition given, in addition to the estate given, as would render void an attempted executory devise. If it is a determinable estate by the words of its own creation, it has not been made absolute by the words affecting the power of sale.

A determinable fee is defined to be "an interest which may continue forever; but the estate is liable to be determined without the aid of a conveyance by some act or event circumscribing its continuance or extent." 4 Kent, Com. 14th ed. p. 9. It is an estate to continue until the event named occurs. 47 L. R. A.

Then it is to cease. In this case, according to respondents' theory, it was an estate in fee simple in the two sons of the testator, determinable on the death of both of them without issue then living; and, since they both left issue living when they died, the event, on the occurrence of which the estate was to determine, became of impossible occurrence, and the estate became a fee simple absolute. But to build their case on that theory, respondents must assume that the two sons took an estate in fee simple in the first instance, because, if they took only an estate in fee tail, it would not be increased to a fee simple by the occurring of the event upon which it was to cease. In other words, if the will had said, in totidem verbis, "I devise to my two sons, Michael and Joseph, and to the heirs of their bodies, respectively, in fee tail, forever," the land in question, "but, if they both die without leaving issue living at the time of the death of the one last living, then I will that the land go to my heirs," it would make no difference, so far as the interest that Michael and Joseph personally took, whether they had issue or not. If they had no issue, the executory devise would carry the fee to the heirs of the testator; and, if they had issue, the estate would go to their issue in fee tail, but in either event it would not affect a title derived by deed from the two sons. There is nothing on the face of the will to suggest that the testator intended to say that the estate was to be a fee tail if his sons had children, and a fee simple, with a limitation over in the form of an executory devise, if they had none. If this will gave to the two sons a fee-simple estate, determinable only on the death of both without issue, then, since they both left issue living, their deed conveyed an absolute title, and the plaintiffs are not entitled to recover, but, if the will gave only an estate in tail, then, by force of our statute, the sons took only a life estate; and it makes no difference whether we construe the contingency on which the executory devise depended to be a definite or an indefinite failure of issue, or whether the executory devise was valid or void, for in either event the land belongs to the plaintiffs. An executory devise may be created to take effect as well on a condition that will terminate an estate tail as one that will terminate an estate in fee simple. The mere fact, therefore, that an executory devise is created to take effect on the happening of an event which would cause the preceding estate to determine does not give character to that estate. We are now talking about an estate tail which appears in express words or by natural intendment in the instrument creating it, and independent of the inference to be drawn from the limitation over in the nature of an executory devise.

In interpreting the statute under which estates tail were created, the English courts were very technical in their reasoning, and placed much value on the use of certain words. The words "heirs of his body," or their equivalent, were deemed essential to the creation of an estate tail. In 2 Preston on Estates, p. 473, it is said: "The same rule which requires the limitations to be to the feoffee and his heirs, either by express words, or by words of direct and immediate reference, in order to the transfer of an estate in fee by deed at common law, also requires that, in order to the creation of an estate tail by deed, the gift shall, either by express words, or by words of direct and immediate reference, be to the donee and his heirs. So a gift to a man and his heirs, viz., his heirs of his body, will, by reason of the qualification, be an estate tail. . . . The nature and qualities of estate tail admit of one case peculiar to these estates. As an estate even in a deed may, contrary to the general rule of law, arise from necessary implication. Thus a gift to a man without any limitation to his heirs, but with a provision that the land shall revert to the donor, or remain to another, if the donee shall happen to die without heirs of his body, will afford ground for construction that the donee is to have the land to him and his heirs of his body, because the land is not to revert or remain over until there shall be a failure of these heirs. . . . The true reason is that the intent of the donor appeared in express words in the deed, and the implication was a necessary one. . . . Words of reference in limitations of estates tail operate in the same way as words of reference in limitations of estates in fee. By the reference they have the effect of the very words to which the reference is made, and are precisely of the same import as these words." After quoting from a number of cases, the author (p. 528) says: "From all these cases it may be assumed, as a general proposition, that, though the word 'heirs' stands general and uncorrected in one sentence, it may, by the clause of another sentence, which introduces an ulterior gift, be corrected and explained, if the word 'heirs' generally in the first clause is by the words of the second clause explained to mean heirs of the body." In the text quoted the law writer has mentioned two kinds of cases in which estates tail may be created otherwise than in totidem verbis: One which he distinguishes as peculiar to the nature and qualities of estates tail; that is, where the grant is in words indicative of an estate either for life or in fee simple, with no other words in direct reference either to enlarge or qualify their meaning, yet followed with a provision that the land revert or remain over if it should happen that the donee die without heirs of his body, in which case, by implication, the life estate is enlarged, or the fee is cut down to a fee tail. The other is where words in the first instance are used, which, if unexplained or unqualified by direct reference, would indicate an intention to create a fee simple, yet which, before the donor finishes the subject, are so explained or qualified as to show that he meant to use them in the sense that would create an estate tail. Then an estate tail is directly created, which is not an estate in fee simple cut down by implication, but an estate tail by force of its own creative words. A grant to A and his heirs forever, but, if he should die without heirs of his body, then to B and his heirs forever, is an example of an estate tail by implication. But a grant to A and the heirs of his body forever is an estate tail by direct words, and equally so, even though more clumsily expressed, if it be to A and his heirs forever, to have and hold unto the said A and the aforesaid heirs of his body forever, or words equally significant of an intention from first to last to create an estate tail. When we have to deal with a case under the first class referred to, it is important to know if the deed refers to a definite or to an indefinite failure of issue, but, when we have a case under the second class, that is immaterial.

The above quotations are taken from what the law writer said on the subject of estates tail created by deed, but, as to such estates created by will, he said (p. 534): "Let it be remembered that in wills that strictness of the law which, in regard to deeds, requires that the limitation should be to the heirs by that word, and not by circuitous expression (except in the cases of a gift in frank-marriage, and in cases of direct and immediate reference), and that these heirs shall, in the case of limitations in tail, be distinguished by words of procreation, descriptive of the body from which the heirs are to issue, or the person by whom they are to be begotten, is relaxed. . . . Though, in construing wills, the words which in a deed would create an estate tail will give a like estate, this rule does not apply when reversed, for words which in a deed pass an estate in fee, and, again, words which in a deed give only an estate for life, may, in a will, pass an estate tail. Thus a feoffment to a man and his heirs male, without any context, conveys an estate in fee. In this case the word 'male' is rejected as surplusage. In a will the word 'males' will be retained, and a devise in these words will pass an estate tail, for the law in favor of the intention of the testator will supply the words 'of the body.' So, if a feoffment be to a man and his heirs, and, if he shall die without issue (giving no direction that the issue shall be of his body), then over, the feoffee will have an estate in fee. In a devise by these words, the devisee will have an estate tail. Thus the law is that, when we are required to ascertain the character of a gift in view of the statute de donis whether it be under a deed or a will, the main object is to discover the intention of the donor, and adjudge the character of the gift by that intention, yet, when it is a deed that we are dealing with, we are under more restraint than when it is a will. Under a deed, if the word 'heirs' is used in the granting clause, it may be cut down to mean heirs of the body of the donee, provided the words of procreation are used in the context, directly referring to the former word, as if it should say 'to him and his heirs; that is, heirs of his body,' or if it should say 'to him and his heirs,' and then, in a sentence closely following, and referring to the gift, say 'to the aforesaid heirs of his body.' But in case of a will, words of direct reference are not necessary. If, taking the whole instrument as expressing his intent, we find that the testator really intended to limit the estate to his sons and their descendants in a direct line, then we should say that the will creates what at common law would have been an estate tail."

Let us, under the light of these rules of construction, search for the testator's intention in this fourth clause of his will. The words employed show that the testator was not sure that he knew what words were necessary to express his idea, and the technical words he did use were not used with precision. The word "bequeathe" was inappropriate, and the words "heirs and assigns forever" were at least unnecessary, if the intention was to give an estate in fee simple. If the intention, however, was to limit an estate to the sons and the heirs of their bodies forever, the word "heirs" was not unnecessarily used. Our statute which renders the word "heirs" unnecessary in the grant of an estate in fee, under certain conditions, has no reference to estates tail. They are to be judged by the law as it came to us from England. The inappropriate or unnecessary use of those words, however, signifies nothing more than that the document was not written with technical precision. They do not tend to obscure the meaning, but they admonish us not to adhere too closely to the technical meaning of the words used. The testator did not intend to give his two sons an absolute fee in the property. This is shown by the fact that immediately following the words of grant are conditions and restrictions. First, the property is not to be sold until the younger comes of age; and, second, if either should die without issue, the other should have the estate. The purpose to create cross remainders is thus shown. If the word "heirs" had not been used in the first sentence, there would, perhaps, have never arisen a question but that the estate granted in that sentence was qualified by the grant of cross remainders in the sentence next following. But, as we have seen from the authorities quoted, the word "heirs" in the first sentence is explained by the word "issue" in the sentence following, and those words are to be taken together. The two sentences, coming together, and relating to the same subject, show that, when the testator used the word "heirs" in reference to his sons, he meant their children; he used the words "heirs" and "issue" as synonymous, and, taken together, they mean heirs of their bodies. That is the natural interpretation to put on his language, and the interpretation that we are authorized by the law to put upon it. Interpreting the word "heirs" in the first sentence to mean heirs of the bodies of the testator's sons, we have an estate tail, and we render all parts of the clause in harmony. He intended that, if his two sons had children, the estate should be limited to them and their children, to descend in that line, but, if either of his two sons should die without leaving a child then living, the estate should pass to the other son and his heirs; and he used the word "heirs," in that connection, in the same sense that he used it in the first sentence,—that is, as meaning child or children,—and his intention was that the estate should be kept in that line of descent. The limitation to the surviving son was a good remainder, and would have been good as such in a deed, because a remainder may be limited on an estate tail. 2 Fearn, Remainders, 192; 2 Washb. Real Prop. 6th ed. 1539. But it would not have been good as a remainder if the first estate granted had been a fee simple, because a remainder cannot be limited after a fee. The next expression of the testator's wish was that if both of his sons should die without issue,—that is, if the estate he had somewhat clumsily, yet with sufficient precision to indicate his intention, created, should fail because of a failure of heirs of the bodies of his sons,—then it should revert to his general heirs. In the remainder to the one son on the death of the other, the period at which it was to take effect was at the death of the other without issue then living. This is so, not by any artificial rule of construction, but by the facts of the case itself. The two brothers were both living, and the remainder was to the one who should survive if the condition then existed. But if they should both die without issue, then the estate should return to the heirs of the testator.

Respondents contend that this last limitation was an executory devise; that it was good only in the event the two sons had died without issue living at the time of the death of the one last dying, in which event it would have cut down the fee in the first takers, and converted it into an estate tail, but that, since both the first takers left children living when they died, the executory devise became void, and the estate remained a fee simple. We do not construe the will to be a devise of an estate in fee simple in the first instance, and therefore we do not hold that the estate derives its character as an estate tail by being cut down by the limitation of the executory devise. We hold that, by the use of the word "heirs" in connection with the word "issue," the testator intended to give the estate to his two sons and the heirs of their bodies, and thereby created in the first instance what would have been at common law, or by the statute de donis, an estate tail. But, even if it be construed to have been an estate in fee simple in the first instance, we would feel constrained, by the weight of authorities and the former rulings of this court, to hold that, by the clause declaring that in case of the death of both sons without leaving issue the estate was to revert to the heirs of the testator, the fee was cut down to a fee tail. Farrar v. Christy, 24 Mo. 467; Harbison v. Swan, 58 Mo. 149; Thompson v. Craig, 64 Mo. 312; Wood v. Kice, 103 Mo. 329, 15 S. W. 623. The doctrine laid down in the earlier of those cases, and followed or approved in the later ones, is that where a devise to one in terms sufficient, if standing alone, to give an estate in fee simple, is followed by a clause providing that, if the devisee should die without issue, the estate should revert to the heirs of the testator, or go over to another as an executory devise, the estate to the first devisee is, by implication, cut down to an estate tail. But in Yocum v. Siler, 160 Mo. 281, 61 S. W. 208, this court, per Gantt, J., said (loc. cit. 296, 160 Mo., page 215, 61 S. W.): "Yet when it is considered that this conclusion was only reached by holding that these words 'dying without issue' meant an indefinite failure of issue, and this postponed the vesting of its executory limitation so long that it violated the rule against perpetuities, and was therefore void, as our statute of 1845 gave a different meaning to those words, and directed they should be construed as meaning heirs or issue living at the time of the death of the ancestor named, no such implication can longer be raised from their use in this state." What is there said is the main foundation for the position taken by respondents, and it does justify them in saying that by force of the statute of 1845 (now § 4593, Rev. Stat. 1899), under the case above stated, the words "dying without issue" mean dying without issue living at the time of the death of the ancestor, and that if at the death of the ancestor there is issue living the executory devise is extinguished, and the estate in fee in the first taker remains unimpaired. The interpretation put upon the will in the case of Yocum v. Siler did not depend on the aid of that statute, as there construed, for there was on the face of the will itself sufficient to show that the words "if my said son dies without legal issue" meant issue living at the time of the son's death. The limitation over in that case was not, as in the case at bar, to the indefinite heirs of the testator, but to individuals named who were then living; showing, without resort to rules of construction, that the testator intended to say issue living at the time of his death. The writer of this opinion concurred in the opinion in that case, and has no thought now to question the correctness of the conclusion reached; but, after a second study of the subject, he is of opinion that the statute of 1845 did not apply to the facts of that case. Estates tail never existed in this state. They were abolished by act of the general assembly of the territory of Missouri in 1816 (Sess. Acts 1815, 1816, p. 32). And again by act of the general assembly of the state in 1825 it was enacted "that in cases where by the common law any person or persons would now be, or might hereafter become, seised in fee tail" such person was to have a life estate only, and the remainder pass in fee simple to the one next in line. Rev. Stat. 1825, p. 216. That has continued to be substantially the statute law to the present time, the language of the present statute being: "Sec. 4592. In cases where by the common or statute law of England any person might become seised in fee tail of any lands," etc., he shall have only a life estate, and the remainder in fee simple pass to the person next in line. The estates tail there disposed of were such as were then defined by the rules of the common law and the statute de donis, not such as might be affected by any other rules. The statute treated only of estates that had the characteristics which by the common law or the statute de donis appertained to estates tail, and it says, in effect, that whenever an estate shall be created, having those characteristics, it shall be a life estate to the first, and a fee simple to the second. That had been the law for more than twenty years when the act of 1845 was passed, and its language in that particular has not changed. If we say the act of 1845 shall apply, then we may have a grant which under the common law or the statute of England would be an estate tail, yet we cannot give to it the effect that the act of 1825 says it must have, and we rob that act of its force. We do not think the act of 1845 was intended to apply to such case. That act is now § 4593, Rev. Stat. 1899, and is as follows: "Where a remainder in lands or tenements, goods or chattels, shall be limited, by deed or otherwise, to take effect on the death of any person without heirs or heirs of his body, or without issue, or on failure of issue, the words 'heirs' or 'issue' shall be construed to mean heirs or issue living at the death of the person named as ancestor." That statute, by its terms, relates only to remainders. An executory devise is not a remainder. 4 Kent, Com. 14th ed. p. 270; 2 Washb. Real Prop. 6th ed. §§ 1743-1746. It would be applicable in this case, if necessary to a construction, to the contingent remainder to the survivor of the testator's two sons, but not to the executory devise to his indefinite heirs. That section was first inserted in our law in the revision of 1845. That revision was not hastily prepared during a session of the general assembly, and was not the work of laymen, but was the work of a commission of distinguished lawyers and jurists, extending over a period of two years. They did not use technical words loosely or without understanding. They did not mean an executory devise when they said "remainder." In Harbison v. Swan, 58 Mo. 147, the will was very similar in form to the will in the case at bar. That case arose after the statute of 1845 went into effect, yet the court construed the will under the act of 1825 without reference to that of 1845; and the opinion was rendered by Judge Napton, who was one of the commission that made the revision of 1845.

67 L. R. A.

We hold that, under the fourth clause of the will of Michael J. Gannon, such an estate in the land in suit was devised to Michael J. Gannon, Jr., and Joseph E. Gannon, as would, under the common law and the statute de donis, have been an estate tail to them and the heirs of their bodies, which, by force of our statute (§ 4592), became a life estate in the two sons, Michael J., Jr., and Joseph E., with the remainder in fee to their children, the plaintiffs in this case. As that was the view the learned trial court took of the case, its judgment ought to be affirmed.

Brace and Marshall, JJ., concur with the writer in this opinion.

SOUTH CAROLINA SUPREME COURT.

J. B. GWYNN, Respt.,

v.

CITIZENS' TELEPHONE COMPANY,
Appt.

(.....S. C.....)

1. A telephone company is bound to furnish service on equal terms to all applying for it.
2. That a patron of a telephone company has broken his agreement not to make use of the lines of a rival company gives the former no right to refuse to grant him further service.
3. Damages accruing to a telephone company for breach of contract by a patron not to make use of rival lines may be set up as a counterclaim, in an action to hold it liable for withdrawing its service from him, under a statute permitting to be filed as a counterclaim a cause of action connected with the subject of the principal action.

NOTE.—As to right of telephone company to impose, as condition of extending its facilities to one desiring them, an agreement not to use a rival system, see, in this series, State ex rel. Gwynn v. Citizens' Teleph. Co. 55 L. R. A. 139, a case between the same parties as those in the case above, in which a mandamus was sought to compel the furnishing of telephone facilities.

67 L. R. A.

4. A contract by a patron of a telephone company not to engage service from a rival company is void as contrary to public policy.
5. That a telephone company has not the means to supply service to one applying for it may be shown in mitigation of damages for refusal to comply with its duty in that regard, but not in justification thereof.
6. Belief in the existence of a legal right to refuse telephone service to one applying for it, although erroneous, and refusal to furnish service for the purpose of protecting the rights of the telephone company, will prevent the imposition of punitive damages for such act.

(July 23, 1904.)

A PPEAL by defendant from a judgment of the Common Pleas Circuit Court for Spartanburg County in plaintiff's favor in an action brought to recover damages for alleged wrongful refusal to furnish plaintiff with telephone service. Reversed.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Messrs. Simpson & Bomar, for appellant:

While agreements in general or total restraint of trade are void, agreements in partial restraint of trade, limited both as to time and territory, and founded on a valuable consideration, are valid.

2 Pom. Eq. Jur. § 934; Carroll v. Giles, 30 S. C. 418, 4 L. R. A. 154, 9 S. E. 422; United States v. Trans-Missouri Freight Asso. 166 U. S. 290, 41 L. ed. 1007, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 540; Chicago, St. L. & N. O. R. Co. v. Pullman Southern Car Co. 139 U. S. 79, 35 L. ed. 97, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 490.

A tort committed by mistake in the assertion of a supposed right, or without any actual wrong intention, and without such recklessness or negligence as evinces malice or conscious disregard of the rights of others will not warrant the giving of damages for punishment, where the doctrine of such damages prevails.

2 Sutherland, Damages, p. 1093, § 393; Thomas, Neg. p. 476; Avinger v. South Carolina R. Co. 29 S. C. 271, 13 Am. St. Rep. 716, 7 S. E. 493; Kibler v. Southern R. Co. 62 S. C. 270, 40 S. E. 556; Fort v. Southern R. Co. 64 S. C. 423, 42 S. E. 196; 16 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, pp. 392, 395; Brasington v. South Bound R. Co. 62 S. C. 335, 89 Am. St. Rep. 905, 40 S. E. 665; Pickens v. South Carolina & G. R. Co. 54 S. C. 507, 32 S. E. 567; Watts v. South Bound R. Co. 60 S. C. 75, 38 S. E. 240; Oliver v. Columbia, N. & L. R. Co. 65 S. C. 42, 43 S. E. 307.

Messrs. Sanders & DePass, for respondent:

Defendant's claim for damages does not arise out of the same transaction as plaintiff's claim. Plaintiff's cause of action is a refusal to put in and furnish a telephone. Defendant's cause of action is a breach of contract on plaintiff's part.

Simkins v. Columbia & G. R. Co. 20 S. C. 258; Jenkins v. Bennett, 40 S. C. 393, 18 S. E. 929; Humbert v. Brisbane, 25 S. C. 506; McKay v. Ohio River R. Co. 34 W. Va. 65, 9 L. R. A. 132, 26 Am. St. Rep. 913, 11 S. E. 737.

Telegraph companies must have sufficient facilities to transact all business offered to them at all points at which they have offices.

Leavell v. Western U. Teleg. Co. 116 N. C. 211, 27 L. R. A. 843, 47 Am. St. Rep. 798, 21 S. E. 391; Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Henderson, 39 Ala. 510, 18 Am. St. Rep. 148, 7 So. 419.

Common carriers must provide sufficient facilities.

Hutchinson, Carr. §§ 292, 293.

A telephone company can only be allowed reasonable time within which to comply with the demand for the use of one of its phones.

State ex rel. Gwynn v. Citizens' Teleph. Co. 61 S. C. 83, 55 L. R. A. 139, 85 Am. St. Rep. 870, 39 S. E. 257; Avinger v. South 67 L. R. A.

Carolina R. Co. 29 S. C. 265, 13 Am. St. Rep. 716, 7 S. E. 493; Doty v. Strong, 1 Pinney (Wis.) 313, 40 Am. Dec. 773.

Gary, A. J., delivered the opinion of the court:

The complaint alleges that on or about the 8th day of February, 1900, the plaintiff applied to and demanded from the defendant the use of the Citizens' telephone in plaintiff's store in said city, and for proper connections with all of defendant's subscribers, but that the defendant negligently and wilfully failed and refused plaintiff the use of said telephone unless plaintiff would consent to a prohibition against the joint use of the Bell telephone of the Southern Bell Telephone & Telegraph Company, which prohibition plaintiff refused to consent to; that plaintiff was thereby deprived of the use of said telephone, and was cut off from telephonic connection with many of his customers, who had said Citizens' phone only, thereby losing their custom, and was otherwise injured, to the great annoyance, trouble, loss, and damage of plaintiff in the sum of $2,000. The defendant denied the allegations of negligence and wilfulness, and set up as a defense substantially the allegations which were also pleaded as a counterclaim. The defendant also alleged that at the time demand was made upon it to put in another telephone for the plaintiff its switchboard and lines were so crowded, and there were so many demands upon it, that it could not at that time have complied with plaintiff's demands, even upon the terms upon which the original agreement was made.

The counterclaim was as follows: "For further answer to the complaint herein, and as and for a counterclaim against the plaintiff, the defendant alleges that some time prior to February 8, 1900, the plaintiff, for value received, made and entered into a written contract with this defendant, whereby the plaintiff agreed, in consideration of the low rate charged for the use of defendant's telephone and telephone service, that he would for five years from the date of said contract take and use the telephone and the service of this defendant exclusively in his place of business, and would not during the time of the existence of said contract use any other telephone in connection therewith; that for a time the plaintiff complied with the terms of the said contract, but that shortly before the said 8th of February, 1900, the said plaintiff wilfully, wantonly, and maliciously, and with the intention of causing injury to the defendant, rented and began the use of another telephone in his place of business, in violation of the terms of his said contract, and continued to rent and use the same, and willfully refused to comply with the terms of said contract,—all of which tended to the disorganization of defendant's business, causing it great annoyance, inconvenience, and loss, and that because and by reason of the said acts and conduct of plaintiff this defendant suffered damage in the sum of $2,500, and for this sum defendant sets up a counterclaim herein."

The plaintiff moved to strike out the allegations of the answer on the ground that they were irrelevant and redundant, and interposed a demurrer to the counterclaim on the ground that it did not state facts sufficient to constitute a counterclaim. His honor the presiding judge ruled that the allegations set up as a defense should not be struck out, as they contained allegations properly to be considered by the jury in mitigation of damages. He sustained the demurrer to the counterclaim. The jury rendered a verdict in favor of the plaintiff for $400.

The defendant appealed upon the following exceptions:

"(1) In holding that the portions of defendant's answer referred to in the plaintiff's notice to strike them out did not constitute a defense in this action, in that the defendant was a common carrier, and was bound upon demand to furnish the plaintiff a telephone, and, having failed to do so, was liable for damages therefor; and that the previous failure of the plaintiff to keep his contract constituted no ground for the defendant's failure to furnish him a phone, and no ground in this action to defeat plaintiff's right to damages for such default to the defendant; when he should have held that the defendant, under the Constitution and laws of the state of South Carolina, was not and is not a common carrier; and that it had the right, if plaintiff had failed to keep his contract with the defendant, to refuse further to furnish him one of its telephones.

"(2) In holding that the portion of defendant's answer referred to in the plaintiff's demurrer thereto did not constitute a cause of action as a counterclaim against the plaintiff, and in sustaining the demurrer to that portion of the answer. (a) If the plaintiff had previously made a contract with the defendant, and he had broken his contract, the defendant had a right of action against him for damages therefor. (b) Having such right of action against the plaintiff, the defendant had a right to set it up as a counterclaim in this action, as such cause of action arose out of the transaction set forth in the complaint as the foundation of the plaintiff's claim, and was 67 L. R. A.

connected with the subject of the plaintiff's action.

"(3) In holding that the plaintiff had the right to show by testimony that the defendant threatened to take the telephone out of plaintiff's residence, when there was no allegation in the complaint to which this testimony was responsive, and in not sustaining the defendant's objection to the plaintiff's testimony with reference thereto.

"(4) In holding that the defendant did not have the right to show by the evidence, in justification of its contract with the plaintiff and others for the exclusive use of its telephones, the kind and character of the competition it then had with the Bell Telephone Company, and the financial strength of said company; and in sustaining the plaintiff's objection to the testimony of H. B. Carlisle, one of the directors of the defendant company, with reference to this matter.

"(5) In holding that the defendant did not have the right to show by testimony, in support of the allegation in its answer that it did not have the means to supply telephones to the plaintiff and others then desirous of using them, that other persons besides the plaintiff were unable to get instruments from the defendant at that time for that reason, and in sustaining the plaintiff's objection to the testimony of J. R. Bain tending to show these facts.

"(6) In not sustaining the defendant's motion for a nonsuit on the grounds upon which it was based, to wit: (a) That, so far as compensatory damages were concerned, there was no evidence tending to show that the plaintiff had suffered any damage or loss whatsoever in the matters complained of in the complaint. (b) That, so far as vindictive damages were concerned, there was no evidence tending to show that the defendant had been guilty of any malicious, wilful, or wanton conduct in refusing the use of one of its telephones to the plaintiff. For these reasons the defendant insisted upon its motion for a nonsuit, and insists here that it was error for the circuit judge to refuse it.

"(7) In charging the jury that it was utterly immaterial, so far as actual defenses or justification was concerned, whether the plaintiff, Gwynn, had broken his contract or not, as such conduct upon his part was no justification for the refusal of the defendant to further furnish one of its telephones, but that the defendant was a common carrier, and was bound to furnish such telephones, irrespective of plaintiff's previous conduct; when we submit he should have charged the jury that the defendant was not a common carrier, and had the legal right to furnish its instruments to, or withhold them from, the plaintiff, or any other persons, at its will and pleasure. In this connection, defendant alleges error: (a) In charging plaintiff's first request to charge 'that a telephone company incorporated under the laws of this state for the purpose of transmitting intelligence for the use of the public is a common carrier of intelligence.' (b) And in charging his second request to charge 'that a common carrier of intelligence, such as a telephone company, is bound under the law to furnish a citizen the use of one of its telephones within a reasonable time after the pay for such use is tendered and demand made upon it for such telephone.'

"(8) In charging the jury, as requested by the plaintiff's fifth request to charge, as follows: 'If a telephone company intentionally does an act with an intent to deprive a citizen of the right to use one of its telephones after tender of pay and demand upon it for such use, then such company is guilty of such wilfulness or wantonness as would warrant a verdict against it for vindictive or punitive damages;' the error being: (a) That such instruction was a charge upon the facts, in violation of the Constitution of the state of South Carolina, in that it took away from the jury the question whether the refusal to furnish the telephone in this case was or was not such wilfulness or wantonness as would warrant a verdict for punitive damages, if such refusal was with the intent to deprive the plaintiff of the right to use such telephone. (b) That for the defendant to refuse the use of one of its telephones to the plaintiff under the belief that it had a legal right to do so, and for the sole purpose of protecting its own rights, would not be such wilfulness or wantonness as would warrant a verdict for punitive damages, even though such act on its part was with an intent to deprive the plaintiff of its telephone; that is to say, to exercise its legal right to withhold such telephones from him. Wilfulness and wantonness, which would warrant a verdict for punitive damages, must include some element of intent to deprive another of a right to do him a wrong knowing that he had the right, or knowing that it was a wrong, and must be something more than the mere assertion by one of what is conceived to be his legal right.

"(9) In charging the jury as follows: 'Now, from what I have said, you see that every citizen has a right to the use of a common carrier of intelligence upon showing a willingness to comply with the terms required with everyone else. Such use and privilege must be given him, and, if it is not, he has a cause of action against the common carrier, in which action he may recover compensatory damages, and, if it is done wilfully and maliciously, then, in addition to compensatory damages, vindictive and punitive damages. If the common carrier has had a financial loss, and cannot carry out its obligations to the public, the public are not concerned whether the corporation is in straits.' Therefore the law says: 'You carry in accordance with the requirements of the law. That is no excuse. You must carry all alike;' and, if it wilfully and maliciously refuses to do so, then it is liable for vindictive damages. If it holds itself out as a common carrier,—exercises the right of a common carrier,—the law says the duty upon it is not whether you are poor, or whether you are rich, or whether your stock is worth 30 cents or $100. That is not it. The law says that it does not affect the responsibility to the party. As long as they are common carriers, they are responsible for their obligations to carry all alike. If it be in a financial strait, it might come in as mitigation, but not in justification; nor is it a defense. As long as they are exercising the rights of a common carrier, and take obligations upon themselves, benefits and burdens coming together, they hold themselves out to the public, and the law says they are common carriers; therefore persons have a right to consider them common carriers and they must carry as required by the law, fulfilling their obligations just as an ordinary citizen. The same obligations rest upon him to carry out his obligations. It may repel the idea of wilfulness, wantonness, or maliciousness by showing its condition; but so long as it holds itself out as a common carrier it must discharge the obligations of a common carrier, and treat all alike. The error being: (a) This instruction to the jury took away from the jury and utterly destroyed the defendant's defense that at the time the demand was made upon it by the plaintiff for one of its telephones the financial condition of the defendant and the physical condition of its plant was such that the defendant was utterly unable, even if it had been so disposed, to furnish such instrument to the plaintiff. (b) That even if, under the law, the defendant was a common carrier, and was bound to treat all its patrons alike, it had the right, if its financial and physical condition was such to demand it, to refuse the use of the telephone to the plaintiff or any other person; and this instruction to the jury took away from the defendant the right to show that such was its condition, was one of the reasons why the telephone was not furnished to the plaintiff when demanded. (c) The charge quoted was, we submit, in conflict with the decision of the supreme court in the case of State ex rel. J. B. Gwynn against Citizens' Telephone Co., in which case, under the opinion of the supreme court, the defendant had the right, if it could, to justify its refusal to furnish a telephone by showing that it was unable to do so.

"(10) Because the circuit judge erred in refusing the motion for a new trial on the grounds upon which such motion was based, and in finding and holding in connection with such motion as follows: (a) That after the decision of the supreme court in the case of State ex rel. J. B. Gwynn against Citizens' Telephone Company the law in relation to the questions involved in this litigation was settled, and that such decision settled all issues in this action, and deprived the defendant of the right to make any defense thereto other than to show what facts it could in mitigation of plaintiff's damages. (b) That the defendant set up and had no real defense to this action, when he should have held that the defendant had the right to establish, and did establish, by the great preponderance of the evidence, a complete defense thereto in the following respects: That no actual damage whatsoever was suffered by the plaintiff, and therefore the verdict should have been in favor of the defendant as to actual damages. That no wilful or malicious conduct was shown, and therefore the verdict should have been in favor of the defendant as to vindictive damages. That, in addition to all its other defenses, the defendant was utterly unable at the time the demand was made upon it to furnish to the plaintiff the telephone as demanded, and therefore the verdict should have been in favor of the defendant. The appellant submits that the verdict of the jury in respect to these matters of defense was not only against the great weight of the testimony, but was without any evidence to sustain it, and therefore the refusal of the circuit judge to grant a new trial was error of law."

The first exception is disposed of by the case of State ex rel. Gwynn v. Citizens' Teleph. Co. 61 S. C. 83, 55 L. R. A. 139, 85 Am. St. Rep. 870, 39 S. E. 257. Permission was granted the appellant to review this case, but this court sees no satisfactory reason for receding from the principles therein announced.

In passing upon the second exception we will first consider whether the counterclaim was obnoxious to § 171 of the Code of 1902, which permits a counterclaim when it arises out of one of the following causes of action: "(1) A cause of action arising out of the contract or transaction set forth in the complaint as the foundation of plaintiff's claim or connected with the subject of the 67 L. R. A.

action." The counterclaim unquestionably was connected with the subject-matter of the action, for it was the foundation upon which the defendant based its refusal to allow the plaintiff the further use of the telephone.

We will next consider whether the contract alleged in the counterclaim was void on the ground that it was in restraint of trade and against public policy. The modern doctrine is that contracts between individuals are not void on the ground that they are in restraint of trade, unless the provisions thereof are unreasonable. 24 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, p. 850. But, as is said in 9 Cyc. Law & Proc. pp. 533, 534: "The reasonableness of contracts in restraint of trade as between the parties is the sole test in those cases only where the public interests are not also involved. Although the contract may be fair and reasonable as between the parties, yet if it is so injurious to the public interest that public policy requires that it should not be enforced it will be held void." In the case of Foule v. Park, 131 U. S. 88, 33 L. ed. 67, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 658, the court said: "Public welfare is first considered; and if it be not involved, and the restraint upon one party is not greater than protection to the other requires, the contract may be sustained. The question is whether, under the particular circumstances of the case and the nature of the particular contract involved in it, the contract is or is not unreasonable." The contract alleged in the counterclaim was unreasonable because its tendency was to stifle competition between common carriers and to create a monopoly in favor of the defendant.

The third exception cannot be sustained for the reason that, even waiving the objection that it fails to state in what particulars the testimony was incompetent, and conceding that it was irrelevant, it was not prejudicial to the appellant, as will hereinafter appear.

The fourth exception must be overruled, as the grounds of objection were not stated when the testimony was offered.

We will next consider the fifth exception. The presiding judge ruled that the testimony was competent in mitigation of damages, but not as a justification for the defendant's refusal to put in the telephone. In this there was no error.

The sixth exception cannot be sustained for the reason that there was testimony showing that the plaintiff had sustained actual damages. Under § 186a of the Code the whole case was, therefore, properly submitted to the jury.

The seventh exception has already been disposed of.

The eighth exception must be sustained on both the grounds assigned as error. It was a charge on the facts, because they were susceptible of more than one inference. The charge stated the law erroneously, in that it eliminated the important fact of knowledge on the part of the telephone company of the plaintiff's rights. In the latest edition of Sutherland on Damages, vol. 2, p. 1093, § 393, in discussing exemplary damages, it is said: "If a wrong is done wilfully,—that is, if a tort is committed deliberately, recklessly, or by wilful negligence, with a present consciousness of invading another's rights or of exposing him to injury,—an undoubted case is presented for exemplary damages. . . . These damages are allowable only when there is misconduct and malice, or what is equivalent thereto. A tort committed by mistake in the assertion of a supposed right, or without any actual wrong intention, and without such recklessness or negligence as evinces malice or conscious disregard of the rights of others, will not warrant the giving of damages for punishment where the doctrine of such damage prevails." See also Kibler v. Southern R. Co. 62 S. C. 270, 40 S. E. 556, and Fort v. Southern R. Co. 64 S. C. 423, 42 S. E. 196.

The questions presented by the ninth exception have already been determined.

All the questions raised by the tenth exception have been considered except the question whether there was any testimony showing actual or punitive damages. While there is testimony showing actual damages, we have failed to discover in the record any testimony from which it could be reasonably inferred that there was a wilful or wanton disregard of the plaintiff's rights by the defendant.

It is the judgment of this court that the judgment of the Circuit Court be reversed, and the case remanded to that court for a new trial.

Jones, J., concurs in the result.

RHODE ISLAND SUPREME COURT.

Annie D. NELSON

v.

NARRAGANSETT ELECTRIC LIGHTING COMPANY.

James S. NELSON

v.

SAME.

(.....R. I.....)

1. Placing an electric light in close proximity to a trolley wire at a curve is not the proximate cause of an injury to one struck by glass falling from the globe when shattered by a trolley leaving the wire, since failure to keep the trolley on the wire is prima facie negligence, and is the act of a responsible person intervening between the placing of the light and the injury.
2. The court will take judicial notice of the fact that an electric lighting company could not locate lights in the street of a city without authority from the city to do so.
3. The location of an electric light in a street at the place designated by the proper municipal authorities is not wrongful as against pedestrians, so as to render its owner liable to such a person injured by glass falling from the globe when shattered by a trolley pole leaving the wire.

NOTE.—On the question of proximate cause as affected by intervening agency, see also cases in notes to Smith v. County Court, 8 L. R. A. 82, and Smithwick v. Hall & U. Co. 12 L. R. A. 279; also the later cases in this series of Pennsylvania R. Co. v. Hamill, 24 L. R. A. 531; Goodlander Mill Co. v. Standard Oil Co. 27 L. R. A. 583; Stone v. Boston & A. R. Co. 41 L. R. A. 794; Southern R. Co. v. Webb, 59 L. R. A. 109; and Cole v. German Sav. & L. Soc. 63 L. R. A. 416.
67 L. R. A.

(June 23, 1904.)

ON DEMURRER to the declarations in actions brought to recover damages for personal injuries alleged to have been caused by defendant's negligence. Sustained.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Messrs. Walter B. Vincent and Ralph T. Barnefield, for defendant, in support of demurrers:

The negligence of a responsible agent, intervening between the defendant's negligence and the injury suffered, breaks the causal connection between the two.

Mahogany v. Ward, 16 R. I. 479, 27 Am. St. Rep. 753, 17 Atl. 860; Rowell v. Lowell, 7 Gray, 100, 66 Am. Dec. 464; Tutein v. Hurley, 98 Mass. 211, 93 Am. Dec. 154; Cuff v. Newark & N. Y. R. Co. 35 N. J. L. 17, 10 Am. Rep. 205; Missouri P. R. Co. v. Columbia, 65 Kan. 390, 58 L. R. A. 399, 69 Pac. 338; Wharton, Neg. § 134.

The negligence of the railroad company in so running its car around the curve as to cause the trolley pole to fly from the overhead wire was not such an intervening act as the defendant was bound to anticipate.

Stone v. Boston & A. R. Co. 171 Mass. 536, 41 L. R. A. 794, 51 N. E. 1; Tutein v. Hurley, 98 Mass. 211, 93 Am. Dec. 154.

It cannot be said that the defendant, in locating its lamp, bearing in mind its duty to light the public streets as well as its duty to regard the safety of travelers, acted unreasonably.

Roberts v. Wisconsin Teleph. Co. 77 Wis. 589, 20 Am. St. Rep. 143, 46 N. W. 800; Sheffield v. Central U. Teleph. Co. 36 Fed. 164; Allen v. Atlantic & P. Teleg. Co. 21 Hun, 22; Wabash, St. L. & P. R. Co. v. Locke, 112 Ind. 404, 2 Am. St. Rep. 193, 14 N. E. 391; Keasbey, Electric Wires, 2d ed. §§ 224, 236.

Messrs. James A. Williams, David S. Baker, and Lewis A. Waterman for plaintiffs, contra.

Tillinghast, J., delivered the opinion of the court:

These cases are brought to recover damages for injuries alleged to have been sustained by reason of the defendant's negligence in maintaining a certain electric light, surrounded by a glass globe, in such close proximity to an overhead trolley wire of the Union Railroad Company that said globe was broken by the trolley pole of the car slipping from the wire as it was going around a curve in the street. The plaintiff James S. Nelson, who is the husband of the plaintiff Annie D. Nelson, sues to recover damages for loss of services of his wife and for doctors' bills, etc., in consequence of the injuries which his wife sustained by reason of the accident in question, and his wife sues to recover for the personal injuries which she sustained by reason of the falling upon her of the glass globe which was broken, as aforesaid. The cases were heard together, and are before us on the defendant's demurrers to the plaintiffs' declarations.

The declarations allege, in substance, that the defendant was the owner of certain electric lighting apparatus, including poles, wires, and lamps, for the purpose of lighting the streets of Providence, and that the defendant negligently hung, or permitted to be hung, a certain electric light, surrounded by a glass globe, in such close proximity to an overhead trolley wire of the Union Railroad Company, and so negligently allowed the same to be and remain in such close proximity to the overhead trolley wire at the corner of Dorrance and Weybosset streets, that the glass globe was broken by the pole on the trolley car slipping from the wire as it was going around a curve at the corner of said streets, and striking said globe, thereby causing it to fall upon the plaintiff Annie, who was passing along the street in that vicinity, in consequence of which she suffered injuries, while in the exercise of due care on her part.

The grounds of the demurrers are, first, 67 L. R. A.

that it appears from the declarations that the alleged negligence was not the proximate cause of the injury; and, second, that it appears that the defendant was not negligent.

The position taken by plaintiffs' counsel in support of the declarations, briefly stated, is this: Two concurring causes, both in their nature proximate, produced the injury complained of. One of these causes was the placing and maintaining, by the defendant, of the lamp referred to in such close proximity to the trolley wire that the trolley pole was apt to strike it in case the pole slipped from the wire and the other cause was the happening of just this event. In view of this coincidence he contends that the case falls within the rule laid down in Hampson v. Taylor, 15 R. I. 83, 8 Atl. 331, 23 Atl. 732, where it was held that, where two causes combined to produce the injury, both in their nature proximate, the one being the defect in the highway, and the other some occurrence for which neither party was responsible, the corporation was liable, provided the injury would not have been sustained but for the defect in the highway. In that case, however, it is to be noted that one of the concurring causes was a natural cause, for which no person was responsible. And the question therefore arises whether the same can be said of one of the causes here, namely, the slipping of the trolley pole from the wire, which certainly was the proximate cause in point of time, at any rate, of the accident in question. Counsel says that the law in the case referred to is applicable to the case at bar. "The slipping of the trolley pole from the wire," he says, "was a pure accident, for which no person was responsible; and hence the proximate cause of the accident was the negligence of the defendant in locating its light." If this position were tenable, the case would seem to fall within the rule above stated. But we do not think it is. In the first place, we do not think it can be said that the slipping of the trolley pole from the wire was "a pure accident." An accident, according to the primary definition thereof as given in Webster's Unabridged Dictionary, is: "An event that takes place without one's foresight or expectation; an event which proceeds from an unknown cause, or is an unusual effect of a known cause, and therefore not expected." If, as stated by plaintiff's counsel in his brief, "it is a well-known fact that trolley poles jump the wire from time to time from various causes, and that this is particularly true in going around curves, as in the case at bar," we fail to see how it can be logically claimed that such an event is "a pure accident" under the definition above given; for a thing which happens so often as to become a well-known fact and a matter of common knowledge, as the fact referred to doubtless is, can hardly be called a pure accident. Again, if it was a pure accident, the defendant was not called upon to anticipate it. But, even conceding that the slipping of the trolley pole from the wire was a pure accident, as argued, yet it certainly cannot be said, as a matter of law, at any rate, that it was an accident for which no person was responsible; for the trolley pole was a mechanical appliance connected with the running of an electric car which was being operated by the Union Railroad Company, an undoubtedly responsible person. If this trolley pole had not slipped from the wire, the accident would not have happened. And as it was prima facie negligence on the part of the street railway company in not keeping it on the wire where it belonged, or at any rate in not preventing it from coming in contact with said electric light globe, such negligence, being the independent act of a responsible person, and intervening between the negligence of the defendant (if it was negligent in the premises) and the happening of the accident, broke the causal connection between the two, and hence became and was the proximate cause of the accident. See Mahogany v. Ward, 16 R. I. 479, 27 Am. St. Rep. 753, 17 Atl. 860.

As well argued by counsel for defendant, the placing of the globe in the position where it was, and maintaining it in that position, formed only the condition under which the accident happened, to which, in order for the globe to break, had to be super-added the negligence of the railroad company in so running its car around the curve as to cause the trolley pole to fly from the overhead wire, and cause the accident. Placing and maintaining the globe in the position in which it was at the time of the accident were entirely harmless acts in themselves, and would not have resulted in accident except for the intervention of the force which was brought to bear upon said globe by another party. And hence we think the act of the other party, being prima facie a negligent act, was the proximate cause of the accident.

But we think there is another potent reason why the declarations fail to state a case, and it is this: It appears that the lamp in question was a part of an electric lighting apparatus used for the purpose of lighting the streets of the city of Providence. And, this being so, it is certainly to be presumed that the poles, wires, and electric lights were located under the direction and with the authority of the city government; for the court will take judicial cognizance of the fact that the defendant could not erect and maintain such structures without authority from the city so to do. Under this assumption the globe in question was rightfully in the place which it occupied when it was struck and broken by said trolley pole. And, being in the place which was presumably designated for it to occupy as aforesaid, it was rightfully there. And, the original act relied on by plaintiffs as being wrongful (and it must have been wrongful in order to render the defendant liable) not being so, the plaintiffs' claim that it was the proximate cause, or one of the proximate causes, of the accident, clearly fails, and for the simple reason that, if the defendant was not guilty of a wrongful act in maintaining said globe in said position, no liability can attach to it in the premises; for, in the absence of some wrongful act on the part of the defendant, no cause of action can arise.

In this connection, it is pertinent to remark that, for aught which appears, the defendant may have obtained the right to locate and maintain the lamp in question at that place prior to the time when the trolley wire referred to was erected; and, if so, it would seem that it was there by priority of right. But, however this may be, it was presumably there, at the time of the accident, by lawful authority, as already suggested, and hence we do not think the defendant can be charged with negligence in maintaining it there.

Demurrers sustained, and cases remanded for further proceedings.

PETITION OF Emeline A. WALDRON et al.

(.....R. I.....)

A residuary devise to testator's widow will not, as against his children, pass title to a burial lot upon which members of the testator's family are buried.

(March 30, 1904.)

NOTE.—Character of estate or property of owner in burial lot.

- I. Introductory, 118.
- II. Easement, 119.
- III. License, 120.
- IV. Devise, 121.
- V. Cemetery dedicated to a class, 122.
- VI. When held in common, 122.
- VII. Right to mortgage, 122.
- VIII. Power of cemetery authorities, 123.
- IX. Trespass on lot owner's possession, 124.
- X. Ejectment, 125.
- XI. Effect upon, of legislative act or municipal ordinance closing cemetery, 125.

I. Introductory.

It may be said that the exact question de-

PETITION for the opinion of the court as to whether the residuary clause in the will of Horatio L. Waldron passed title to a burial lot. Negative answer returned.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Mr. A. B. Patton, for Emeline C. Waldron:

The burial lot in question is part of the property devised to Emeline C. Waldron in the residuary clause of her husband's will.

The corporation holds the title in fee to the cemetery-corporation lands, and, upon a sale of the lot, that fee is conveyed to the owner and may be conveyed and devised by him. If a burial has taken place, the lot is as much real estate after, as before, the burial.

cided in WALDRON'S PETITION, vis., that a residuary devise to testator's widow will not, as against his children, pass title to a burial lot upon which members of the testator's family are buried, is one of first impression, although, as will be seen, one, and possibly two, cases in the same court have leaned in that direction. In arriving at its conclusion, the court in WALDRON'S PETITION reasoned from two standpoints: First, from the character of the property right of the owner of a burial lot, and, second, from the right to the control of the corpse, as between a widow and next of kin, and the consequent duty in the disposition of the body of a deceased person incumbent upon the person entitled to such control. The latter subject was thoroughly discussed in a note to Larson v. Chase, 14 L. R. A. 85, and the province of the present note will be an endeavor to state what would appear to be the law of the different jurisdictions, as to the nature or character of the estate or property which the owner of a burial lot in a public burying ground takes therein by his grant, lease, or certificate, or by the fact that he has purchased the same. That such estate or property is not of the character, even though conveyed by a deed, which on its face grants a fee simple absolute, as would be the case of other property, seems to be agreed, with possibly one or two exceptions, which will be noticed in the cases which follow. The qualified title or estate which it is generally conceded only passes by a conveyance of any sort of a lot in a public cemetery or burial ground has been variously described in the decisions on the subject. By some courts it has been designated as an easement; by others as a license or privilege; and by still others, not so precise in their language of description of the character of the estate, as an easement or license,—an easement or privilege.

In several of the most prominent cases on the subject it has been stated that a grant of a lot in a cemetery is said to be analogous to a grant of a pew in a church or meeting house, and that the right of burial in a public burying ground in some respects resembles the right of pew tenancy. Jones v. Towne, 58 N. H. 482, 42 Am. Rep. 602; Page v. Symonds, 63 N. H. 17, 56 Am. Rep. 481; Sohler v. Trinity Church, 109 Mass. 1; Kincald's Appeal, 66 Pa. 411, 5 Am. Rep. 377.

Nearly all of the cases seem pregnant with the theory that, upon the sale and purchase of 67 L. R. A.

Mr. Nathan B. Lewis, for Hattie L. Peirce:

The law puts upon the next of kin the duty of burying the remains and caring for them after burial.

4 Bradf. 503, Appx.

Rights of burial in churchyards, although acquired by deed of the particular lot, are only easements in land belonging to the religious society which owns the church and churchyard.

2 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, p. 49; Washb. Real Prop. 6th ed. § 44; 6 Cyc. Law & Proc. p. 717; Root v. Odd Fellows' Cemetery Co. 148 Pa. 494, 24 Atl. 71; Buffalo City Cemetery v. Buffalo, 46 N. Y. 503; Thompson v. Hickey, 50 How. Pr. 434; Lewis v. Walker, 165 Pa. 30, 30 Atl. 500.

a burial lot in a public burying ground, the conveyance, however positive in its terms, from the very nature and character of the transaction and of the thing bought and sold, contains an implied covenant on the part of the purchaser that when the public burial place shall, because of necessity of any kind, become unfit or dangerous to be used for that purpose, his estate or property in such burial lot will be considered at an end, and the remains of persons buried thereon may and shall be removed to another place. While it has not been discovered that the proposition has ever been intimated, it is suggested, whether all the differences of designation of the character of the estate of such a purchaser of a burial lot might not be consolidated or reconciled by designating the same a base or qualified fee.

In Re Ely, 1 N. Y. Legal Obs. 181, a vault in a cemetery lot was held to be personal property, and, under an act of the legislature, not liable to be inventoried as an asset of the deceased owner, nor liable for his debts.

II. Easement.

These cases hold that the estate is an easement.

A purchaser of a lot from a cemetery association holds it by a peculiar title. He acquires no absolute interest in, or dominion over, such lot, but merely a qualified and usufructuary right for the purposes to which the lots are devoted and for which they are set apart by the company. Their holding is in the nature of an easement, with the exclusive right to bury in the lots, subject to the general proprietorship and control of the association, in whom the legal title is lodged, and all purchasers from such companies are affected with notice of the limitations placed upon their holdings by the law of the land, and the charter, constitution, and by-laws of the company made in pursuance thereof. Roanoke Cemetery Co. v. Goodwin, 101 Va. 605, 44 S. E. 760.

In Richards v. Northwest. Protestant Dutch Church, 32 Barb. 42, it was said that the right of burial, when confined to a churchyard as distinguished from a separate, independent cemetery, although conveyed with a common formula, "heirs and assigns forever," must stand upon the same footing as the right of public worship in a particular pew of the church; and, although the deed purported to carry a certain specified piece of ground of certain dimensions, it described also the premises as belonging to a church corporation, as adjacent to a church edifice, as in a churchyard, and to be used exclusively as a place of interment, it was held that the one party in executing, and the other in accepting, the conveyance, must have considered it as the grant of a mere easement, and not of an ordinary absolute estate in fee.

The title which Mr. Waldron held in this lot was not of such a character as to be considered any part of his estate for the purposes of administration, and could not be included in a devise of all the residue of his estate, without specific language showing an intent that it should so pass.

The law gives the control and custody of the dead body to the next of kin, and it follows, by analogy, that, in order decently to exercise the duty which the law thus imposes, the next of kin must necessarily have the control of the shroud, the casket, and even the earth in which such body is interred.

Hackett v. Hackett, 18 R. I. 155, 19 L. R. A. 558, 49 Am. St. Rep. 762, 26 Atl. 42; Pierce v. Swan Point Cemetery, 10 R. I.

The title to an easement of a burial lot may be acquired by prescription, where adverse possession for that purpose is held for the statutory period; and such adverse possession will be deemed to have been held by its use for a burial place, with or without inclosure, as long as gravestones stand marking the place as burial ground. Hook v. Joyce, 94 Ky. 450, 21 L. R. A. 96, 22 S. W. 651. The court, in the discussion of the question, treated the title which had been acquired by prescription and adverse possession as that of an easement.

The sale of lots in a public cemetery does not pass to the grantees the title in fee to such lots, but thereby assures to the grantee a license or easement therein for burial purposes, so long as the cemetery shall be used for cemetery purposes. Such license or easement becomes the property of the family of the original grantee of the lot upon his or her decease, but the fee of the lots in such cases remains in trustees of the cemetery; but, while this is so, the trustees of the cemetery cannot divest the owner of such license or easement of his right to use the lot for burial purposes; and, if they do so, and sell the lot, or any portion thereof, to another, who takes possession of the portion so purchased, an action in equity will lie to compel the removal of any burials thus unlawfully made thereon, and the restoration of the lot to the original purchaser. McWhirter v. Newell, 200 Ill. 583, 66 N. E. 345.

In Gardner v. Swan Point Cemetery, 20 R. I. 646, 78 Am. St. Rep. 897, 40 Atl. 871, which was a case in which the real question was as to the right of disposition of the remains of a decedent, the court, in alluding to the subject under consideration said that in the cases of churchyards and cemeteries it had been held that, though a deed may run to a grantee, his heirs and assigns, he takes only an easement or right of burial, rather than an absolute title.

III. License.

In other cases courts have refused to dignify the right of the purchaser of a burial lot therein 67 L. R. A.

227, 14 Am. Rep. 667; Wynkoop v. Wynkoop, 42 Pa. 293, 82 Am. Dec. 506; Snyder v. Snyder, 60 How. Pr. 368; Mitchell v. Thorne, 134 N. Y. 536, 30 Am. St. Rep. 699, 32 N. E. 10; Derby v. Derby, 4 R. I. 414; Dickens v. Cave Hill Cemetery Co. 93 Ky. 385, 20 S. W. 282; Gardner v. Swan Point Cemetery, 20 R. I. 646, 78 Am. St. Rep. 897, 40 Atl. 871.

Stiness, Ch. J., delivered the opinion of the court:

Horatio L. Waldron was the owner of a burial lot in Swan Point Cemetery. He died in 1901, leaving a will, in which Emeline A. Waldron, his widow, was his residuary legatee. The will made no mention of the burial lot, and the question is whether as even an easement, but hold that, although a right exclusive in and to him, it is, nevertheless, a mere license or privilege.

In Kincald's Appeal, 66 Pa. 411, 5 Am. Rep. 377, a case which has probably been cited more frequently than any other, it was held that where a certificate stated that the subscriber, in consideration of an amount paid by him, was entitled to "two burying lots in the burying ground of said church," to have and to hold the said lots for the use and purpose, and subject to the conditions and regulations, mentioned in the deed of trust to the trustees of the church; and the deed to the trustees expressed no trust,—the certificate was no evidence of a grant to the lot holders of any interest or title in the soil, but was the grant of a mere license or privilege to make interments in the lots described, exclusively of others, as long as the ground should remain "the burying ground of the church;" and that whenever, by lawful authority, it should cease to be a burying ground, the right of the certificate holder and his property would cease. That the lot holder purchased a license—nothing more—irrevocable as long as the place continued a burying ground, but giving no title to the soil. That while the license continued he could, perhaps, bring trespass or case for any invasion or disturbance of it, whether by the grantors or by strangers; but that if, in the course of time, it should become necessary to vacate the ground as a burying ground, all that he could claim, either in law or in equity, would be that he should have due notice and the opportunity afforded to him of removing the bodies and monuments to some other place of his own selection, or that, on his failing to do so, such removal should be made by others; and that he accepted the grant or license subject to this necessary condition. The court approved the doctrine laid down in Windt v. German Reformed Church, 4 Sandf. Ch. 471, and in Richards v. Northwest Protestant Dutch Church, 32 Barb. 42.

Approved and followed in Craig v. First Presby. Church, 88 Pa. 42, 32 Am. Rep. 417.

In Buffalo City Cemetery v. Buffalo, 46 N. Y. 503, which was a proceeding on the part of the cemetery association to enjoin the assessment of its property by the city, the position was taken by the cemetery company that it, as a corporation, was not liable to be assessed for municipal purposes, and that, if any assessment could be permitted, it must be against the individual lot it passed to the widow under the residuary clause, or to his daughter as his heir at law.

The Proprietors of the Swan Point Cemetery is a corporation for the purpose of maintaining the cemetery grounds, which held title to the land in fee simple. It conveyed a lot by deed to Horatio L. Waldron, his heirs and assigns, limiting the use to sepulture of the dead, and to the rules of the corporation. Two previous wives and a child of Mr. Waldron were buried in the lot before his death.

Similar conditions existed in Gardner v. Swan Point Cemetery, 20 R. I. 646, 78 Am. St. Rep. 897, 40 Atl. 871, where a widow claimed title to a burial lot as residuary legatee. The court said: "In the cases of churchyards and cemeteries, it has been held that, though a deed may run to a grantee, his heirs and assignees, he takes only an easement or right of burial, rather than an absolute title. [Citing cases.] So long as the land is used for burial purposes, he cannot exercise the same rights of ownership as in other real estate." The court did not decide the question of title in that case. The question was not one of title to the lot, but of a right to change the place of a body already buried, as between a widow and the next of kin of the testator, to whom she had conveyed the lot. Cases bearing upon title were cited to show how the right of control of the body would devolve, as a general rule.

A question of title came before this court in Derby v. Derby, 4 R. I. 414. In that case the executor was empowered to sell all the owners. In affirming a judgment of the general term reversing a judgment at special term which held such assessment void, the court of appeals said that this theory could not be maintained, as the effect of the conveyance from the corporation to its individual lot owners was no more than to confer upon the holder of a lot a right of use for the purpose of interment, and that no such estate was granted as made him an owner in such sense as to exclude the general proprietorship of the association. That the association remained the owner in general, and held that relation to the public and to the government, while subject to the right of the individual, exclusive of any other person, to bury upon the subdivided plat assigned to him.

Where a cemetery was acquired and controlled by a corporation under statutory authority, and one in his lifetime, upon the payment of $10, had received from an officer of the corporation a receipt for that amount as being the amount of purchase money of a grave 2 feet by 8 in the cemetery, with privilege to erect a head stone, and the wife of the purchaser had been buried in such space, it was held that the personal representative of the purchaser after the death of the latter could not have the mandatory process of the court to compel the interment of his intestate, as the right acquired under the agreement was a license only, and revocable. McGuire v. St. Patrick's Cathedral, 54 Hun, 207, 7 N. Y. Supp. 345.

The right of burial is not an absolute right of property, but a privilege or license, to be enjoyed so long as the place continues to be used as a burial ground, subject to municipal regulation and control, and legally revocable whenever the public necessity requires. It is a right of limited use for purposes of interment, which gives no title to the land. Page v. Symonds, 63 N. H. 17, 56 Am. Rep. 481.

Where a sale had been had for a former cemetery owned by a church, and the proceeds thereof had been expended in the purchase of new ground, which was conveyed to the church in fee and without any declaration of use or trust, but the church corporation dedicated the ground thus acquired to the purposes of the burial of the dead, the ground will be deemed to have been purchased for that purpose alone. Thereafter to those purchasing the right of burial therein a certificate was issued, whereby it was certified that the party to whom it was issued was the proprietor of a certain designated lot in the cemetery, and that such lot was granted and conveyed by the church to the party, his heirs and assigns, forever, subject to the regulations of the trustees of the church. This certificate was neither under the seal of the corporation, nor acknowledged, nor recorded; but was simply signed by the chairman of the trustees, and attested by the register. It was held that the certificate conferred no title or estate in the soil; nor could it operate as a grant of an easement, because it was not under seal, nor was it acknowledged or recorded, so as to be effective to convey such an interest, but was a mere license or privilege to make interments in the lot described exclusively of others, so long as the ground remained a burying ground or cemetery, and that whenever, therefore, by lawful authority, the grounds ceased to be a place of burial, the lot holder's right and privilege ceased, except for the purpose of removing the remains previously buried. Partridge v. First Independent Church, 39 Md. 631; Rayner v. Nugent, 60 Md. 515; Catholic Cathedral Church v. Manning, 72 Md. 116, 19 Atl. 599.

One who buys the privilege of burying his dead kinsmen or friends in a cemetery acquires no general right of property. He acquires only the right to bury the dead, for he may not use the ground for any other purpose than such as is connected with the right of sepulture. Beyond this his title does not extend. He does not acquire, in the strict sense, an ownership of the ground; all that he does acquire is a right to use the ground as a burial place. Dwenger v. Geary, 113 Ind. 106, 14 N. E. 903.

IV. Devise.

Where an act of the legislature amending the charter of a cemetery company provided that the owners of lots should not sell the privilege of burying in their lots without the previous written consent of the company, but that they might by last will and testament, or by writing directed to the company, signed by such owners and attested by two witnesses, determine who should control the right of burial in their lots after their death; and providing, further, that, in case no such direction was made, the right of burial in any of the lots of the cemetery should go and descend to the lineal descendants of the joint owners thereof; and the lot owner by his last will and testament, instead of determining who should control such right of burial, devised his lot to his daughter; and thereafter real estate to pay pecuniary and residuary legacies, and the question arose whether he should sell a burial lot in a cemetery, where the testator's first wife was buried. The court said: "This lot was purchased by the testator for a burial place for his family. That he should deliberately intend that it should be sold and go into the hands of strangers, it is difficult to believe, without the most express direction. It is the more difficult in this case, as within it are deposited the remains of his former wife, and could he intend that those remains should be disturbed? He had devoted this lot to pious and charitable uses, as a place of burial for the members of his own family: Did he mean to revoke it? . . . It could not have been in the contemplation of the testator that this lot should be sold out of his family, nor could he have contemplated it as property in any such sense as to fall within the power given to the executor; and, without an express direction to sell this particular lot, we think we shall not be warranted in advising the executor to sell it."

These remarks apply with equal force to the case at bar. Although this devise was to his widow, yet, as there were no children of her marriage, the lot, if devised, would go out of his family to her heirs. His living daughter would have no right to be buried in the family lot. It seems improbable that he should have intended such a result, or that he meant to devise to his widow and her heirs a lot which contained the remains of his two previous wives and his children.

It is also improbable that one has in the devisee sought permission from the company to sell a portion of the same, which was refused upon the ground that the devisee did not acquire the exclusive right to the lot, but that the descendants of the son of the original owner had a joint right to the lot for burial purposes,—it was held that a mandamus would not lie to compel the company to give such consent. Dickens v. Cave Hill Cemetery Co. 93 Ky. 385, 20 S. W. 282.

A cemetery lot, being regarded only as a place of interment of the dead, will not be deemed to pass by a provision in a will giving a power of sale to the executor of all the property of the testator for the payment of his debts. Derby v. Derby, 4 R. I. 414.

This is probably the nearest approach to the decision in WALDRON'S PERMITTANCE, that a burial lot will not pass by a residuary devise.

V. Cemetery dedicated to a class.

Where in a deed of a burial lot the privilege of burial secured is not a general one, but, by the express words of the deed by which the original grounds were set apart for a cemetery to the religious association, its use for a burial place was restricted to persons of a certain religious faith, there is in such a deed a clear and positive limitation to a class, and, where the courts cannot be in doubt as to the class intended by the parties to the deed, the lot owner will not be permitted to bury even his own son, where the latter is shown to be outside of the limited class. Dwenger v. Geary, 13 Ind. 106, 14 N. E. 903.

In such case the lot owner acquires his rights as a member of a particular religious class in a cemetery set apart by a member of that class to that class, and he has not the slightest claim, in justice or equity, to disregard the same, and bury in the cemetery one whom the laws of the church and the usage of the owners and rulers of the cemetery declare shall not lie there.

VI. When held in common.

A deed from a cemetery company to four individuals of the same family conveys a fee-simple title of one undivided fourth interest to each, with the use of the lot limited solely for burial purposes by the act incorporating the cemetery company. In such case no one member has a right to permit the interment of a stranger in the lot. Lewis v. Walker, 165 Pa. 30, 30 Atl. 500.

In an action by one of four heirs at law, who were tenants in common of a burial lot in the cemetery, it was held that, if the cemetery was governed by the provisions of the statute of Massachusetts, the possession, care, and control of the lot were not in the plaintiff alone, but were in common in the four heirs of whom she was one, and the statute provided the course to be followed in case the four did not agree as to the control of the lot. And that if, on the other hand, the lot was not governed by the statute, the plaintiff and the defendants were merely tenants in common, and, the plaintiff having placed upon the lot a granite monument, such act was an exclusive appropriation by the plaintiff of a part of the land to her own use which the other tenants in common might treat her as an ouster and remove the structure from the common land, and a bill to prevent them from so doing showed no right to place or keep the monument on the lot; and a demurrer thereto was sustained. Capen v. Leach, 182 Mass. 175, 65 N. E. 63.

VII. Right to mortgage.

In Lautz v. Buckingham, 4 Lans. 484, which was an action for the foreclosure of a mortgage upon a cemetery lot, it was held that, where the defendant had conveyed to the plaintiff a plot of ground in a cemetery with the privilege of interment, and the plaintiff had executed an instrument in the nature of a defeasance, containing an agreement to reconvey upon certain conditions, such a transaction was practically a mortgage, and that strict foreclosure of the same would be decreed. The case is more fully reported in 11 Abb. Pr. N. S. 64, where the opinion of the court at special term is given, in which the court said that, regarding it in the light of a mortgage security, he thought it ought not to be sustained as it was against good morals, and therefore against the policy of the law, to encourage such instruments. That, in providing that such a lot or plot should not be liable to be sold on execution, the legislature had substantially declared against such policy, as a decree of foreclosure is an equitable execution, and no distinction is made in the statute between such and any other executions. It ap-mind a burial lot in a residuary devise. Men are not likely to inventory it among their assets, or to regard it as property to be passed by a will. It is essentially a family heritage.

It has been held, on grounds of public policy, that a burial lot, where bodies have been buried, cannot be mortgaged for debts (Thompson v. Hickey, 50 How. Pr. 434), and that a deed of it carries only a right to use it for burial purposes (Buffalo City Cemetery v. Buffalo, 46 N. Y. 503). The charter of the cemetery provides that the land shall not be taxed, and a recent amendment to the charter also provides that it shall not pass by will except to the corporation.

While we do not mean to say that a burial lot is not property, yet all of these limitations tend to show that it has been shorn of so many of the ordinary attributes of property as to raise the presumption that it is not intended to be passed under a general devise in which it is not specially mentioned. A strong reason for this is found in the right to the control of the corpse, as between a widow and next of kin, as shown in Pierce v. Swan Point Cemetery, 10 R. I. 227, 14 Am. Rep. 667, and Hackett v. Hackett, 18 R. I. 155, 19 L. R. A. 558, 49 Am. St. Rep. 762, 26 Atl. 42. The right of custody of the remains, and the right of property in the burial lot, should go together, where it is possible. Following the doctrine of Derby v. Derby, 4 R. I. 414, and the implied approval of it in Gardner v. Swan Point Cemetery, 20 R. I. 646, 78 Am. St. Rep. 897, 40 Atl. 871, a burial lot does not pass under appeared as a fact in the case that no interment had been made in the lot at the time the mortgage was given, and this fact is alluded to in Thompson v. Hickey, 50 How. Pr. 434, as a reason why a distinction should be made between such a case and the mortgage of a cemetery lot in which there had been burials.

And this position was approbated by the general term in the first department in Schroder v. Wanzor, 36 Hun, 423.

VIII. Power of cemetery authorities.

Where one had purchased a lot in a cemetery without any restriction on his right of sepulture, the managers of the cemetery company had no power afterwards to abridge such right by any unreasonable limitation thereon; and, where the right of interment of another person was ordered by such purchaser, and was refused solely on the ground that the body was that of a colored man, it was held that the right of interment would be enforced by mandamus. Com. ex rel. Bolleau v. Mt. Moriah Cemetery Asso. 10 Phila. 385, Affirmed in 81 Pa. 235, 22 Am. Rep. 743.

Where a provision in a deed to a cemetery lot passed the title in fee simple to the grantee for burial purposes, on certain conditions annexed to the instrument, one of which was that "no vault shall be built entirely or partially above ground without permission of the company;" and the managers of the cemetery corporation had uniformly allowed lot owners to erect vaults, they have no power arbitrarily to deny the same right to the grantee in such deed; as they have no power to make or enforce a rule which would confer a right upon one lot owner in regard to the improvement of his property, and deny the same right to another lot owner. Rosehill Cemetery Co. v. Hopkinson, 114 Ill. 209, 20 N. E. 685.

Where one had purchased a family grave in perpetuity with no formal grant, but the only evidence was a receipt for the purchase money of the same; such an one was held to be entitled to an injunction to restrain those occupying the position of trustees of the parish from interfering with the graves. Moreland v. Richardson, 22 Beav. 596.

The by-laws of a cemetery corporation provided that the company should be composed of representatives of lodges of a certain order or 67 L. R. A.

society in good standing, who should subscribe for not less than a certain number of lots in the cemetery, and pay a certain sum therefor, and that every such lodge becoming a member of the company should be entitled to a lodge lot in the cemetery in which to inter the members of such lodge, etc. A lodge in good standing had taken the number of lots, and had assigned to it its lodge lot, and thereafter the city directed the opening of certain streets through the grounds of the cemetery. The cemetery company, through its trustees, entered into an arrangement whereby an exchange of property was effected for the purpose of squaring the lines of the lots and to avoid the angles resulting from the opening of the streets. The lodge before mentioned was represented by its trustee in the board of trustees, and he there objected to the proposed changes, and voted against them. The cemetery company made a new avenue immediately upon and across the lot of ground which had been conveyed to the plaintiffs, which obliterated the inclosure and destroyed the marks where the interments had been made. This was done against the protest and objection of the representative of the subordinate lodge mentioned, who refused to select a new lot which was offered, claiming their right to retain the lot which they had paid for, and which had ever since been in their undisputed possession, and it was held that the action of the cemetery company was within its chartered rights. Root v. Odd Fellows Cemetery Co. 145 Pa. 494, 24 Atl. 71.

In People ex rel. Dwyer v. Hogan, 91 N. Y. Supp. 715, the relator, a cemetery superintendent, had been convicted of permitting the body of a child to be interred in a cemetery lot owned by a certain person without the consent of the owner. It appeared that the record title of the lot was in the father of the child thus buried, and he thus appeared as the sole owner of the lot in which he demanded that his child should be buried. Two children were already buried in that lot, claimed by him to have been his children. Nothing was suggested to the relator of the right of the person having such record title to have the burial upon that lot, and he had no information that any transfer was claimed to have been made to the person claiming to be the owner, and there was no rule governing the conduct of the cemetery which required any specific evidence of the right to burial in any location.

a general residuary devise, but it descends to the heirs as intestate property. It is a family burial lot. It is that fact alone which gives a peculiar limitation to its tenure. The heir takes it subject to all the conditions for which the ancestor held it. A sort of trust attaches to the land for the benefit of the family. Neither the widow nor the child can be excluded from it for want of title, yet such a result might follow if the tenure was like that of other real estate. Children could exclude a widow, or a widow could exclude children, by virtue of ownership of the land. The view, therefore, taken in Derby v. Derby, 4 R. I. 414, was founded in sound reason and policy, and it has been regarded as the law in this state for a long time. It did not quite touch the point involved here, because the question was whether the lot should be sold to pay debts or legacies. Still we do not hesitate to follow its doctrine, and accordingly our opinion is that the burial lot did not pass by the residuary clause of the will of Horatio L. Waldron, but descended to his daughter, Hattie L. Peirce.

The conviction and dismissal were reversed and the reator restored, the court holding that he could have done nothing else than to have granted the right claimed by the record holder of the lot.

IX. Trespass on lot owner's possession.

While it is generally conceded that the title, estate, property, or right which the purchaser of a lot in a public cemetery or burial ground takes therein is thus qualified or limited, yet, when he has thus acquired possession or the right thereto such possession is exclusive in him so long as the cemetery is lawfully used for burial purposes. And so positive is that right that he may maintain trespass quare clausum against anyone unlawfully interfering with the same, even the officers and servants of the cemetery company.

One who had entered into possession of a cemetery lot, inclosed it by a fence, and planted trees thereon, and, after the fence was removed, had cared for and attended to the lot, and been in possession of the same, claiming it as a family burial lot, even though he has no conveyance of the same or paper title thereto, has such a right of possession as that he may maintain an action for trespass in cutting the trees upon the lot. Hollman v. Platteville, 101 Wis. 94, 70 Am. St. Rep. 899, 76 N. W. 1119.

Where a deed to the owner of a burial lot in a cemetery provided that the grantee was entitled to the lot, to have and to hold the same to him, his heirs and assigns, to his and their issue, as a place of burial for the dead, such owner may maintain an action of trespass quare clausum fregit against the superintendent of the cemetery for disinterring and removing the remains of a child of the owner of the lot buried therein; and this although the cemetery had never been licensed under the statute. Meagher v. Driscoll, 99 Mass. 284, 96 Am. Dec. 759.

Where, by the rules of the selectmen of the town having charge of the cemetery, an inhabitant of the town was permitted to select a burial lot, but no deed was given, but his name was marked upon the plans of the cemetery; and a husband and wife selected such a lot and asked for a deed, but were informed by the sexton that no deed could be given them, but that the lot would be marked for them on such plan, which was done; and thereafter one of the selectmen selected the lot thus taken by the husband and wife, and was informed by the sexton that it had been selected and he could not give him consent to take the lot; and thereafter the verbal permission from the other selectman was obtained to occupy the lot, and he caused the remains of his deceased wife to be buried therein,—it was held that the husband and wife, who 67 L. R. A.

had originally selected the lot, and whose names had been placed upon the plan, could maintain an action of trespass quare clausum against the selectman who had afterwards thus attempted to occupy it, and who had afterwards made a burial thereon. Gowen v. Bessey, 94 Me. 114, 46 Atl. 792.

Where, at the time of the purchase of a burial lot, the plan of the cemetery contained an avenue, and the lot owner thereafter for many years had the right and enjoyment of passage through and over such avenue in common with many others without interruption, until another, claiming to have purchased a portion of such avenue as a cemetery lot, proposed to use the same as such and close the avenue, an action may be maintained by the owner of such original burial lot to prevent such obstruction of the avenue. Burke v. Wall, 29 La. Ann. 38, 29 Am. Rep. 316.

The heirs of one who has purchased a burial lot and established possession of it by using it for the burial of the dead, and in which he himself is afterwards buried, are in possession of the lot so as to maintain trespass against one who disturbs such possession. Jacobus v. Congregation of Children of Israel, 107 Ga. 518, 73 Am. St. Rep. 141, 33 S. E. 853; Wright v. Hollywood Cemetery Corp. 112 Ga. 884, 52 L. R. A. 621, 38 S. E. 94.

To entitle one to an action quare clausum fregit against one who digs and disturbs a grave, he must have the actual or constructive possession of the soil. Where one has, however, buried his dead in soil to which he has the freehold right, or to the possession of which he is entitled, he may, in protecting their graves from insult or injury, have an action of trespass against the wrongdoer. Bessemer Land & Improv. Co. v. Jenkins, 111 Ala. 135, 56 Am. St. Rep. 26, 18 So. 565.

Where one who owned a qualified fee in a cemetery lot claimed that his title extended to the middle of the alleys of the cemetery adjoining his lot, and brought an action of trespass against the general owner of the cemetery for digging up and improving the alleys and changing them from grass to gravel, it was held that the action could not be maintained. Seymour v. Page, 33 Conn. 64. In this case the plaintiff claimed that his title extended to the middle of the alleys in analogy to the right of an owner of land bounded by a highway; but the court said that the cases were so unlike that the well-settled rules of law which governed one were not applicable to the other. The court said, further, that the very nature of the case excluded the supposition that each of the hundreds of individuals owning a mere right of burying in a particular spot could go beyond his specified limits and derange the whole system, substituting deformity for beauty, as his own bad taste or temper might suggest, and this, too, by construction of law.

In New York Bay Cemetery Co. v. Buckmaster, 49 N. J. L. 449, 9 Atl. 591, which was an action brought by the daughter of one having received a conveyance from a cemetery company under which she claimed title and right of possession, the conveyance being of the property in fee for the uses of sepulture only, and to and for no other uses whatever, and subject to the conditions and limitations, and with the privileges, specified in the rules and regulations which, at the date of the conveyance, were made, or which might thereafter be made and adopted by the managers of the cemetery, for the government of the lot holders and visitors, it was held that the fact that the plaintiff was thus limited in the use which she was to make of the property did not deprive her of the right of possession. It was urged by the cemetery company that the interest which was conveyed by the deed was a mere right of burial, and therefore the company, and not the grantee or his assigns, was entitled to possession; but, as before stated, the court held otherwise.

One who purchased a burial lot from a religious association having charge of the cemetery, paid for it, and took possession of it, in the only way that he could, viz., by using it for the purposes for which it was intended,—burying his dead upon it,—has both the possession and the right of possession, and remains in possession until his death; and at his death the possession and the right of possession are transmitted to his heirs at law. And such possession, unless voluntarily relinquished, continues as long as the graves are marked and distinguishable as such, and the cemetery continues to be used. Jacobus v. Congregation of Children of Israel, 107 Ga. 518, 73 Am. St. Rep. 141, 33 S. E. 853.

X. Ejectment.

A person entered into full possession of certain lots in a cemetery which were in a free part of the latter, and for which no money consideration was due, and buried his dead—some seven or eight in all—in such lots; and thereafter the city having control of the cemetery, by ordinance, quieted possession thereof, and continued to recognize and acquiesce in such person's possession, but thereafter undertook to convey the lots to others, who were previously advised of the former's possession and claim of title. It was held that, under these circumstances, the city could not have lawfully disturbed such original possession, and that its grantees were simply trespassers against the owner, who had used the lots for burial purposes, and in whom the possession thereof had been quieted, and that he might maintain ejectment against such trespasser therefor. Wilkinson v. Strickland (Miss.) 35 So. 177.

But in Hancock v. McAvoy, 151 Pa. 460, 18 L. R. A. 781, 31 Am. St. Rep. 774, 25 Atl. 47, it was held that where, by the deed of a cemetery lot, all the vendee acquired was the right of interment or sepulture in the lots described therein, and declared to be held for the uses and purposes of sepulture only, and to and for no other use, intent, or purpose whatsoever, the right thus sharply defined and limited is also subject to all the rules, regulations, conditions, and restrictions contained and set forth in the article 67 L. R. A.

cles of association made and adopted by the corporators or managers of the incorporated cemetery company; as the language of the deed evidently contemplates possession and general control of the cemetery grounds, etc., by the company, and the grantee in the deed acquires no such interest in the lands, nor such right of possession, as will support an action of ejectment.

And in Doe ex dem. Stewart v. Garrett, 119 Ga. 386, 64 L. R. A. 99, 46 S. E. 427, which was an action of ejectment, it was held that, the parcel of land sought to be recovered being averred to be a cemetery lot for burial purposes, any conveyance upon those terms would carry only a limited use, or an easement, which was sometimes called a mere license; and that, to recover such an easement or license, an action of ejectment will not lie.

XI. Effect upon, of legislative act or municipal ordinance closing cemetery.

Reference is made to the remarks in the introduction, supra, I., as to the implied covenant on the part of the purchaser of a burial lot that, in case of the happening of the necessity that the cemetery shall be closed, his rights in the lot will be considered at an end; and the following are cases deciding that the legislative and municipal authorities may compel the closing of a cemetery, and that thereupon the rights of the lot owner will determine. Included are also the two New York cases alluded to in supra, I., which take a different ground, and also hold that the conveyance confers a title to the land, and not a mere easement or privilege.

Rights of burial under churches or in public burying grounds are peculiar, and are so far public that private interests in them are subject to the control of the public authorities having charge of the police regulations; and, where the legislature has passed an act providing for the removal of bodies from and closing up the tombs under a church, the officers of the church, in obedience to, and by authority of, such act are justified in removing the bodies and remains interred under their church, as therein directed; and a bill by the descendants of the original owners of the tomb to prevent them from so doing will be dismissed. Sobler v. Trinity Church, 109 Mass. 1.

The power of a municipal corporation to declare an overflowing cemetery in the heart of a large city inimical to the health of a community, and therefore a nuisance, is undoubted, and a lot owner in such cemetery, although holding his title to his lot by an apparent absolute fee, will be remediless to prevent such action on the part of the municipality; and so, where a municipal corporation conveyed lands for the purpose of a cemetery, with a covenant for quiet enjoyment, and afterwards, by virtue of an act of the legislature, passed an ordinance prohibiting the further use of the land for cemetery purposes, this was not a breach of the covenant. Brick Presby. Church v. New York, 5 Cow. 538; Coates v. New York, 7 Cow. 585.

Thereafter Vice Chancellor McCoun denied a petition to sell the church and lands of the same Brick Presbyterian Church upon the objection of a lot owner, on the ground that the deed in this case and the lease conferred title to the land, and not a mere easement or privilege to inter the dead, and that it made no difference that any further interments were prohibited within the vaults, and that no argument drawn from that circumstance could give the petitioners any right to resume the control of the vaults, to break them up, or desecrate the ground. Re Brick Presby. Church, 3 Edw. Ch. 155.

And the case was referred to with approbation, and the position there taken confirmed, by Chancellor Sandford in Windt v. German Reformed Church, 4 Sandf. Ch. 471.

But in Re Reformed Presby. Church, 7 How. Pr. 476, where the terms of the instrument under which the lot owners claim a right of burial were that the corporation "do sell, convey, and confirm unto the party of the second part, his heirs and assigns, forever, to be used for the purpose of a burial place only, that certain piece of ground, etc.," it was held that the proper construction to be given to the instrument was that it was a grant of the use of the lot as a place of burial in subordination to the right of the corporation in the soil or freehold, and that the trustees had a right, upon complying with the provisions of the statute, to sell the property and remove the remains of the dead, if the court should deem it proper, to authorize them to do so.

In Went v. Methodist Protestant Church, 80 Hun, 266, 30 N. Y. Supp. 157, Affirmed in 150

N. Y. 577, 44 N. E. 1129, it was held that every owner of a cemetery lot must be deemed to have purchased and to hold it for the sole purpose of using it as a place of burial, and was bound to know at his peril that it might become offensive by the residence of many people in its vicinity, and that its use must yield to laws for the suppression of nuisances. That every cemetery within or near large cities must give way to the advance of population; that interments must ultimately cease, and the remains of the dead that are capable of removal must be reinterred in new grounds; and that every lot owner holds his title subject to that contingency; and no condition or covenants contained in deeds appropriating the lands to particular uses can prevent the legislature from declaring such use unlawful, and compelling the removal of all bodies from the grounds.

The last case evidently sustains the position taken by the former supreme court in Brick Presby. Church v. New York, 5 Cow. 538, and Coates v. New York, 7 Cow. 585, supra, and practically but effectually overrules Re Brick Presby. Church, 3 Edw. Ch. 155, and Windt v. German Reformed Church, 4 Sandf. Ch. 471, supra. P. H. V.

NEW YORK COURT OF APPEALS.

John M. MACK, Appt.,
v.
William J. LATTA et al., Respts.

(178 N. Y. 525.)

Officers of a corporation who secure subscriptions to its stock by fraud are properly joined in an equitable suit against the corporation to enjoin collection of the amount unpaid, and to secure a return of what has been paid upon the subscription.

(Gray, J., dissent.)

(June 3, 1904.)

A PPEAL by plaintiff from a judgment of the Appellate Division of the Supreme Court, First Department, affirming a judgment of a Special Term for New York County sustaining a demurrer to the complaint in an action brought to enjoin the collection of the amount unpaid on a stock subscription, and to recover back sums already paid. Reversed.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Messrs. Nicoll, Anable, & Lindsay, for appellant:

The complaint states facts sufficient to constitute a cause of action against each of the respondents.

Where a person assumes to give to another information concerning his pecuniary condition, or that of a third person, for the purpose of inducing action thereupon, he must disclose all the facts within his knowledge relating to the subject; and, if he does not do so, and the suppression gives a false color and meaning to what he has said, there is actionable fraud.

Allen v. Addington, 7 Wend. 10; Ward v. Center, 3 Johns. 271; March v. First Nat. Bank, 4 Hun, 466, Affirmed in 64 N. Y. 645; Viele v. Goess, 49 Barb. 96, Affirmed in 51 N. Y. 624; Newell v. Randall, 32 Minn. 171, 50 Am. Rep. 562, 19 N. W. 972; Mallory v. Leach, 35 Vt. 156, 82 Am. Dec. 625.

Promoters of a company, engaged in obtaining subscriptions, are bound to make to those from whom they solicit subscriptions a full and complete disclosure of all material facts affecting the enterprise.

Brewster v. Hatch, 122 N. Y. 349, 19 Am. St. Rep. 498, 25 N. E. 505; Getty v. Devlin, 54 N. Y. 403; Walker v. Anglo-American Mortg. & T. Co. 72 Hun, 334, 25 N. Y. Supp. 432; Central R. Co. v. Kisch, L. R. 2 H. L. 99; Virginia Land Co. v. Haupt, 90 Va. 533, 44 Am. St. Rep. 939, 19 S. E. 168; Crump v. United States Min. Co. 7 Gratt. 352, 56 Am. Dec. 116.

Statements as to what would ordinarily be matters of opinion, if they are made in bad faith, with intent to deceive, will be treated as statements of fact, and held to be the basis for a claim of fraud.

Simar v. Canaday, 53 N. Y. 298, 13 Am. Rep. 523; People v. Peckens, 153 N. Y. 576, 47 N. E. 883; Weidner v. Phillips, 39 Hun, NOTE.—As to rescission for fraud or misrepresentation in procuring subscription to stock, including the manner of relief, see note to Fear v. Bartlett, 33 L. R. A. 721.

67 L. R. A.

1; White v. Loudon, 90 Hun, 218, 28 N. Y. Supp. 619, 36 N. Y. Supp. 1135; Upton v. Vail, 6 Johns. 181, 5 Am. Dec. 210; Hickey v. Morrell, 102 N. Y. 454, 55 Am. Rep. 824, 7 N. E. 321; Obry v. Miller, 12 N. Y. S. R. 596; Chamberlin v. Fuller, 59 Vt. 247, 9 Atl. 832.

In such an action for rescission it is not necessary for the plaintiff to show definite pecuniary damage.

Harlow v. La Brum, 151 N. Y. 278, 45 N. E. 859; Stewart v. Lester, 49 Hun, 58, 1 N. Y. Supp. 699; Smith v. Countryman, 30 N. Y. 656; Valton v. National Fund Life Assur. Co. 20 N. Y. 32.

An action on the case for deceit will lie, although the person making the false statements derived no benefit from them, and was not in collusion with one who did.

Pasley v. Freeman, 3 T. R. 51; Upton v. Vail, 6 Johns. 181, 5 Am. Dec. 210; Barney v. Dewey, 13 Johns. 224, 7 Am. Dec. 372; Hubbard v. Briggs, 31 N. Y. 518; Hubbell v. Meigs, 50 N. Y. 480, New York Land Improv. Co. v. Chapman, 118 N. Y. 288, 23 N. E. 187.

In those cases where it is sought to recover of directors damages which a person has sustained in consequence of having been induced by their fraud to take shares in their company, the courts of equity exercise a jurisdiction concurrent with that of courts of law.

Thomp. Corp. § 1483; Cook, Corp. 4th ed. § 156; Henderson v. Lacon, L. R. 5 Eq. 249; Ross v. Estates Invest. Co. L. R. 3 Eq. 122; Tyler v. Savage, 143 U. S. 79, 36 L. ed. 82, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 340; Vreeland v. New Jersey Stone Co. 29 N. J. Eq. 188, 651; National Trust Co. v. Gleason, 77 N. Y. 400, 33 Am. Rep. 632; Davis v. Old Colony R. Co. 131 Mass. 258, 41 Am. Rep. 221; Bosher v. Richmond & H. Land Co. 89 Va. 455, 37 Am. St. Rep. 879, 16 S. E. 360; Emery v. Pease, 20 N. Y. 62; Wright v. Wright, 54 N. Y. 437; Porous Plaster Co. v. Scabury, 43 Hun, 611; Wetmore v. Porter, 92 N. Y. 76; Mitchell v. Thorne, 134 N. Y. 536, 30 Am. St. Rep. 699, 32 N. E. 10; Phillips v. Wortendyke, 31 Hun, 192; Hedden v. Griffin, 136 Mass. 229, 49 Am. Rep. 25.

Where one has been induced to contract to buy corporate stock and pay part of the price upon the strength of false statements by a corporate agent, the latter may be joined with the company in an equity action for rescission, and decreed to refund the money so paid.

Cook, Corp. 4th ed. § 156; Tyler v. Savage, 143 U. S. 98, 36 L. ed. 90, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 340; Bosher v. Richmond & H. Land Co. 89 Va. 462, 37 Am. St. Rep. 879, 16 S. E. 360; Mahr v. Norwich Union F. Ins. Soc. 67 L. R. A.

127 N. Y. 452, 28 N. E. 391; Derham v. Lee, 87 N. Y. 599; Gray v. Fuller, 17 App. Div. 29, 44 N. Y. Supp. 883; Bradley v. Bradley, 165 N. Y. 183, 58 N. E. 887; Bosworth v. Allen, 168 N. Y. 157, 55 L. R. A. 751, 85 Am. St. Rep. 667, 61 N. E. 163.

Mr. William J. Fanning, for respondent Maloney:

There is no evidence going to show that the stock was not worth what was paid for it.

It is the very essence of the action of fraud and deceit that the same should be accompanied by damage.

Deobold v. Oppermann, 111 N. Y. 531, 2 L. R. A. 644, 20 N. Y. S. R. 81, 7 Am. St. Rep. 760, 19 N. E. 94; Taylor v. Guest, 58 N. Y. 266.

The complaint fails to allege any damage, or facts from which damage may be presumed.

Seman v. Becar, 15 Misc. 616, 38 N. Y. Supp. 69; Thompson v. Gould, 16 Abb. Pr. N. S. 424; Morton v. Chesley, 16 Misc. 172, 37 N. Y. Supp. 1065.

The complaint, taken as a whole, does not state facts sufficient to constitute a cause of action for deceit against the individual defendants.

Peek v. Gurney, L. R. 6 H. L. 377; Hubbell v. Meigs, 50 N. Y. 487; Gordon v. Butler, 105 U. S. 558, 26 L. ed. 1169; Dawe v. Morris, 149 Mass. 188, 4 L. R. A. 158, 14 Am. St. Rep. 404, 21 N. E. 313.

Assuming that the complaint sets forth but one cause of action, plaintiff has attempted to blend therein two inconsistent remedies, one being in disaffirmance, and the other in affirmation, of the contract.

Yeamans v. Bell, 151 N. Y. 230, 45 N. E. 552; Roome v. Jennings, 2 Misc. 257, 21 N. Y. Supp. 938; Bowen v. Mandeville, 95 N. Y. 237; Vail v. Reynolds, 118 N. Y. 297, 23 N. E. 301; Teall v. Syracuse, 32 Hun, 332; Hubbell v. Meigs, 50 N. Y. 487; Wiles v. Suydam, 64 N. Y. 175; Seymour v. Lorrillard, 8 N. Y. Civ. Proc. Rep. 90; Perkins v. Slocum, 82 Hun, 366, 31 N. Y. Supp. 474; Stanton v. Missouri P. R. Co. 15 N. Y. Civ. Proc. Rep. 296, 2 N. Y. Supp. 298; O'Brien v. Fitzgerald, 143 N. Y. 377, 38 N. E. 371; Bosley v. National Mach. Co. 123 N. Y. 550, 25 N. E. 990.

Messrs. Butler, Notman, Joline, & Mynderse, for respondent Latta:

The causes of action alleged are inconsistent. A cause of action for a rescission of the contract and recovery of the amount paid is based upon a disaffirmance of the transaction. A cause of action for the recovery of damages for fraud or deceit in inducing the making of a contract proceeds upon an affirmation of the contract. In the one case the plaintiff must offer to restore what he has received; in the other case he retains what he receives, and recovers his damages.

Yeomans v. Bell, 151 N. Y. 230, 45 N. E. 552.

The two causes of action do not affect all the parties to the action.

Stanton v. Missouri P. R. Co. 15 N. Y. Civ. Proc. Rep. 296, 2 N. Y. Supp. 298; Church v. Stanton, 9 N. Y. S. R. 121; Nichols v. Drew, 94 N. Y. 22; Compton v. Hughes, 38 Hun, 377; Paulsen v. Van Steenberg, 65 How. Pr. 342; House v. Cooper, 30 Barb. 157; Adams v. Stevens, 7 Misc. 468, 27 N. Y. Supp. 993; McKenzie v. Hatton, 9 Misc. 16, 29 N. Y. Supp. 18; Olin v. Arendt, 35 App. Div. 529, 54 N. Y. Supp. 820; Goldmark v. Magnolia Anti Friction Metal Co. 30 App. Div. 580, 52 N. Y. Supp. 446; Hess v. Buffalo & N. F. R. Co. 29 Barb. 391; Kelly v. Newman, 62 How. Pr. 156; Pracht v. Ritter, 16 Jones & S. 509; Gray v. Rothschild, 112 N. Y. 668, 19 N. E. 847; Day v. Bank of State, 9 N. Y. Civ. Proc. Rep. 51.

Mr. Arthur H. Van Brunt also for respondent Latta.

Parker, Ch. J., delivered the opinion of the court:

Plaintiff, upon misrepresentations made to him by the two individual defendants,—one the president of defendant corporation, and the other a director and member of the executive committee, and who were the chief promoters of the corporation,—was induced to subscribe for $500,000 worth of stock. Twenty per cent ($100,000) was called for by the corporation and paid by plaintiff before he became aware that the representations made to him were untrue. As soon as the discovery was made, he brought this action on the equity side of the court against the corporation and the two officials who made the misrepresentations. He seeks to have the subscription adjudged void and canceled; to have defendants perpetually enjoined from asserting the validity of the agreement, and from bringing or maintaining any action at law or in equity based thereon; and to have judgment against the individual defendants, as well as against the corporation, for the $100,000 paid, with interest. Defendants separately demur to the complaint, and the question presented is whether an action can be maintained in equity against the individual defendants who made the misrepresentations, as well as the corporation receiving the money.

Our attention has not been called to any precedent in this state for such an action where the right to maintain it was challenged either by demurrer or suitable objection at the trial.

Bosley v. National Mach. Co. 123 N. Y. 550, 25 N. E. 990, was an action in equity against a corporation and its president, House, to obtain rescission of a contract of subscription for stock, for an accounting, and for payment to her of the balance found due. Plaintiff had judgment at special term rescinding the contract, and awarding her a judgment against both defendants for the amount found due. That judgment was affirmed in the general term and this court, where it was for the first time insisted that there was no equitable cause of action against defendant House, and that the only relief to which plaintiff was entitled against him was a money judgment. The court says (p. 557, 123 N. Y., p. 992, 25 N. E.): "We are inclined to believe that this claim is well founded, but the defendant House cannot avail himself of it here, as there is no exception in the record upon which he can base such a claim." That case, however, is authority for the maintenance of this action against defendant corporation, and accords with the opinion of the appellate division in this case, which holds, upon reasoning which we entirely approve, that the complaint states a good cause of action against defendant corporation for a rescission of the contract, and for judgment against it canceling the subscription, and awarding to plaintiff $100,000 paid by him, with interest. That court was of the opinion, however, that the individual defendants were improperly joined in the action, and the intimation in Bosley's Case, 123 N. Y. 550, 25 N. E. 990, is in the same direction. And the investigation of counsel and our own research have not brought to our attention a case in this state holding otherwise. Indeed, there seems to be no decision bearing directly upon the question, one way or the other. It is therefore an open question for consideration in this court.

As we have seen, the action will lie as brought against defendant corporation, and our inquiry must be whether equity should bring in the individual defendants whose misrepresentations have compelled plaintiff to bring the suit in order to relieve himself of a further payment of $400,000, and to recover the $100,000 already paid. The demurrer of the individual defendants requires us to assume that the facts alleged in the complaint are true, and thus we are advised that the statements made by them to plaintiff were of such a character as to entitle him to have his subscription canceled on the ground of fraud. That being so, it is clear that, upon the facts stated in the complaint, plaintiff would be entitled to judgment against the individual defendants in an action at law for damages for their fraud. It is true, defendant corporation received the $100,000, and not the individual defendants, but they could not escape in an action at law a judgment for such damages as plaintiff sustained, for it is well settled in this state that recovery may be had of a party in such a case, although he received no benefit from the transaction. Hubbard v. Briggs, 31 N. Y. 518; Hubbell v. Meigs, 50 N. Y. 480; Schwenk v. Naylor, 102 N. Y. 683, 7 N. E. 788; New York Land Improv. Co. v. Chapman, 118 N. Y. 288, 23 N. E. 187. And it is held in Massachusetts that upon a rescission of a contract the aggrieved party may recover as his damage, from the agent making the misrepresentations inducing the contract, the money paid the principal, which in that case was a corporation. The court says in part: "We are of opinion that, under these circumstances, he has a right to recover damages of the defendant to an amount which will put him in the same position as if the fraud had not been practised on him. As a consequence of the fraud, he has paid out a sum of money as a premium for which he has got nothing. We think he is entitled to recover it of the defendant. The contention of the defendant that the cancelation of the policy was the cause of the loss of the premium paid seems to us to be a refinement which leads to unjust results. . . . To hold as the defendant claims would be to deprive the plaintiff of his right of election for the benefit of the defendant." Hedden v. Griffin, 136 Mass. 229, 232, 49 Am. Rep. 25. So, if plaintiff had brought this action against the corporation alone, and obtained a judgment canceling the contract and awarding him the $100,000 advanced, with interest, and he should have failed to collect from the corporation by reason of its lack of assets, he could undoubtedly have collected the balance unpaid in an action at law against the officers whose fraudulent representations had induced the contract. That being so, it is clear that a multiplicity of actions would be avoided, and a greater certainty of collection would result in an action such as this, where, all the parties being before the court,—those guilty of the fraud as well as the direct beneficiary of the fraud,—the court could enjoin actions by the corporation for the balance of the subscription, cancel the subscription, and give plaintiff judgment against all the defendants for the amount paid, directing collection so far as possible out of the corporation; the balance, if any, to be collected from the individual defendants. Such a decree would likely secure the co-operation of defendant officers towards efforts on the part of the corporation to satisfy the judgment in order to reduce as far as possible the sums they would be personally obliged to pay. And such effort on their part it is but just that an unfortunately defrauded plaintiff should have. Again, it would more promptly, if not more certainly, restore to the party injured his own, for recovery would necessarily be much delayed by procedure requiring him to exhaust his remedy against the corporation before bringing action against the persons actually guilty of the fraud. It is a favorite object of equity to prevent multiplicity of suits. And the question presented to a court of equity when that doctrine is invoked is "whether there is a sufficient common bond among the body of similarly situated persons on the one side of the controversy to authorize the court to interfere and give complete relief to them or against them all in one proceeding, and thus avoid a multiplicity of suits." 1 Pom. Eq. Jur. § 257, note. Under this head, Chancellor Kent says in Brinkerhoff v. Brown, 6 Johns. Ch. 139, 157: "A bill against several persons must relate to matters of the same nature, and having a connection with each other, and in which all the defendants are more or less concerned, though their rights in respect to the general subject of the case may be distinct." Pomeroy says (1 Pom. Eq. Jur. § 180): "The fact that there is a legal remedy is not the criterion. That legal remedy, both in respect to its final relief and its modes of obtaining the relief, must be as efficient as the remedy which equity would confer under the same circumstances, or else the concurrent jurisdiction attaches." It must be obvious that the relief afforded by a suit such as plaintiff has brought would be more prompt, and therefore more efficient, to right the wrong done to a plaintiff by a corporation and its officers and agents, as in this case.

This subject has received consideration in 1 Cook on Corporations, 4th ed. § 156, where the author says: "The complainant in a bill in equity to set aside a subscription obtained by fraud cannot sue in behalf of himself and others who may wish to come in. But several subscribers, defrauded in the same way, may join in the bill as cocomplainants. Fraudulent intent need not be proved. Scierter is not the essence of the action. . . . The corporation is to be a defendant, and, if merely a cancelation of the subscription and an injunction against suits at law are sought, the corporation, it seems, may be the sole defendant. A court of equity in these actions will give complete relief by decreeing that the directors guilty of the fraud shall refund to the subscriber payments made by him before discovering the fraud. This relief dispenses with an action at law for damages for deceit, and, when sought for in the bill in equity, the guilty directors must be made parties." In

2 Thompson on Corporations, § 1483, it is said: "It is clear upon authority that, in those cases where it is sought to recover of directors damages which a person has sustained in consequence of having been induced by their fraud to take shares in their company, the courts of equity exercise a jurisdiction concurrent with that of the courts of law. Hence the fact that a person defrauded in this manner has a remedy at law does not oust the jurisdiction of equity to afford him relief." And in § 1484 the same author says: "The only advantage of going into equity with such a suit seems to be to obtain a more ample remedy. In an action at law for deceit the plaintiff can only recover the damages he has suffered, but in equity he may claim (1) a cancellation of his subscription; (2) a decree against the directors jointly and severally for the repayment to him of all the moneys paid for the shares; and (3) an injunction against future calls. To such a suit, of course, the corporation is a party." In England the court of equity has applied the rule stated by both Cook and Thompson in a number of cases. Henderson v. Lucon, L. R. 5 Eq. 249, is an action in equity against a corporation and five of its directors to cancel for fraud a subscription to its stock, and secure the return of £100 paid upon it. The court says (p. 261): "Any representations made by the agents of a company which form the foundation of a contract between that company and a third person—those misrepresentations lying at the root of the contract—will entitle the other party to avoid the contract, and the company must in that sense take upon themselves the consequences of the misrepresentations of their agents. The contract must be annulled. The position of the agents themselves, who make the misrepresentations, is different. . . . If you are to make them personally liable for the consequences of their misrepresentations, not they, but the party for whom they contracted, pocketing the proceeds,—as in this instance the company, for whom the directors may be taken to be acting as agents,—you must fix them also with a guilty knowledge of the misrepresentation which is communicated to the person who is to be led into the contract." The court, after examining the facts, and reaching the conclusion that such knowledge existed on the part of the directors, says further (p. 262): "The plaintiff is therefore entitled to a decree for the repayment of the £100 from the directors personally. Further than that, he is entitled to an injunction restraining the continuance of the proceedings at law. He is also entitled to a declaration that the company, being now in liquidation, are bound to repay to him this £100, and to an injunction restraining them from proceeding on the judgment, and also from proceeding against him in respect of any further calls." In Ross v. Estates Invest. Co. L. R. 3 Eq. 122, plaintiff filed a bill to set aside an allotment of shares to him on the ground of fraudulent misrepresentations contained in the prospectus. The court holds that there had been such an amount of misrepresentation by the directors and other authorized agents, for whose statements—having adopted and had the benefit of them—they were responsible, that any contract to take shares entered into on the faith of the prospectus must be set aside. The mandate of the decree in that case is (p. 139): "Direct the defendants to repay the deposit of £10 paid by plaintiff for the shares, and defendants, the directors, to cause the plaintiff's name to be removed from the register." An injunction against suits on the subscription is also granted, and it is directed that all the defendants pay the costs. Kent v. Freehold Land & Brickmaking Co. L. R. 4 Eq. 588, was a suit against the corporation, certain directors, and a promoter to cancel a subscription for stock, and recover back moneys already paid thereon. The court, after reaching the conclusion that plaintiff's subscription was induced through fraudulent representations says (p. 601): "The plaintiff seeks relief against them all, and against them all he is entitled to relief, for Spargo, though not a director, concurred in the acts of the directors. The decree will be that the plaintiff's name be removed from the list of shareholders; for an account of what moneys have been paid by him to the company, and of what sums he has received, with interest on both sides, at 5 per cent; then that the balance be paid to the plaintiff, and that the defendants pay the costs of the suit, with an injunction to stay the action." These authorities were cited with approval in Vreeland v. New Jersey Stone Co. 29 N. J. Eq. 188, 195. The vice chancellor says: "These cases, in my opinion, declare the correct rule. All who get gain by fraud must bear the legal consequences of the wrong they do." That was a suit to set aside complainant's contract to take 100 shares of the stock of the corporation, and to recover the amount paid under it, on the ground that it was induced by wilful misrepresentation. It appeared that the defendants constituted the whole proprietorship of the corporation, so that, while the payment was to the corporation, they necessarily received the entire benefit of it; but the principle applied is not different on that account, and the court rested its entire argument on the English cases cited supra, and the doctrine therein asserted. That case was subsequently unanimously affirmed, without opinion by the court of errors and appeals. 29 N. J. Eq. 651.

Bosher v. Richmond & H. Land Co. 89 Va. 455, 37 Am. St. Rep. 879, 16 S. E. 360, is a suit in equity against a corporation and certain promoters to rescind for fraud a subscription contract, and obtain repayment of the sums paid under it. The principal point discussed is whether several stockholders jointly defrauded may join in such an action. The court says (p. 462, 89 Va., 884, 7 Am. St. Rep. p. 362, 16 S. E.): "A court of equity in these actions will give complete relief by decreeing that the directors guilty of the fraud shall refund to the subscriber payments made by him before discovery of the fraud. This relief dispenses with an action at law for damages for deceit, and, when sought for in a bill in equity, the guilty directors must be made parties, and the bill is not multifarious by reason of its blending prayers for these various kinds of relief."

In Tyler v. Savage, 143 U. S. 79, 36 L. ed. 82, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 340, suit is brought by a creditor of a Virginia corporation, in behalf of herself and other creditors, against the company, its president, Tyler, and certain directors and other persons. Plaintiff's claim is based upon a payment of $10,000 for stock of the company, induced by alleged fraudulent misstatements by Tyler. The bill alleged that Tyler personally, as well as the company, was liable to repay the $10,000. The decree stated "that the defendant John Tyler, individually, and the remaining assets of the Virginia Oil Company, are liable to the plaintiff, Sarah C. Savage, for the sum of $10,000 paid by her into the treasury of the company at the instance of the said John Tyler." P. 90, 143 U. S., p. 88, 36 L. ed., and p. 344, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. The Supreme Court affirming the decree, says (pp. 97, 98, 143 U. S. pp. 89, 90, 36 L. ed., and pp. 345, 346, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep.): "The averment of the bill that the $10,000 was justly due to the plaintiff by Tyler and the company, because that sum was unlawfully obtained from her by misrepresentations of the affairs of the company by Tyler, who was its president and duly authorized agent, and because that sum went into the treasury of, and was expended by, the company, is a distinct allegation that the $10,000 was justly due to her by Tyler. . . . The relief against Tyler was properly granted under the prayer of the bill for general relief. It was consonant with the facts set out in the bill as a ground of relief against Tyler personally, and it was relief agreeable to the case made by the bill."

These decisions seem to us so well grounded in reason as to justify a court of equity, invoked to cancel a subscription for stock on the ground of fraud, and enjoin further calls for payment and the prosecution of actions thereon, in bringing in the officers and agents of the corporation who were personally guilty of making the misrepresentations constituting the fraud, so that plaintiff may have complete relief in one action against both the corporation and the persons guilty of the fraud.

The judgments of the Appellate Division and of the Special Term should be reversed, and defendants permitted to answer within twenty days, on payment of the costs in all courts.

Bartlett, Martin, Vann, Cullen, and Werner, JJ., concur. Gray, J., dissents.

PEOPLE of the State of New York, Respt.,
v.

George E. MILLS, Appt.

(178 N. Y. 274.)

1. A district attorney, even when acting by permission of a judge of the court, has no authority to consent to the removal of indictments from the court records, so as to relieve one who removes them with his consent with intent to destroy them from liability to prosecution under the provisions of the statute which make their wilful and unlawful removal criminal, and their unlawful appropriation grand larceny.
2. Taking up court records from the place where they have been laid, and walking away with them with intent to destroy them, are overt acts which render one guilty under a statute making the unlawful removal of such records a crime, although they were taken from a place where they had been placed by authority of the district attorney for the purpose of detecting defendant in the commission of the crime.
3. One who proposes a scheme, and puts in motion the forces by which court records are removed from the files for the purpose of destroying them, is guilty as principal throughout the transaction, although the papers are actually removed by the district attorney under permission of a judge of the court, and placed in the custody of a public officer for delivery to the one who wishes them.

(O'Brien and Bartlett, JJ., dissent.)

(April 26, 1904.)

NOTE.—For effect of instigation or consent to crime when given for purpose of discovering criminals as defense to prosecution, see also, in this series, Connor v. People, 25 L. R. A. 341, and note; Com. v. Hollister, 25 L. R. A. 349; Love v. People, 32 L. R. A. 139; People v. Gillman, 46 L. R. A. 218; and State v. Abley, 46 L. R. A. 862.

A PPEAL by defendant from a judgment of the Appellate Division of the Supreme Court, First Department, affirming a judgment of a Trial Term for New York County convicting him of an attempt to destroy court records contrary to the provisions of the statute. Affirmed.

Statement by Vann, J.:

The indictment against the defendant contains two counts, each charging an attempt to violate a distinct section of the Penal Code; the first being founded on § 94, and the second on § 531. The facts appearing on the trial, as well stated by the appellate division, are as follows:

Richard C. Flower was a physician, and was also engaged in promoting certain mining interests. In connection with such enterprise he was indicted under six different indictments for alleged larcenies, and was also suspected of being implicated in the suspicious death of one Hagaman, which case the district attorney was investigating shortly prior to the offenses charged in the present indictment. Francis P. Garvan, an assistant district attorney of the county of New York, had special charge of the prosecution of the indictments against Flower, and also of the investigation of the death of Hagaman. The defendant was a lawyer, engaged in the practice of his profession in the city of New York, with a son of Richard C. Flower, and he was also interested in various mining companies in connection with Dr. Flower and Andrew D. Meloy and others at the time when the indictments were found against Flower, and when he was being otherwise investigated, and he took a very lively interest in Dr. Flower's behalf.

It appeared from the testimony of Meloy: That he was president and a member of the board of directors of the Lone Pine Mining Company, of which board the defendant was a member. That on Saturday, March 28, 1903, at a directors' meeting of this mining company, the defendant called attention to the prosecution against Dr. Flower, and stated that it was having a bad effect upon the company. That he thought Garvan was persecuting Flower. That the ends of justice were not being promoted, and he expressed a wish that the directors should pass some resolution asking Garvan or the district attorney's office to discontinue the attack upon Flower. Such resolution, however, was neither adopted nor offered. On the next day Meloy testified that he received a telephone message from the defendant, asking him to meet him on Riverside drive, about Eighty-fifth or Eighty-sixth streets. That he met him there alone; had a conversation with him, in which he spoke of Flower's increasing difficulties, about his counsel, what they had done, and what his anxieties and fears were. He discussed Garvan and the latter's attitude to the case, and asked Meloy if he would not make an engagement with Garvan so that the defendant could see and have a talk with him, and see if the prosecutions could not be stopped; and there was some conversation about the money which had been paid for counsel, and that, if it were given to Garvan, it would accomplish greater results. The defendant finally said: "I will not give Hart any money, or any lawyer. . . . I know the head of this thing, and I am going to give what money I give to Garvan. . . . What I want to do is to get in contact with Garvan, and I want you to do it for me." . . . When he said he wanted to get in contact, I asked him if he knew what he was doing,—what he was about. He said he thought he did. Then I said the same general remark,—"Be careful." At the end of the conversation I left Mr. Mills, and stated I would see Mr. Garvan the next day, and make an engagement." Meloy further testified that he asked the defendant why he did not get in touch with Garvan himself, and in reply the defendant stated, in substance, "that if he came himself, Mr. Garvan would be afraid, but that you could arrange it for him." Meloy then parted from the defendant with the understanding that he was to see Garvan, and make an appointment for him the next day. Meloy, however, took an entirely different course. The next day he consulted with his own counsel, telling him what had occurred. Thereupon his counsel and himself interviewed Garvan over the telephone, with the result that the three had a meeting in the afternoon, and the whole matter of the conversation was stated to Garvan, after which Mr. Jerome, the district attorney, was brought into the conference, and informed of what had taken place. Jerome testified that on the next day after the conference he communicated with Detective Sergeant Brindley, and gave him directions concerning the case, as a result of which he was to put himself into communication with the defendant for the purpose of detecting him in the commission of any crime which he might commit or attempt to commit. Meloy had no communication with Brindley, but the latter called him up on the telephone for the purpose of making arrangements by which he could meet the defendant. Meloy then saw the defendant, and informed him that he had seen Garvan and made arrangements for him to meet Garvan's wardman, Brindley. The defendant demurred to this, stating that he wanted to meet Garvan. Meloy told him that Garvan would not do business with him directly, but that he would have to do it with Brindley, and thereupon the defendant consented to see him; and Meloy, in the defendant's presence, called up Brindley by telephone at the district attorney's office, and told him that the defendant would meet him. As a result of this, the defendant and Brindley met in the afternoon in Haan's restaurant, No. 11 Park Row, in the city of New York. After identifying each other, they went into one of the booths, when Mills stated that he had been instructed by Dr. Flower to have an interview with Garvan about the disposition of the charges against Flower. Brindley informed him that it was impossible for him to see Garvan, and defendant said: "Well, Dr. Flower is anxious for me to talk to Garvan, and I do not see why he does not want to talk to me just as lawyer to lawyer. That would be all right." And when informed that this was impossible, he said: "Well, if you can assure me that you will fulfil any contract or proposition that I make to you I am willing to talk with you." After some further conversation defendant stated: "That Dr. Flower was a fool to have let the matter go as far as it did, as the opportunity was presented to him when Mr. Garvan had him in his office for examination in the Hagaman matter; that this was his time for to make a settlement, instead of fighting it out; and that now he has engaged high-priced counsel, who would drag the case out so as to justify a large fee. . . . He would go to the fountain head and settle the case. I asked him then, 'Well, what is it you want us to do?' He says, 'Well, these indictments that have been found against Dr. Flower, you can withdraw them and misplace them, lose them, or dispose of them in some way, or Mr. Garvan could go into court, and permit him to go into court on a demurrer, and have the indictments quashed.' I told him that I would see Mr. Garvan, and submit this to him, and let him know. He then said, 'Well, Mr. Garvan ought to be satisfied with this. The matter is not worth as much money now as it would have been to us if it had been disposed of before indictment and all of this publicity. Dr. Flower's business has suffered very much from this, and, of course, it is not worth the money it would have been before the publicity.' He said that as to the Hagaman matter 'Mr. Garvan could say that, after thorough examination of witnesses, and the autopsy, and the examination of the report of the physician and chemist, he had come to the conclusion that the death of Mr. Hagaman was caused by natural causes, and that this would relieve both Dr. Flower and his client, Mrs. Hagaman,—that is, Mills's client,—of this notoriety.' . . .

He said he would have to see Dr. Flower so as to make the arrangements for the money; that Dr. Flower is an old bird at this game; has had twenty years' experience, and would be very particular about arranging these matters." After arranging that the defendant should be known thereafter as McChesney, the parties separated. This conversation was repeated by Brindley to Jerome, and thereupon Jerome applied to "a judge of" the court having the custody of the indictments, explaining how he desired to use them, without, however, mentioning any name, and the "judge" permitted them to be taken from the files of the office, and Jerome delivered them to Brindley. In the afternoon of the next day the defendant telephoned Brindley at the district attorney's office that everything was all right; that he had seen Dr. Flower, and "that it would be a go." At 12 o'clock of that day Brindley and the defendant again met at Haan's restaurant, when the defendant asked, "'As to those indictments, what have you done?' I says, 'Well, pursuant to your suggestion of yesterday about these indictments, I have inquired as to what effect it would have, and find that there are copies in the district attorney's office of these indictments.' He says: 'Yes, that is right. By taking these indictments—the originals—the copies could be made demurrable, and Mr. Garvan could go into court, and with all apparent good faith fight our motion to demur on those indictments, and, of course, the judge would decide against him.' He says, 'But how do we know as to your good faith in those other matters that may come up in the future?' 'Well,' I says, 'You would have possession of the indictments then, and that would be evidence of good faith on our part.' He says, 'Yes, but I do not want those indictments. I will take them from you,—buy them,—and would go somewheres with you and destroy them.' I says, 'Well, I have withdrawn those indictments, have given no reason why I did, and have them with me;' and I showed them to him. He took them and examined them. After carefully examining them, he says, 'Well, there are only five indictments here, and there has been no indictment on the bribery charge. That makes that the easier to dispose of: one prisoner already having been discharged, it would be an easy matter for Mr. Garvan to have the other one discharged.' He said, 'I will have to see Dr. Flower to get the money, and will try to find him by 5 o'clock this afternoon.' I said, 'Well, that would be after banking hours, and would be rather late,' and he says, 'Well, I will have to try to find him somewheres.' I then said 'Well, what amount did you want to pay for this service?' He says, 'Well, $1,500.' I says I thought that was rather cheap. He said, 'Well, I will make it $2,000 in this way: $1,500 to be paid to Mr. Garvan and $500 you and I will divide.' Brindley consented to this, and after some further conversation the parties separated, agreeing to meet again later in the afternoon. Subsequently the defendant called Brindley over the telephone, stating that he could not make the arrangements for that day; would have to postpone it to the next. Brindley replied that it was a risky thing for him to keep the indictments out of the court of general sessions. "He said: 'Well, under no conditions put them back. Keep them out. It will be all right. You can make any excuse. Say you cannot find them, but keep them out, anyway.'" The parties had prior to this time agreed to refer to the indictments as "subpoenas," and the money as "additional evidence." A meeting was arranged for next day, at which time Brindley posted in Haan's restaurant other officers and persons to observe what transpired between him and the defendant. He met the defendant shortly after 1 o'clock at Haan's rathskeller, and after considerable conversation with respect to the Hagaman matter, and what might occur in the future with respect to complaints against Dr. Flower, defendant said: "I have the money here, and we can do more business in the future." He put his hand in his inside pocket, and withdrew an envelope,—this one (indicating),—and passed it to me and said: 'Just count it. There is $1,500.' The envelope was open when he handed it to me. I took it from him,—from his hand. I looked into it. It had fifteen $100 bills in it. I counted them. They are there now." The envelope and money were then received in evidence. Defendant then said: "This is for Mr. Garvan. Give this to Mr. Garvan. You and Mr. Garvan can settle for this $1,500." He said, "Look out; be careful." Thereupon the defendant called attention to certain persons who were observing them, and Brindley told him they were all "grafters." He then gave to Brindley $250 more, and said, "The other $250 I have in my pocket." Brindley then produced the indictments, which the defendant examined, and finally suggested, as they were being watched, that they go upstairs. He picked up the indictments, placed them in his outside pocket, walked to the stairway leading to the café upstairs, when Brindley placed him under arrest. He was searched in the presence of other persons in the café, the indictments were found upon him, and he was taken to the station house. The defendant admitted that the indictments were found upon his person at the time of his arrest, and he did not deny but that he had meetings with Brindley, as testified to by the latter, or but that the money which was produced in court and introduced into evidence was given by him to Brindley at the place and time that the testimony established. The defendant's claim in answer thereto was that he and Brindley were engaged in buying up claims against Dr. Flower, and that in all the negotiations which he had with Brindley he was acting as the representative of Flower against creditors and their attorney, Mr. Hart, from whom he was to receive releases to be delivered to him by Brindley; but he admits that Brindley produced the indictments; told him what they were; that he looked at them, and subsequently put them in his pocket at the request of Brindley.

The jury found the defendant guilty upon both counts, and he was sentenced accordingly. Upon appeal to the appellate division the judgment was affirmed, one of the justices dissenting, and the defendant thereupon came to this court.

Messrs. John R. Dos Passos, Benjamin Steinhardt, and Edmund F. Harding, with Messrs. Howe & Hummel, for appellant:

The defendant, under the evidence disclosed, committed no indictable crime.

A crime is an act committed or omitted in violation of some public law, either commanding or forbidding it.

There are, in every criminal act, generally three distinct actors, viz., the people, the accused, and the person against whom the wrong is committed.

4 Sharswood's Bl. Com. 1869, p. 333.

In the present case there is an absolute want of all of the necessary requisites to constitute a crime. There is no complainant or third person against whom the injury was inflicted.

There could be no crime committed by the defendant in accepting the indictments, because it was with the full consent of the state. Volenti non fit injuria.

Beccaria, Crimes & Punishments, 1785, ed. p. 7.

Where the facts show that the entrapping plan is originated by one who apparently becomes the victim, or his agent, and the design is suggested to the accused and merely adopted by him, he cannot be convicted.

Connor v. People, 18 Colo. 373, 25 L. R. A. 341, 36 Am. St. Rep. 295, 33 Pac. 159; O'Brien v. State, 6 Tex. App. 665; Com. v. Bickings, 12 Pa. Dist. R. 206.

Where the facts show that the design originates with the accused, but is not coupled with the necessary act to complete the crime, that act being committed by the apparent victim, or his agent, the defendant cannot be convicted.

State v. Hayes, 105 Mo. 76, 24 Am. St. Rep. 360, 16 S. W. 514; People v. Collins, 53 Cal. 185; State v. Stickney, 53 Kan. 308, 42 Am. St. Rep. 284, 36 Pac. 914; Com. v. Bickings, 12 Pa. Dist. R. 206; State v. Hull, 33 Or. 56, 72 Am. St. Rep. 694, 54 Pac. 159; Williams v. State, 55 Ga. 391; People v. McCord, 76 Mich. 200, 42 N. W. 1106; Speiden v. State, 3 Tex. App. 156, 30 Am. Dec. 126; Love v. People, 160 Ill. 501, 32 L. R. A. 139, 43 N. E. 710; Saunders v. People, 38 Mich. 218.

The common law (4 Sharswood's Bl. Com. pp. 250 et seq.) and the Penal Code of New York both provide a complete remedy for cases of this kind,—where persons disclose a wish or intention to commit a crime. The remedy is to prevent the person from proceeding further by holding him to good behavior.

There was no evidence to show that defendant was guilty of a violation of §§ 94 and 531 of the Penal Code, under which he was indicted.

There was no trespass committed, no taking which would justify or support the conviction for an attempt to commit larceny in the second degree.

Thorne v. Turck, 94 N. Y. 95, 46 Am. Rep. 126; Zink v. People, 6 Abb. N. C. 413, 77 N. Y. 114, 33 Am. Rep. 589; People v. Nichols, 3 Park. Crim. Rep. 579, 17 N. Y. 114.

Mr. Robert C. Taylor, with Mr. William Travers Jerome, for respondent:

At common law, trespass was an element of larceny; but, in the modifications which the law of larceny has undergone in New York a trespass is no longer necessary.

People v. Laurence, 137 N. Y. 517, 33 N. E. 547.

The defendant's act clearly brought him within the definition of a principal, as declared by § 29 of the Penal Code.

People v. Bliven, 112 N. Y. 91, 8 Am. St. Rep. 701, 19 N. E. 638; People v. Cotto, 131 N. Y. 577, 29 N. E. 1008; People v. Peckens, 153 N. Y. 576, 47 N. E. 883.

A mere "solicitation" to commit a crime is sufficient to justify a conviction for an attempt.

King v. Higgins, 2 East, 5, 6 Revised Rep. 358; People v. Bush, 4 Hill, 135; McDermott v. People, 5 Park. Crim. Rep. 102; Bishop, New Crim. Law, 8th ed. §§ 767, 768.

The defendant received the indictments animo furandi. When he finally took them up from the café table, put them in his pocket, and walked away with them, he effected an asportation in the strictest technical sense of the word.

Reg. v. Laurence, 4 Cox, C. C. 438; Reg. v. Walsh, 1 Moody, C. C. 14; Harrison v. People, 50 N. Y. 518, 10 Am. Rep. 517.

Section 34 defines an attempt as "an act 47 L. R. A.

done with intent to commit a crime, and tending, but failing, to effect its commission."

People v. Moran, 123 N. Y. 254, 10 L. R. A. 109, 20 Am. St. Rep. 732, 25 N. E. 412; People v. Gardner, 144 N. Y. 119, 28 L. R. A. 699, 43 Am. St. Rep. 741, 38 N. E. 1003; People v. Sullivan, 173 N. Y. 122, 63 L. R. A. 353, 93 Am. St. Rep. 582, 65 N. E. 989.

The "trap," so called, cannot be availed of as a defense.

1 Bishop, New Crim. Law, § 257, 8th ed. § 262; Riley v. State, 16 Conn. 47; Forsythe v. State, 6 Ohio, 20; Grimm v. United States, 156 U. S. 604, 39 L. ed. 550, 15 Sup. Ct. Rep. 470; People v. Krivitzky, 168 N. Y. 182, 61 N. E. 175; 8 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, title Criminal Law, p. 295; note of Francis Wharton to Bates v. United States, 10 Fed. 98.

Vann, J., delivered the opinion of the court:

The indictments against Dr. Flower were records or documents filed in a public office under the authority of law. Code Crim. Proc. § 272; Code Civ. Proc. § 866. They were the property of the state, and a wilful and unlawful removal of them constituted a crime under § 94 of the Penal Code. Anyone who unlawfully obtained or appropriated them was guilty of grand larceny in the second degree, according to the provisions of another section of the same statute. Penal Code, § 531. Whoever is guilty of violating either section may be convicted of an attempt to commit the offense specified therein, even if it appears on the trial that the crime was fully consummated, unless the court, in its discretion, discharges the jury, and directs the defendant to be tried for the crime itself, which was not done in the case before us. Code Crim. Proc. §§ 35, 685. The jury found the defendant guilty of an attempt both to remove and to steal the indictments, and after affirmance by the appellate division we are confined in our review to such questions as were raised by exceptions taken during the trial.

In view of the able and exhaustive opinion of the appellate division, the only question we feel called upon to consider is that raised by the challenge of the learned counsel for the appellant in the nature of a demurrer to the evidence. He claims that, even on the assumption that all the evidence for the prosecution is true, still the facts thus proved do not constitute the crime charged in either count of the indictment. His argument is that the object of the district attorney was not to detect, but to create, a crime; and that no crime was committed by the defendant in taking the indictments into his possession, because he took them with the consent of the state as represented by the district attorney. The flaw in this argument is found in the fact that the records were the property of the state, not of the district attorney, and that the latter could not lawfully give them away, or permit them to be taken by the defendant. Purity of intention only could prevent the action of the district attorney from being a crime on his part. This is true also as to the detective, for, if either had in fact intended that the defendant should permanently remove the indictments, and steal, appropriate, or destroy them, he would have come within the statute. Neither of those officers represented the state in placing the records where the defendant could take them, but each was acting as an individual only. Neither had the right or power, as a public officer, to deliver them to the defendant, and, if either had acted with an evil purpose, his act would have been criminal in character. An act done with intent to commit a crime, and tending, but failing, to effect its commission, is an attempt to commit that crime. Penal Code, § 34. Felonious intent alone is not enough, but there must be an overt act shown, in order to establish even an attempt. An overt act is one done to carry out the intention, and it must be such as would naturally effect that result, unless prevented by some extraneous cause. In People v. Bush, 4 Hill, 133, the prisoner solicited one Kinney to burn a barn, and gave him matches for the purpose, and it was held sufficient to warrant a conviction for attempt at arson, although the prisoner did not mean to be present at the commission of the offense, and Kinney did not intend to commit it. The furnishing of the matches was the overt act. If the defendant did anything with intent to steal the papers, which in the ordinary course of events, unless interfered with, would have resulted in the theft thereof, it was an overt act. People v. Sullivan, 173 N. Y. 122, 133, 63 L. R. A. 353, 93 Am. St. Rep. 582, 65 N. E. 989. Taking up the records, putting them in his pocket, and walking away with them was an overt act, because it was done with the intent to remove and appropriate them, and would ordinarily result in carrying that intention into effect. It was a trespass to take the indictments into his possession under the circumstances, for he did it, as the jury found, with the intention of stealing them. It was not necessary that the trespass should be accompanied with violence, as it was enough for him to secure the physical custody of the papers, and have it in his power to take them away and appropriate them, the same as if he had picked them up in the clerk's office. No more force would be required in the case supposed than in the case proved. The touch of a pickpocket is so light that it cannot be felt, yet the force is sufficient to constitute a trespass and an attempt to commit a crime, even if there is nothing in the pocket to steal. People v. Moran, 123 N. Y. 254, 10 L. R. A. 109, 20 Am. St. Rep. 732, 25 N. E. 412. As was said by the court in a late case: "It is now the established law, both in England and in this country, that the crime of attempting to commit larceny may be committed although there was no property to steal, and thus the full crime of larceny could not have been committed." People v. Gardner, 144 N. Y. 119, 125, 28 L. R. A. 699, 43 Am. St. Rep. 741, 38 N. E. 1003, 1004, and cases cited.

Knowing that he had no right to the indictments, and that the officers had no right to let him have them, when the defendant picked them up from the table and put them in his pocket animo furandi, the law presumes that the act was done vi et armis, for the amount of violence is not important. He removed the papers from the control of the real owner, and had them in his own control, so that the state could not have recovered possession without his consent or by forcibly taking them away from him, which was in fact done. The detective could only get them back if he and his assistants were strong enough, unless the defendant voluntarily gave them up. He had the same control of them that he had of his own pocketbook, for both were in his pocket, and neither could be taken from him except by the use of force. Temporary possession, though but for a moment, by one who intends to steal, is enough, and possession "is the having or holding or detention of property in one's power or command." Harrison v. People, 50 N. Y. 518, 10 Am. Rep. 517. As was said by Judge Folger in the case cited, quoting with approval from an old manuscript of a distinguished judge: "If every part of the thing is removed from the space which that part occupied, though the whole thing is not removed from the whole space which the whole thing occupied, the asportation would be sufficient; so, drawing a sword partly out of its scabbard will constitute a complete asportavit." The defendant picked up the papers from the table; he held them in his hand; he put them in his pocket, and was walking away with them when he was arrested. In whose possession were they at that time, if not in his, and how did they get there unless by his unauthorized physical interference with them? The district attorney did not authorize him to take them, for he could not, and the defendant knew that he could not.

Neither the district attorney nor the detective stood for the state of New York in placing them where the defendant could get them, for no court or officer has that power under the law. The statute expressly prohibits a record or document "whereof a transcript duly certified may by law be read in evidence" from being "removed, by virtue of a subpoena duces tecum, from the office in which it is kept, except temporarily, by the clerk having it in custody, to a term or sitting of the court of which he is clerk, or by the officer having it in custody, to a term or sitting of a court or . . . referee held in the city or town where his office is situated." Where it is required at any other place for use as evidence, it may be removed by order of the court "entered in the minutes, specifying that the production of the original, instead of a transcript, is necessary." Code Civ. Proc. § 866. This is the only statute which confers any power on the court in relation to the subject, and clearly it did not authorize the court to allow the district attorney to take the indictments in question for the purpose of giving them away, even temporarily, or permitting them to be taken into possession by one who wanted to steal them. An order made for such a purpose would be void, but no order of the kind was actually made by the court, or "entered in the minutes." The district attorney told one of the judges, out of court, what he wanted of the indictments, and, to use his own words, "that I desired to keep them over night, but I did not want to go to the clerk's office about it, and that I did not want to do it without the consent of some judge, and he was the only judge in the building, and he consented." While such consent gave some moral support to the district attorney, it added not a whit to his legal powers. The Code of Criminal Procedure requires that an indictment "must be filed with the clerk and remain in his office as a public record." § 272. No one is authorized to take it away, except when it is needed as evidence, or in court upon the trial of the accused. We have recently held that a record made for the purpose of identifying a convict, and kept in the office of the superintendent of state prisons, could not be given away or surrendered, even after the person convicted had been acquitted upon a new trial granted through appeal. We declared that the record was beyond the control of the superintendent except for preservation and use, and that even the courts could not compel him to give it up without express authority from the legislature. Molineux v. Collins, 177 N. Y. 395, 398, 65 L. R. A. 104, 69 N. E. 727. If the district attorney had had the indictments in his possession for use in court in prosecuting Dr. Flower, such possession would have been the possession of the state, for it would have been lawful, and in the line of his duty. When, however, he had them in his possession for the purpose of delivering them to the defendant, or letting him take them with intent to carry them away and destroy them, such possession was not that of the state, for the district attorney was not then acting in an authorized or official capacity, although it is conceded that he thought he was. As the defendant "proposed the scheme and put in motion the forces by which the indictments were actually removed from the files of the court and delivered to him," we agree with the appellate division that he was a principal throughout the transaction. Penal Code, § 29; People v. Bliven, 112 N. Y. 79, 8 Am. St. Rep. 701, 19 N. E. 638; People v. Peckens, 153 N. Y. 576, 47 N. E. 883. However, even if he had not instigated the scheme pursuant to which the indictments were removed from the office of the clerk and brought where he could put his hands upon them, still, if he then took them into his possession with intent to steal them, knowing what they were and where they came from, he was guilty of the offense charged. It was unnecessary for him to remove them from the clerk's office, but was sufficient if he took them animo furando from any place, or from any person, either with or without consent.

We shall not review the authorities cited on either side, for that duty has been so thoroughly discharged by the appellate division that we can throw no further light upon the subject. We merely state that an important distinction between this case and those relied upon by the appellant is found in the difference between public and private ownership of the property taken by the accused. In most cases some third person is injured by the crime, and is directly or indirectly the complainant, but in this case the state was, as it must be in all criminal cases, the prosecutor, and it was also the injured party, for its property was the subject of the attempt at larceny. If an individual owner voluntarily delivers his property to one who wishes to steal it, there is no trespass; but when the property of the state is delivered by any one, under any circumstances, to any person for the purpose of having him steal it, and he takes it into his possession with intent to steal it, there is a trespass, and the attempt is a crime. The state did not solicit or persuade or tempt the defendant, any more than it took his money when he handed it over to the detective. Neither did the district attorney, as such, but Mr. Jerome did, acting as an individual, with the best of motives, but without authority of law, and hence his action did not bind the state. While the courts neither adopt nor approve the action of the officers, which they hold was unauthorized, still they should not hesitate to punish the crime actually committed by the defendant. It is their duty to protect the innocent and punish the guilty. We are asked to protect the defendant, not because he is innocent, but because a zealous public officer exceeded his powers, and held out a bait. The court do not look to see who held out the bait, but to see who took it. When it was found that the defendant took into his possession the property of the state with intent to steal it, an offense against public justice was established, and he could not insist as a defense that he would not have committed the crime if he had not been tempted by a public officer whom he thought he had corrupted. He supposed he had bought the assistant district attorney when he handed over the money, but he knew he had not bought the state of New York, and hence that the assistant had no right to give him its property for the purpose of enabling him to steal it.

The judgment of conviction should be affirmed.

Parker, Ch. J., and Haight, Cullen, and Werner, JJ., concur.

O'Brien, J., dissenting:

This case is sui generis. There is no case in this state that I have been able to find that is at all substantially similar. The cases cited in support of this conviction at the bar and in the courts below are well enough in their way, but they do not touch the vital question involved in the case. This will be seen upon an examination of the cases themselves in connection with the views herein expressed. After a careful examination of the record, the first thought that impresses the mind has been admirably expressed by an eminent judge of the highest court in the land in a famous case which has just been decided in that court: "Great cases, like hard cases, make bad law. For great cases are called great, not by reason of their real importance in shaping the law for the future, but because of some question of an immediate, overwhelming interest which appeals to the feeling and distorts the judgment. These immediate interests exercise a kind of hydraulic pressure which makes what previously was clear seem doubtful, and before which even well-settled principles of law will bend." There is in this case, doubtless, something of immediate, overwhelming interest, which distorts the judgment and 67 L. R. A.

leads it away from the real principles that ought to control the decision.

The defendant was indicted and convicted for an attempt to steal six indictments that had been filed by the grand jury against a certain Dr. Flower. He, it seems, was a director and manager of a mining corporation, and, in connection with his transactions concerning the stock of that corporation, he was indicted for stealing certain moneys that it is said he received upon a sale of the stock. The particular facts upon which the indictments rest are of no consequence. It is enough for us to know that they were presented by the grand jury in the usual course, and were on file in the proper office. The defendant is an attorney at law, and was a director in the same corporation, and was a friend of Flower. A man named Meloy was also a director, who had some quarrel or dispute with the defendant and Flower concerning the management of the corporation. He had some dispute or quarrel with the defendant in the corporate meetings, and was really an enemy of the defendant, though he professed to be a friend. The desire for revenge still nestled in his bosom, and that doubtless is a sufficient explanation for his conduct in the transaction which will be presently related. The transaction is a very remarkable one, and, although it appears at length and with considerable detail in the large record before us, it can be compressed into a very brief statement. In stating the case I will aim to give it the coloring which is most unfavorable to the defendant, and will wholly reject his own version of the transaction.

On or about the 29th of March, 1903, the defendant called up Meloy on the telephone, and asked him to meet him at a designated place in New York. This meeting took place, and Meloy testifies that the defendant made at that interview the following statement to him: The defendant said, in substance, that there had been a large amount of money spent for counsel in the Flower case, and that if the money had been given to the district attorney, or one of his deputies, the prosecution would have long since ceased; and the defendant suggested to Meloy that the latter make an engagement for an interview with an assistant district attorney. In other words, the defendant disclosed to Meloy, in plain words, a project to bribe the district attorney, or rather his assistant, to make way with the indictments, or to terminate the prosecution by some proceeding in court upon a demurrer. There can be no doubt whatever that the defendant entertained the design to terminate the prosecution upon these six indictments by bribery. The exact course to be followed was evidently not clear in his mind, and was to await further development. This, of course, was a project that shocks our sense of propriety, and arouses at once a prejudice against the defendant. It is the one thing in this case that distorts the judgment, and is liable to lead courts away from the legal question involved in the case. When the interview was finished, and Meloy and the defendant parted, it was agreed that Meloy was to see the assistant district attorney, and arrange an interview between the latter and the defendant. Here Meloy found his opportunity to get even with the defendant, and in that way settle their old quarrel. Instead of going to see the assistant, as he had led the defendant to believe, he went to his own lawyer, and disclosed to him the conversation and proposal which had been made by the defendant to him. He and his counsel then proceeded to call upon the assistant the same day, and informed him of the conversation that Meloy had had with the defendant. The assistant immediately asked Meloy and his counsel to accompany him to the office of the district attorney, where these four persons had an interview, and then, or perhaps at a subsequent one, a plan was arranged by which the district attorney agreed to obtain from the files of the court the six indictments which were pending against Flower, and to deliver them into the custody of a detective in his office, who would meet the defendant, with the indictments, and obtain from him a proposition for the delivery of them to the defendant upon payment of a certain sum, which the detective would represent would go to the assistant.

Subsequently to the interview which resulted in the foregoing plan, Meloy, acting under the instructions of the district attorney and of his own counsel, had another interview with the defendant, and informed him that it was impossible for the assistant to meet the defendant, but that the assistant had deputed a wardman or detective in the office, in whom he had confidence, to meet the defendant and receive from him his proposition; and it was through Meloy that the defendant and the detective finally connected with each other. When Meloy met the defendant, he concealed from the latter the fact that he had an interview with the district attorney, and that there was a plan on foot to entrap him. Subsequently the detective and the defendant connected with each other over the telephone, and, as a result of that connection, they met at a certain restaurant in the city at about 3 o'clock on the afternoon of the 31st day of March, 1903. In this interview the defendant told the detective that these indictments had been found against

Dr. Flower, and that he could withdraw them and misplace them; and he suggested to the detective, who claimed to represent the district attorney's office, that he could withdraw them, misplace, lose, or dispose of them in some way, or the assistant could go into court or permit him to go into court on a demurrer and have the indictments quashed. All this resulted in a proposition by the detective to procure the indictments and deliver them to the defendant on payment of $1,750. On a subsequent interview at the same place the detective and the defendant met, and the former received the money, produced the indictments, handed them to the defendant, who put them in his pocket, and thereupon the detective and a policeman, who was outside the door, looking on, immediately arrested the defendant, and, of course, the detective took the indictments away from him, and here the heroic farce ended. The rest is judicial history.

It will be seen from this statement that all the defendant did was to disclose to Meloy his corrupt purpose to bribe the district attorney. That, of course, was bad enough, and he could have been arrested after the disclosure under the provisions of the Code for the prevention of crime, and could have been required to give security for his good behavior. Code Crim. Proc. §§ 82-90. It will be seen also that everything else in the transaction which subsequently took place was aided, induced, procured, and consummated by the state itself, acting through its officers and agents.

The six indictments in question were doubtless records within the meaning of the statute. The law requires that such records be filed with the clerk, and remain in his office as public records, not to be shown to any person other than a public officer until the defendant has been arrested. Code Crim. Proc. § 272. But the statute permits them to be removed by order of the court, specifying that the production of the original, instead of the transcript, is necessary. It must be assumed, and in fact it appears, that the district attorney procured the delivery of the indictments to him in compliance with law. No one suggests that he or anyone else purloined or obtained them by any fraud or in any illegal way. Hence he had the lawful possession and custody of the records, and, as authorized agent, voluntarily delivered them to the defendant for a moment, intending all the time to take them back. In other words, the custodian of the papers, as they went into the pocket of the defendant, had a string tied to the package, which enabled him in a moment to resume the actual possession. There was not a moment of time when these records were not surrounded by the legal protection that they would have had if never removed from the proper office. There were two detectives looking on, and constructively, if not actually, they were in the possession of these papers all the time. There never was a time when the defendant had, in any legal sense, any dominion over them, or the opportunity to remove or destroy them. The statute declares that "a person is guilty of grand larceny in the second degree who, under circumstances not amounting to grand larceny in the first degree, . . . steals or unlawfully obtains or appropriates . . . a record of a court or officer, or a writing, instrument, or record kept, filed, or deposited according to law, with, or in keeping of any public office or officer." Penal Code, § 531. It also declares that "an act, done with intent to commit a crime, and tending but failing to effect its commission, is an attempt to commit that crime." Penal Code, § 34. Now, what act is imputable to the defendant, that was done with intent to steal the records? We know that he intended to bribe the district attorney. But the only thing done in the whole transaction by the defendant was to put the records in his pocket for a moment, after having them voluntarily handed to him by the detective, and they were immediately taken away from him. There was no intention on the part of the detective to do anything but to carry out a plan previously formed, to which the defendant was not a party, and under these circumstances there was not, in law, any delivery whatever. The crime charged would have been just as well supported if the defendant had done nothing more than to touch the papers with his little finger. He did nothing except what the state, acting through its officers and agents, wanted him to do,—solicited, persuaded, tempted, and procured him to do,—and I may add that the officers would have been grievously disappointed and chagrined, had the defendant acted otherwise than he did. And if he had refused to touch the papers he would have been just as guilty then of stealing, or of an attempt to steal, as he is now.

The defendant is charged in the indictment with having done something "against the peace of the people of the state of New York and their dignity." How far the peace of the state has been disturbed, or its dignity violated or insulted, will appear from what has already been stated. The state has taken advantage of a man with an evil and corrupt disposition,—a man who was willing to commit a crime,—and through its officers has tempted and procured him to put six indictments in his pocket, and then complains that its peace has been disturbed and its dignity violated. The question 67 L. R. A.

arises here whether this farce constitutes a criminal offense. There is no complainant or third person in this case against whom the injury was inflicted. There is nobody but the state itself and the defendant, and it seems to me that there could be no crime committed by the defendant in accepting the indictments, because it was with the full consent of the state. Volenti non fit injuria. And herein this case differs widely from any other existing precedent. I have said that the state was an aggressive, voluntary actor in this transaction. The state was the owner and custodian of these indictments. It permitted them to be taken from the clerk's office by its laws and its courts, and to be placed in the custody of its prosecuting officer, and in all that he did with these records he represented the state. The state, existing only as an artificial and impalpable being, could not act without agents; and hence the district attorney, for all the purposes of this case, and for the purposes of the administration of criminal justice, is the agent of the state, and his acts are imputable to the state and to the people; and hence the delivery of the indictments to the defendant by authority of the district attorney was an absolute consent on the part of the state to the defendant to receive them. Hence the state, instead of seeking to redress a wrong which had ensued from a violation of the criminal law, evidenced by the defendant's threat to bribe one of its public officers, stooped to conspire to entice a man to commit a crime and become a criminal. The representative of the state took its records, and sought to make their voluntary delivery to the defendant a crime. This court has held that a process server, employed by a railroad company to subpoena witnesses to testify in a pending suit, represented the company, and acted within the scope of his duty and employment, when engaged in an attempt to bribe witnesses to testify falsely in the case; that, although an attempt to suborn witnesses was unlawful, yet the act of the agent bound the principal, and his unlawful act would be imputed to the corporation. Nowack v. Metropolitan Street R. Co. 166 N. Y. 433, 54 L. R. A. 592, 82 Am. St. Rep. 691, 60 N. E. 32. In view of this decision, it is difficult to see upon what ground or for what reason it is asserted in this case that the district attorney's office did not represent the state, and that the acts of the detective, set in motion by the office, cannot be imputed to the state. If the public prosecutor and his detective did not represent the state, they did not represent the law; and, if they did not represent the law, they must as mere private persons have been using records of the criminal courts in eating houses and other public places in order to tempt the unwary.

I have said that there was no precedent in this state to uphold this judgment, and fortunately that is true. There are precedents that justify the state and its officers, when a crime has been committed, to entrap the perpetrator by acts, admissions, or circumstances, or, in other words, to procure evidence to convict a party of a crime with which he is charged. All the cases cited seem to be authorities of that character. I have no comment to make upon them, but I think it may be safely asserted that never before in this state have the courts been called upon to pass on a case where the crime was created by the act, advice, and procurement of the commonwealth. But while it is true that no prosecution like this has ever come before any of the courts of this state, our sister states have not been so fortunate.

The law upon the subject is well discussed in the case of State v. Hayes, 105 Mo. 76, 24 Am. St. Rep. 360, 16 S. W. 514. In that case the accused proposed to another to commit burglary of a storehouse. The other consented, or pretended to consent, but, like Meloy in this case, proceeded to inform the authorities, and then went with the accused to the storehouse, and entered it by raising a window with the assistance of the accused. He handed out a piece of bacon to the accused, who assisted him out of the building. The accused took the bacon, and was arrested while carrying it away; the whole transaction having previously been arranged with the authorities. It was held that the accused could not be convicted of either burglary or larceny.

In State v. Hull, 33 Or. 56, 72 Am. St. Rep. 694, 54 Pac. 159, the accused had been convicted of stealing cattle. It appeared, however, that a person employed by the owner to detect suspected thieves, of which the defendant was one, co-operated, or pretended to co-operate, with them or with the accused in planning and carrying out the larceny and asportation. It was held that it was not larceny, and the conviction was reversed. The case of People v. Collins, 53 Cal. 185, is to the same effect.

The principle at the bottom of all the cases is this, viz., that a person decoyed by others into the doing of some act that otherwise would be a crime is no criminal, in the eye of the law, unless the persons inducing or procuring him to do the act were themselves criminals, intending to commit the crime. Hence the defendant in this case committed no crime unless Meloy and the district attorney themselves intended to and did commit a crime. But that hypothesis is simply absurd.

67 L. R. A.

In State v. Stokney, 53 Kan. 308, 42 Am. St. Rep. 284, 36 Pac. 714, the court said: "If Payne was employed by the owner to open the door and decoy the appellant within the building, and the entrance was with the consent of . . . [the owner], then certainly the appellant cannot be held responsible for a burglarious entry."

In Williams v. State, 55 Ga. 391, the court said: "It is difficult to see how a man may solicit another to commit a crime upon his property, and, when the act to which he was invited has been done, be heard to say that he did not consent to it. In the present case, but for the owner's incitement, through his agent, the accused may have repented of the contemplated wickedness before it had developed into act. It may have stopped at sin, without putting on the body of crime. To stimulate unlawful intentions, with the motive of bringing them to punishable maturity, is a dangerous practice. Much better is it to wait and see if they will not expire. Humanity is weak. Even strong men are sometimes unprepared to cope with temptation and resist encouragement to evil."

In People v. McCord, 76 Mich. 200, 42 N. W. 1106, the court said: "But our duty to public justice and decency requires us to dispose of the other views of the case. In some of its features, it is one of the most disgraceful instances of criminal contrivance to induce a man to commit a crime, in order to get him convicted, that has ever been before us. If the prisoner's statement is believed—and the court, in the latter part of the charge, seems to have assumed it was probable—he was not the active agent in the crime, but guilty of aiding and abetting Flint, and therefore only guilty if Flint was guilty. It would be absurd to hold Flint guilty of burglary. He did what he was expected to do, and had no such intent as would hold him responsible. It may be true that a person does not lose the character of an injured party by merely waiting and watching for expected developments. Possibly,—but we do not care to decide this,—leaving temptation in the way, without further inducement, will not destroy the guilt, in law, of the person tempted, although it is a diabolical business, which, if not punishable, probably ought to be. But it would be a disgrace to the law if a person who had taken active measures to persuade another to enter his premises and take his property can treat the taking as a crime, or qualify any of the acts done by invitation as criminal. What is authorized to be done is no wrong, in law, to the instigator."

In Love v. People, 160 Ill. 501, 32 L. R. A. 139, 43 N. E. 710, the court said: "Acts otherwise criminal, done by a party against property at the instigation and by the encouragement of a detective, who acts in pursuance of a plan previously arranged with the owner of the property, do not constitute a crime. . . . If he could make the criminal, and induce the commission of the crime, and cause the arrest of the actor, or throw around him a web of circumstances that would lead to a conviction, it would redound to the glory of his chief and cause his advancement. With him the end justified the means, and the reputation of the agency to which he belonged and his own advancement were apparently his object. Such means and agents are more dangerous to the welfare of society than are the crimes they were intended to detect and the criminals they were to arrest. . . . Strong men are sometimes unprepared to cope with temptation and resist encouragement to evil when financially embarrassed and impoverished. A contemplated crime may never be developed into a consummated act. To stimulate unlawful intentions for the purpose and with the motive of bringing them to maturity, so the consequent crime may be punished, is a dangerous practice. It is safer law and sounder morals to hold, where one arranges to have a crime committed against his property or himself, and knows that an attempt is to be made to encourage others to commit the act by one acting in concert with such owner, that no crime is thus committed. The owner and his agent may wait passively for the would-be criminal to perpetrate the offense, and each and every part of it for himself, but they must not aid, encourage, or solicit him that they may seek to punish. After a careful consideration of the evidence in this record, and with a deliberative regard for the importance of the question under discussion, we are constrained to hold the evidence does not sustain this conviction. The judgment is reversed, and the defendant is ordered discharged."

In Connor v. People, 18 Colo. 373, 25 L. R. A. 341, 36 Am. St. Rep. 295, 33 Pac. 159, the court said: "In the case under consideration, the only evidence of the inception of the scheme to rob the express company is that of Holliday, who states that it was instigated by his superiors at St. Louis, and by him suggested to the plaintiffs in error. It further appears that before the consummation of the conspiracy the officers of the express company were informed of and consented to the scheme; hence, under the foregoing authorities, the prosecution cannot be sustained. We do not wish to be understood as intimating that the services of a detective cannot be legitimately employed in the discovery of the perpetrators of a crime that has been or is being committed; but we do say that when, in their zeal, or under a mistaken sense of duty, detectives suggest the commission of a crime, and instigate others to take part in its commission, in order to arrest them while in the act, although the purpose may be to capture old offenders, their conduct is not only reprehensible, but criminal, and ought to be rebuked, rather than encouraged by the courts."

In O'Brien v. State, 6 Tex. App. 665, the court said: "Where the officer first suggests his willingness to a person to accept a bribe to release a prisoner in his charge, and thereby originates the criminal intent, and apparently joins the defendant in a criminal act first suggested by the officer, merely to entrap the defendant, the case is not within the spirit of said article 307 of the Criminal Code."

In Com. v. Bickings, 12 Pa. Dist. R. 206, the court said: "The liability of men to fall into crime by consulting their interests and passions is unfortunately great without the stimulus of encouragement. No state, therefore, can safely adopt a policy by which crime is to be artificially propagated. . . . This is virtually the case of a detective who, by promising to perpetrate a crime, lures an innocent man into aiding and abetting it; the object being, not the perpetration of the crime, but the luring of the abettor. Such a proceeding is not a reality, but merely a tragical farce, in which the detective, masquerading as a criminal, captivates the unsophisticated defendant, and then, with mock heroics, denounces him."

These cases, and many others that might be cited, show very clearly the character of the prosecution disclosed by the record, as it is understood and treated in the criminal law. This court, in its indignation at the defendant's project to bribe a public officer, should not lose sight of its own duty and dignity. No court can afford to close its ears against reason, to ignore logic, and to brush aside legal principles, in order to put some miscreant for a few months in jail. We cannot affirm this judgment without adopting and approving all the acts and proceedings which enter into the judgment and form a part of it. I am not disposed to criticise the learned district attorney for doing what he supposed to be his duty. No doubt, he acted honestly. But this court has its own duty and responsibility. If the prosecuting officers of the state can tempt every evil-disposed person into overt criminal acts, and then prosecute them, there is an opportunity, doubtless, to fill the prisons to overflowing. But I think we ought not to approve of that at the expense of destroying fundamental maxims of the law.

We cannot affirm this judgment without holding that fraud does not vitiate every transaction. If it is committed by the state, through its officers, and for the purpose of procuring evil-disposed persons to manifest their corrupt intentions by overt acts, then, according to the judgment in this case, the fraud is not only lawful, but commendable. We cannot hold that the end always justifies the means. We cannot hold that it is more important that one evil-disposed person shall be put in prison than that ninety-nine innocent persons be acquitted. It is not the law yet that in criminal cases, where there is a doubt upon the law or the facts, the people, and not the accused, shall have the benefit of it. It is still law, at least in theory, that a person is to be presumed innocent until shown to be guilty. It seems to me that some or all of these fundamental maxims have been ignored in this case, and nothing has been seen except the evil purpose of the defendant to bribe a public officer. If this defendant is, in law, guilty of attempting to steal the papers that were handed to him by the detective, I have no comment to make upon the conduct of the officers who devised and carried out the plan. It may be that they might be considered public benefactors, as possessing the zeal and the vigor to punish evil intentions. But I am not prepared to make this court a party to the transaction by giving it approval, as it must logically, if this judgment is affirmed.

The argument of the learned court below in support of the conviction rests upon a single proposition, which I quote from the opinion: "Having proposed the scheme and set in motion the forces by which the indictments were actually removed from the files of the court and delivered to him, every act from the inception of the scheme to its final consummation by the delivery of the indictments was the act of the defendant, no matter by whom it was performed, and it constituted him a principal in the transactions." [91 App. Div. 331, 86 N. Y. Supp. 529.] The fallacy of this proposition consists entirely in its application, since everyone will admit that a party who employs or procures another to commit a crime is a principal. Whatever other persons, acting as his agents, do in furtherance of the crime, may be imputed to the one who set the forces in motion. No one questions this rule of law. But did the defendant set the district attorney and his staff in motion? Were they his instruments and agents in the scheme to steal the records? If so, they were criminals worse than the defendant, since they were the sworn officers of the law, and intrusted, for the time being, with the custody and safe-keeping of the records. Were they doing the defendant's work, and engaged in promoting and effectuating his evil purpose to bribe them? If the proposition quoted is correct as applied to this case, it logically follows that they were certainly guilty of all these things. But that is only a distorted view of the facts, since they were not acting for the defendant. They were not his agents in crime, and in no legal and proper sense did they represent the defendant. The whole scheme that was finally consummated in the saloon, when the detective succeeded in getting the records in the defendant's coat pocket for an instant of time, originated with themselves. There was not, and could not have been, any crime whatever, without the active aid, procurement, encouragement, and connivance of these public officers; and hence there was not, in law, any crime at all. There was an evil purpose in the defendant's mind, which was never carried out or consummated. The proposition of the learned court quoted above virtually and logically represents the district attorney's office as aiding the defendant, and therefore as an agency for the perpetration and promotion of crime. How much more reasonable, charitable, and just it would be to present the office and its occupants in the true light, namely, as representing the state and acting for it in all that was done! I should be surprised if the learned, able, and honest district attorney would desire to be represented as acting in any other capacity; and I will add it is much more complimentary to him to treat the transaction in the saloon, when the records were produced by his detective, as a mere farce or experiment, rather than a crime, which, if committed at all, was by his aid, advice, and procurement. It was not only harmless, but the whole performance was absolutely silly, since copies of the six indictments were in the district attorney's office, and the loss of the originals could not embarrass the prosecution in the least. The defendant, though a lawyer himself, evidently did not see what a silly project the whole scheme was, but certainly the district attorney, his assistant, and the detective must have known. The genius and vigilance that can convert evil thoughts into criminal acts might be admired, but on sober reflection no public officer can think it fair or proper to be represented as giving aid, advice, or assistance to an evil-disposed person, that may enable him to do, or appear to do, the things that constitute a crime. It is plain from the opinions that I have quoted from the courts of sister states that those tribunals entertain no such views of this transaction as those expressed by the learned court below in this case. These cases hold that such a transaction does not amount to any crime, and, in my opinion, they are the expression of good sense and sound law. That view is safer for the public, and much more charitable to the officers themselves. I would not give to them the character of agents carrying out the defendant's evil purpose, but rather as engaged in a harmless farce or experiment. The fundamental question in this case is plain and simple, and it is this: Can the state, through one of its own officers and agents, on learning that one of its citizens harbors criminal designs in his mind, and has a criminal inclination, enter upon a plan to tempt him, suggest to him what to do in order to accomplish his criminal purpose, take records from the files in pursuance of the plan, and deliver them for a sum of money previously agreed upon, all conceived and carried out in fraud for the very purpose of decoying the person into some criminal act in order to prosecute him for the same, upon the sole ground that its peace and dignity have by that act been insulted and violated? I have no hesitation in asserting that an act thus procured and manufactured cannot be a punishable crime, either in the domain of law, of morals, or of common sense.

It has been said, with perhaps much truth, that it is and always has been the natural disposition of mankind to reverence law more in its high abuses and summary movements than in its calm and constitutional energy, when it dispensed blessings with an unseen but liberal hand. Courts cannot inspire much respect for the majesty and dignity of law or the orderly administration of justice when they depart from sound and settled principles in order to crown with success the traps devised by public officers to decoy evil-minded persons into the commission of acts which under other circumstances would be criminal. When the state and its officers come into a court of justice, demanding the punishment of a person accused of crime, they ought to appear there with clean hands, and not as a part of the forces that procured the consummation of the unlawful act.

The highest and most enlightened court is liable to be misled by plausible and distorted arguments. But in this case the wayfaring man cannot err, since he has the force of reason and the light of authority to guide him. This judgment can be affirmed with the strong hand of power, but it is quite useless to try to cover it with a glamour of reason or law. The evil purpose of this defendant, never consummated, ought not to have any more influence over the question involved in this case than the smallest pebble on the shore over the turbulent and angry waves of the sea. I think the approval of this judgment is a bad precedent, since we cannot escape adopting acts and arguments that are only a virtual modification of the arguments in support of lynch law. It is not worth while for this court to become a party to this transaction for the sake of sending this defendant, who, so far as we know, is a bad man, to a prison for a few months.

There was a ruling made by the learned trial judge which seems to me should not be ignored. The people were permitted to prove that, about the time the transaction referred to took place, an assistant district attorney was engaged in investigating the cause of the death of a man named Hagaman. The assistant himself was put upon the stand, and he testified that the body had been exhumed; that an autopsy had been performed; that the record of the pathologist had been received; that the organs of the dead man had been preserved, and were in process of a chemical analysis by the expert; that Dr. Flower, supposed to know something about the conditions surrounding the death, had been examined, and the written statements taken; that the autopsy was held at Poughkeepsie, where Hagaman was buried. All these things, he said took place in January or February, previous to the transaction in question. The assistant testified that, as head of the homicide bureau, he had charge of the proceedings against Flower; that the matter had been submitted to the grand jury; and that the assistant had collected the evidence. Now, what all these matters had to do with the question before the court, which manifestly was whether the defendant stole, or attempted to steal, the indictments when he put them in his pocket for a moment in the saloon, it is utterly impossible to conceive. The defendant was not indicted for, or charged with, bribery, nor for any complicity or connection with the death of Hagaman. It seems that it was a subject that had been widely discussed in all the papers, and the name of Flower, the defendant's client, had been connected in some way with the matter. The evidence was all objected to by the defendant's counsel. The objections were overruled in every case, and exceptions taken. This evidence could serve only one purpose, and that was to present the defendant before the jury as an associate, friend, and counselor of a man who was suspected, if not accused, of murder. The ruling of the learned trial judge admitting this evidence against the defendant's exception and objection was manifestly prejudicial to the defendant's right to a degree which is difficult to describe. If the defendant had been indicted for bribery or for an attempt to bribe the district attorney or his assistant, it is possible that this evidence could be justified; but a motive for the commission of one crime is not evidence in the prosecution for another and different offense. It seems to me that the ruling embodies a fatal error, and, even if the testimony was not as clearly incompetent on its face as it appears to be, the presumption is that it prejudiced the accused, under the settled rule of this court. People v. Koerner, 154 N. Y. 377, 48 N. E. 730; People v. Helmer, 154 N. Y. 603, 49 N. E. 249; Stokes v. People, 53 N. Y. 183, 13 Am. Rep. 492; Greene v. White, 37 N. Y. 405.

The judgment of conviction should be reversed, and a new trial granted.

Bartlett, J., dissenting:

I concur in the result reached by Judge O'Brien.

It is argued that the error in the reasoning of counsel for the defendant consists in assuming that the district attorney and his detective represented the state of New York in the scheme devised in the district attorney's office to entrap the defendant. I deem this the crucial point in the case. The district attorney and his detective undoubtedly acted upon the theory that they were representing the state, and doing it a great service in bringing this defendant into a situation that would result in conviction, and, as they supposed, merited punishment. This was an unfortunate error of judgment. It is a violent assumption, under the circumstances, that the district attorney and his detective were acting as private citizens, and the state was not bound in any way by what they did. The state, as a legal entity, can only be represented by officers duly authorized to exercise certain of its powers resting in its absolute sovereignty. In the case at bar, according to the testimony of the people's witnesses, the district attorney was advised that the defendant had expressed the desire to one of these witnesses to bribe an assistant district attorney to withdraw, misplace, or lose the six indictments against Flower, or go into court and oppose a motion to quash the indictments in such a manner as to permit it to succeed. This wicked purpose to bribe an official, existing in the mind of the defendant, and communicated to a man whom he supposed was his friend, represents his extreme position at the time the district attorney was advised that one of his assistants might be improperly approached. No crime had been committed or attempted. It will be observed that, according to the people's witnesses, the intention lurking in the defendant's mind was bribery. He did not contemplate getting possession of the indictments himself; his idea being that the assistant district attorney, if capable of being bribed, might lose or misplace them, or defend in a half-hearted manner a motion made to quash them. At this juncture the scheme was devised in the district attorney's office of allowing one of its detectives to place himself in communication with the defendant, and assure him that he sustained such relations to the district attorney's office and assistant district attorney as would serve his purpose. This plan was carried out, and resulted in leading the defendant into the supposed commission of two entirely distinct crimes, to wit: (1) An attempt to commit the crime wilfully, etc., removing, etc., a public document, i. e., certain indictments, in violation of § 94 of the Penal Code; (2) the crime of attempted grand larceny in the second degree by attempting to steal the aforesaid indictments. This was not a scheme or device to detect crime already committed, wherein secrecy and deception are often resorted to in order to bring the guilty to punishment, but it was a plan to entrap the defendant, who up to that time had committed no crime whatever, but was planning in his own mind a wicked scheme to bribe an assistant district attorney. In order to carry out the scheme of the district attorney, it required the exercise of the great power and discretion conferred upon him by law. The indictments in question were on file in the clerk's office, and no court or officer had the power, under the law, to remove them for the purposes contemplated by this scheme. Code Civ. Proc. § 866. This section permits records to be brought into court in the custody of a clerk when necessary, and, when they are required at any other place, they may be removed by order of the court, specifying that the production of the original instead of the transcript is necessary. The district attorney obtained this order of the court, and secured the possession of the indictments in question; giving his official receipt therefor. Nevertheless this defendant is indicted for attempting to remove filed documents from a public office and attempting to steal the same. The indictments were removed from the files of a public office by the district attorney, and were in his official custody and control every moment of time until they were returned to the proper custodian, and the receipt given for the same taken up. The farce enacted in the saloon where this defendant was surrounded by the officers of the law shocks the sense of justice; and, if the state disapproves this mode of procedure, it should renounce its unsavory fruits, which include $2,000 more or less. In order to reach the conclusion that the district attorney did not represent the state in devising and carrying out this scheme, we are compelled to regard him merely as the agent of the state, exceeding his authority in the premises. I am of opinion that this familiar principle of the law of agency has no application to this case. It is essential that the sovereignty of the state should be duly represented by its officials, and there is no valid reason why it should not be bound by the action of the district attorney when he commits a grave error of judgment. The argument that the district attorney and his detective did not represent the state in this prosecution permits the inference that if they did this conviction could not stand. It is contrary to public policy and sound reason, when a defendant is entrapped by the district attorney's office into the commission of a crime he did not originally contemplate, that the state should be able to say it will treat the alleged criminal precisely as if the crime for which he was indicted originated in his own wicked intention, unaided by the officials who claim to represent it, and who deliberately induced him to act.

In the case of Love v. People, 160 Ill. 501, 32 L. R. A. 139, 43 N. E. 710, cited by defendant's counsel, the court held: "Burglary is not committed by those assisting a detective in entering a building and taking money from a safe in pursuance of a previously arranged plan between him and the owner, with the sole intent of entrapping the others into the apparent commission of a crime. Acts otherwise criminal, done by a party against property at the instigation and by the encouragement of a detective, who acts in pursuance of a plan previously arranged with the owner of the property, do not constitute a crime." Numerous cases laying down this same principle of law are cited from various states.

A sound public policy requires that the state of New York should be estopped, as is a private individual who seeks to induce a person by scheme or device to commit a crime. It well comports with the dignity of the state to say that it repudiates this action of its officials, and permits this defendant, although unworthy, to go free, because he stands convicted of a crime which he never would have attempted and could not have committed save by the assistance of those who on this occasion, however proper their motives, have misrepresented it.

I vote for reversal.

Fanny McComb HERZOG, Appt.,

v.

TITLE GUARANTEE & TRUST COMPANY
OF NEW YORK CITY et al., Exrs., etc., of James Jennings McComb, Deceased, et al., Respts.

(177 N. Y. 86.)

1. The provisions of a will will be af-fectured by those of a codicil only so far as the latter is valid.

2. A provision in a will giving a child an annuity and an equal share in the residue when distributed is modified by a codicil providing that, in case of her marriage to a person named, her annuity shall be a specified amount, and upon her death a certain sum shall be divided among her children, so far as the matter of definiteness and certainty of language is concerned.

3. The court cannot take a portion of the fund out of the hands of trustees for the purpose of giving validity to a codicil by permitting a construction of its provisions independently from those of the will where a fund is left to trustees to pay annuities to testator's children during the lifetime of two of them, and to devise the residue at their decease, and the codicil attempts to create a further restriction on the alienation of the share of one of the children under certain contingencies.

4. A revocation, as to one of the testator's children, of a provision in a will that the remainder of his property shall be divided among his children, will leave the portion of that child to be distributed as intestate property.

5. A bequest is not a gift to a class within the rule that it shall be divided among the survivors, where at the time of making it the number of the donees is certain, and the share each is to receive is also certain, and in no way dependent for its amount upon the members who shall survive.

6. A partial disinheritance of a child, who, by the terms of a will, is to share equally in the distribution of testator's estate, does not, in the absence of express words, constitute a devise to the other children; but, as to the portion taken from such legatee, there will be an intestacy.

7. A codicil directing trustees, who, under the will, are to hold the residue of the estate during the lifetime of the testator's youngest two children paying annuities to all the children during such lives, and dividing the property at their termination, to hold the share of another child during her lifetime upon the happening of a certain contingency, paying her an annuity during her life, and dividing the principal among her children at her death, is void as suspending the period of alienation beyond two lives in being at the testator's death.

(December 18, 1903.)

APPEAL by plaintiff from a judgment of the Appellate Division of the Supreme Court, First Department, reversing a judgment of a Special Term for New York County in plaintiff's favor in an action brought to obtain a construction of the will of James Jennings McComb, deceased, and to enforce rights in his property contrary to the terms of a codicil. Reversed.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

NOTE.—In addition to the cases in this series on the general question of perpetuities, see note to Saxton v. Webber, 20 L. R. A. 509, on the 67 L. R. A.

effect on prior takers of the failure of a gift because it violates the rule against perpetuities.

Messrs. Robert W. B. Elliott, Robert L. Harrison, and William W. MacFarland, with Messrs. Harrison & Byrd, for appellant:

The ninth clause of the third codicil is void for the reason that it suspends the power of alienation of the trust estate beyond the period of two lives.

Rothschild v. Roux, 78 App. Div. 282, 79 N. Y. Supp. 833.

The whole residue is given to trustees, and the provisions of the codicil do not change that disposition.

Redf. Wills, 263, 290, 3d ed. p. 360; Brant v. Willson, 8 Cow. 56; Hard v. Ashley, 117 N. Y. 606, 23 N. E. 177.

The necessary result of the codicil is the perpetuation of the trust until the death of Fanny.

McSorley v. Wilson, 4 Sandf. Ch. 515; Cochrane v. Schell, 140 N. Y. 531, 35 N. E. 971.

There is no direct gift to Fanny's children. The gift is future and contingent, and to those who are yet unknown and unascertained, and who cannot be ascertained until the mother's death. It is obvious that such an interest is not alienable in the meantime.

Smith v. Edwards, 88 N. Y. 92; Clark v. Cammann, 160 N. Y. 323, 54 N. E. 709; Delafield v. Shipman, 103 N. Y. 463, 9 N. E. 184; Re Baer, 147 N. Y. 348, 41 N. E. 702; Fargo v. Squiers, 154 N. Y. 250, 48 N. E. 509; Dougherty v. Thompson, 167 N. Y. 472, 60 N. E. 760; Haynes v. Sherman, 117 N. Y. 433, 22 N. E. 938.

The condition is void because it might make a part of the trust estate inalienable for more than two lives.

McSorley v. Wilson, 4 Sandf. Ch. 515; Schettler v. Smith, 41 N. Y. 328; Haynes v. Sherman, 117 N. Y. 433, 22 N. E. 938; Burrill v. Boardman, 43 N. Y. 256, 3 Am. Rep. 694; Knox v. Jones, 47 N. Y. 397.

A declaration that the ninth clause of the third codicil is valid carries with it the necessary conclusion that the testator dies intestate as to one fourth of his residuary estate.

Re Kimberly, 150 N. Y. 90, 44 N. E. 945.

The law abhors an intestacy, whether total or partial, and will not favor a construction of a will which leads to that result.

Johnson v. Brasington, 156 N. Y. 187, 50 N. E. 859.

Plaintiff had a vested equitable estate in one fourth of the residuary trust created by the fifteenth clause of the will.

If the marriage of the plaintiff with Mr. Louis Herzog divested her of her interest in the residue that part will not go in augmentation of the remaining parts as the 67 L. R. A.

residue of a residue, but will devolve as undisposed of.

Skrymsner v. Northcote, 1 Swanst. 566, 1 Wills. 248, 18 Revised Rep. 142; 2 Jarman, Wills, 5th Am. ed. p. 363; Morton v. Woodbury, 153 N. Y. 243, 47 N. E. 283; Floyd v. Barker, 1 Paige, 480; Beekman v. Bonsor, 23 N. Y. 298, 80 Am. Dec. 269; Hard v. Ashley, 117 N. Y. 606, 23 N. E. 177; Betts v. Betts, 4 Abb. N. C. 317; Kerr v. Dougherty, 79 N. Y. 327; Re Woolley, 78 App. Div. 224, 79 N. Y. Supp. 513; Creswell v. Cheslyn, 2 Eden, 123, Affirmed in 3 Bro. P. C. 246; Skipwith v. Cabell, 19 Gratt. 788; Ramsay v. Sheldermine, L. R. 1 Eq. 129; Humble v. Shore, 7 Hare, 247, 1 Hem. & M. 550; Chap-eau's Estate, Tucker, 410.

The gift in the residuary clause is not a gift to a class.

Re Kimberly, 150 N. Y. 90, 44 N. E. 945; Re Russell, 168 N. Y. 169, 61 N. E. 166.

Mr. Edward M. Scudder, guardian ad litem, in person:

The extended term of trust sought to be effectuated by the ninth clause of the third codicil is void as suspending the power of alienation beyond the statutory period.

Real Property Law, § 83; Personal Property Law, § 3; Rudley v. Kuhn, 97 N. Y. 26; Haynes v. Sherman, 117 N. Y. 433, 22 N. E. 938.

The absolute power of alienation must be present and effective when the precedent estate determines.

Dana v. Murray, 122 N. Y. 604, 26 N. E. 21; Schettler v. Smith, 41 N. Y. 328; Knox v. Jones, 47 N. Y. 389; Hawley v. James, 16 Wend. 121; Purdy v. Hayt, 92 N. Y. 446; Haynes v. Sherman, 117 N. Y. 433, 22 N. E. 938.

In the trust at bar the "absolute power of alienation" does not necessarily exist at the expiration of two lives in being at the time of its creation.

Purdy v. Hayt, 92 N. Y. 446; Schettler v. Smith, 41 N. Y. 328; Re Baer, 147 N. Y. 348, 41 N. E. 702; Clark v. Cammann, 160 N. Y. 315, 54 N. E. 709; Re Crane, 164 N. Y. 71, 58 N. E. 47; Schlereth v. Schlereth, 173 N. Y. 444, 93 Am. St. Rep. 616, 66 N. E. 130.

The fact that the ninth clause of the codicil is void does not affect the validity of the fifteenth clause of the original will.

Tilden v. Green, 130 N. Y. 29, 14 L. R. A. 33, 27 Am. St. Rep. 487, 28 N. E. 880; Savage v. Burnham, 17 N. Y. 561; Harrison v. Harrison, 36 N. Y. 543.

Mr. John Notman, for respondents:

The intention of the testator was clear, that, in the event of his daughter Fanny marrying Mr. Louis Herzog, she should only enjoy from his estate the provision for the benefit of herself and children, made in the codicil.

New York L. Ins. & T. Co. v. Baker, 165 N. Y. 484, 53 L. R. A. 544, 59 N. E. 257; Re Hoyt, 160 N. Y. 607, 48 L. R. A. 126, 55 N. E. 282; Burnet v. Burnet, 30 N. J. Eq. 595; Ex parte Dickson, 1 Sim. N. S. 37, 20 L. J. Ch. N. S. 33, 15 Jur. 282; Selden v. Keen, 27 Gratt. 576; 1 Story, Eq. § 291c; Newton v. Marsden, 2 Johns. & H. 356, 31 L. J. Ch. N. S. 690, 8 Jur. N. S. 1034, 6 L. T. N. S. 155, 10 Week. Rep. 438.

There is no suspension of the power of alienation beyond the statutory period.

The court should be slow to adopt a construction which would defeat the intention of the testator.

Jessup v. Pringle Memorial Home, 27 Misc. 427, 59 N. Y. Supp. 207.

The limitation of the power of alienation upon the two lives specified in the fifteenth article of the will is not extended or increased by the ninth clause of the third codicil.

The annuity is clearly releasable and assignable, and so not within the rule of suspension.

Bailey v. Bailey, 97 N. Y. 460; Corse v. Chapman, 153 N. Y. 406, 47 N. E. 812.

And this being so, even if there were another life estate, there would be no unlawful suspension.

Chaplin, Suspension of the Power of Alienation, ed. 1891, § 233.

Annuities do not suspend the power of alienation.

Lang v. Ropke, 5 Sandf. 363; O'Brien v. Mooney, 5 Duer, 51; Griffen v. Ford, 1 Bosw. 123; Hunter v. Hunter, 17 Barb. 25; Mason v. Jones, 2 Barb. 229; Buchanan v. Little, 154 N. Y. 147, 47 N. E. 970.

Merely making a charge upon an estate will not have the effect of suspending the absolute ownership or power of alienation.

Mason v. Jones, 2 Barb. 229, Affirming 2 Sandf. Ch. 432; Leggett v. Perkins, 2 N. Y. 327.

The charge of an annuity is not a limitation upon the power of alienation.

Frazer v. Hoguet, 65 App. Div. 192, 72 N. Y. Supp. 840.

The daughter Fanny could release or assign her annuity legacy, and the legacy to her child is likewise assignable and releasable.

Beardsley v. Hotchkiss, 96 N. Y. 201; Moore v. Little, 41 N. Y. 66; Miller v. Emans, 19 N. Y. 384; Woodgate v. Fleet, 44 N. Y. 1; Ham v. Van Orden, 84 N. Y. 257; Mott v. Ackerman, 92 N. Y. 539; Griffin v. Shepard, 124 N. Y. 74, 26 N. E. 339; Re Tilford, 5 Dem. 524.

The fact that the infant is under disability does not affect this question of assigna-bility and releasability so far as the legal right is concerned.

Beardsley v. Hotchkiss, 96 N. Y. 201; Quade v. Bertsch, 65 App. Div. 606, 72 N. Y. Supp. 916.

The will here is so clear in its intent that Fanny should not have one fourth of the estate if she married Louis Herzog that, even if it were possible to spell out a particular intent that he did not mean to limit the time of the marriage, the general intention must be carried into effect, though it may defeat the particular intent.

Jackson ex dem. Hammond v. Vccder, 11 Johns. 169; Jackson ex dem. Ellsworth v. Jansen, 6 Johns. 73; Parks v. Parks, 9 Paige, 107; Lovett v. Kingsland, 44 Barb. 560, Affirmed in 35 N. Y. 617.

Mr. Robert E. Deyo, with Messrs. Deyo, Duer, & Bauerdorf, for respondent J. Scott McComb:

James Jennings McComb did not die intestate as to any part of his estate. Whatever was taken from Fanny was transferred to the other children.

Heartt v. Livingston, 14 Hun, 285, Affirming 53 How. Pr. 487; Towne v. Weston, 132 Mass. 513; Harris v. Davis, 1 Colly. Ch. Cas. 416, 9 Jur. 269.

Mr. George A. Strong, with Messrs. Duer, Strong, & Whitehead, for respondent executors and trustees:

An ordinary annuity given directly is assignable. It can, therefore, neither create nor contribute to an illegal suspension.

Radley v. Kuhn, 97 N. Y. 26; Cochrane v. Schell, 140 N. Y. 516, 35 N. E. 971; Phillips v. Phillips, 112 N. Y. 197, 8 Am. St. Rep. 737, 19 N. E. 411; Durfee v. Pomeroy, 154 N. Y. 583, 49 N. E. 132.

A trust may be created to pay an annuity.

Cochrane v. Schell, 140 N. Y. 516, 35 N. E. 971; Rothschild v. Roux, 78 App. Div. 282, 97 N. Y. Supp. 833.

A trust will never be raised by implication in order that, so soon as raised, it may be declared to be illegal and void.

Post v. Hover, 33 N. Y. 593; Robert v. Corning, 89 N. Y. 225; Van Cott v. Prentice 104 N. Y. 45, 10 N. E. 257; Roe v. Vingut, 117 N. Y. 204, 22 N. E. 933; Crozier v. Bray, 120 N. Y. 366, 24 N. E. 712; Greene v. Greene, 125 N. Y. 506, 21 Am. St. Rep. 743, 26 N. E. 739; Steinhardt v. Cunningham, 130 N. Y. 292, 29 N. E. 100; Locke v. Farmers' Loan & T. Co. 140 N. Y. 135, 35 Atl. 578; Hopkins v. Kent, 145 N. Y. 363, 40 N. E. 4; Steinway v. Steinway, 163 N. Y. 183, 57 N. E. 312; Haug v. Schumacher, 166 N. Y. 506, 60 N. E. 245; Harrison v. Harrison, 36 N. Y. 543; Smith v. Edwards, 88 N. Y. 92; Matteson v. Palser, 56 App. Div. 91, 67 N. Y. Supp. 612.

Martin, J., delivered the opinion of the court:

This action was for the construction of the will of James Jennings McComb, who died on the 31st of March, 1901, leaving a last will and testament, to which there were three codicils. Without referring to, or discussing, the provisions of the will or codicils which have no necessary bearing upon the question before us, we shall only call attention to those relating to the question under consideration. The questions on this appeal involve the construction and effect of the fifteenth paragraph of the will, as changed or modified by the ninth provision of the third codicil thereto.

After making many other provisions for intended recipients of his bounty, he provided for his issue, immediate and remote, by the fifteenth clause of his will. He thereby gave, devised, and bequeathed all the rest, residue, and remainder of his estate to his executors and trustees, and their successors, to hold, invest, maintain, and manage during the lives of those two of his children who, surviving him, should be the youngest at the time of his death, in trust, however, and for the purpose, among others, of paying from the income of the residuary estate not otherwise disposed of the sum of $6,000 per annum to each of his four children, Mary Alice, Fanny Rayne, Lillie, and Jennings Scott, and, upon the termination of the trust, to transfer and convey said residuary estate in equal parts, share and share alike, to his children above named, or to their respective heirs, legatees, devisees, next of kin, executors, administrators, or assigns. The ninth clause of the third codicil was as follows: "It is my will, and I hereby direct, that, in case my daughter Fanny shall marry Mr. Louis Herzog, the provision which she shall enjoy from my estate shall be as follows: An annuity of fifteen ($15,000) thousand dollars per year shall be paid to her, so long as she shall live, free and clear from any enjoyment or interference therewith on the part of her husband. Upon her death the sum of three hundred ($300,000) thousand dollars shall be divided between her children, who may survive her, and the issue of any child of hers, who may have previously died, such issue to take the parent's share. The principal so to be divided upon her death shall be three hundred ($300,000) thousand dollars." The plaintiff remained unmarried until about nine months subsequent to the death of the testator, when she was married to the Mr. Louis Herzog therein mentioned and referred to.

Upon the argument and in the briefs of 67 L. R. A.

counsel a number of very interesting and important questions were elaborately and exhaustively discussed in a manner evincing great industry, research, and ability upon the part of the learned counsel for the respective parties. Many of those questions, however, we shall not discuss or determine, but shall confine our examination to the question passed upon by the courts below which we think is decisive and controlling.

On the trial the learned special term held that the ninth clause of the third codicil, construed in connection with the fifteenth article of the will, was illegal, inoperative, and void. Upon appeal to the appellate division, that learned court held to the contrary, and reversed the judgment upon the ground that that provision of the codicil was valid. We concur in the opinion of the learned appellate division so far as it states that "it was manifestly the intention of the testator to modify the third and fourth subdivisions of the fifteenth clause or article in the event that Fanny should marry Herzog, by providing that she should then receive $15,000 per annum as a life annuity, instead of a share in the income of the residuary estate during the continuance of the trust, and in the principal thereof at the termination of the trust, and that upon her death her issue should receive $300,000." The will and codicil are to be taken and construed as parts of one and the same instrument, and the dispositions of the will are not to be disturbed further than are necessary to give effect to the codicil. Hard v. Ashley, 117 N. Y. 606, 23 N. E. 177; Goodwin v. Coddington, 154 N. Y. 283, 48 N. E. 729. Therefore, in ascertaining the effect of the ninth clause of the codicil upon the interest of the plaintiff under the fifteenth clause of the will, both instruments must be read and interpreted as one. From them the intention of the testator must be ascertained. The intent to be discovered is not whether he intended to make a valid disposition of his estate, but what provisions he in fact intended to make. When that is found, it is for the court to determine whether such intended provisions are valid or otherwise. Colton v. Fox, 67 N. Y. 348, 351. The question of intent may relate to the mode of administration and the character of the gift, as well as to the amount or the person to whom it is made. The duty of the court is not to make a new will or codicil to carry out some supposed but undisclosed purpose, but to ascertain what the testator actually intended by the language employed by him, when properly interpreted, and then to determine whether such intended provisions are valid or otherwise. The duty of the court is to interpret, not to construct; to construe the will and codicil, not to make new ones. Tilden v. Green, 130 N. Y. 29, 51, 14 L. R. A. 33, 27 Am. St. Rep. 487, 28 N. E. 880.

All the valid provisions of the will for the benefit of the testator's issue, either immediate or remote, are contained in the fifteenth clause. Although, as to other gifts by his will he had adopted different methods for their administration, yet, when it came to the bulk of his estate, and to the provisions for his children and their issue, he plainly and purposely provided that such provisions should be administered through the instrumentality of a trust. Obviously his purpose was to suspend the power of alienation for the longest period permissible under the law. That intent he plainly and expressly states in the fifteenth clause of his will. Thus the dominant purpose of the testator, so far as gifts to his children and their issue were concerned, was to provide for the inalienability of their shares for the longest period possible. There is nothing in the ninth clause of the codicil indicating or expressing any other purpose as to the share given the plaintiff and her issue in case of her marriage to Herzog, but the provision that in that case she should receive $15,000 a year, and $300,000 should be divided between such of her children and their issue as should survive her, discloses that the same general intent of inalienability was to be continued as to the share provided for the plaintiff by such ninth clause.

A doubt may exist as to the sufficiency of the codicil to cut down the absolute gift to the plaintiff contained in the will, by reason of the indefiniteness and uncertainty of the language employed. The rule is that an absolute gift by a will cannot be cut down by a later provision unless the intention to do so is expressed in language as plain, definite, and certain as is used in making the original gift. Banzer v. Banzer, 156 N. Y. 429, 51 N. E. 291. We are, however, inclined to the opinion that the language of the codicil is sufficiently plain to show an intention on the part of the testator to modify his original gift to the plaintiff as to the amount of the income she should receive, between whom the remainder of the income should be divided, between whom the corpus of the fund should be ultimately divided, the proportion or amount thereof they should each receive, and the time when such division should be made as to the share going to the plaintiff and her children or their issue. Therefore, just so far as the codicil modifies or changes the provisions of the will, it should be held to be effective. Hard v. Ashley, 117 N. Y. 606, 23 N. E. 177.

In considering the effect of the codicil upon on the provisions of the will to which it relates, our attention must be directed to the provisions for the disposition of that portion of the estate, and the method in which it is to be administered or divided between its intended recipients. If the codicil, when construed in connection with the fifteenth clause of the will, is illegal and contrary to the law in either of those respects, it is void, and should not be given effect. After eliminating from the fifteenth clause of the will the invalid provisions therein, the testator, in effect, gave the remainder of the income from his residuary estate not specially dedicated to other purposes to his children equally, share and share alike; and upon the termination of the trust each child, or her issue, successors, or representatives, was to be paid one fourth of such residuary estate. This provision was not revoked, nor was it even modified, by the codicil, unless a condition should arise which might be either precedent or subsequent; and upon the happening of that condition the only modification of the gift in the fifteenth clause was to change or reduce the amount the plaintiff should receive from the income, and to give her children $300,000 instead of the share which she or they would have received if such condition had not arisen. In other words, by the codicil, upon the happening of the event mentioned therein, the clear and obvious intent of the testator was that the fifteenth clause should be so modified as to divide the income and corpus of the residuary estate among his children and their issue, successors, and representatives, under the provisions of that clause, but in different proportions. No portion of the residuary estate was withdrawn from the operation of the trust, or dedicated to any purposes except those mentioned in the fifteenth clause of the will and the ninth clause of the third codicil. By such modification, upon the termination of the trust, the whole corpus of the residuary estate was still to be divided between his four children or their respective issue, if the condition mentioned did not arise. But if it arose, then the plaintiff was to have an annuity of $15,000 a year so long as she lived, and upon her death $300,000 was to be divided between her children who should survive her, including the issue of any child who should have previously died.
67 L. R. A.

We think the plain and intended effect of the fifteenth clause, as modified by the ninth provision of the codicil, was to continue the trust as it stood in the will as to all of his children, unless the plaintiff should marry Herzog, in which event the amount or share of such children was to be changed so that the plaintiff and her children or grandchilddren were to receive a reduced sum, and the income and body of the trust estate were to be divided in a different manner, but through the same instrumentality. The codicil contains no words of gift, provides no other method by which the $15,000 of the income was to be paid to the plaintiff, and establishes no other fund or source from which either the income or principal was to be derived. Nor does it state by whom the $300,000 is to be divided, or in whose hands it is to remain until the time of the plaintiff's death. The whole scheme and plan of the will, except as to the portion which she and her children were to receive, are left intact and unchanged. The only method of administration is provided by the will. The form of bequest in the fifteenth clause is by words of gift contained only in the direction to transfer and divide. The same form of bequest is contained in the ninth clause of the codicil. The effect of the codicil was not to revoke the residuary clause, interfere with the trust, or change the scheme or method provided for the administration of his estate, but simply to provide that, if the condition mentioned should arise, the amount should be changed as to the income, and $300,000 of the principal, which otherwise would go to her or her children, was to be transferred to such of her children or their issue as should be living at the time of her death. Considering the situation of the testator at the time the codicil was made, his full knowledge of the whole scheme and plan of his will as to the execution of its provisions for his children, with no designation of any person to carry out the provisions of the codicil, and the fact that the codicil was a mere modification of the provisions of the fifteenth clause, it seems obvious that he intended to employ the same agency to accomplish the administration of the fifteenth clause, as modified by the occurrence of the condition mentioned in the codicil, as though that condition had not arisen.

It is likewise to be observed that the testator's entire estate, except the residuum, has been disposed of, and by the residuary clause the title to the residue of his property after paying other independent legacies was absolutely vested in the trustees for the purposes stated in the third and fourth paragraphs of the fifteenth clause of the will. Under these circumstances, and in the absence of any such provision by the testator, the court cannot set apart any portion of the trust fund or of the estate for the purpose of establishing another fund for the payment of, or to produce, the annuity to the plaintiff during her life, or from which to pay the legacies to her children or their issue at her death. The court has no power to divest the legal title of the trustees to any portion of the estate. Cochrane v. Schell, 140 N. Y. 516, 536, 35 N. E. 971. Consequently the only manner in which such annuity and legacies can be satisfied is through the trust, and under the powers conferred upon the trustees by the fifteenth clause, as modified by the ninth clause of the third codicil.

Moreover, if the effect of the codicil was not, as already suggested, to modify the third and fourth subdivisions of the fifteenth clause of the will, and to continue the trust for the execution of the provisions thereof as modified, then as to one fourth of the residuary estate the testator died intestate. In other words, if the effect of the codicil was, upon the plaintiff's marriage to Herzog, to revoke the provisions contained in the fifteenth clause of the will as to the plaintiff, there being no gift over of that portion, it would not continue as a part of the residue for division among the other three children or their issue, as it seems to be settled that, where the disposition of an aliquot part of the residue falls from any cause, that part will not go in augmentation of the remaining parts, as a residue of residue, but will devolve as undisposed of. 1 Jarman, Wills, 764; Morton v. Woodbury, 153 N. Y. 243, 257, 47 N. E. 283; Beekman v. Bonsor, 23 N. Y. 575, Appx.; Hard v. Ashley, 117 N. Y. 606, 23 N. E. 177; Kerr v. Dougherty, 79 N. Y. 327, 346; Floyd v. Barker, 1 Paige, 480, 482. It is perfectly manifest that the testator intended no such result. We think his clear purpose was to continue the trust as provided in the will, and in case of the plaintiff's marriage that it should be modified as stated in the codicil, and that the residuary estate should then be divided according to that provision as thus modified through the instrumentality of the trust, and that the only intended effect of the codicil was to change the amount which was to go to each of his children by augmenting the shares given to the others, except the plaintiff, by the amount of the diminution of her share.

The gift to the plaintiff and her children by the codicil was not an independent or initial gift to them, but was substitutional,—to take the place of the original gift which she was to enjoy in case the condition as to her marriage was not broken,—and therefore must be construed as subject to the same conditions as the former one as to the property on which they are charged, or the fund out of which they are payable. Redf. Wills, pt. 1, p. 360, § 26; Theobald, Wills, p. 137; Bristow v. Bristow, 5 Beav. 289; Cooper v. Day, 3 Meriv. 154; Leacroft v.

Maynard, 1 Ves. Jr. 279; Crowder v. Clowes, 2 Ves. Jr. 449; Giesler v. Jones, 25 Beav. 418; Fisher v. Brierley, 30 Beav. 267.

The codicil did not operate as a revocation of the testator's previous testamentary provisions, beyond the clear import of its language; and his expressed intention to change the will in the particular mentioned by implication negatives any intention to alter it in any other respect. Redfield v. Redfield, 128 N. Y. 466, 27 N. E. 1032; Viele v. Keeler, 129 N. Y. 190, 29 N. E. 78.

The contention that the gift in the residuary clause was a gift to a class, and consequently the brother and the two sisters of the plaintiff would take the entire residue, cannot be sustained. This gift contains none of the elements necessary to constitute such a gift. A bequest is not a gift to a class, where, at the time of making it, the number of the donees is certain, and the share each is to receive is also certain, and in no way dependent for its amount upon the members who shall survive. A gift to a class is a gift of an aggregate sum to a body of persons uncertain in number, at the time of the gift, to be ascertained at a future time, who are all to take in equal or in some other definite proportions; the share of each being dependent for its amount upon the ultimate number. Re Kimberly, 150 N. Y. 90, 93, 44 N. E. 945; Re Russell, 168 N. Y. 169, 61 N. E. 166.

The claim of the respondents that the codicil effected a gift to the brother and sisters of the plaintiff of her share in the residuary estate in case of her marriage, independent of the trust, and uncontrolled by its provisions and limitations, and hence that there was no intestacy, cannot be sustained. At most, it can only be said that the testator intended to partially disinherit her as to her share. But if such was the intent and effect of the codicil, as there was no gift over to them, it constituted a mere disinheritance, without a legal gift to another, which is insufficient to cut off the right of heirs or next of kin to inherit. Gallagher v. Crooks, 132 N. Y. 338, 342, 30 N. E. 746.

Assuming, then, as we must, that the intention of the testator, by his codicil, in case the condition as to the plaintiff's marriage arose,—was to merely modify the residuary clause by substituting the provision therein for the plaintiff and her children in lieu of the provisions for her contained in the fifteenth clause, and that that clause of the will as thus modified became a part of the trust to be administered by the trustees of the will in accordance with its provisions as thus modified, the question is presented whether the codicil then falls within the condemnation of the statute forbidding the suspension of the absolute power of alienation of real property or the absolute ownership of personal property for a period longer than during the continuance of two lives in being at the creation of the estate or at the death of the testator. By the express provisions of section 15 of the will, the trustees were to hold the property during the lives of two of the testator's children designated, of whom the plaintiff was not one, and pay the income to his children during the continuance of the trust. That provision as modified, if valid, imposed upon the trustees the duty of continuing the trust and retaining the title to the trust property during the lives of those two children; and, in addition, it required them to retain the title to that portion of the trust property necessary to pay her $15,000 a year for the further period of her natural life, and upon her death to pay $300,000 thereof to her surviving children or their issue. If this will and codicil disclose one purpose more clearly than any other, it is that it was the intention of the testator that the portion of his estate intended for his children and their issue should be held in trust and remain inalienable by them until the full end and termination of the trust term by the death of his two children by whose lives it was measured, and, in case the plaintiff should marry Herzog, that the share intended for her and her children should remain inalienable during the further period of her natural life. Thus it is obvious that, during the continuance of the two lives mentioned, the title to all the residuary estate was to remain in the trustees; and also that, as to so much of the trust fund as was necessary to produce the portion intended for the plaintiff and her children, the title was to remain in the trustees, not only during the lives mentioned, but also during the life of the plaintiff. Consequently there was, or might be, a suspension of the absolute power of alienation or the absolute ownership of the property for a period longer than during the continuance of two lives in being at the death of the testator. The rule is that where, by the terms of an instrument creating an estate, there may be an unlawful suspension of the power of alienation, or of the absolute ownership, the limitation is void, although it turns out by subsequent events that no actual suspension beyond the prescribed period would have taken place. In other words, to render such future estates created by will valid, they must be so limited that in every possible contingency they will absolutely terminate within the period of two lives in being at the death of the testator, or the estate will be held void. Schettler v. Smith, 41 N. Y.

328; Know v. Jones, 47 N. Y. 389, 397; Hawley v. James, 16 Wend. 121; Purdy v. Hayt, 92 N. Y. 446; Haynes v. Sherman, 117 N. Y. 433, 22 N. E. 938; Dana v. Murray, 122 N. Y. 604, 26 N. E. 21. That the testator intended by the ninth clause of his codicil to create a future inalienable estate during the life of the plaintiff is shown by the fact that the only words of gift are contained in the direction to divide and transfer. Under such circumstances the vesting in the beneficiaries will not take place, or the future executory limitation take effect, until such future time arrives. Warner v. Durant, 76 N. Y. 133, 136; Smith v. Edwards, 88 N. Y. 92, 103; Delaney v. McCormuck, 88 N. Y. 174, 183; Delafield v. Shipman, 103 N. Y. 463, 467, 9 N. E. 184; Shipman v. Rollins, 98 N. Y. 311; Re Crane, 164 N. Y. 71, 58 N. E. 47; Schlereth v. Schlereth, 173 N. Y. 444, 93 Am. St. Rep. 616, 66 N. E. 130. Hence the title to the portion of the testator's estate mentioned in the fifteenth clause of his will, from which the plaintiff's annuity was to be paid, and from which, upon her death, the $300,000 was also to be paid, was to remain in the trustees, and was inalienable for a longer period than two lives in being at the death of the testator.

It is argued by the respondents that annuities do not suspend the power of alienation, and therefore, under the provisions of the codicil, the annuity to the plaintiff is alienable. We are inclined not to agree with that proposition, as applicable to this case, as it is clearly apparent from the will and codicil that the testator intended that the provision for the plaintiff should be and remain inalienable during her life. Cochrane v. Schell, 140 N. Y. 516, 35 N. E. 971. But if as to the annuity it could be so held, still, as to the portion of the trust fund required to pay the $300,000 to such of the children of the plaintiff or their issue as should survive her, it was clearly inalienable during her life, and the title was suspended beyond the statutory limit.

These considerations lead us to the conclusion that the judgment of the Appellate Division should be reversed, and that entered upon the decision of the Special Term affirmed, with costs to all the parties in all the courts, payable out of the residuary fund.

Parker, Ch. J., and O'Brien, Haight, Vann, and Werner, JJ., concur. Gray, J., concurs in result.

UNITED STATES CIRCUIT COURT OF APPEALS, SEVENTH CIRCUIT.

Charles J. SWAN, Plff. in Err.,
v.

WESTERN UNION TELEGRAPH COMPANY.

(129 Fed. 318.)

1. A telegraph company receiving a message for transmission is bound to notify the sender, in case the line is obstructed so that the message cannot be sent within a reasonable time, so as to give him an opportunity to avail himself of other modes of conveying the desired information to the sendee; and it is liable to the sendee for any damages which may be caused to him because of nonperformance of this obligation.

2. The measure of damages for failure to notify one who delivers a message to a telegraph company for transmission, advising the sendee to purchase certain stock, of the fact that it cannot be transmitted because of obstruction of the line, is the difference between what the stock could have been purchased for had the message been promptly sent and what was paid for the stock under the belief that the advice related to conditions at the time the message reached the sendee.

(January 5, 1904.)

NOTE.—Duty of telegraph company to notify sender of message if it cannot be promptly transmitted or delivered.

It is common experience that a message tendered to a telegraph company for transmission is in due time delivered to the sendee. Because of this experience persons desiring to communicate quickly with others at a distance have come to rely on the continued operation of the rule, and to act in important business and personal matters upon the assumption that a message tendered for transmission will be delivered at its destination within the time reasonably necessary for that purpose. The question then arises whether, in case that result will not occur in 67 L. R. A.

any particular instance, he is entitled to be informed of that fact, or whether the company may transmit the message at its convenience, leaving him in ignorance of the fact that his expectation, and perhaps his object, in employing the company has not been realized. Prompt delivery may become impossible, either because the line is not in working order or is crowded with other business, because the sendee cannot be found, or because the terminal office is not able for some reason to handle the business. In each of these instances a few cases have considered the question of the duty of the company and the rights of the sendee, and the weight of authority is that in either case the sender must receive notice of the impending delay.

ERROR to the Circuit Court of the United States for the Northern Division of the Northern District of Illinois to review a judgment in favor of defendant in an action brought to recover damages for failure to give notice of delay in sending a telegram. Reversed.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Argued before Grosscup and Baker, Circuit Judges, and Bunn, District Judge.

Mr. Henry Love Clarke, for plaintiff in error:

In cases where, through any cause, it is impossible to send a despatch, or where considerable delay will be necessary, it is the duty of the company to inform the sender, particularly where the message shows on its face the necessity or importance of its speedy transmission.

Line out of order.

SWAN V. WESTERN U. TELEG. CO. represents the majority opinion upon this branch of the subject.

A telegraph company receiving for transmission a message in the transmission of which haste is important, at a time when its line is not in working order, and there is a rival line by which the message can be sent, is bound, either to notify the sender of the obstruction in the line, or to transmit the message over the rival line; and the fact that the obstruction is believed to be temporary merely, so that the line will soon be open for business, is immaterial. Fleischner v. Pacific Postal Teleg. Cable Co. 55 Fed. 738. The court says the company's liability arises from the fact that there was a competing line in good working order by which the message could have been sent without delay. In that case, however, it appeared that the obstruction of the lines had occurred without the default or negligence of the company to which the message was first tendered. The question of the effect of stipulations limiting the liability of the company, which were contained in the blank on which the message was written, were discussed to some extent, and held not to be controlling in the case, and the decision was affirmed for the reason given by the lower court in 14 C. C. A. 166, 29 U. S. App. 227, 46 Fed. 906. But in the latter case the judge who wrote the main opinion took up and discussed the question of the effect of the stipulations in the blank, and held that in the case at bar that amounted merely to a stipulation against liability for the fraud of the company itself, which it was not allowed to do. The judge says a corporation conducting a telegraph business ought not, as matter of public policy, to be allowed to formulate and maintain any regulations which would allow it to work a fraud upon those seeking to employ this necessary means of communication, and yet afford the person defrauded no adequate means of redress.

The correctness of the decision in the Fleischner Case is recognized in Birkett v. Western U. Teleg. Co. 103 Mich. 361, 33 L. R. A. 404, 50 Am. St. Rep. 374, 61 N. W. 645.

In Hierhaus v. Western U. Teleg. Co. 8 Ind. App. 246, 34 N. E. 581, the court says it is manifestly unfair for the company to receive a mes-

25 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, p. 779; Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Harding, 103 Ind. 505, 3 N. E. 172; Hendricks v. Western U. Teleg. Co. 123 N. C. 304, 78 Am. St. Rep. 658, 35 S. E. 543; Pacific Postal Teleg. Cable Co. v. Bank of Palo Alto, 54 L. R. A. 711, 48 C. C. A. 413, 109 Fed. 369; Postal Teleg. Cable Co. v. Lathrop, 131 Ill. 575, 7 L. R. A. 474, 19 Am. St. Rep. 55, 22 N. E. 583; Fleischner v. Pacific Postal Teleg. Cable Co. 55 Fed. 738, 14 C. C. A. 166, 29 U. S. App. 227, 66 Fed. 899; Gray, Communication by Telegraph, § 18; Birkett v. Western U. Teleg. Co. 103 Mich. 361, 33 L. R. A. 404, 50 Am. St. Rep. 374, 61 N. W. 645; 14 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, 2d ed. p. 75; Trall v. Baring, 4 De G. J. & S. 318; Loewer v. Harris, 6 C. C. A. 304, 14 U. S. App. 615, 57 Fed. 368; Davies v. Lou- sage knowing that its wires are broken and that an electrical storm is raging which renders it impossible to transmit promptly, and keep such knowledge locked up from the sender. Persons resort to telegraphy because of its rapid communication, and pay exorbitant prices for the service because it is rapid. If the company knows that it cannot give quick communication when the message is accepted it cannot excuse itself except by notifying the person presenting the message of its inability. Suppose there were several lines between the same point operated by different companies, and that one of the lines is broken and cannot be repaired for several hours, and these facts are known to the corporation only. A message is presented and accepted, and no notice of inability is given. A delay of several hours ensues, and great damage is incurred. Would it be contended that the company would not be liable, when, if it had communicated its inability, the message might have been sent by another line and the loss avoided?

And that rule was recognized as correct upon a second appeal in the same case. 12 Ind. App. 17, 39 N. E. 881.

If a company which receives an important message to be forwarded by a connecting line knows at the time of delivering it to the latter that, because of the condition of such line, it cannot be forwarded promptly, it is bound to notify the sender of that fact. Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Sorsby, 29 Tex. Civ. App. 345, 69 S. W. 122. In that case it appeared that the connecting line would make only a modified acceptance of the telegram with no promise as to when it would be sent forward. The court, treating the company who contracted with the sender as his agent, says, surely it is the duty of an agent sent to make delivery of a thing to advise his principal that the person to whom it is consigned refuses to accept, or declines to accept, on the terms made by the sender.

A stipulation in the blank on which the message was written, that the company would not be liable for delays arising from unavoidable interruptions in the working of its lines, does not relieve the company from liability for delay because of its line being down at the time the message is received, of which the sender is not notified. Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Birge-Forbes Co. 29 Tex. Civ. App. 526, 69 S. W. 181.

The Texas supreme court, however, regards don & P. Marine Ins. Co. L. R. 8 Ch. Div. 489; Reynell v. Sprye, 1 De G. M. & G. 660.

In actions based on the delay of a telegram, proof that the delay occurred puts upon the defendant telegraph company the entire burden of accounting for and excusing that delay.

Fleischner v. Pacific Postal Teleg. Cable Co. 55 Fed. 738.

A simple notification to the addressee that the long delay had occurred might have relieved the defendant in error from liability for more than nominal damages.

The plaintiff was entitled to read the hour-date as it stood, and was not chargeable with knowledge of any of the private rules the defendant may have had as to the meaning of the said hour-date.

New York & W. Printing Teleg. Co. v.

the question of the company's duty as one of fact for the jury. It says, if, after receiving a message for transmission, the company discovers that its lines are down so that the message cannot be promptly delivered, the question whether it is bound to notify the sender of the fact is for the jury. Faubion v. Western U. Teleg. Co. (Tex. Civ. App.) 81 S. W. 56. The court says it was not the duty of the company to attempt to deliver the message by any other means of communication.

Opposed to the above cases is an implication in a Georgia case that no duty rests upon the company.

In Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Cohen, 73 Ga. 522, it is intimated that, if a message cannot be transmitted by reason of storms or other atmospheric influences, the company will be excused for the nontransmission of the message.

Also the dictum of a single judge in a Canadian case.

In Stevenson v. Montreal Teleg. Co. 16 U. C. Q. B. 530, where defendant, which had a line running from Hamilton to Buffalo, received a message for transmission to New York, and the question was whether it was liable for the negligence of the connecting line in Buffalo, the majority of the court held that it was not; but it appeared that a delay occurred in the transmission to Buffalo, and the dissenting judge considers that phase of the case, and reaches the conclusion that it was not bound to send the message via Montreal, or to inform the sender of the fact that the line was out of commission. He says the corporation was bound to transmit only as soon as it could reasonably be done. The telegraph is a means of communication extremely liable to be deranged and affected by atmospheric influences; communication may be prevented one minute, and yet fully established the next. Therefore, it is not reasonable to expect that the company is bound on every occasion when a person desires a communication to be forwarded to inform him that possibly the message may not be forwarded for some minutes or hours. It is more reasonable to cast the burden on the one offering the message to make inquiries if he desires to know the probability of delay.

And a decision in a Michigan case.

Where, because of a storm in New York, so that the operator in Detroit, where a message was delivered to the company for transmission 47 L. R. A.

Dryburg, 35 Pa. 298, 78 Am. Dec. 338; Pear-sall v. Western U. Teleg. Co. 9 N. Y. S. R. 132; Webbe v. Western U. Teleg. Co. 169 Ill. 610, 61 Am. St. Rep. 207, 48 N. E. 670.

The measure of damages was the amount lost as a result of the delay of the message.

Fleischner v. Pacific Postal Teleg. Cable Co. 55 Fed. 738; United States Teleg. Co. v. Wenger, 55 Pa. 262, 93 Am. Dec. 751; Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Hall, 124 U. S. 444, 31 L. ed. 479, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 577.

Mr. Percy B. Eckhart for defendant in error.

Bunn, District Judge, delivered the opinion of the court:

This action was brought by Charles J. Swan, the plaintiff in error, against the Western Union Telegraph Company, to re-to New York city, could not effect direct communication, and therefore transmitted the message to Buffalo, where it was delayed for some time without notifying the sender, the court held the telegraph company not liable for the delay, upon the ground that it had relieved itself from liability by the stipulation in its blank that the company should not be liable for negligence in transmission of the message unless it was repeated. The court held that, if the Detroit operator did not have actual knowledge that the message could not be sent forward, and there was nothing to notify the Buffalo operator of its importance because of a direction to repeat, there was no liability. Jacob v. Western U. Teleg. Co. (Mich.) 10 Det. L. N. 904, 98 N. W. 402.

While the latter decision does not profess distinctly to relieve the company of the duty to notify the sender of trouble on the line, its obvious effect is to do so. For the purposes of the case, the knowledge of the Buffalo operator must be imputed to the one at Detroit, because it could be instantly communicated, and, if the sender was entitled to notice, should have been; so that the plain result of the decision is that a stipulation requiring the message to be repeated relieves the company of the duty to notify the sender that his message will be delayed.

Failure to find sender.

It is the duty of the company in all cases practicable promptly to inform the sender of the message that it cannot be delivered. Hendricks v. Western U. Teleg. Co. 126 N. C. 304, 78 Am. St. Rep. 658, 35 S. E. 548. The court says, while its failure to do so may not be negligence per se, it is clearly evidence of negligence. In many instances by such a course the damage could be greatly lessened, if not entirely avoided. A better address might be given, mutual friends might be communicated with, or even a letter might reach the addressee. In any event, the sender might be relieved from great anxiety, and would know what to expect.

And the same opinion was adopted in Laudie v. Western U. Teleg. Co. 126 N. C. 431, 78 Am. St. Rep. 668, 35 S. E. 810, where the delivery required the message to be forwarded by telephone beyond the end of the telegraph line, which could not be done because the telephone wire was down and would not operate.

cover damages for losses sustained on account of the failure of the defendant company to give notice of the delay in sending an important business telegram relating to the purchase of certain mining stock on the Boston Stock Exchange. A jury was waived, and the case tried by the court upon the following stipulation of facts, to wit:

It is hereby stipulated and agreed by and between the parties herein, by their respective attorneys, that:

The plaintiff makes no claim against the defendant on account of negligent delay in transmitting and delivering the message in controversy, and said question may be considered by the court as eliminated from the case; but the plaintiff charges the defendant with negligently failing to give due notice of delay of the message, or by reason of the 3 27 PM under the sender's signature, with wrongfully misleading the plaintiff as to such delay, as set forth and charged in the declaration. On May 1, 1901, and for some time theretofore and thereafter, the defendant corporation was engaged in and operating a public telegraphing business and service for compensation between and within Chicago, Illinois, and Houghton, Michigan. On said 1st day of May, 1901, one Horace J. Stevens, a mining expert, and editor of certain copper-mining publications, and assistant commissioner of mineral statistics for the state of Michigan, occupied an office in the said town of Houghton, and was well known to the local office of the defendant at

The failure to notify the sender of a telegram of its nondelivery is evidence of negligence. Cogdell v. Western U. Teleg. Co. 135 N. C. 431, 47 S. E. 490. The court says, if, for any reason, it cannot deliver the message, it becomes its duty to inform the sender, stating the reason therefor, so that the sender may have the opportunity of supplying the deficiency whether it be in the address or expense of delivering the message.

But the question, whether or not it is negligence to fail to attempt to notify the sender that the addressee cannot be found so that the telegram cannot be delivered is a question of fact to be determined by the jury. Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Davis (Tex. Civ. App.) 51 S. W. 258, 24 Tex. Civ. App. 429, 59 S. W. 46.

In Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Jones, 69 Miss. 658, 38 Am. St. Rep. 579, 13 So. 471, where the company accepted a message for transmission to a point where it had no office, and then attempted to deliver it there by means of telephone, but the message was delayed, and the company set up in defense of its liability the negligence of the telephone company, the court said, if the agent who received the message for transmission not knowing that there was no office at the point of destination had, upon learning his mistake, sought the sender and informed her of the fact, leaving the responsibility with her, a different question would have been presented.

Where the company, by mistake, undertook to transmit and deliver a message to a station where it had no office, the court held that it was bound by its contract, since it could have transmitted the message to an office which it maintained only a few miles from the place named; but during the discussion the court said that, upon discovering the mistake, the agent should have informed the sender that it had no office at the place addressed, and that it could not perform its contract. Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Hargrove, 14 Tex. Civ. App. 83, 36 S. W. 1077.

It is negligence which may render the company liable, where the agent at the terminal point, upon finding difficulty in delivering a message which on its face is important, violates the rules of the company in failing to ask for a better address or further instructions. Sherrill v. Western U. Teleg. Co. 116 N. C. 655, 21 S. E. 429.

Such negligence is not excused by the fact that the receiving operator thought the sending one had given all the information that he could. Sherrill v. Western U. Teleg. Co. 117 N. C. 352, 23 S. E. 277.
67 L. R. A.

Many of the cases of nondelivery have resulted from the fact that the addressee resided beyond the free-delivery limits, and the question arose whether the sender should be notified of that fact and given an opportunity to provide the necessary expense of delivery. The Alabama court has held that the duty of ascertaining the addressee's address rested on the sender, and that the company owed him no duty in that regard. It says: Placing the duty on the sender of the telegraph message, of ascertaining whether the person to whom the message is addressed resides within the free-delivery limits, is a reasonable rule. It is reasonable because, in most cases, the sender will know where the addressee resides, and can inform the operator. In the event that the sender does not know the residence or business office of the addressee, it is but reasonable to require him to inform himself, or to make arrangements for delivery beyond the limits should it be found that the residence is beyond them. When a message is handed in for transmission it casts no duty on the terminal operator other than to copy the message correctly and to deliver it with all convenient speed if the addressee resides within the free-delivery limits. Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Henderson, 89 Ala. 510, 18 Am. St. Rep. 148, 7 So. 419.

But that rule has not met the approval of the other courts.

In Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Moore, 12 Ind. App. 136, 54 Am. St. Rep. 515, 39 N. E. 874, the court says: We are of opinion that a rule which would require prepayment of additional charges before a message would be delivered beyond the free-delivery limits, although the sender is ignorant that the charge would be made, would be unreasonable and oppressive in many instances, and should not be enforced. And the court expressly disapproves Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Henderson, 89 Ala. 510, 18 Am. St. Rep. 148, 7 So. 419.

In Bryan v. Western U. Teleg. Co. 133 N. C. 603, 45 S. E. 938, where the addressee lived beyond the free-delivery limits, and the rule of the company required an extra compensation for delivering the message there, the court said the company could have sent the message on to the addressee, collected the charges of the special delivery of her, or, if not willing to risk Houghton. On the said 1st day of May, 1901, at about 9:15 A. M., the defendant, at its public office in Houghton, Michigan, received from said Horace J. Stevens, of Houghton, Michigan, a communication to be telegraphically transmitted and delivered to the plaintiff herein in words and figures as follows:

"Houghton, Mich, May 1, 1901.

"Dr. C. Joseph Swan,

"34 Washington St., Chicago.

"Ten to twenty dollars quick rise in Mohawk. Has Wolverine lode rich as Quincy beside million dollars worth 'Mohawkite' almost spot cash opened in three upper levels. Advise quick purchase.

"Horace J. Stevens."

And about 4 o'clock in the afternoon of the said 1st day of May, 1901, the defendant delivered to the plaintiff, and he paid the charges on, a typewritten message in words and figures as follows:

"253. CH. MD. JO. 31 Collect,

"Houghton, Michigan, May 1, 1901.

"Dr. C. Joseph Swan,

"34 Washn St Chgo,

"Ten to twenty dollars quick rise in Mohawk. Has Wolverine lode rich as Quincy beside million dollars worth 'Mohawkite' almost spot cash opened in three upper levels advise quick purchase.

"Horace J. Stevens.

"3 27 PM"

that, it was negligent not to wire back to the sender demanding payment or guaranty of cost of delivery beyond the free-delivery limits. In that case, however, it appeared that, instead of attempting to make a delivery or get a better address, the receiving operator merely wired back, "Party not known."

And the Bryan Case was followed in Hood v. Western U. Teleg. Co. 135 N. C. 622, 47 S. E. 607.

In Bright v. Western U. Teleg. Co. 132 N. C. 317, 43 S. E. 841, it is intimated that the fact that the sendee resides out of the free-delivery limits is no defense to an action for failure to deliver the message, unless that fact is brought to the attention of the sender.

The sender must be notified of an office regulation at the terminal point that messages will not be delivered without an extra charge beyond a designated limit, and that the sendee resides beyond such limit. Braasbears v. Western U. Teleg. Co. 45 Mo. App. 433.

If the sendee is found to reside beyond the free-delivery limits it is the duty of the company at least to notify the sender of the message that it cannot be delivered without an additional charge. Anderson v. Western U. Teleg. Co. 84 Tex. 17, 19 S. W. 285.

The company cannot defeat its liability for neglect to deliver out of its free-delivery limits a message which it received and attempted to deliver at that point, without notifying the sender of any objection to such delivery, upon the ground that under its rules it was not bound to deliver at that point without extra compensation. Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Sweetman, 19 Tex. Civ. App. 439, 47 S. W. 676.

Whether failure to comply with a custom for the receiving office to notify the sending office of necessary extra charges is negligence is a question for the jury. Evans v. Western U. Teleg. Co. (Tex. Civ. App.) 56 S. W. 609.

Terminal office closed.

There is more conflict in the decisions as to the duty to inform the sender that the terminal office is closed.

One Federal case held that it is not the duty of a corporation whose offices are scattered all over the United States to keep the employees of each office informed of the time that their other offices close for the night. Given v. Western U. Teleg. Co. 24 Fed. 119. But the court in that case says: "We do not see any sufficient reason for believing that, if the sender had been told when he offered his last message that the office at destination was closed for the night, that he could have provided any other means of repairing the evil; and so the information, if communicated to him, would have done no good."

So the Georgia court held that, in the absence of a special contract to transmit immediately, or of an express request for information, it is not obligatory upon the telegraph company to acquaint a customer with the office hours of the company at the point of destination. Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Georgia Cotton Co. 94 Ga. 444, 21 S. E. 835.

And that case was followed in Bateman v. Western U. Teleg. Co. 97 Ga. 338, 22 S. E. 920.

And the Texas court held that one seeking the transmission of a telegram at an unusual hour is bound to ascertain whether or not the receiving office is open at that time, and cannot hold the company liable for failure to deliver the telegram before regular hours in case the office is not open at the time, and he takes no steps to ascertain the facts with reference to it. Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Neel, 86 Tex. 368, 40 Am. St. Rep. 847, 25 S. W. 15.

And that case was followed in Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Neel (Tex. Civ. App.) 25 S. W. 661; Western U. Teleg. Co. v. May, 8 Tex. Civ. App. 176, 27 S. W. 760; and Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Hill (Tex. Civ. App.) 26 S. W. 252.

However, in an earlier case it had held that, if it is impossible to send a message because the terminal office is closed for the night, the sender should be informed of the fact. Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Bruner (Tex.) 19 S. W. 149.

But in Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Harding, 103 Ind. 505, 3 N. E. 172, the court, in construing a statute requiring telegraph companies to receive dispatches during the usual office hours as meaning that they must be received and transmitted within the hours during which both initial and terminal office are open, says the question arises whether the telegraph company should not keep its agents at all points informed concerning the office hours at all other points, so that when a message is presented for transmission the sender may be apprised of any probable delay which may intervene at the other end. If the question shall be as to the mere civil liability of the company for damages, there might a case arise in which such a require-

The plaintiff had no notice that the message accepted as aforesaid by the Houghton office of the defendant would be, or had been, delayed in the transmission and delivery beyond the time ordinarily required for the transmission and delivery of such a message or for more than one-half hour after its acceptance by the defendant. The message first above quoted was accepted by the defendant from the said Stevens in manner and form as follows, viz.: The entire message, except the name and address of the sendee, was written by Stevens on one sheet of paper, and on a number of other sheets were written the names and addresses of 294 sendees, including the plaintiff. When the said message and lists of sendees were presented by Stevens at the Houghton office of the defendant a consultation was had between Stevens and the manager of the said office as to the most expeditious and convenient method of transmitting the message; and at the suggestion of the said manager it was arranged that the body of the message should be wired to Chicago and followed by the list of addresses for Chicago and points beyond, the Chicago office to relay the message to such further points. Thereupon the sheets of addresses were rearranged by Stevens, and numbered in red pencil, and the sheet bearing the plaintiff's name and address became the first sheet, with the plaintiff's name number 17 on the list, and preceded by 13 addresses for Chicago and points beyond and 3 "local" addresses. The said manager of the defendant advised Stevens that the transmission of the matter so accepted would be promptly proceeded with, and the said Stevens had no notice that the message to the plaintiff would be delayed beyond the time that would ordinarily be required for the transmission and delivery of such a message so accepted.

On the said 1st day of May, 1901, there were, besides the service of the defendant, two other available means of rapid communication from Houghton, Michigan, to Chicago, Illinois, viz., the service of the Postal Telegraph Company and the long-distance telephone, the latter directly connecting with the office of the plaintiff. From the opening up to the hour of noon on the Boston Stock Exchange on the said 1st day of May many hundred shares of Mohawk stock sold at 39, and on said day until the noon hour there was not more than $\frac{1}{2}$ of one point of fluctuation from 39 in the sales of said stock. Thereafter the said stock rose, and the last sales before the close of said exchange at 3 p. m. of the said day were at 47, and the following morning the market opened at 51. The plaintiff could have communicated by telephone with his brokers in Chicago, Wm. H. Colvin & Co., at any time on the said 1st day of May, and the said brokers then had such security for the plaintiff's orders that they would at once have proceeded to execute by telegraph his telephone order to buy 100 shares of Mohawk on the Boston Exchange. The plaintiff would testify that he inferred that the message delivered to him as aforesaid had been transmitted within the time ordinarily required for such a message, and had been sent by the said Stevens after the close of the Boston Stock Exchange, whereon Mohawk was listed, on the said 1st day of May, and that such message applied to the market of the following or 2d day of May, 1901. The plaintiff would testify that he further inferred and understood, and was not informed to the contrary, that the hour-date of "3 27 PM" appearing directly under the signature of the said Stevens on the said message indicated the hour at which the said message had been delivered by the said Stevens to the defendant. On the morning of the 2d day of May, 1901, about 10:30 A. M. (Central time), the aforesaid brokers of the plaintiff, at his order to buy "under 50," bought for him on the Boston Exchange 100 shares of Mohawk at 49 $\frac{1}{2}$, which was as high as any subsequent sale of that day, and several points below a few earlier sales of the same morning; and he would testify that information must be given to the sender if conditions are such that the message is likely to be delayed. And the same statute exists in Ohio and Missouri. Ohio Rev. Stat. § 3464; Mo. Rev. Stat. 1879, § 885. And the court has held that the penalty imposed by the Missouri statute is for the benefit of the one applying to send the despatch. Thompson v. Western U. Teleg. Co. 32 Mo. App. 191. So in Smith v. Western U. Teleg. Co. 57 Mo. App. 259, it was stated that the Missouri statute expressly provides that it shall be the duty of the agent to whom the message is tendered for transmission to inform the sender that the lines are not in working order, if he knows that to be the fact.

Statutes.

Nebraska Laws 1883, chap. 80, § 13, provided 67 L. R. A.

that information must be given to the sender if conditions are such that the message is likely to be delayed. And the same statute exists in Ohio and Missouri. Ohio Rev. Stat. § 3464; Mo. Rev. Stat. 1879, § 885.

And the court has held that the penalty imposed by the Missouri statute is for the benefit of the one applying to send the despatch. Thompson v. Western U. Teleg. Co. 32 Mo. App. 191.

So in Smith v. Western U. Teleg. Co. 57 Mo. App. 259, it was stated that the Missouri statute expressly provides that it shall be the duty of the agent to whom the message is tendered for transmission to inform the sender that the lines are not in working order, if he knows that to be the fact.

H. P. F.

that he ordered such purchase about 10 A. M. on the ground of the advices contained in the aforesaid message, and upon his aforesaid inferences and understanding as to the time of sending of said message. Later on the said 2d day of May and on the next following day Mohawk fell, and on the 3d day of May, 1901, closed at 42, and thereupon the plaintiff made inquiry of the said Stevens by long-distance telephone as to the reason for such fall, and then and there for the first time it became known to the plaintiff and to the said Stevens that the above-stated delay of the message of Stevens had occurred. Thereupon the plaintiff made inquiry on the said 3d day of May, 1901, at the Chicago office of the defendant, as to the cause of the aforesaid delay and the Chicago office wired the inquiry to the Houghton office, and the latter wired back that "wire trouble" had "delayed (Houghton) business all around (on May 1, 1901);" and the said Chicago office referred the plaintiff to the New York office of the defendant as to any claim for damages, and such claim was forthwith made in writing by the plaintiff, and from time to time repeated until the beginning of the present suit. The plaintiff would testify that the 100 shares of Mohawk purchased as aforesaid were held by him until the autumn of 1901, and finally sold at 49, and while so held their value at one time decreased to about 30, and at another time the plaintiff was called upon to pay, and did pay, an assessment of $300 on the said shares; and he also paid to his brokers one eighth of one point per share for buying and one eighth of one point per share for selling said 100 shares; and while so holding said shares he was deprived of all interest that might have accrued from the moneys so invested.

This suit was not brought until after the refusal of the defendant to settle the aforesaid claims of the plaintiff. And the foregoing statement of facts shall constitute all and the only evidence to be submitted by either party on the trial of this cause.

Chicago, June 30th, 1902.

C. Joseph Swan,

By Henry Love Clarke, His Attorney.
Western Union Telegraph Co.,

By Henry D. Estabrook, Its Attorney.

The court below, upon the hearing, after overruling several proper special requests to find for the plaintiff, rendered judgment in favor of the defendant. We think this was error, and that judgment should have been given in favor of the plaintiff for $1,050 and interest, that being the amount of damages sustained by him by reason of the defendant's neglect in not giving notice of the obstruction in its telegraph lines between Houghton and Chicago; the stipulation 67 L. R. A.

showing that at the first opportunity after the receipt of the message he paid $49.50 per share for 100 shares which would have cost him $39 per share if the message had been sent in due course of business on the morning of May 1st, within a reasonable time after its receipt at the defendant's office in Houghton. It seems evident that the duty was with the defendant company to send the message in due course, or, if it was unable from obstruction of its lines to do so, then to notify the sender of that fact so that he might avail himself of one of the two other methods of quick communication that were open to him. It does not appear from the statement of facts whether the obstruction in the lines existed at 9:15 A. M. of May 1st, the hour when the message was handed in at the Houghton office, or came in after that time. If we were to indulge in any presumption from the facts that are in evidence, it would seem reasonable to suppose that the inability existed at the time of receiving the message, when, according to the stipulation of facts, the company's manager advised Mr. Stevens that the transmission of the message would be promptly proceeded with. Thirty minutes would probably have given ample time for transmitting the message if proceeded with according to such promise, but it was not sent until nearly seven hours after its receipt. So that, if the lines were not down at the receipt of the message, they were but shortly after; otherwise the message would have been sent. But that question does not seem to be material, as the obligation resting upon defendant would be of a similar character in either case. If the lines were already down, it was the duty of the defendant to so inform the sender so that he could avail himself of another line of communication, or, if he chose, to take the chances on the defendant's restoring its service in time. If communication was obstructed after the message was received, this fact being unknown to Mr. Stevens, it was equally incumbent upon the defendant to give him timely notice of that fact. Without any explanation or excuse for the delay in sending the message from 9:15 in the morning to 4 o'clock in the afternoon, or of notifying the sender of the disability to send, the inference of culpable neglect is palpable; and, to aggravate the case, the company at some point, whether at Houghton or Chicago does not appear, placed under the sender's name the figures "3 27 PM," from which the plaintiff understood that the message was received by the company at Houghton at that time, which would have given the very reasonable time of thirty-three minutes for its transmission from the Houghton office to Chicago. But under the stipulation we are not at liberty to lay any stress.

upon this circumstance. There is nothing in the case to show what these figures placed under the sender's name import,—whether they are to note the time of the receipt of the message at Houghton, the time of sending, or the time of its receipt at the office in Chicago. It was open to the plaintiff to make inquiry, if he did not know what the figures meant. There is no evidence that he did so. He assumed that the figures noted the time the message was received by the company at its office in Houghton. These figures placed by the company under the sender's name are relied upon by the plaintiff as one ground of negligence, but we place the decision of the case solely on the ground of the negligence of the defendant in failing to give notice that its lines were obstructed so that the message could not be sent. Whether the obstruction in the lines existed when the message was delivered, or occurred after that time, it was equally incumbent upon the company to notify the sender of the fact, so that he could send the message by another line of communication. That the defendant's line was out of order was a fact unknown to the sender, but must have been well known to the defendant. Under these circumstances it was the plain duty of the defendant to give timely notice of its inability to send the message.

We have assumed thus far that there was delay due to wire trouble as stated by the Houghton office. Counsel for appellee, however, insists that, though there is thus a showing of delay, there is no showing that the delay was unreasonable, or that the Houghton office had such knowledge concerning the delay as imposed upon it the duty to inform the parties interested that the message had been delayed; and in support of this insistence point to the opening paragraph of the stipulation that "the plaintiff makes no claim against the defendant on account of negligent delay in transmitting and delivering the message in controversy, and said claim may be considered by the court as eliminated from the case." While such paragraph exempts appellee from damages in this suit on account of negligent delay in transmitting the message, it works no exemption from damages growing out of the negligent failure to give notice of the delay; for appellee is expressly charged in the stipulation with negligently failing to give due notice of the delay. The two grounds of action thus indicated—the one eliminated and the other clung to—are distinct. It is with respect, then, to the second ground, only, that the fact of delay cuts any figure. The stipulation shows the fact of delay; but leaves it open whether the cause and nature of the delay were such that the agent should have given notice to the parties interested; 67 L. R. A.

and on this open question of fact, the evidence of which was wholly within the possession of appellee, the burden of proof, in our opinion, was on the appellee.

Our view may be summed up thus: The suit being for damages growing out of the agent's failure to give notice of the delay, and the bare fact of delay appearing in the stipulation, the burden was on appellee to show the nature and cause of the delay; and, in the absence of such showing, it will be presumed that the agent at Houghton had such information as imposed on him the duty of informing the parties interested,—a duty that was not in fact performed. The case is not distinguishable in principle from Fleischner v. Pacific Postal Tele. Cable Co. 55 Fed. 738, Affirmed by the circuit court of appeals for the ninth circuit in 14 C. C. A. 166, 29 U. S. App. 227, 66 Fed. 899. The general rule applicable in that case was laid down by that court as follows: "As has been said, plaintiff in error contracted to transmit and deliver this message. At the time its wires were down, and there was an impossibility in performing the contract as required. The general rule is that, when the impossibility of performance is known to the promisor, but not known to the promisee, the former is liable in damages for failure to perform. 3 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, subd. 73, p. 898, title, Contract; 2 Parsons, Contr. 673."

The analogous rule more specifically adapted to telegraph companies is laid down by Gray in his work entitled "Communication by Telegraph" (§ 18), as follows: "If at any time a telegraph company is unable, through a disarrangement of its lines or other cause, to do what it makes a business of doing, it must inform those who wish to employ it of the fact, and thus acquaint them with the advantage of employing other means. A telegraph company offers and is employed solely to effect the rapid communication of a message. The excuse for a failure to effect that communication that the company, when it made the contract, knew that it could not perform it, can hardly be deemed a valid one."

That rule, as there laid down, commended itself to the United States circuit court of appeals in the case afore cited, and commends itself to this court as applicable to the case in hand.

It appears from the agreed facts that the plaintiff was one of 294 persons to whom this same message was to be sent. A list of these persons was prepared, with the plaintiff's name standing as No. 17 in the list, preceded by 13 other addressees for Chicago and beyond and 3 local addressees. There was to be but one despatch for these 294 customers, so that the profits, considering the amount of work to be done, would no doubt be considerable. It does not appear whether or not this circumstance had any influence upon the conduct of the company in retaining the despatch for so many hours without giving notice to Mr. Stevens, who had an office in Houghton, was a public character, and well known to the local office of the defendant at Houghton, that an obstruction in the wires rendered it impossible to transmit the message. But whether the inducements for retaining and sending the message, rather than having another company do it, were great or small, the defendant had a duty to perform. Although not a common carrier in the sense of being insurers, a telegraph company owes an obligation to the public analogous to that of a common carrier.

On the question of damages we have encountered no such difficulty as seems to have been experienced by the court below in finding a proper measure of damages for the case. If the plaintiff was entitled to recover even nominal damages, that would be better than to give a judgment for costs against him. The proper measure of damages is what the plaintiff lost through the negligence of the defendant, which was the difference between what he had to pay for the stock on the morning of May 2d and what it would have cost him in the forenoon of May 1st, when he should have received the despatch, or notice that it could not be sent.

The judgment of the court below is reversed, and judgment ordered in favor of the plaintiff in error for the sum of $1,050, with interest from the 2d day of May, 1901, besides costs.

Petition for rehearing denied with an amendment of the opinion which is included in the above report April 20, 1904.

Petition for writ of certiorari denied by Supreme Court of United States October 17, 1904.

OREGON SUPREME COURT.

FIREMEN'S FUND INSURANCE COMPANY et al., Respts.,

v.

OREGON RAILROAD & NAVIGATION COMPANY, App't.

(.....Or.....)

The suit should be at law, and not in equity, where an insurer, who has paid part of the loss caused by a fire negligently set out, and been subrogated to the rights of the property owner, and the property owner, join in a suit to recover the entire loss caused by the negligence.

(June 13, 1904.)

A PPEAL by defendant from a judgment of the Circuit Court for Umatilla County in favor of plaintiffs in an action brought to recover damages for the destruction of certain property by fire alleged to have been negligently set out by defendant. Affirmed.

Statement by Wolverton, J.:

The plaintiff the Northwestern Warehouse Company being the owner of a quantity of wheat stored at Barnhart Station, in Umatilla County, insured it with its coplaintiff, the Firemen's Fund Insurance Company, in the sum of $1,250, which was less than its value. The wheat was destroyed by fire, which it is alleged originated through the negligence of the defendant company. The insurance company paid the warehouse company the amount of the insurance, and, by articles of subrogation, took an assignment of all right or claim which the latter company had by reason of the damages sustained, to the extent of the amount so paid, and both companies join in an action against the railroad company for the entire amount of damages sustained by reason of the fire. Sam Davis was the owner at the same time of a quantity of wheat which was also destroyed. Having since assigned his claim for damages against the railroad company to plaintiffs, they sue upon this demand, also, as a second separate cause of action. A demurrer was interposed to each of these causes of action, but, being overruled, judgment was rendered against the defendant from which it appeals.

Messrs. Cotton, Teal, & Minor, H. F. Conner, and Carter & Raley, for appellant:

Assuming the wheat to have been burned by defendant's negligence, this gave rise to a single and indivisible cause of action at law in favor of the warehouse company.

Swarthout v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co. 49 Wis. 625, 6 N. W. 314; Ætna Ins. Co. v. Hannibal & St. J. R. Co. 3 Dill. 1, Fed. Cas. No. 96; Norwich Union F. Ins. Soc. v. Standard Oil Co. 8 C. C. A. 433, 19 U. S. App. 460,

NOTE.—For a case in this series holding that an action at law is the proper remedy of an insurance company on subrogation to a claim against the party negligently causing the loss, see St. Louis, A. & T. R. Co. v. Fire Asso. 28 L. R. A. 83.
67 L. R. A.

59 Fed. 984; Over v. Lake Erie & W. R. Co. 63 Fed. 34; Field v. New York, 6 N. Y. 179, 57 Am. Dec. 435; Cook v. Genesee Mut. Ins. Co. 8 How. Pr. 514; Norwich Union F. Ins. Soc. v. Standard Oil Co. 8 C. C. A. 433, 19 U. S. App. 460, 59 Fed. 984.

This cause of action cannot be split, without defendant's consent, so as to give two rights of action at law; and no consent of the defendant to the partial assignment is alleged.

Grain v. Aldrich, 38 Cal. 514, 99 Am. Dec. 423; Ætna Ins. Co. v. Hannibal & St. J. R. Co. 3 Dill. 1, Fed. Cas. No. 96; Mandeville v. Welch, 5 Wheat. 277, 288, 5 L. ed. 87, 90; Field v. New York, 6 N. Y. 179, 57 Am. Dec. 435; Cook v. Genesee Mut. Ins. Co. 8 How. Pr. 514.

No action at law can be maintained in the name of the assignor of a part of the cause of action set out in the first cause of action for his own benefit and that of his assignee.

Bellinger & Cotton's Anno. Codes & Statutes (Or.) § 27; 1 Pom. Rem. & Rem. Rights, § 126; Field v. New York, 6 N. Y. 179, 57 Am. Dec. 435.

By the subrogation no legal title in the cause of action or any part thereof was acquired by the insurance company. The interest acquired by it is purely equitable, and enforceable only in equity.

Norwich Union F. Ins. Soc. v. Standard Oil Co. 8 C. C. A. 433, 19 U. S. App. 460, 59 Fed. 984; Over v. Lake Erie & W. R. Co. 63 Fed. 34; Grain v. Aldrich, 38 Cal. 514, 99 Am. Dec. 423; Hassie v. God Is With Us Congregation, 35 Cal. 378; State Ins. Co. v. Oregon R. & Nav. Co. 20 Or. 563, 26 Pac. 838; 1 Pom. Eq. Jur. §§ 146, 148; Little v. Portland, 26 Or. 235, 37 Pac. 911; 7 Enc. Pl. & Pr. p. 763, title, Equitable assignments; Field v. New York, 6 N. Y. 179, 57 Am. Dec. 435; Cook v. Genesee Mut. Ins. Co. 8 How. Pr. 514; Sykes v. First Nat. Bank, 2 S. D. 242, 49 N. W. 1058; James v. Newton, 142 Mass. 366, 56 Am. Rep. 700, 8 N. E. 122; Childs v. Alexander, 22 S. C. 169; The Elmbank, 72 Fed. 610; Etheridge v. Vernoy, 74 N. C. 800.

The distinction between actions at law and suits in equity still exists in Oregon.

Burrage v. Bonanza Gold & Quicksilver Min. Co. 12 Or. 169, 6 Pac. 766; Beacannon v. Liebe, 11 Or. 443, 5 Pac. 273; Over v. Lake Erie & W. R. Co. 63 Fed. 34; Scott v. Neely, 140 U. S. 106, 35 L. ed. 368, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 712; Cates v. Allen, 149 U. S. 451, 37 L. ed. 804, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 883, 977.

So far as the first cause of action is concerned, the plaintiffs have mistaken the forum. Under the facts pleaded resort must be had to equity where the rights of all the parties may be adjusted in a single suit.

67 L. R. A.

Grain v. Aldrich, 38 Cal. 514, 99 Am. Dec. 423; Little v. Portland, 26 Or. 235, 37 Pac. 911; Hassie v. God Is With Us Congregation, 35 Cal. 378; Field v. New York, 6 N. Y. 179, 57 Am. Dec. 435.

Messrs. Balleray & McCourt, for respondents:

An action at law lies by an insurance company against a wrongdoer for damages, by which the property of a person injured by such company has been damaged or destroyed by such wrongdoer, to the extent of the amount paid by the insurer, he being subrogated, as a matter of law, to the rights of the owner.

Swarthout v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co. 49 Wis. 625, 6 N. W. 314; Pratt v. Radford, 52 Wis. 114, 8 N. W. 606; Allen v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co. 94 Wis. 93, 68 N. W. 873; Connecticut F. Ins. Co. v. Erie R. Co. 73 N. Y. 393, 29 Am. Rep. 171; State Ins. Co. v. Oregon R. & Nav. Co. 20 Or. 563, 26 Pac. 838; Home Mut. Ins. Co. v. Oregon R. & Nav. Co. 20 Or. 569, 23 Am. St. Rep. 151, 26 Pac. 857.

Where injury by a wrongdoer to property insured exceeds the value of the insurance, and the insurer pays the amount of the insurance, but one cause of action arises from the wrongful act and the insured or owner and insurer must join in one action to recover the amount of damages so occasioned by the wrongdoer.

Pratt v. Radford, 52 Wis. 114, 8 N. W. 606; Swarthout v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co. 49 Wis. 625, 6 N. W. 314; State Ins. Co. v. Oregon R. & Nav. Co. 20 Or. 563, 26 Pac. 838; Home Mut. Ins. Co. v. Oregon R. & Nav. Co. 20 Or. 569, 23 Am. St. Rep. 151, 26 Pac. 857; St. Louis S. W. R. Co. v. Miller, 27 Tex. Civ. App. 344, 66 S. W. 139.

A claim or chose in action arising out of a tort, except rights for such injuries as die with the person, is assignable, and the assignee may maintain an action thereon in his own name.

Bellinger & Cotton's Anno. Codes & Statutes, §§ 27, 29, 379, 380; Hill's Anno. Laws (Or.) §§ 27, 29, 369, 370, note to § 27, pp. 139, 150; Pom. Rem. & Rem. Rights, §§ 146-148; Zabriskie v. Smith, 13 N. Y. 322, 64 Am. Dec. 551; Butler v. New York & E. R. Co. 22 Barb. 110; McArthur v. Green Bay & M. Canal Co. 34 Wis. 152; State Ins. Co. v. Oregon R. & Nav. Co. 20 Or. 563, 26 Pac. 838; Horne Mut. Ins. Co. v. Oregon R. & Nav. Co. 20 Or. 569, 23 Am. St. Rep. 151, 26 Pac. 857.

Where all the parties interested in one legal demand however numerous they may be, join in an action at law they can recover upon such demand.

Swarthout v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co. 49 Wis. 625, 6 N. W. 314; Pratt v. Radford, 52 Wis. 114, 8 N. W. 606; Allen v. Chicago &

N. W. R. Co. 94 Wis. 93, 68 N. W. 873; Connecticut F. Ins. Co. v. Erie R. Co. 73 N. Y. 399, 29 Am. Rep. 171; State Ins. Co. v. Oregon R. & Nav. Co. 20 Or. 563, 26 Pac. 838; Home Mut. Ins. Co. v. Oregon R. & Nav. Co. 20 Or. 569, 23 Am. St. Rep. 151, 26 Pac. 857; Hart v. Western R. Corp. 13 Met. 99, 46 Am. Dec. 719; Monmouth County Mut. F. Ins. Co. v. Hutchinson, 21 N. J. Eq. 107.

Wolverton, J., delivered the opinion of the court:

The questions for our consideration arise upon the demurrer. The first ground of demurrer as to each cause of action is that the complaint does not state facts; the second ground, as to the first cause, is that the plaintiffs' right of action is equitable; the third, that plaintiffs have attempted to unite an equitable cause of suit in favor of the insurance company with another equitable cause in favor of the warehouse company; and the fourth, that two causes of action—one in favor of each plaintiff—are improperly united. The second ground of demurrer to the second cause of action is that such cause has been improperly united with the causes of action contained in the first count. The demurrer also goes to the entire complaint, on two grounds: First, that several causes of action have been improperly united; and, second, that a cause of action at law has been united with two equitable causes of suit. Error is assigned in overruling the demurrer as to each of the grounds designated, but the real and crucial objections center about the first count or cause of action; the latter being unobjectionable, except that it is attempted to be combined with the first in one action.

It is insisted that plaintiffs have mistaken the forum, and that they should have proceeded upon the equitable side of the court, and not at law. This is the sum and substance of the whole controversy, and we will discuss it singly, without confusing it, if possible, with the other seemingly inconsistent grounds assigned by the demurrer. The contention is that the claim or demand arising from the destruction of the wheat through the negligence of the defendant was one wholly in favor of the warehouse company and against defendant, purely legal in character, single and indivisible, and was insusceptible of assignment at law, except in its entirety; that it was assignable in part or by piecemeal alone in equity; that the alleged assignment was not of a joint or undivided interest, but of a separable or distinct part or portion of the claim or demand; and that its legal effect was so to split up the cause of action that neither company could enforce its right acquired or remaining, either singly or collectively, in a court of law, but could only have redress in a court of equity. It may be premised that it is the distinction between forms of action at law that is abolished by our Code, not that which formerly existed between actions of law and suits in equity. Although administered by the same court or tribunal, the latter distinction still remains, and the cause is only cognizable in law or in equity as the especial facts will warrant. Beaannon v. Licbe, 11 Or. 443, 5 Pac. 273; Burrage v. Bonanza Gold & Quicksilver Min. Co. 12 Or. 169, 6 Pac. 766. But, whether the cause be an action or suit, the rule is the same; requiring it to be prosecuted in the name of the real party in interest. Bellinger & Cotton's Anno. Codes & Statutes, §§ 27, 393. It is settled law that a party having an entire demand against another cannot split it up so as to subject the debtor to several actions, and, if he sue for a part only of such demand, the judgment obtained will operate to bar any further recovery. Nor can he assign a part only, so as to confer a right of action upon the purchaser, unless the debtor assents to it, in which event there arises a new and distinct contract or assignment; being sustained by the debtor's promise to the assignee, which operates to discharge the debtor of the original debt pro tanto. The reason assigned for the principle is that the debtor's undertaking is to pay an integral sum to his creditor, it being no part of his contract that he shall pay in fractions or by piecemeal, either to the creditor or his assignees; hence he has the right to stand upon the singleness of his original obligation, and cannot be subjected, without his consent, to divers actions or embarrassments not contemplated thereby, as would otherwise be the case. Mandeville v. Weloh, 5 Wheat. 277, 5 L. ed. 87; Grain v. Aldrich, 38 Cal. 514, 99 Am. Dec. 423; James v. Newton, 142 Mass. 366, 56 Am. Rep. 692, 8 N. E. 122. Assignments of choses in action or legal demands were anciently unknown to the common law. Latterly, however, they have been treated as merely equitable, but as conferring the right to use the name of the assignor, and thereby to authorize a recovery by an action at law. This relates to the entire demand. But our Code has changed the rule, and the procedure is more direct, requiring all actions to be prosecuted in the name of the real party in interest; thus treating the assignment as legal, and as conferring a legal right upon the assignee, not only as it respects the title to the demand, but in regard to the manner of its enforcement, also. A partial assignment may be said to be good at law between the parties, for, if the assignor should collect the funds, he would be regarded as holding it in trust for the assignee. It is such a demand, however, as is cognizable in equity as between all the parties,—the debtor as well as the creditor and the assignee. It confers, not a legal, but an equitable, right in the demand, enforceable alone in equity; the legal title remaining in the assignor, so that logically the assignee must go into a court of equity to enforce his claim, and, under the Code practice, must prosecute the suit in his own name, he being the real party in interest. It is said that in a court of equity "the objections to a partial assignment of a demand, which are formidable in a court of law, disappear. In equity the interests of all parties can be determined in a single suit. The debtor can bring the entire fund into court, and run no risks as to its proper distribution. If he be in no fault, no costs need be imposed upon him, or they may be awarded in his favor. If he be put to extra trouble in keeping separate accounts, he can, if it is reasonable, be compensated for it. In many ways a court of equity can, while a court of law, with its present modes, cannot, protect the rights and interests of all parties concerned." National Exch. Bank v. McLoon, 73 Me. 498, 505, 40 Am. Rep. 388. The subject is exhaustively treated in this case, and also in a masterly opinion by Judge Morrow in the case of The Elmbank, 72 Fed. 610. See also Texas Western R. Co. v. Gentry, 69 Tex. 625, 8 S. W. 98; Cook v. Genesee Mut. Ins. Co. 8 How. Pr. 514; Public Schools v. Heath, 15 N. J. Eq. 22. So that the rule against the splitting up of a demand, and denying the assignee a right of action for a part only of the claim, does not deny the right to sell and transfer an undivided part thereof, or militate against or inhibit the enforcement of the right of such an assignee in a court of equity: and, if all the owners unite in one suit upon it, the fact of the assignment of a part constitutes no defense. Whittemore v. Judd Linsced & Sporn Oil Co. 124 N. Y. 565, 21 Am. St. Rep. 708, 27 N. E. 244.

Now, arguing from these principles and premises, defendant contends that the insurance company, by its subrogation assignment, has but an equitable interest in the demand of the warehouse company against the defendant for the damages, enforceable alone in equity, and that there remains but an equitable interest in the warehouse company, enforceable alike only in equity, and that, though the insurance company and the warehouse company have joined as plaintiffs, the proceeding is still equitable, and not one cognizable in a court of law. It should be remarked in this connection that the alleged assignment confers no greater right than was conferred by operation of the subrogation to which the insurance company was entitled after having paid the amount of its insurance. Plaintiffs' counsel, upon the other hand, contend that, having united their interest by joining as plaintiffs in a common cause, the proceeding is at law, and not in equity, and was rightfully maintained. This points the exact difference between the parties. If a part being assigned should be reassigned to the original owner, or the owner should assign the balance of his demand to the assignee of a part, the remedy for the enforcement of the whole would undoubtedly be in a court of law, and the objection that the cause had been split could not obtain, as the action would be single, and not contrary to the obligation of the debtor. The equities carved out of the legal entity would thus disappear, and become again merged in the holder of the entire demand, and he would be relegated to a court of law. The argument of counsel for plaintiffs is that the same result would, in effect, follow if the parties, all joined as plaintiffs to enforce the demand. Whether this is so as a general rule we are not called upon to inquire, but that it is so in a case like the present seems to be supported by authority. The relations existing between the insured and the insurer are peculiar in themselves. In respect to the ownership of the property, and the risk incident thereto, from the time of the insurance, the insurer has a pecuniary interest in the thing insured, and the owner and the insurer are considered but one person, having together the beneficial right to the indemnity due from one who is responsible for the loss. The insurer stands practically in the position of surety to the owner, stipulating that the property should not be lost or destroyed in consequence of the peril insured against, and whenever he has indemnified the owner for the loss he is entitled to all the means for indemnity which the satisfied owner held against the party primarily liable. The right rests upon familiar principles of equity,—the doctrine of subrogation, which is dependent not at all upon privity of contract, but is worked out through the inherent right of the owner or creditor. "The liability of the railroad company is, in legal effect," says Mr. Chief Justice Shaw in a case similar to the present, "first and principal, and that of the insurer secondary, not in order of time, but in order of ultimate liability." Hart v. Western R. Corp. 13 Met. 99, 105, 46 Am. Dec. 719. To the same purpose, see also, Hall v. Nashville & C. R. Co. 13 Wall. 367, 20 L. ed. 594; St. Louis, I. M. & S. R. Co. v. Commercial Union Ins. Co. 139 U. S. 223, 35 L. ed. 154, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 554; Norwich Union F. Ins. Soc. v. Standard Oil Co. 8 C. C. A. 433, 19 U. S. App. 460, 59 Fed. 984. The subrogation is not the equivalent of an assignment. It is the putting of one party in the place of another,—the party who pays the debt in the place of the creditor,—allowing the former to enter into the rights of the latter. Bouvier, Law Dict.; Marine Ins. Co. v. St. Louis, I. M. & S. R. Co. 41 Fed. 643. If the insurance equals or exceeds the amount of the loss, and the loss is wholly paid by the insurer to the owner, the subrogation operates as an equitable assignment, and gives to the insurer a right of action at law, which he could formerly maintain under the common law in the name of the insured, but which he must now maintain under the Code in his own name; he being the real party in interest. The owner, having no interest remaining, is without any right of action, nor can he by any act of his defeat the right of the insurer. Connecticut F. Ins. Co. v. Erie R. Co. 73 N. Y. 399, 29 Am. Rep. 171; Swarthout v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co. 49 Wis. 625, 6 N. W. 314; Pratt v. Radford, 52 Wis. 114, 8 N. W. 606; Allen v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co. 94 Wis. 93, 68 N. W. 873; Norwich Union F. Ins. Soc. v. Standard Oil Co. 8 C. C. A. 433, 19 U. S. App. 460, 59 Fed. 984. So the rule was formerly declared to be that, when the value of the property exceeds the insurance money paid, the action must be brought in the name of the assured. Aetna Ins. Co. v. Hannibal & St. J. R. Co. 3 Dill. 1, Fed. Cas. No. 96; Norwich Union F. Ins. Soc. v. Standard Oil Co. 8 C. C. A. 433, 19 U. S. App. 460, 59 Fed. 984, and cases there cited. In such case, "an assignment of the claim," says Mr. Wood, "cannot be enforced, but the assured becomes trustee for the insurer, and by necessary implication the payment of the loss operates as an equitable assignment to the insurer to the extent of the sum paid under the policy." 2 Wood, Ins. 2d ed. § 499. This by right of subrogation, for the learned author is discussing the doctrine as invoked in insurance cases. The result is that there is not a splitting of the claim, either in a legal or equitable sense. The insurer, it is true, acquires an interest in the claim purely equitable, but he bears the relationship of cestui que trust to the insured as trustee. The interest acquired is with the owner, and in cause of action that he has, but it does not give rise to a new and separate cause of action. Thus the insurer and the insured become jointly interested in a single liability or cause of action, and united they are the real parties in interest, and entitled in that capacity to prosecute a joint action against the wrongdoer. Until the loss is paid, the insurer can have no right of action against the wrongdoer, but, having paid it, he is subrogated to the right of the insured to the extent of the payment. If it covers the entire loss, his right of action becomes absolute at law, and he must now bring it in his own name; but, if it covers a part only, his subrogation entitles him to an interest merely equitable, which he has and holds in joint capacity with the assured, and they together may maintain an action for the entire loss against the wrongdoer. Such has been the determination of this court in two cases,—State Ins. Co. v. Oregon R. & Nav. Co. 20 Or. 563, 26 Pac. 838, and Home Mut. Ins. Co. v. Oregon R. & Nav. Co. 20 Or. 569, 23 Am. St. Rep. 151, 26 Pac. 857.

It is insisted, however, that what was said in those cases upon the subject was not necessary to a determination of the controversy involved, and therefore that they are not authoritative as precedents. In the State Ins. Co. Case the precise question was whether the company, having paid under its policy of insurance, being but a part of the loss sustained, could prosecute an action singly against the railroad company for the amount paid by it to the assured, and it was held that it could not. The very same contention, however, was maintained by counsel for the railroad company at the hearing there as is urged here, and in response thereto the court, speaking through Mr. Justice Lord, said: "There is but one wrongful act complained of, causing one loss and creating but one liability. It is a single wrongful act, giving rise to but one liability upon a claim which is indivisible. It is immaterial whether the insurer acquires his right or interest by subrogation or assignment. When the property destroyed exceeds the value of the insurance money paid, he only acquires a joint right or interest with the owner of such property in a single cause of action or liability. Where there is but one liability or cause of action, those united in interest must adjust their loss in a single action." And again: "While at common law this liability would be enforced in the name of the insured, under the Code, except where the insurance company has paid the full value of the property, the loss of which was occasioned by the negligent act complained of, and the insurer [insured] by reason thereof has no interest, the insurer and owner of the property may join to recover the whole loss in one action. Together they have a united interest in a single cause of action or liability to which the negligent act of the defendant gave rise. The insurer acquires, not a new and separate cause of action, but only a right or interest with the owner of the property in a single cause of action or liability, and cannot, therefore, in such case, sue in his own name alone. It is upon this principle, which preserves the indivisibility of the action arising out of one loss and one liability, that under the old practice the action would have been brought in the name of the insured for the benefit of all concerned; but, the Code requiring the action to be brought in the name of the real party in interest, the insurance companies and the owners of the property destroyed, constituting such party, would have to join in the recovery. In other words, the insurance companies would join the owner in bringing one action to determine the liability of the defendant." If the issue did not really arise from the facts of the case, it was argued and insisted upon, and was at least germane to a discussion of the real question; and, having received careful consideration, the determination is persuasive and forcible as argument, if not, in legal effect, as a precedent. The Home Mutual Insurance Co. Case was a similar action. The defendant answered that the owner had previously sued the railroad company for the damages occasioned by its negligence and had recovered; that the railroad company had paid the judgment in full, whereby the owner had been fully compensated; and that he held the money thus obtained in trust for the insurer; and, for a further defense, set up that by virtue of the commencement of the action the insurance company had full knowledge of the destruction of the property, that the action was about to be commenced, and was requested by the owner to prosecute or join with him in the action, but refused, and disclaimed any interest therein, and that the defendant had not, prior thereto or at the time of the commencement or trial of said action in the trial court, any knowledge of the insurance, or that the insurance company had paid the assured anything upon his policy. To each of the separate answers a demurrer was filed and overruled, and the question in this court was as to the correctness of the rulings. It will be noted that the further answer did present the question whether the owner should be joined with the insurance company in bringing the action. What the contention of the counsel was at the hearing, the record does not disclose, but the court, again speaking through Mr. Justice Lord, after an exhaustive review of the authorities, said: "From all this the conclusion results that, where the wrongful act is single and indivisible, there can be but one liability or cause of action. Since the Code, the cause of action remains as before, single and indivisible, and the insurer acquires only a right or interest with the owner of the property in the cause of action or liability, and not a new and separate cause of action. He cannot, therefore, sue in his own name alone, in any case, under the Code, except where the amount paid by him has exceeded or equaled the value of the property destroyed, and no interest remains in the owner. When the amount of the insurance money paid is less than the value of the property destroyed by the negligent act, all the authorities agree that the insurer must either sue in the name of the insured, or join with him in bringing an action against the wrongdoer. None allows that in such case he can sue in his own name alone, for the reason that the wrongful act is single and indivisible, and gives rise to but one liability or cause of action. In that cause of action he acquires a joint right with the owner therein, and not a new and separate right of action, and therefore must prosecute it jointly with him. They have a joint interest in a single liability, and united are the real parties in interest." Thus it is that the principles and doctrines here discussed have received ample and exhaustive consideration in these cases, and the conclusion reached is so cogent and impressive that we feel bound by it, and hence conclude that this case was properly instituted by the insurer and assured jointly. The judgment was single against the defendant, and what is said in the complaint as to the damages sustained respectively by the joint plaintiffs did not change the nature of the action, and, being mere surplusage, was properly disregarded.

These considerations affirm the judgment of the trial court, and it is so ordered.

Petition for rehearing denied.

STATE of Oregon ex rel. R. LIVINGSTONE et al., Repts.,

v.

George H. WILLIAMS, Mayor of Portland, et al., Appts.

(.....Or.....)

1. Mandamus will not lie to compel the arrest without warrant of certain designated persons for the alleged commission of a misdemeanor.
2. Mandamus will not lie to compel a judge to issue bench warrants, where the pleadings do not show it to be his duty to do so, and the statute imposes the duty upon the clerk of the court.
3. Where the statute imposes the duty upon a police officer to prosecute

NOTE.—As to arrest without warrant for a misdemeanor, see also cases in note to State v. Hunter, 8 L. R. A., on page 531; and the later cases in this series of Scott v. Eldridge, 12 L. R. A. 379; Com. v. Wright, 19 L. R. A. 206; State v. Lewis, 19 L. R. A. 449; Burroughs v. Eastman, 24 L. R. A. 859; Baltimore & O. R. Co. v. Cain, 28 L. R. A. 688; White v. State, 37 L. R. A. 642; and Tillman v. Beard, 46 L. R. A. 215.

gamblers, a writ of mandamus to compel him to do so should not join the mayor and common council for the purpose of compelling them to direct him to perform his duty, since their co-operation is not necessary to secure the end sought.

4. That municipal officers have entered into a conspiracy to license gambling houses under the guise of periodical fines does not require the joining of anyone but the chief of police in a writ of mandamus to compel him to perform his statutory duty to prosecute gamblers, since in such case he cannot claim to have been directed to neglect his duty by any lawful command of a superior officer.
5. When a demurrer is sustained to an alternative writ of mandamus because several causes of action were improperly united, the plaintiff can proceed only by filing an amended complaint containing the cause of action which he elects to pursue.

(August 8, 1904.)

APPPEAL by respondents from a judgment of the Circuit Court for Multnomah County granting a writ of mandamus to compel the arrest and prosecution of certain persons who were alleged to have violated the statutes against gambling. Reversed.

Statement by Moore, Ch. J.:

This is a mandamus proceeding instituted on the relation of R. Livingstone and others against George H. Williams, as mayor of Portland; Charles H. Hunt, as chief of police; H. W. Hogue, as municipal judge; and Charles F. Beebe and others, as members of the executive board of that city, to compel the arrest and prosecution of certain persons for alleged violations of a clause of the city charter, of the provisions of a municipal ordinance, and of the requirements of a statute of the state prohibiting gambling. Alternative writs were issued, one to the members of the executive board as a body, and one to each of the other defendants, who severally demurred thereto on the grounds: (1) That they did not state facts sufficient to entitle the relators to the relief demanded; (2) that it appeared therefrom that a plain, speedy, and adequate remedy in the ordinary course of law existed for the suppression of the evil alleged; (3) that the court did not have jurisdiction of the persons of the defendants, nor of the subject-matter involved; and (4) that several alleged causes of special proceeding were improperly united. These demurrers being overruled, and the defendants declining further to plead, the writs were made peremptory, and they severally appeal.

Messrs. L. A. McNary and J. P. Kavanaugh, for appellants:

Mandamus is a writ of discretion, not a 67 L. R. A.

writ of right, and the court will consider the existing facts and examine the whole case, with due regard to the consequences of its action, in granting or refusing the writ.

Ball v. Lappius, 3 Or. 55; People v. Ketchum, 72 Ill. 212; Brokaw v. Highway Comrs. 130 Ill. 482, 6 L. R. A. 161, 22 N. E. 596; 19 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, 2d ed. p. 751.

The discretion with which the court is vested is not an arbitrary discretion, and cannot be capriciously exercised. It is a sound legal discretion to be exercised in accordance with the established rules of law, and is subject to review on appeal.

Hardee v. Gibbs, 50 Miss. 802; Brooke v. Widdicombe, 39 Md. 387; People ex rel. Emigration Comrs. v. Richmond County, 22 How. Pr. 275; Sheridan v. Fleming, 93 Mo. 322, 5 S. W. 813.

Mandamus does not supersede legal remedies, but it is intended to supply the want thereof and prevent a failure of justice, and it will not lie where the law provides another plain, speedy, and adequate remedy.

Bellinger & Cotton's Anno. Codes & Statutes, § 605; Ball v. Lappius, 3 Or. 55; Durham v. Monumental Silver Min. Co. 9 Or. 41; Oregon City v. Moore, 30 Or. 221, 46 Pac. 1017, 47 Pac. 851; Kimball v. Union Water Co. 44 Cal. 173, 13 Am. Rep. 157.

Another legal remedy that will defeat mandamus is one that will place the relator in the same position he occupied before the omission of the duty complained of, or would have occupied had the duty been performed.

Coos Bay R. Co. v. Wieder, 26 Or. 453, 38 Pac. 338; Habersham v. Sears, 11 Or. 431, 50 Am. Rep. 481, 5 Pac. 208; State ex rel. Bradley v. Cone, 40 Fla. 409, 74 Am. St. Rep. 150, 25 So. 279.

Mandamus will not be awarded to compel municipal officers to arrest and prosecute alleged offenders against the state laws and city ordinances where the state laws provide an adequate remedy by indictment or information for the same offense.

Highway Comrs. v. People, 66 Ill. 339; Highway Comrs. v. People, 73 Ill. 203; State ex rel. Thornton v. Yant, 134 Ind. 121, 33 N. E. 896; Tapping, Mandamus, 76.

Municipal officers will not be compelled by mandamus, without warrant or complaint, to arrest and prosecute persons charged with violation of the state laws and city ordinances.

State ex rel. Thatcher v. Horner, 16 Mo. App. 191; Alger v. Seaver, 138 Mass. 331; State ex rel. Wear v. Francis, 95 Mo. 44, 8 S. W. 1; People ex rel. Clapp v. Listman, 84 App. Div. 637, 82 N. Y. Supp. 784.

When the writ is directed to an officer who is vested with judicial or ministerial discretion in relation to the performance of the duty enjoined, it will compel him to act, but not to decide, in a particular manner.

People v. School Trustees, 42 Ill. App. 60; Ex parte Hays, 26 Ark. 510.

The writ cannot be awarded to compel a series of acts, or general course of conduct, where it is impossible for the court to supervise or control the performance of the acts or duties.

State ex rel. Rosenfeld v. Einstein, 46 N. J. L. 479; Diamond Match Co. v. Powers, 51 Mich. 145, 16 N. W. 314; State ex rel. Star Pub. Co. v. Associated Press, 159 Mo. 410, 51 L. R. A. 151, 81 Am. St. Rep. 368, 60 S. W. 91.

The writ will not issue in doubtful cases, and can only be invoked where the relator shows a clear legal right to the performance of the duty, and where he has no plain, speedy, or adequate remedy in the ordinary course of law.

United States ex rel. Redfield v. Windom, 137 U. S. 636, 34 L. ed. 811, 11 Sup. Ct. Rep. 197; Gregory v. Blanchard, 98 Cal. 311, 33 Pac. 199; Lamoreaux v. Ellis, 89 Mich. 146, 50 N. W. 812; State ex rel. Faïres v. Buhler, 90 Mo. 560, 3 S. W. 68; Slemmons v. Thompson, 23 Or. 215, 31 Pac. 514; People v. Hatch, 33 Ill. 140; Durham v. Monumental Silver Min. Co. 9 Or. 41.

Messrs. Pipes & Tift and Miller Murdock, for respondents:

Mandamus lies to compel municipal officers to perform specific duties in enforcing municipal law.

Goodell v. Woodbury, 71 N. H. 378, 52 Atl. 855; Wood v. Strother, 76 Cal. 545, 9 Am. St. Rep. 249, 18 Pac. 766; State ex rel. Kelleher v. St. Louis Public Schools, 134 Mo. 296, 56 Am. St. Rep. 503, 35 S. W. 617; Re Whitney, 24 N. Y. S. R. 968, 3 N. Y. Supp. 838; People ex rel. Dakin v. Byrne, 9 Abb. N. C. 127, note; State ex rel. Clark v. Police Board, 10 Ohio Dec. Reprint, 256.

Mandamus lies to compel the judge to issue a warrant of arrest.

Benners v. State, 124 Ala. 97, 26 So. 942; State ex rel. Thomas v. McOutcheon, 20 Neb. 304, 30 N. W. 58; People ex rel. Robinson v. Swift, 59 Mich. 529, 26 N. W. 694; Atty. Gen. ex rel. Calvin v. Police Justice, 40 Mich. 631; 1 Bishop, Crim. Proc. § 1403; Merrill, Mandamus, § 203; State ex rel. Harris v. Laughlin, 75 Mo. 358; State ex rel. School District v. Cummings, 17 Neb. 311, 22 N. W. 545.

Where the duty is of a public nature no demand is necessary.

19 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, p. 760; Northern P. R. Co. v. Washington Territory, 142 U. S. 492, 35 L. ed. 1092, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 283; Oroville & V. R. Co. v. Plumas County, 67 L. R. A.

37 Cal. 354; People ex rel. Atty. Gen. v. Reis, 76 Cal. 269, 18 Pac. 309.

Where permissive language is used in conferring power upon an officer, and the public or third persons have an interest in the exercise of the power, its exercise is imperative.

Kohn v. Hinshaw, 17 Or. 308, 20 Pac. 629; Smith v. King, 14 Or. 10, 12 Pac. 8; McLeod v. Scott, 21 Or. 94, 26 Pac. 1061, 29 Pac. 1.

Discretion of an inferior officer must be exercised reasonably and fairly, and its abuse may be controlled by mandamus.

Ex parte Bradley, 7 Wall. 377, 19 L. ed. 219; State ex rel. Adamson v. Lafayette County Court, 41 Mo. 226; Glencoe v. People, 78 Ill. 389; People ex rel. Oelricks v. Superior Court, 10 Wend. 285; Stockton & V. R. Co. v. Stockton, 51 Cal. 339; Wood v. Strother, 76 Cal. 545, 9 Am. St. Rep. 249, 18 Pac. 766; McLeod v. Scott, 21 Or. 109, 26 Pac. 1061, 29 Pac. 1; State ex rel. Foerstel v. Higgins, 76 Mo. App. 328.

Where an officer must be satisfied it is his duty to be satisfied upon sufficient proofs, and mandamus lies.

Stockton & V. R. Co. v. Stockton, 51 Cal. 339.

Where a city police board, in bad faith and by the abuse of its discretion, refuses to enforce the statute prohibiting the sale of intoxicating liquors on Sunday, the court of common pleas may order the board to enforce it by mandamus.

State ex rel. Clark v. Police Board, 10 Ohio Dec. Reprint, 256; People ex rel. Hamilton v. Barnes, 66 Cal. 594, 6 Pac. 698.

The relators need have no special interest where the matter concerns a public duty.

State ex rel. Shaw v. Ware, 13 Or. 380, 10 Pac. 885; State ex rel. Durkheimer v. Grace, 20 Or. 157, 25 Pac. 382.

Moore, Ch. J., delivered the opinion of the court:

It is contended by defendants' counsel that errors were committed in overruling these demurrers. Let us first consider whether or not the alternative writs state facts sufficient to warrant the granting of the relief demanded. They show the right of the relators to institute these proceedings; allege the incorporation of the city of Portland, and the several duties of the respective defendants, so far as involved herein; that since March, 1903, defendants have wilfully conspired to obstruct and defeat the enforcement of the provisions of the city charter, of the municipal ordinance, and of a statute of the state prohibiting gambling, and to thwart the conviction and punishment of persons engaged in gaming, or who keep or frequent gambling houses, and refuse to perform the duties imposed upon them in relation to such prohibition; that every day and night since the unlawful agreement was entered into a number of persons have openly and notoriously been engaged in keeping and conducting gaming and gambling houses, rooms, and premises, and playing the games so prohibited, which places have been and now are kept and used as common gaming houses for playing therein for wager of money at games of chance, some of the persons so employed and of the rooms in which they are engaged being as follows: John Thomas, 130 Fifth street, H. Shapiro, 185 Third street, George Fuller, . . . Fred Fritz, 242 Burnside street, E. Blazier, 248 Burnside street, and A. D. Martini, 81 First street; that at all times and now the defendants had and have information satisfactory to each of them that such houses and rooms were and are constantly used for gambling, but, in pursuance of their unlawful agreement, the chief of police, with the sanction and approval of his codefendants, pretends to subscribe and verify complaints against such persons, feigning to charge them severally, in due form of law, with violating the ordinances relating to gambling, files the same in the municipal court, and, without any order therefrom fixing their bail, induces them to deposit sums of money, pretending that they are in lieu of bail, and the municipal judge, in furtherance of such unlawful combination professes to order such money forfeited and paid into the city treasury, the defendants intending that the persons so charged should not appear in court for trial, they consenting thereto, relying upon the defendants' advice that they were not to be tried on such charges if twice each month they would deposit the sums agreed upon as simulated bail; that in pursuance of such conspiracy all persons conducting common gaming houses, including those hereinbefore named, have been charged by the chief of police twice each month with the offense of gambling, and in every instance they have deposited a specified sum of money in lieu of bail, which has invariably been forfeited, the municipal judge refusing to proceed with their trials; that at intervals between the time of such deposits the defendants had, and now have, satisfactory information, and know that the persons so charged are keeping gaming houses, but the defendants wilfully neglect and refuse to charge them therewith, or cause them to be arrested therefor, or to be brought to trial, and in doing so the defendants have not exercised any discretion, but act arbitrarily, and with intent to permit public gambling in violation of law; that the municipal judge, well knowing that the persons making such deposits are in the city, at their several gambling houses, engaged in playing prohibited games, wilfully neglects to issue bench warrants for their arrest, "as required by law," with intent that they shall continue to violate the city charter, municipal ordinance, and statute of the state, so as to derive from them an illegal and corrupt revenue for the city; that the largest gambling house is known as the "Portland club" at No. 130 Fifth street, which is, and at all times mentioned herein has been, kept and conducted by Peter Grant, Jack Grant, Lawrence Sullivan, Harvey Dale, and Nate Solomon; that in March, 1903, and thereafter at regular intervals, the chief of police has pretended to file in the municipal court verified complaints against one of the persons last mentioned under the fictitious name of John Thomas well knowing the true name of the person intended to be charged, who would thereupon deposit in that court, under the pretense of bail, about $250, but on November 23, 1903, the sum left for that purpose was $300, which the judge pretended to forfeit,—whereby gambling has continued in violation of law, and the persons engaged therein and pretended to be charged therewith and arrested therefor under the name of John Thomas have, in pursuance of such conspiracy, never appeared in the municipal court for trial; and that the relators have no plain, speedy, or adequate remedy in the ordinary course of law.

The four alternative writs are alike in every particular, except the 37th paragraph thereof, which relates to the respective commands enjoined upon the several defendants; the one addressed to the mayor, omitting the choice of showing cause, being as follows: "Now, therefore, you are commanded that immediately after the receipt of this writ you forthwith direct Charles H. Hunt, as chief of police of said city, to enter, or cause a proper police officer to enter, the common gaming houses described in this writ, and particularly the premises at 130 Fifth street, known as the 'Portland club,' which is a common gaming and gambling house, and forthwith arrest or cause to be arrested the person or persons who may be found there violating the gambling law and ordinances, and particularly the person who has heretofore been charged by the said chief of police in the municipal court of said city with violating the laws and ordinances of said city under the name of John Thomas, and the persons, to-wit, Peter Grant, Jack Grant, Lawrence Sullivan, Harvey Dale, and Nate Solomon, who are keeping and using said gaming and gambling house, and to seize all instruments of gaming that may be found therein, and bring the same into the municipal court, and to vigorously prosecute said persons therefor, or that you show cause," etc. The command addressed to the executive board is almost identical with that to the mayor, and that directed to the chief of police was to execute the orders of the mayor and of the executive board, as contained in the mandates to them. The municipal judge was required to perform the following service: "Now, therefore, you are commanded that immediately after the receipt of this writ you issue bench warrants for all persons charged with offenses against the ordinances of said city relating to gambling, whose bail has been forfeited by order of your court, and who have not appeared for trial in the several actions against them, and particularly for the persons charged under the name of John Thomas, charged in the months of May, June, July, August, September, October, and particularly about November 30, 1903, and that you cause the said persons to be brought before you and proceed to the trial thereof."

Section 194 of the charter of the city of Portland, which is relied on as imposing upon the mayor and the executive board the duties sought to be enforced against them in this proceeding, is, so far as deemed involved herein, as follows: "Whenever the mayor or the executive board ascertains or receives satisfactory information that any house, room, or premises within such city . . . is being kept or used as a common gaming house or common gambling premises for playing therein for wager of money at a game of chance, . . . it shall be lawful for the mayor or the executive board to authorize and direct the chief of police, or any officer of the force, to enter such house, room, or premises, and forthwith arrest all persons therein found offending against any law, and to seize all instruments of gaming . . . and bring the said articles into court." Or. Special Laws, 1903, p. 83. Assuming, without deciding, that the clause "it shall be lawful," in the section quoted, is not merely permissive, but mandatory, imposing upon the mayor and the executive board the duty of directing the chief of police as therein specified, had these officers the power, and could the court compel them, to order the arrest, without a warrant, of any person not found offending against any law? The statute prescribing when an arrest may be made without written authority is as follows: "A peace officer may, without a warrant, arrest a person, (1) For a crime committed or attempted in his presence; (2) when the person arrested has committed a felony, although not in his presence; (3) when a felony has in 67 L. R. A.

fact been committed, and he has reasonable cause for believing the person arrested to have committed it." Bellinger & Cotton's Anno. Codes & Statutes, § 1611. Ordinance No. 3,983 of the city of Portland, approved October 13, 1883, prohibiting gambling, and in force when the writs herein were issued, imposes for a violation of its provisions a punishment by imprisonment not exceeding ninety days, or by a fine not exceeding $300, or by both such fine and imprisonment. It will thus be seen that by this municipal enactment the crime of gambling is only a misdemeanor, as it is likewise regarded by statute of this state. Bellinger & Cotton's Anno. Codes & Statutes, § 1944. It would have been lawful for the mayor or for the executive board to have directed the chief of police to enter any gambling house in the city of Portland and arrested all persons found therein offending against any law, for the individuals so discovered would be guilty of a crime committed or attempted in the presence of a peace officer. Id. § 1611. When, however, the mayor and the executive board were commanded in the alternative writs, without either the filing of a complaint or the issuing of a warrant, to direct the arrest of the persons named, we do not think any authority existed therefor; for, if the persons designated were found offending against any law, the insertion of their names in the alternative writs was unnecessary, but, if not so found, their alleged crimes being only misdemeanors, and not committed in the presence of the court (Id. § 1615), it was powerless to command their apprehension. State ex rel. Wear v. Francis, 95 Mo. 44, 8 S. W. 1. In that case it was held that a writ of mandamus would not be issued to compel the board of police commissioners of the city of St. Louis to arrest and prosecute certain named persons for a violation of the law of Missouri prohibiting the sale of fermented liquors on Sunday. In rendering the decision Mr. Justice Sherwood, speaking for the court, says: "Again, on the mere admission of the respondents that four citizens have done certain acts, the latter are to be arrested and prosecuted without affidavit and without warrant. This is further, it seems to me, than the mandatory authority of a court extends. Indeed, I have found no precedent for a mandamus for the arrest of anyone. It is the duty of a sheriff, as conservator of the peace, to cause all offenders against law, in his view, to enter into recognizance with surety to keep the peace, etc. 1 Rev. Stat. [1879] § 3889. It is also his duty to quell and suppress assaults and batteries, riots, affrays, and insurrections, to apprehend and commit to jail all felons and traitors, and execute all process directed to him by legal authority. 1 Rev. Stat. [1879] § 3891. And yet it is believed that no instance can be found where a mandamus has issued commanding a sheriff to quell a riot or to arrest a criminal. The fact that no such precedent can be found argues very strongly against the exercise of such authority. It is very easy to see that, if the process of mandamus could be employed in this ordinary way, that extraordinary writ would soon descend from its high plane and become very commonplace."

To secure freedom from illegal restraint for trivial causes, the wisdom and experience of ages have sanctioned the use of certain forms of procedure which must be observed before an alleged criminal can lawfully be arrested for a misdemeanor not committed in the presence of a magistrate or of a peace officer. A formal charge must be made and filed, showing that the court has jurisdiction of the subject-matter and authority to issue a warrant, in pursuance of which a peace officer may apprehend the person therein named, and be exonerated from all consequences that may possibly result from a wrongful imprisonment, by producing the writ if it appears therefrom that the court issuing it had such jurisdiction, and there is nothing disclosed to notify him of any lack of such authority. Crocker, Sheriffs, § 48; Murfree, Sheriffs, § 1161; 3 Cyc. Law & Proc. 880; 2 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, 2d ed. pp. 869, 893; Savacool v. Boughton, 5 Wend. 170, 21 Am. Dec. 181; Re Way, 41 Mich. 299, 304, 1 N. W. 1021. In Goodell v. Woodbury, 71 N. H. 378, 52 Atl. 855, relied upon by the relators as supporting the judgment rendered herein, a writ of mandamus was issued to compel the chief of police of Manchester, New Hampshire, to enforce the provisions of a statute of that state prohibiting the sale of intoxicating liquors; but the officer was commanded to prosecute, not to arrest, the persons named in the writ. In deciding that case Mr. Chief Justice Blodgett, referring to the duties of the chief of police, says: "The defendant is not merely a peace officer; he is also a prosecuting officer. The ordinances of Manchester (1892) provide that 'he shall carry into execution within the city the laws of the state and all the ordinances of the city, and be vigilant to detect and bring to punishment all violations thereof. . . . He shall receive all complaints made to him of any violation of the laws or of any ordinance of the city, and shall, in behalf of the city, cause all offenders against such laws and ordinances to be promptly prosecuted before the police court of the city of Manchester, and shall attend, on behalf of the city, at their trial.'" In the case at bar the chief of police was required to arrest and vigorously prosecute the persons named in the alternative writ addressed to him, but, as such order was a recital of the language of the city charter (§ 195), we do not think the command can be construed, in the extraordinary remedy invoked, as a direction to file formal charges against the persons so named, before arresting them, and that a reasonable interpretation of the language used means that the officer was required (1) to apprehend such persons; (2) to bring them into the municipal court; (3) to prefer charges against them; and (4) to secure the attendance of witnesses whose testimony might lead to their conviction.

The Congress of the United States, fearing an infringement of the citizen's right of locomotion, and believing that the Constitution originally adopted did not sufficiently "secure the blessings of liberty" guaranteed by that instrument, proposed at an early day, and secured the ratification of the 4th Amendment to the fundamental law, which, so far as applicable herein is as follows: "The right of the people to be secure in their persons . . . against unreasonable . . . seizures shall not be violated; and no warrants shall issue, but upon probable cause, supported by oath or affirmation, and particularly describing . . . the persons . . . to be seized." In Re Way, 41 Mich. 299, 1 N. W. 1021, Mr. Chief Justice Campbell, commenting on the mode of apprehending persons, says: "It must not be forgotten that there can be no arrest without due process of law. An arrest without warrant has never been lawful except in those cases where the public security requires it; and this has only been recognized in felony, and in breaches of the peace committed in presence of the officer." In Bright v. Patton, 5 Mackey, 534, 60 Am. Rep. 396, it was ruled that an officer had no right to arrest without a warrant, after an offense had been committed, where the punishment is only a fine and imprisonment in jail. The illegal arrest of a person without a warrant entitles him to compensation for the damages sustained by reason of the false imprisonment. Thorne v. Turck, 94 N. Y. 90, 46 Am. Rep. 126. In McConnell v. Kennedy, 29 S. C. 180, 7 S. E. 76, the court, in distinguishing between false imprisonment and malicious prosecution, says: "The foundation of the cause of action in the one case is the right which even a guilty man has to be protected against any unlawful restraint of his personal liberty, while in the other it is founded upon the right of an innocent man to be compensated in damages for any injury he may sustain by bringing against him a groundless charge, even though such charge may be presented and prosecuted in accordance with the strictest forms of law." The statute of this state, emphasizing the love of personal liberty entertained by a free people as expressed in the 4th Amendment to the Federal Constitution, impliedly prohibits the arrest, without a warrant, of any person for the commission of a misdemeanor, unless the offense was attempted or consummated in the presence of a magistrate or of a peace officer (Bellinger & Cotton's Anno. Codes & Statutes § 1611); so that, if the chief of police had obeyed the command of the alternative writ directed to him, and, without a warrant, arrested the persons so designated, their alleged crimes being only misdemeanors, he would probably have been liable to them in nominal damages, at least, for a false imprisonment, unless he apprehended them in the act of violating the law, notwithstanding they may theretofore have been guilty of offending against the statute and city ordinances prohibiting gambling. "An officer," says the editor of Am. & Eng. Enc. Law (vol. 19, 2d ed. p. 729), "cannot be compelled to do more than the statute requires of him;" and hence the issuance of the alternative writs addressed to the mayor, to the executive board, and to the chief of police, in so far as they commanded the arrest without a complaint or warrant of the persons so named, was an exercise of power not authorized, and therefore void.

A compliance by the municipal judge with the command directed to him would have necessitated an examination of the journals of the municipal court from the time of its organization until the writ was returned to ascertain the names of the persons whose bail had been ordered forfeited and who had not appeared for trial in the several actions instituted therein against them, that bench warrants might be issued for their arrest, regardless of the fact that many of those intended to be included in the order may possibly have died in the long interim. The statute makes a distinction between bail and money deposited in lieu thereof (Bellinger & Cotton's Anno. Codes & Statutes, § 1338), so that a literal compliance by that officer with the alternative writ directed to him to "issue bench warrants for all persons charged with offenses against ordinances of said city relating to gambling where bail has been forfeited by your court, and who have not appeared for trial in the several actions against them," would not have resulted in punishing the persons alleged to have been guilty of violating the law prohibiting gambling, nor possibly corrected the evil sought to be suppressed by these proceedings, assuming, as the writs allege and the demurrers admit, that, in pursuance of the conspiracy entered into by the defendants, money, in each instance, was deposited in lieu of bail.

The alternative writs, in referring to the duties imposed on the municipal judge, contain the following averment: "Among the provisions of law not otherwise provided in said charter are that a defendant shall be admitted to bail by an order of the court, and after such order is made he may deposit in lieu thereof with the clerk the sum of money mentioned in the order; and if, without sufficient excuse, the defendant neglect or fail to appear for arraignment or upon any other occasion when his presence in court may be lawfully required, the court must direct the fact to be entered in the journal, and the undertaking of bail or the money deposited in lieu thereof, as the case may be, is thereupon forfeited. When, by reason of the defendant's neglect or failure to appear, he has incurred a forfeiture of his bail or money deposited in lieu thereof, it is the duty of the court, by an order entered upon its journal, to direct the arrest of the defendant, and his commitment to the officer to whose custody he was committed at the time of giving bail, and his detention until legally discharged. It is then the duty of the court to proceed to trial in ordinary course until final determination." The charter provides that the municipal court shall be a court of record having a seal. § 328. All proceedings before such court or the judge thereof are governed and regulated by the general laws of the state applicable to the justice of the peace or justices' courts in like cases, except as in the charter otherwise provided. § 332. The executive board is authorized to appoint a clerk of such court, who is to keep the seal thereof and affix it to any process emanating therefrom. § 331. The demurrers having admitted the duty of the municipal judge to enter in the journal of his court a memorandum of the forfeiture of the money deposited in lieu of bail, and of orders in such cases directing the arrest of the persons whose money had been forfeited, as alleged, it must be presumed, in the absence of any averment to the contrary, that such official duty has been regularly performed (Bellinger & Cotton's Anno. Codes & Statutes, § 738, subd. 15), and, this being so, the issuing of the bench warrants did not devolve upon the judge, as stated in the command addressed to him, but on the clerk of the municipal court, who is required to affix the seal thereof to any process. Charter of Portland, § 331. Though it is alleged in the alternative writs that the municipal judge wilfully neglects to issue bench warrants, "as required by law," for the arrest of persons whose money deposited in lieu of bail has been declared forfeited, it is not averred that it is incumbent on him to issue such warrants, unless the duty in this respect can be implied from the qualifying phrase "as required by law." It was necessary to state, as a major premise: (1) The facts constituting the duty which the law enjoins on the defendants; and, as a minor premise, (2) their failure, neglect, or refusal to comply therewith, from which the court deduces the conclusion sought to be established. Bliss, Code Pl. 3d ed. § 137. The writs having stated that the municipal judge neglected to issue bench warrants "as required by law," the phrase quoted is only a legal conclusion, and not the averment of a material fact, stated as the foundation of an enforceable right. It will be remembered that the sufficiency of the alternative writs was challenged by demurrer and in such case the probative facts alone are admitted, and not the conclusions of law so stated. Longshore Printing Co. v. Howell, 26 Or. 527, 28 L. R. A. 464, 46 Am. St. Rep. 640, 38 Pac. 547. It not having been alleged that it was incumbent upon the municipal judge to issue bench warrants, and, as we have seen, this duty is imposed by the city charter on the clerk of the municipal court, it follows that the alternative writs do not state facts sufficient to constitute a cause of special proceeding against the former.

Considering the fourth ground of the demurrer interposed to the alternate writs,—that several causes of alleged special proceedings have been improperly united,—it has been held that one writ of mandamus against all officers concerned in the separate but co-operative steps for levying and collecting a tax is the proper and effective remedy to secure its exaction. Labette County v. United States, 112 U. S. 217, 28 L. ed. 698, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 108. In deciding that case Mr. Justice Matthews, in speaking for the court on the procedure, said: "There is no incongruity in such a writ. It would not be complete or effective without it embraced all the particulars which, in law are essential to the full duty contemplated by it, the performance of which is necessary to secure its benefits to the party who sues it out. So here the object of this writ, though including many particular steps in obeying it, is nevertheless single. In that it is intended to obtain an end which is the result of the means prescribed. The command of the writ is to perform the general duty, which is obeyed by performing the successive steps which constitute it. Clearly, the writ would not be chargeable with duplicity if addressed to one person, although it commanded the performance of a series of acts, each of which was a condition of the performance of its successor, where the right of the relator consists in the result legally flowing from the combined whole. It can make no difference in principle that in a particular case the law, instead of casting the performance of the entire duty upon a single person, has divided it among several, each to perform but one act in the series, and each acting independently, and not as responsible to any of the others but all required to co-operate in the attainment of the single result, and by a continuous and uninterrupted succession, so as to preserve the integrity and unity of the performance of an entire duty. The relator is entitled to an effective writ, and he can have it only on the terms of joining in its commands all those whose co-operation is by law required, even though it be by separate and successive steps in the performance of those official duties which is necessary to secure to him his legal right. Otherwise the whole proceeding is liable to be rendered nugatory and abortive." To the same effect, see State ex rel. Byers v. Bailey, 7 Iowa, 390.

In the case at bar it will be remembered that § 194 of the city charter provides that it shall be lawful for the mayor or the executive board, on the receipt of satisfactory information, etc., to direct the chief of police to enter common gaming houses in the city and arrest all persons therein found offending against any law. The statute of this state makes it the duty of a police officer to inform against and diligently prosecute any and all persons whom he shall have reasonable cause to believe guilty of violating the provisions of an act prohibiting gambling. Bellinger & Cotton's Anno. Codes & Statutes, § 1950. This enactment made the chief of police of the city of Portland a prosecuting officer (Goodell v. Woodbury, 71 N. H. 378, 52 Atl. 855), and, if he had reasonable cause to believe that any person was violating such law, also imposed on him the duty of enforcing its provisions without any direction to that effect from the mayor or from the executive board. The obligation thus enjoined results from an office (Bellinger & Cotton's Anno. Codes & Statutes, § 605), and for a refusal by the chief of police to comply with the duty which the law prescribes a peremptory writ of mandamus addressed to him would be as effectual to suppress public gambling as though the mayor and the executive board were also commanded to direct him to do the same thing. This result can be secured by commanding the chief of police to perform a plain duty devolving upon him, and, as a writ of mandamus will not lie to compel the execution of vain and useless things (10 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, 2d ed. p. 757), no necessity existed for joining a cause of special proceeding against the mayor or the executive board, the discharge of whose duties, if it be assumed they are imperative, was not an indispensable or successive step in the procedure to suppress the evil of which the relators complain. In discussing this feature of the case we have not overlooked the legal principle that a public officer cannot be compelled to do a particular act which his superior in office has lawfully ordered him not to do. 19 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, 2d ed. p. 731; Butterworth v. United States, 112 U. S. 50, 28 L. ed. 656, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 25. Assuming, as the demurrers admit, that a conspiracy existed whereby the defendants sought to raise a revenue by a method tantamount to licensing public gambling, the scheme alleged to have been adopted was unlawful, and, the agreement entered into being void, the chief of police was not bound thereby, nor under any obligation to obey the orders of his superiors, the mayor or the executive board; and hence mandamus will lie to compel him diligently to prosecute any and all persons whom he has reasonable cause to believe guilty of a violation of the provisions of the statute prohibiting gambling. Bellinger & Cotton's Anno. Codes & Statutes, § 1950; Goodell v. Woodbury. 71 N. H. 378, 52 Atl. 855.

The relators are entitled to an effective writ, and, having prayed for greater relief than they of right can demand, an amendment may be desired. The statute prescribes what shall constitute the pleadings in mandamus proceedings, and provides that these formal allegations of the parties are to have the same effect, and may be amended in the same manner, as pleadings in an action. Bellinger & Cotton's Anno. Codes & Statutes, § 612. In State v. Crites, 48 Ohio St. 142, 26 N. E. 1052, it was ruled that where, upon a petition in mandamus, an alternative writ is issued commanding a number of acts, either separate or connected, to be done by the defendant, the relator is entitled to a peremptory writ for such distinct acts or parts of connected acts as he may show a right to have performed, where there is no such mutual dependence between the several acts or parts of acts that they cannot be separated or divided. A mandatory writ, properly framed, alleging the required facts, and addressed to all the officers of the city of Portland who are indispensable in taking the necessary successive steps required successfully to prosecute persons for violating the law prohibiting gambling, will, in our opinion, tend to suppress the evil. If the chief of police refuses or wilfully neglects to inform against and diligently prosecute any and all persons whom he shall have reasonable cause to believe guilty of a violation of the provisions of the act prohibiting gambling, he shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and on conviction thereof in a criminal action instituted for that purpose will be punished, and the court so trying him will declare his office vacant for the remainder of his term. Bellinger & Cotton's Anno. Codes & Statutes, § 1951.

67 L. R. A.

The command of an alternative writ of mandamus is equivalent to a conclusion of law, deducible from the facts alleged, showing the particular act which the law specifically enjoins as a duty resulting from an office, trust, or station (Bellinger & Cotton's Anno. Codes & Statutes, § 605); the failure, neglect, or refusal of the defendant to comply therewith; and the right of the relator to insist upon its specific performance. It is to the mandatory part of the writ, however, that a party defendant must look to discover the specific act which he is commanded to perform. Though it may be possible that the right to part of the relief sought against the chief of police may be stated in the writs, the rule in this state is that, when a demurrer to a complaint is sustained on the ground that several causes of action have been improperly united, the complaint is completely overthrown, and the plaintiff can only proceed by filing an amended complaint containing the cause of action which he elects to pursue. Cohen v. Ottenheimer, 13 Or. 220, 10 Pac. 20.

As an alternative writ of mandamus stands for a complaint in an ordinary action (McLeod v. Scott, 21 Or. 94, 26 Pac. 1061, 29 Pac. 1), the judgment must be reversed, the peremptory writs set aside, and the cause remanded, with directions to sustain the demurrers in the particulars indicated herein, and for such other proceedings as may be necessary, not inconsistent with this opinion: and it is so ordered.

SOUTH DAKOTA SUPREME COURT.

Lottie A. RICHARDS, Resp't.,
v.
TRAVELERS' INSURANCE COMPANY,
Appt.

(.....S. D.....)

1. The contention that the evidence does not show that the death of one insured against accident resulted from external, violent, and accidental means cannot prevail where it is alleged in the complaint and admitted by the answer that assured fell from cars and received injuries from which he died.
2. Recovery on an accident insurance policy upon a person whose occupation is stated as "cattle dealer or broker visiting yards," the duties of which require him to ride on trains of cattle cars from place to place in the freight yards, is not prevented by the fact that a clause in the policy provides that it shall not cover accidents received while being in any part of a car not provided for occupation by passengers.

(July 13, 1904.)

APPEAL by defendant from a judgment of the Circuit Court for Lawrence County in favor of plaintiff in an action brought to recover the amount alleged to be due on a policy of accident insurance. Affirmed.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Messrs. Frawley & Laffey and E. J. Frawley, for appellant:

Evidence introduced by plaintiff failed to show that the death of Arthur L. Richards was the result of external, violent, and accidental means.

Southard v. Railway Pass. Assur. Co. 34 Conn. 574; Barry v. United States Mut. Acci. Asso. 23 Fed. 714; Feder v. Iowa State Traveling Men's Asso. 107 Iowa, 538, 43 L. R. A. 693, 70 Am. St. Rep. 212, 78 N. W. 252; Carnes v. Iowa State Traveling Men's Asso. 106 Iowa, 281, 68 Am. St. Rep. 306, 76 N. W. 683; 1 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, 2d ed. p. 330; Taylor v. Pacific Mut. L. Ins. Co. 110 Iowa, 621, 82 N. W. 326; Bon v. Railway Pass. Assur. Co. 56 Iowa, 664, 41 Am. Rep. 127, 10 N. W. 225; Whitlatch v. Fidelity & C. Co. 149 N. Y. 45, 43 N. E. 405; Pollock v. United States Mut. Acci. Asso. 102 Pa. 230, 48 Am. Rep. 204; Travelers' Ins. Co. v. McConkey, 127 U. S. 661, 32 L. ed. 308, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1363.

The contract cannot be varied, changed, enlarged, and modified by testimony of usage and custom.

Travelers' Protective Asso. v. Small, 115 Ga. 455, 41 S. E. 628; Deacon v. Mattison, 11 N. D. 190, 91 N. W. 35; Healey v. Mannheimer, 74 Minn. 240, 76 N. W. 1126, 77 N. W. 1117; Heumphreus v. Fremont, E. & M. Valley R. Co. 8 S. D. 103, 65 N. W. 466; Strunk v. Smith, 8 S. D. 407, 66 N. W. 926; Brantingham v. Huff, 174 N. Y. 53, 95 Am. St. Rep. 545, 66 N. E. 620; Mead v. Dunlevie, 174 N. Y. 108, 66 N. E. 658; Grubbs v. Boon, 201 Ill. 98, 66 N. E. 390; Overbeck v. Travelers' Ins. Co. 94 Mo. App. 453, 68 S. W. 236; Columbus & H. Coal & I. Co. v. Tucker, 48 Ohio St. 41, 12 L. R. A. 577, 29 Am. St. Rep. 528, 26 N. E. 633; Liverpool, L. & G. Ins. Co. v. T. M. Richardson Lumber Co. 11 Okla. 579, 69 Pac. 936; Vollrath v. Crowe, 9 Wash. 374, 37 Pac. 474; Anderson v. Rogge (Tex. Civ. App.) 28 S. W. 106; 22 Enc. Pl. & Pr. p. 406; 16 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, 2d ed. p. 966; 27 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, pp. 851, 882.

The evidence introduced in this cause shows that the injury which resulted in the death of Richards was received by him while he was in a state of voluntary intoxication, and was the result of such intoxication. Where the policy excepts death or injury happening while the insured was intoxicated, or in consequence of his having been under the influence of intoxicating liquors, the exception applies to prevent a recovery, whether the condition of the insured was the cause of the injury or not.

1 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, 2d ed. p. 318; Shader v. Railway Pass. Assur. Co. 66 N. Y. 441, 23 Am. Rep. 65; Shader v. Railway Pass. Assur. Co. 5 Thomp. & C. 643; Standard Life & Acci. Ins. Co. v. Jones, 94 Ala. 434, 10 So. 530; Muir v. Railway Pass. Assur. Co. 37 L. T. N. S. 356; Travelers' Ins. Co. v. Snowden, 45 Neb. 249, 63 N. W. 392.

The condition is valid and protects the insurer in case of accident so happening.

1 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, 2d ed. p. 312; Hull v. Equitable Acci. Asso. 41 Minn. 231, 42 N. W. 936; Miller v. Travelers' Ins. Co. 39 Minn. 548, 40 N. W. 839; Huston v. Traveler's Ins. Co. 66 Ohio St. 246, 64 N. E. 123; Travelers' Ins. Co. v. Snowden, 45 Neb. 249, 63 N. W. 392.

NOTE.—As to what constitutes an accident within the meaning of a life-insurance policy, see also note to Fidelity & C. Co. v. Johnson, 30 L. R. A. 206; and the later cases in this series of Modern Woodmen Acci. Asso. v. Shryock, 39 L. R. A. 826; Kasten v. Interstate Casualty Co. 40 L. R. A. 651; Western Commercial Travelers' Asso. v. Smith, 40 L. R. A. 653; Feder v. 67 L. R. A.

Iowa State Traveling Men's Asso. 43 L. R. A. 693; Smith v. Aetna L. Ins. Co. 56 L. R. A. 271; Preferred Acci. Ins. Co. v. Robinson, 61 L. R. A. 145; Fetter v. Fidelity & C. Co. 61 L. R. A. 459; Horsfall v. Pacific Mut. L. Ins. Co. 63 L. R. A. 425; Delaney v. Modern Acci. Club, 63 L. R. A. 608; and Maryland Casualty Co. v. Hudgins, 64 L. R. A. 349.

The injury received by the deceased, which resulted in his death, was received by him while he was voluntarily exposing himself to unnecessary danger.

DeLoy v. Travelers' Ins. Co. 171 Pa. 1, 50 Am. St. Rep. 787, 32 Atl. 1108; Carpenter v. American Acci. Co. 46 S. C. 541, 24 S. E. 500.

His act as disclosed by the evidence was not only extremely risky, but entirely unnecessary.

Willard v. Masonic Equitable Acci. Asso. 169 Mass. 288, 61 Am. St. Rep. 285, 47 N. E. 1006.

The danger was obvious, the exposure unnecessary, the want of ordinary care and diligence clear, and the injury resulted from said voluntary exposure and carelessness, which not merely contributed thereto, but was the sole contributing and controlling cause.

Carpenter v. American Acci. Co. 46 S. C. 541, 24 S. E. 500; Neill v. Travellers' Ins. Co. 7 Ont. App. Rep. 573, 12 Can. S. C. 55; Shaffer v. Travelers' Ins. Co. (Ill.) 22 N. E. 589, Affirming 31 Ill. App. 112; Follis v. United States Mut. Acci. Asso. 94 Iowa, 435, 28 L. R. A. 78, 58 Am. St. Rep. 408, 62 N. W. 807; Travelers' Ins. Co. v. Jones, 80 Ga. 541, 12 Am. St. Rep. 270, 7 S. E. 83; Morel v. Mississippi Valley L. Ins. Co. 4 Bush, 535; Bean v. Employers' Liability Assur. Corp. 50 Mo. App. 459; Williams v. United States Mut. Acci. Asso. 133 N. Y. 366, 31 N. E. 222; Willard v. Masonic Equitable Acci. Asso. 169 Mass. 288, 61 Am. St. Rep. 285, 47 N. E. 1006; Standard Ins. Co. v. Langston, 60 Ark. 381, 30 S. W. 427; Travellers' Ins. Co. v. Seaver, 19 Wall. 531, 22 L. ed. 155; Conboy v. Railway Officials & Employees' Acci. Asso. (Ind. App.) 43 N. E. 1017; Hoffman v. Travellers' Ins. Co. (N. Y.) cited in 7 Am. L. Rev. 594; Miller v. Travelers' Ins. Co. 39 Minn. 548, 40 N. W. 839; Huston v. Travelers' Ins. Co. 66 Ohio St. 246, 64 N. E. 123.

The contributory negligence of the insured will not always defeat a recovery upon such a policy.

Equitable Acci. Ins. Co. v. Osborn, 90 Ala. 201, 13 L. R. A. 267, 9 So. 869; Fidelity & C. Co. v. Sittig, 181 Ill. 111, 48 L. R. A. 359, 54 N. E. 903; Travelers' Ins. Co. v. Randolph, 24 C. C. A. 305, 47 U. S. App. 260, 78 Fed. 759; Commercial Travelers' Mut. Acci. Asso. v. Springsteen, 23 Ind. App. 657, 35 N. E. 973; Lehman v. Great Eastern Casualty & Indemnity Co. 7 App. Div. 424, 39 N. Y. Supp. 912.

No recovery can be had unless the insured was in the exercise of ordinary care.

Shevlin v. American Mut. Acci. Asso. 94 Wis. 180, 36 L. R. A. 52, 68 N. W. 866; 67 L. R. A.

Sargent v. Central Acci. Ins. Co. 112 Wis. 29, 88 Am. St. Rep. 946, 87 N. W. 796; Lovell v. Accident Ins. Co. 3 Ins. L. J. 877; Sawtelle v. Railway Pass. Assur. Co. 15 Blatchf. 216, Fed. Cas. No. 12,392; Smith v. Preferred Mut. Acci. Asso. 104 Mich. 634; 62 N. W. 990; Tuttle v. Travellers' Ins. Co. 134 Mass. 175, 45 Am. Rep. 316; Metropolitan Acci. Asso. v. Taylor, 71 Ill. App. 132; Collins v. Fidelity & C. Co. 63 Mo. App. 253.

Messrs. Moody, Kellar, & Moody and S. C. Polley, for respondent:

The cause of the injury to the deceased was either accidental or suicidal, and the latter will never be presumed.

Carnes v. Iowa State Traveling Men's Asso. 106 Iowa, 281, 68 Am. St. Rep. 306, 76 N. W. 683.

The rate fixed upon and paid by deceased was for a person engaged in the business as a "dealer and broker visiting yards." When defendant took the risk on a person engaged in that business it necessarily and knowingly assumed all the risks incident to that business.

Dailey v. Preferred Masonic Mut. Acci. Asso. 102 Mich. 289, 26 L. R. A. 171, 57 N. W. 184, 60 N. W. 694; Brown v. Railway Pass. Assur. Co. 45 Mo. 221; Plinsky v. Germania F. & M. Ins. Co. 32 Fed. 47; Michigan Shingle Co. v. State Invest. & Ins. Co. 94 Mich. 389, 22 L. R. A. 319, 53 N. W. 945.

The risk was not an unnecessary one, but one that was highly necessary, unless he abandoned the very purpose for which he was there.

Keene v. New England Mut. Acci. Asso. 161 Mass. 149, 36 N. E. 891; Nolan v. Brooklyn City & N. R. Co. 87 N. Y. 63, 41 Am. Rep. 345.

Fuller, J., delivered the opinion of the court:

As the beneficiary named in an accident policy held by her husband at the time of his death plaintiff recovered the full amount claimed, and the defendant appeals.

The injury resulting in the death of Mr. Richards occurred in the afternoon of the 7th day of April, 1900, in the vicinity of the Sioux City stockyards, near the Seventh street crossing. When first seen in that locality, he was lying face downward on the top of a freight car loaded with horses belonging to him, and which he had shipped from Whitewood, in this state. At this time the car was standing still, but the railroad employees were making up a train; and, as soon as this particular car was reached, the yardmaster discovered Richards lying in the position above mentioned, on top of the car, with his head on the running board. Concerning the matter, one of the witnesses testified in part as follows: "When the cars were coupled, a railroad man—I think it was the yardmaster—went up to this man Richards, took him by the shoulder, and shook him, and told him he would have to get down and go into the way car, as the train was about to pull out. The fellow did get up, and commenced to look around as though he didn't know where to get down. The railroad man told him to come down this way, and come down the ladder. The railroad man went down the ladder. Mr. Richards, instead of going down the ladder, took hold of the brake on the other car, and stepped over onto the next car. By this time the yardmaster had got down onto the ground, and we were looking up to see what kind of a move the fellow was going to make next. Just then he staggered off the foot-board on the side of the car, and fell off. One of the railroad men cried: 'Look out! the man is going to fall. For God's sake! let's catch him.' The three of us stepped up to the side of the car and put our hands up to save the man from falling, but, instead of rolling off as we expected he would, he turned, and staggered and fell, and went right through our arms, and struck on the rail next to the track adjoining the track where the cars stood. The distance between the rail on which his head struck and the next rail underneath the car from which he fell I would say was about 4 or 6 feet. After he struck the rail he was unconscious." The foregoing testimony is fully corroborated by the yardmaster, who further testified that Richards had ridden on the top of this car from the Union Stockyards to the place where the car stood when the accident occurred, and that the car was to be taken into a freight train to go north at about 3:50 P. M. Concerning the time, place, and circumstances, he further stated that "the accident occurred at about 3:30 P. M. When I first saw Richards, he was lying down on top of the car, his feet toward the outside, his face resting on his arms, and his head about the middle of the car. His feet were just about the outer edge. After this car came up from the stockyards with Richards riding on it, we were waiting for these two cars, and shoved them into the head end of the train. I rode the two cars in, stopping them north of the Seventh street crossing, as the rest of the train was below Seventh street. After stopping them, I spoke to Richards. I next spoke to Richards on top of the car, asking him if that was his car. He said it was, and asked me where the caboose was. I showed him the caboose on the rear end of the train and told him he would have to come down that side ladder,—the one I was just coming down. Then he sat up as I was coming down, but he had not stood up. I then went down the ladder to the ground. I next saw him just as he was stepping to the next car south or west, when he was in a staggering position. He was just in the act of stepping over to the next car. His body was on the other car, and I think he had hold of the brake wheel. He next took two or three steps first one way and then the other. He balanced for a moment on one foot on the edge of the car, and then pitched head-first to the ground."

The insured is classified in the policy as "a cattle dealer or broker visiting yards by occupation," and the insurer is obligated to pay his widow $1,250 in case death resulted from bodily injuries "effected during the time of this insurance through external, violent, and accidental means," provided, among other things, that "this insurance shall not cover injuries from voluntary exposure to unnecessary danger, or from intoxication or while intoxicated. Nor shall this insurance cover accident, injuries, or death, or loss of limb or sight, resulting directly or indirectly from entering or trying to enter or leave a moving conveyance using steam as a motive power (except cable and electric cars) or while being in any part thereof not provided for occupation by passengers."

It being alleged in the complaint, and admitted in the answer, "that on or about the 7th day of April, 1900, while said policy was in full force and effect, said Arthur L. Richards fell from the cars in the city of Sioux City, and received injuries from which he afterward died," there is no merit in the contention that the evidence fails to show that the death of the insured resulted from external, violent, and accidental means. The word "fall," as here used, implies the happening by chance of an undesigned and involuntary event which in this case resulted in bodily injuries effecting the death of the insured through external, violent, and accidental means, clearly within the terms of the policy. Moreover, the evidence offered on the part of the defense, after its motion for a directed verdict was denied, conclusively shows that Richards did all in his power to avoid falling, and thus obviate the accident which proved fatal. Under any view of the case, it clearly appears that the injury was not self-inflicted, nor the immediate result of voluntary exposure to unnecessary danger. Scheiderer v. Travelers' Ins. Co. 58 Wis. 13, 46 Am. Rep. 618, 16 N. W. 47; Wilson v. Northwestern Mut. Acci. Asso. 53 Minn. 470, 55 N. W. 626; National Ben. Asso. v. Jackson, 114 Ill. 533, 2 N. E. 414.

The jury having found, from sharply conflicting testimony, submitted under proper instructions, that Mr. Richards was not intoxicated, it becomes important to determine whether a person rated, classified, and insured as "a cattle dealer or broker visiting yards by occupation" may be restricted by his policy to the occupancy of cars provided for the transportation of passengers, by the use of steam as a motive power, or whether he may climb upon and ride on the top of a freight car whenever it becomes necessary in order to pursue his business in the ordinary and usual manner.

That the rate of insurance was based upon the nature of the business in which he was engaged clearly appears from the following letter written by the company concurrently with the issuance of the policy:

St. Louis, Mo., Sept. 5, '99.

Mr. A. L. Richards,
Whitewood, S. D.

Dear Sir:—

I am just in receipt of a letter from you which I note is dated July 19th, 1899; the letter, however, was received to-day, and of course it will be necessary for me to adjust the matter referred to as of current date. In view of the fact that your occupation is that of "cattle dealer and broker" and as you probably visit yards, etc., the proper rate to be charged you is $10.00 for each $1,000 insurance with $5.00 weekly indemnity, and as you paid Mr. Olney $12.50 this would purchase a policy of $1,250.00 with $6.25 weekly indemnity, $12.50 premium. I therefore have written and enclose herein policy No. 1,332,471 in these amounts which I trust will dispose of the matter to your satisfaction.

Upon the theory that a person insured as "a cattle dealer or broker visiting yards by occupation" may do whatever is customary among reasonably prudent men engaged in the same occupation, respondent was permitted to prove that it was the usual practice and absolutely necessary for persons thus employed to ride upon the top of cars from the chute where live stock is loaded in Sioux City to the railway yards where trains are made up and, on account of the distance from the stockyards to the railway yards, and the great number of tracks therein, there is no other way to know the location of his cars, and get out of the city on the train into which they are taken. Modern courts very justly hold restrictions in accident policies inoperative, which render the insurance nugatory and valueless by attempting to avoid liability for injuries sustained by the insured while performing necessary acts embraced in his classified occupation.

In the case of Dailey v. Preferred Masonic Mut. Acct. Assn. 102 Mich. 289, 26 L. R. A. 171, 57 N. W. 184, 60 N. W. 694, the supreme court of Michigan denied the right of the insurer to insist upon a provision in a policy issued to a railway passenger conductor to the effect that nothing would be paid for injuries or death occasioned by an attempt to enter or leave moving conveyances using steam as a motive power, and that such acts were necessary and justified on the part of the insured was judicially noticed. So a provision in a policy issued to a railway engineer attempting to limit the liability of the insurer to "death caused by an accident while traveling by public or private conveyance provided for the transportation of passengers" was adjudged to be ineffectual, and it was held that, while an engine is not a conveyance provided for the transportation of passengers, the company was liable for the death of the engineer, who was killed while operating his locomotive. Brown v. Railway Pass. Assur. Co. 45 Mo. 221. In an action on a fire insurance policy covering a stock of candies, confectionery, toys, fruit, and all such other stock as is usually kept for sale in confectionery stores, and containing a provision that such policy should "cease and determine if . . . fireworks should be kept temporarily or otherwise," it was shown that such prohibited articles were in fact kept in the stock, and testimony was admitted to prove that such articles are usually kept for sale in confectionery stores; and it was held that the custom was sufficient to destroy the effect of the condition, and that plaintiff was entitled to recover. Plinsky v. Germania F. & M. Ins. Co. 32 Fed. 47. Again, in an action on a policy to recover for an injury sustained by a cattle dealer while attempting to climb to the top of a car that was under full headway, in order to avoid being left at a way station, it was held competent for the insured to show that it was the customary practice of men engaged in his business to accompany their stock to market and board freight cars whenever it becomes necessary to do so in order to get animals upon their feet that have fallen or lain down upon the floor. Speaking for the circuit court of appeals concerning the proposition, Judge Caldwell says: "In the matter of accompanying his cattle to market, and caring for them when in the course of transportation, the plaintiff could rightfully do whatever was customary with other cattle dealers under like circumstances and conditions. The plaintiff had a right, if it was not his duty, to incur all the risk and danger incident to caring for and looking after his cattle in the cars, while en route to their destination, in the time and manner customary among reasonably prudent and careful shippers; and such risks and dangers, no matter how great they are, do not constitute any violation of the provisions of the policy requiring the plaintiff to use due diligence for his personal safety and protection. Nor is the incurring of such risks and dangers a voluntary exposure to unnecessary dangers, within the meaning of that clause in the policy. Whether the assured at the time he received his injury was engaged in doing something outside of the occupation covered by his policy, or whether, though in the pursuit of an occupation covered by the policy, he exposed himself to unnecessary danger, and did not exhibit due regard for his personal safety, such as an ordinarily prudent man charged with the same duty, and placed in like circumstances, would have done, were questions of fact for the determination of the jury." Pacific Mut. L. Ins. Co. v. Snowden, 7 C. C. A. 264, 12 U. S. App. 704, 58 Fed. 342.

The view we have taken renders it unnecessary to specially discuss the remaining assignments of error, all of which have received careful consideration.

As no error of law occurred at the trial, and the verdict is abundantly sustained by the evidence, the judgment appealed from is affirmed.

NORTH CAROLINA SUPREME COURT.

STATE of North Carolina

v.

John MARSH, Appt.

(134 N. C. 184.)

1. A motion for arrest of judgment for defect in the indictment in a criminal case may be made for the first time in the appellate court.
2. The omission from an indictment for rape of the words "against her will," or their equivalent, renders the indictment fatally defective.

On Rehearing.

3. A supreme court which has arrested a judgment of conviction in a criminal case because of a fatal defect in the indictment as presented to it may, even after the close of the term, grant the state the opportunity to correct the record so as to show that the alleged defect did not exist, and proceed to hear the appeal upon the corrected record.

(Douglas and Walker, JJ., dissent.)

(March 31, 1903.)

NOTE.—Amendment of record to cure defect for which motion in arrest of judgment has been made.

- I. Amendment in the trial court.
 - a. Amendment of pleading.
 1. In general, 179.
 2. To supply omitted averments, 179.
 3. To cure insufficient or erroneous allegations, 181.
 4. By striking out, 182.
 - b. Amendments concerning indictments, informations, or complaints.
 1. As to verification, 182.
 2. As to organization of grand jury, 182.
 3. As to finding, return, or filing of indictment, 182.
 4. To cure omissions, 183.
 5. To cure errors or insufficiency, 183.
 - c. Amendments concerning verdict or judgment.
 1. General verdict rendered on declaration containing several counts, 183.
 2. Misjoinder of counts, 184.
 3. Verdict in criminal case, 184.
 4. Amendment of judgment, 184.
 - d. Amendment of record, 184.
- II. Amendment in the appellate court.
 - a. To cure errors or omissions, 185.
 - b. On certiorari or certificate, 185.

This note does not include cases where the 67 L. R. A.

defect on which the motion in arrest of judgment is based, is supplied by legal intendment or presumption, or held cured by verdict or statutory provision.

I. Amendment in the trial court.

a. Amendment of pleading.

1. In general.

At common law the court had power to allow an amendment of the pleadings in any case until final judgment and after motion in arrest of judgment. Chaffee v. Rutland R. Co. 71 Vt. 384, 45 Atl. 750.

In Georgia a motion in arrest of judgment can be sustained only for such defects appearing on the face of the pleadings as are not amendable. Merritt v. Bagwell, 70 Ga. 579.

In Daley v. Atwood, 7 Cow. 483, an amendment of plaintiff's oyer was granted after trial and verdict for him, though the defendant's attorney supposed the oyer to be correct until the trial, and relied on moving in arrest of judgment, of which privilege he was deprived by the amendment.

2. To supply omitted averments.

The omission from the complaint of certain averments, which might have been supplied by amendment, on application before or after judgment, is not ground for a motion in arrest. Brickman v. South Carolina R. Co. 8 S. C. N. S. 173.

On a motion in arrest of judgment, based on APPPEAL by defendant from a judgment of the Superior Court for Union County convicting him of rape. Judgment arrested and case subsequently restored to docket.

The indictment, the validity of which was called in question, was as follows:

"The jurors for the state upon their oaths present that John Marsh, late of the county of Union, on the 27th day of October in the year of our Lord one thousand nine hundred and two, with force and arms at and in the county aforesaid, in and upon one Alice Carelock in the peace of God and the state then and there being, unlawfully, wilfully, violently, and feloniously did make an assault, and her, the said Alice Carelock, then and there unlawfully, wilfully, and feloniously did ravish and carnally know, against the form of the statute in such case made and provided, and against the peace and dignity of the state."

Messrs. Redwine & Stack and Armfield & Williams, for appellant:

A petition to rehear does not lie in criminal cases.

State v. Jones, 69 N. C. 16; State v. Council, 129 N. C. 511, 39 S. E. 814.

In civil cases a motion like this does not lie.

2 Cyc. Law & Proc. p. 586; 3 Cyc. Law & Proc. p. 214; United States v. Adams, 9 Wall. 557, 19 L. ed. 584; Cook v. Moore, 100 N. C. 295, 6 Am. St. Rep. 587, 6 S. E. 795.

The clerk of the court below is the custodian of the record, and only his statement of it would be accepted.

This case was submitted by the state, and the ground that the record does not show diversity of citizenship of the parties, the court may permit the amendment of the pleadings to show such fact under U. S. Rev. Stat. § 954, U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 696, providing that any court of the United States may at any time permit either of the parties to amend any defect in the process or pleadings upon such conditions as it shall, in its discretion or by its rules, prescribe. Maddox v. Thorn, 8 C. C. A. 574, 23 U. S. App. 189, 60 Fed. 217.

After a motion in arrest of judgment has been sustained conditionally, in an action for divorce, for want of an averment as to the residence of the plaintiff in the county, but who was alleged to be a resident of the state, the court may grant leave to the plaintiff to amend her complaint by suitable averments as to her residence, and a final decree may be entered for the plaintiff without formally setting aside the order arresting the judgment. Johnson v. Johnson, 30 Colo. 402, 70 Pac. 692.

Plaintiff in an action for malpractice, who fails to allege freedom from contributory negligence, for the want of which averment a motion in arrest of judgment is made, may cure the defect by amendment under Iowa Code, § 3760, providing for the amendment of defective pleadings on motions in arrest of judgment. Decatur v. Simpson, 115 Iowa, 348, 88 N. W. 839.

A motion in arrest of judgment was made on the ground that a specified count of the declaration in assumpsit was defective in not stating any promise; which was true as to the copy of the declaration served, but the draft of the declaration and the nisi prius record contained that clause. The motion was denied because not made in time, but the court said that, if it had been made in season, they would have allowed an amendment. Norris v. Durham, 9 Cow. 151.

The omission from the declaration of the words "for money payable," in an action to recover freight, is a defect to cure which the court may permit an amendment after judgment and on motion in arrest. Wilkinson v. Sharland, 11 Exch. 33, 1 Jur. N. S. 405.

In an action on a promissory note, where a motion in arrest of judgment was made on the ground that the declaration shows no right in the plaintiffs to sue in their own names, an amendment of the declaration was permitted on 67 L. R. A.

payment of the costs of the motion in arrest of judgment. Martin v. Wilber, 9 U. C. C. P. 75.

The judgment should be arrested in an action upon the bond given by an administratrix whose husband is joined as a party defendant, where the declaration fails to aver that the cause of action accrued before marriage, and that she has a separate estate; but leave to amend may be granted if the plaintiff shows probable grounds for believing that the final decision, as to the averments suggested, will be in his favor. Kirchhoffer v. Ross, 11 U. C. C. P. 467.

A motion in arrest of judgment should be sustained in an action by a principal to recover from his agent sums of money collected by the latter, where the plaintiff fails to aver any demand for the payment of such money, and the court is without power to permit an amendment of the complaint, by averring a demand on application made therefor some twenty days after the verdict of the jury had been returned, and while a motion for a new trial was pending. Heddens v. Younglove, 46 Ind. 212.

So, in an action of trespass quare clausum fregit and carrying away the goods of the plaintiff, where the declaration is faulty for failure to specify the goods taken, the judgment will be arrested; nor can the defect be amended, since, after verdict, no new count can be added, nor can the form of the declaration be essentially varied. Mayfield v. White, 1 Browne (Pa.) 241.

After a judgment had been arrested for failure to aver in the complaint the performance of a condition precedent the plaintiff's counsel moved to amend, upon payment of costs, by inserting such an averment. This was opposed as being too late after judgment was arrested. Lord Mansfield said: As it is doubtful whether this can be done or not, and as it is certain that the difference between paying costs to amend and beginning afresh is very trifling in this case, it is better to let the judgment stand arrested. Collins v. Gibbs, 2 Burr. 899.

The judgment may be arrested, after verdict for the plaintiff, for want of a stipuliter, the absence of which is a defect not amendable. Cooper v. Spencer, 1 Strange. 641.

But see Sayer v. Pocock, 1 Cowp. 407, holding that after verdict a replication will be amended, as against a motion in arrest, by adding a argued upon the very point as to whether or not the bill of indictment would suffice, without any motion for a certiorari. The motion at bar necessitates a certiorari. Whatever might have been the practice at common law, this court has uniformly held that a petition for a certiorari comes too late after argument.

State v. Blackburn, 80 N. C. 477; State v. Harris, 114 N. C. 830, 19 S. E. 154; Garner v. State, 36 Tex. 693; Cory v. State, 55 Ga. 236; State v. Daugherty, 59 Mo. 104; Fielden v. People, 128 Ill. 595, 21 N. E. 584; Cruiser v. State, 18 N. J. L. 206.

Mr. Robert D. Gilmer, Attorney General, for the State:

The Constitution of North Carolina, art. 8, § 4, declares that "the supreme court shall have power . . . to issue any restitutio, the omission of which was a clerical error.

3. To cure insufficient or erroneous allegations.

In Betts v. Hoyt, 13 Conn. 471, holding that, in ordinary cases a court will refuse to sanction amendments of pleadings after they have been adjudged insufficient upon motion in arrest, it is said that by doing so a negligence and laxity in pleading and practice might be encouraged, which would prove very inconvenient, both to the bar and the court. But it is added that, if serious and irretrievable loss would result to the party from a refusal of the amendment, a just exercise of the discretionary power of the court would sanction the amendment.

In an action on the case for deceit, where a general verdict was rendered, the court arrested judgment on the ground that both counts in the declaration were bad, and refused leave to amend the declaration. Fenwick v. Grimes. 5 Cranch, C. C. 439, Fed. Cas. No. 4,733.

A motion in arrest of judgment is properly sustained, when the complaint is insufficient and leave to amend the same is properly denied, where the amendment sought to change the entire character of the action, and would still have left the complaint radically defective. Crawford v. Crockett, 55 Ind. 220.

But in an action of trespass vi et armis, where the issue was thus closed, "which the defendant prays may be inquired of by the court," and after verdict it was moved in arrest of judgment that, the issue being closed to the court, the jury could not legally return any verdict in the case, the court permitted the record to be amended by inserting the word "country" in the closing of the pleadings, instead of the word "court." Phelps v. Sanford, Kirby, 343.

A complaint in an action for a breach of promise of marriage may, after proof of the promise, be amended as to the consideration for such promise by showing the plaintiff's agreement to go to a specified place for the purpose of marrying the defendant; and it is immaterial that the amendment cures a defect which would render the declaration bad upon motion in arrest of judgment. Harvey v. Johnston, 6 Dowl. & L. 120.

Where a suit is commenced in vacation by declaration entitled generally as of the preceding writ necessary to give it a general supervision and control over the proceedings of the inferior courts." The power is not only constitutional, but inherent.

Ea parte Biggs, 64 N. C. 202; State v. Jefferson, 66 N. C. 311.

Mistakes made by this court, or by its clerk, through inadvertence, may be corrected after the mandate has gone down to the superior court, either at the term at which the mistake occurred, or at a subsequent term.

Scott v. Queen, 95 N. C. 340; Cook v. Moore, 100 N. C. 294, 6 Am. St. Rep. 587, 6 S. E. 795; Summerlin v. Cowles, 107 N. C. 459, 12 S. E. 234; Scroggs v. Stevenson, 108 N. C. 260, 12 S. E. 1031; Bernhardt v. Brown, 118 N. C. 710, 36 L. R. A. 402, 24 S. E. 527, 715.

ceding term, and the cause of action has arisen since such term, on a motion in arrest after verdict, plaintiff will be permitted to amend such clerical error. Thomas v. Leonard, 11 Wend. 53.

So, a declaration which claims rent to a date subsequent to the first day of the term in which it is entitled may be amended upon a motion in arrest of judgment so as to show the fact that the suit was commenced at a later date. Zule v. Zule, 24 Wend. 76, 35 Am. Dec. 600.

A declaration in assumpsit, which erroneously laid the assumption as of a date subsequent to the commencement of the action, may be amended by inserting a prior date, and a motion in arrest of judgment, based on such defect, be rejected after the amendment. Bailey v. Musgrave, 2 Serg. & B. 219.

In Amphlett v. Warrington, 3 West. L. J. 380, a motion in arrest of judgment, filed in an action of slander, because the declaration alleged the speaking of the words at a day subsequent to the commencement of the suit, was overruled, and leave was given to the plaintiff to amend.

That the declaration is in the name of one who, as administratrix, instituted the suit, but who was removed and a successor appointed before the alias summons issued, which change was suggested to the court, is not a good ground, after issue joined and verdict found, for arresting the judgment; but the court may order the declaration to be amended in accordance with the record by substituting the proper plaintiff. Hirst v. Randall, 9 W. N. C. 349.

A judgment recovered by a husband and wife for slanderous words spoken of the wife will not be arrested for a clerical mistake, whereby the word "plaintiff," instead of "plaintiffs," was used in the claim to damages in the declaration. In a dissenting opinion by Alvey, J., it is said: I think there can be no doubt of the power of the court to allow amendment of a defect like the one in the case before us, after verdict, and after motion in arrest made. I think, therefore, instead of resisting the motion in arrest for a plain defect, by relying upon construction and intentment not warranted by the language employed, the plaintiff should have applied to amend; but, failing to make such application, the court below could not have done otherwise than arrest the judgment. Newcomer v. Kean, 57 Md. 121.

This court has power to grant the motion prayed for by the state under § 274 of the Code, relating to an order, judgment, verdict, or other proceeding taken through mistake, inadvertence, surprise, or excusable neglect.

Wiley v. Logan, 94 N. C. 564; Wade v. Newbern, 73 N. C. 318; Farrar v. Staton, 101 N. C. 78, 7 S. E. 953; Williamson v. Boykin, 104 N. C. 100, 10 S. E. 87.

The law required the appellant to send up a correct transcript. This he has failed to do. It appears unseemly that he should be permitted to reap any benefit from his own wrong.

Howell v. Harrell, 71 N. C. 161; 2 Tidd, Pr. *1137; Ætina L. Ins. Co. v. McCormick, 20 Wis. 265; Legg v. Overbagh, 4 Wend.

188, 21 Am. Dec. 116; The Palmyra, 12 Wheat. 10, 6 L. ed. 534; Rowland v. Kroyenhagen, 24 Cal. 52; Lovett v. State, 29 Fla. 356, 11 So. 172, 30 Fla. 142, 17 L. R. A. 705, 11 So. 550.

Clark, Ch. J., delivered the opinion of the court:

The prisoner's counsel moves in this court in arrest of judgment for defect in the indictment, which is set out above in the statement of the case. This he had a right to do, though no objection on that ground was taken in the court below. State v. Watkins, 101 N. C. 702, 8 S. E. 346; State v. Caldwell, 112 N. C. 854, 16 S. E. 1010; rule 27 of this court (128 N. C. 662, 39 S. E. XIV).

See Girard v. Stiles, 4 Yeates, 1, infra, I. c. 1.

4. By striking out.

Where defendant moves in arrest of judgment upon the ground that an action for personal injuries to the plaintiff, and an action for damages resulting from the death of his child, which was injured in the same accident, are improperly joined, the plaintiff may be permitted to amend his statement by striking from it all claim for damages arising from the death of the child, and the motion in arrest of judgment may be refused. Specht v. Pennsylvania R. Co. 7 Pa. Co. Ct. 54, 24 W. N. C. 317.

In an action by husband and wife to recover damages sustained by the latter from being bitten by a dog, the declaration was allowed to be amended, after motion in arrest of judgment for insufficiency of the declaration, by striking out the averment of damages to the husband by reason of expense and loss of the wife's services. The court said: The declaration, when amended, stated the cause of action, and the only cause of action upon which the trial was had, and which the jury under the instructions of the court could have considered. The only purpose to be accomplished by it was to avoid a technical objection which might have been made under a general verdict. Bates v. Cilley, 47 Vt. 1.

b. Amendments concerning indictments, informations, or complaints.

1. As to verification.

The error in overruling a motion to quash an information on the ground that the seal of the notary public was not attached to the affidavit upon which the information depended is not cured by permitting the notary public to attach his seal, after a motion in arrest of the judgment has been made, but which was overruled when the notarial seal was attached. Miller v. State, 122 Ind. 355, 24 N. E. 156.

A motion in arrest of judgment, based on the ground that it does not appear by the record why the complaint was sworn to before a special justice instead of the justice of the police court, should be granted where no amendment of the record was offered. Com. v. Fay, 151 Mass. 380, 24 N. E. 201. 67 L. R. A.

2. As to organization of grand jury.

A motion in arrest of judgment, made by one convicted of homicide, on the ground that the transcript of the record sent on change of venue to the county in which he was tried did not show that the indictment was found by a legally organized jury, is properly overruled, where the transcript of the record returned on certiorari shows the due impaneling of the grand jury. Green v. State, 19 Ark. 178.

On a motion in arrest of judgment, based on the ground that the foreman of the grand jury which found the indictment under which the defendant was convicted was not selected as required by law, and that the grand jury was illegally drawn, the court may correct its minutes so as to make them correspond with the truth, and show that the foreman was properly chosen and the grand jury legally drawn. State v. Branch, 25 La. Ann. 115.

In State v. Seaborn, 15 N. C. (4 Dev. L.) 319, where a motion in arrest of judgment was based on a variance between the names of the jury contained in the original venire and the names on the list of grand jurors, the court considered the defect waived by the prisoner going to trial on the plea of not guilty to the indictment, but intimated that, if the case was open for a motion to amend any of the mistakes of the clerk in transcribing the record of the case, that the motion ought to be granted.

3. As to finding, return, or filing of indictment.

The court has power to direct an entry to be made in its minutes altering the record during the same term so as to show that the witnesses on whose evidence an indictment was found were sworn by the court on the bill, and were sent with it to the grand jury, although the ground of a pending motion in arrest of judgment is thereby removed. State v. Roberts, 19 N. C. (2 Dev. & B. L.) 540.

The omission to set out in the caption of an indictment that it was found at a special court of sessions may be supplied by amendment as against a motion in arrest of judgment, made on that ground. State v. Williams, 2 M'Cord, L. 301.

A motion in arrest, based on the absence of a formal entry of the fact that an indictment was found by the grand jury and returned by them into court, is properly denied, where the actual Code 1883, § 1101, defines "rape" as the "ravishing and carnally knowing any female of the age of ten years or more, forcibly and against her will," with the further statement as to what constitutes rape when the female is under that age. All the authorities concur that the word "ravish" is indispensable. Hale, P. C. 628; 2 Rawle's Bouvier, Law Dict. 825; Co. Litt. 184, note p; Gouglemann v. People, 3 Park. Crim. Rep. 15. It takes its place with "feloniously," "burglariously," and "malice aforethought," which have been held indispensable (State v. Arnold, 107 N. C. 861, 11 S. E. 990; State v. Barnes, 122 N. C. 1036, 29 S. E. 381), wherever appropriate, because they have no synonyms (2 Hawk. P. C. chap. 23, § 77). As to the words

"carnally know," there are authorities which hold that they are not indispensable, being implied in the word "ravish." Wharton, Crim. Pl. & Pr. 9th ed. § 263. But there are others that rather intimate that these words should be also used. The word "feloniously" is, of course, indispensable (State v. Scott, 72 N. C. 461), as, indeed, it is in all indictments for felonies (State v. Bunting, 118 N. C. 1200, 24 S. E. 118). But all three of the above terms are used in the indictment in this case. The defect alleged is the absence of the words "forcibly" and "against her will." As to the word "forcibly," in State v. Jim, 12 N. C. (1 Dev. L.) 142, it was held that an indictment omitting both terms "forcibly" and "against her will" was defective. In State v. John- presentment of the indictment is not controverted, and the records may be amended nunc pro tunc to show such fact. Johnson v. State, 24 Fla. 162, 4 So. 535.

After a motion in arrest of judgment on the ground that the record does not show that the bill was returned into court by the grand jury, the court has power to amend the record so as to make it speak the truth, and show that the grand jury did return the bill into court. State v. Bordeaux, 93 N. C. 560.

But in Felker v. State, 54 Ark. 489, 16 S. W. 663, where a motion was made to arrest the judgment on the ground that it did not appear from the record that the indictment upon which the defendant was tried was returned into court by the grand jury, the court held that the omission could not be supplied by a nunc pro tunc order made in the absence of the defendant, and, while not deciding whether such an objection to the indictment could be properly raised after conviction, intimated that the proper practice would be to raise the objection by motion to set aside the indictment.

The trial court may order the clerk to indorse an indictment as filed, by a nunc pro tunc entry, and then overrule a motion in arrest of judgment, made on the ground of the omission of such indorsement. James v. State, 41 Ark. 451.

4. To cure omissions.

A motion in arrest of judgment, in a criminal case, made on the ground that the commonwealth failed and neglected to join issue with the defendant on his plea of not guilty, is properly overruled, where the want of a stipulatio to join the issue in the plea of not guilty was cured by amendment. Com. v. Ault, 10 Pa. Super. Ct. 651.

5. To cure errors or insufficiency.

Defects in an indictment which may be cured by amendment are not good grounds in arrest of judgment. State v. Lark, 64 S. C. 350, 42 S. E. 175.

The caption of an indictment may be amended at any time, and although a motion in arrest of judgment has been made because of a defect therein. State v. Creight, 1 Brev. 169, 2 Am. Dec. 656.

A judgment will not be arrested because the information did not specify the particular animal of the cow kind which the defendant is charged to have stolen, since the information might be amended in that regard by leave of the court. State v. Johnson, 29 La. Ann. 717.

So, a description in an indictment for larceny of the property stolen as "1 beef of the cow kind," while loose pleading, is not ground for arrest of judgment, since, under La. Rev. Stat. § 1047, the court might have permitted the indictment to be amended and made more specific had the objection been raised by demurrer or motion to quash. State v. Perkins, 49 La. Ann. 310, 21 So. 839.

A motion in arrest of judgment will not lie on the ground of variance between the indictment and the proof, where, during the trial, an amendment of the indictment to conform to the proof in regard to the ownership of the property stolen was permitted. Com. v. Livingston, 5 Pa. Dist. R. 666, 18 Pa. Co. Ct. 236, 27 Pittsb. L. J. N. S. 153.

But in a prosecution for larceny, where the indictment alleges that the prosecutor knew that the property was stolen, the court is without power to amend the indictment after verdict and motion in arrest of judgment by substituting the name of the defendant for that of the prosecutor. Reg. v. Larkin, 6 Cox, C. C. 377.

c. Amendments concerning verdict or judgment.

1. General verdict rendered on declaration containing several counts.

The court will amend a general verdict after motion in arrest by entering it on that one of two counts which is good, where it appears by the judge's notes that the jury calculated the damages on evidence applicable to the good count only. Williams v. Breedon, 1 Bos. & P. 329.

A verdict may be amended by judge's notes after motion in arrest, on the ground that the verdict was general and the counts inconsistent, where the evidence only goes to the consistent counts. Eddowes v. Hopkins, 1 Dougl. K. B. 375.

So, where there are some good counts and some bad in the declaration, and a general verdict is rendered on the whole, if the evidence has been on the good counts only the verdict may be amended from the judge's notes after notice of motion in arrest of judgment. Union Turnp. Co. v. Jenkins, 1 Calnes, 392; Stafford v. Green, 1 Johns. 504; Highland Turnp. Co. v.

son, 67 N. C. 55 it was held that the omission of the word "forcibly" was not fatal, when the charge was "against her will, did feloniously ravish;" the court saying, through Reade, J., that any equivalent word would answer in lieu of "forcibly;" that, though the word "ravish" would seem to imply force, yet that word is not an express charge of force, standing alone, but that the addition thereto of the words "feloniously" and "against her will" was sufficient, under our statute, as an express charge of force. In State v. Powell, 106 N. C. 635, 11 S. E. 191, where both words "forcibly" and "against her will" were omitted, it was held, following State v. Jim, 12 N. C. (1 Dev. L.) 142, that the bill was defective. This last case was for an assault with intent to commit rape, and was overruled in State v. Peak, 130 N. C. 711, 41

S. E. 887, but only on the ground that, in an indictment for assault to commit rape, it was not necessary to describe rape in the words which must be used to charge the offense of rape itself. Thus, on a review of our authorities, it will be seen that it has been held that the absence of both "forcibly" and "against her will" are fatal, but that "forcibly" can be supplied by any equivalent word; that it is not supplied by the use of the word "ravish," but it is sufficiently charged by the words "feloniously and against her will." In all the cases above reviewed where the words "against her will" are omitted, the bill was held defective. No doubt, the words "against her will" can be supplied by an equivalent as well as the word "forcibly," but we do not find such equivalent in this bill. The words "unlawfully, wilfully, and M'Kean, 11 Johns. 98; Sayre v. Jewett, 12 Wend. 135; Barnes v. Hurd, 11 Mass. 57.

And this may be done on hearing the motion. Norris v. Durham, 9 Cow. 151.

In an action of assumpsit, where one of the counts in the declaration is bad and a general verdict is found for the plaintiff, the verdict may, after a motion in arrest of judgment, be amended so as to find for the plaintiff upon one count only, upon the certificate of the judge that all the counts in the declaration were in fact for one and the same cause of action. Barnard v. Whiting, 7 Mass. 358.

But an order directing that a verdict for general damages be entered for the party upon one good count in the declaration and for the defendant on all the other counts is erroneous on motion in arrest of judgment, where the evidence applied generally to the declaration. Empson v. Griffin, 11 Ad. & El. 186.

In an action on covenant, where a recovery was had for sums due on a lease and for amounts on agreements, but in a sum in excess of the damages demanded in the declaration, and a motion in arrest of judgment was entered, the court refused to amend the verdict so as to separate the amounts recovered upon the lease and agreements respectively, or to permit the amount of damages claimed in the declaration to be increased, but, upon the plaintiff's agreement that the verdict be set aside and a new trial be granted, permitted him to amend his declaration. Girard v. Stiles, 4 Yeates, 1.

2. Misjoinder of counts.

In an action where the declaration contains two counts, in one of which the plaintiff sues an administrator, and in the other in his own personal right, for which misjoinder of counts the judgment is arrested, the court may properly set aside the order arresting the judgment a year after it was made, and allow the verdict to be amended by entering the same nunc pro tunc on the first count only, where the evidence justifies a verdict on either count. Murphy v. Stewart, 2 How. 268, 11 L. ed. 261.

3. Verdict in a criminal case.

A failure to enter a verdict of a jury returned on an indictment on the minutes of the 67 L. R. A.

court at the term when it was returned does not afford a sufficient ground to arrest the judgment; but the court may, at the next succeeding term, order the verdict to be regularly entered on the minutes of the court nunc pro tunc. Hall v. State, 3 Ga. 18.

After a motion has been made in arrest of judgment upon the ground that the verdict does not show on which count of the indictment the defendant was convicted, the court may, by order nunc pro tunc at the same term, perfect the record so that it will show the fact that the prosecuting officer was required to elect upon which count of the indictment he would proceed, and that he elected to proceed upon a specified count. Camp v. State, 91 Ga. 8, 16 S. E. 379.

4. Amendment of judgment.

The court may, pending a motion in arrest, dismiss the suit as to a married woman, and permit the judgment to be amended accordingly. La Riviere v. La Riviere, 77 Mo. 512.

d. Amendment of record.

Motions in arrest of judgment may be defeated by an amendment of the record in any matter that is legally amendable. Green v. State, 19 Ark. 178.

The court may, on the trial of an indictment, order defects in the minutes of the court, assigned as ground of a motion in arrest, to be corrected so as to conform to the facts. State v. Valere, 39 La. Ann. 1060, 3 So. 186.

Upon a motion in arrest of judgment, made in a criminal case and based upon alleged defects in the minutes, the judge may order the minutes to be corrected so as to conform to the facts, where they are within his knowledge and recollection. State v. Lewis, 39 La. Ann. 1110, 3 So. 348.

The trial court has power during the same term, but subsequent to the trial of one accused of crime, to amend or correct its minutes in accordance with the facts, so as to show the observance of certain formalities because of the silence of the record concerning which a motion in arrest of judgment has been made. Mobley v. State, 46 Miss. 501.

The court may, at the time a motion in arrest of judgment is to be argued, amend its record feloniously" did "ravish and carnally know" do not charge it was "against her will," except by implication; and it is held in State v. Johnson, 67 N. C. 55, that they do not even sufficiently charge that the act was "forcibly" perpetrated, in the absence of the words "against her will."

It is a subject of regret that a trial of so serious a nature, occupying so much of the public time, should thus go for naught, but we do not feel at liberty to overrule the above repeated decisions of this court. Those decisions were so easily accessible, and, indeed, were so well known to the draftsman of this bill, that the omission of the words "against her will" must have been accidental. But we will repeat here what was said in State v. Barnes, 122 N. C. 1038, 29 S. E. 383: "The accustomed and approved forms are accessible, and should be followed by solicitors till (as with murder, perjury, and in some other instances) they are modified and simplified by statute,"—further adding that solicitors would best serve the object of the statute (Code 1883, § 1183) passed to disregard refinements and informalities, and to secure trials upon the merits "by observing approved forms, so as not to raise unnecessary questions as to what are refinements and informalities, and what are indispensable allegations."

The form set out in 1 Archbold, Crim. Pr. & Pl. 999, is (after charging the assault), "and her, the said C. D., then violently and against her will feloniously did ravish and carnally know." This form, while omitting "forcibly," retains, it will be noted, the words "against her will," and in a criminal case, although after the term at which the trial was had, so that it will conform to the truth and show that the jurors were duly sworn, were put in charge of a sworn officer, were permitted to separate upon each adjournment with the consent of the defendant, and that each juror assented to the verdict upon being polled. Blansky v. State, 3 Minn. 427, Gil. 813.

The court may properly amend its journal by inserting the omitted name of a juror, so that the minutes will truthfully show that the jury consisted of twelve persons instead of but eleven, although a motion in arrest of judgment has been made on the ground of such omission. Woods v. Green, Wright (Ohio) 503.

After a motion in arrest of judgment has been filed, on the ground that the transcript of the record transmitted on change of venue does not show the opening of the court at the term at which the indictment purports to have been found, and contains no entry showing the impaneling of the grand jury, a certiorari may be ordered; and, upon the return of the transcript, embracing the entries omitted in the original transcript, the motion in arrest of judgment will be overruled. Binns v. State, 35 Ark. 118.

II. Amendment in the appellate court.

a. To cure errors or omissions.

If the record contains errors, blunders, irregularities, alterations, erasures, and interlineations, the judgment will be arrested and a new trial granted, with permission to place the case upon the trial list upon the order of the court, when the record shall have been properly amended. Hilty v. Knox, 22 Pittsb. L. J. N. S. 325.

If the damages assessed in an action exceed those laid in the writ and declaration, and the variance was overlooked in the trial court, the supreme court may, on motion in arrest of judgment, allow the plaintiffs to remit the excess on payment of the costs of the appeal. Williamson v. Canaday, 25 N. C. (3 Ired. L.) 349.

In an action on the case for deceit in a sale of land, where the declaration falls to allege that the defendant at the time of the alleged sale and conveyance owned any right, title, or interest in or to the land, a motion in arrest of judgment will be sustained in the supreme court, and the plaintiffs will not be allowed to avoid it by amendment. The court said: An amendment of this kind at this stage of the case should be allowed only when it is clear that the matter was an issue on trial, and as fully litigated as though it had been raised by the pleadings; for otherwise great injustice might be done to the defendant by being cast on an issue of which he had no notice, and which he did not come prepared to try. Baker v. Sherman, 73 Vt. 26, 50 Atl. 633.

b. On certiorari or certificate.

In an inquisition of forcible entry and detainer, and upon a motion in arrest of judgment, made on the ground that the record and papers in the case exhibited no warrant of forcible entry and detainer, the court may properly permit a copy of the warrant, made out by the magistrate from the same form from which he transcribed the original, and brought up on certiorari, to be filed as a substitute for the original. Logan v. Smith, 2 A. K. Marsh. 53.

A motion in arrest of judgment is properly sustained if the indictment was not returned into open court by the grand jury; and upon appeal the record must affirmatively show that it was so returned. If such fact does not appear, the settled practice of the supreme court forbids the correction of the record by certiorari on rehearing. State v. Dixon, 97 Ind. 125.

In a complaint for maintaining a liquor nuisance, where the record filed in the superior court shows that the defendant was tried for maintaining such nuisance on a specified date, whereas the complaint charges him with keeping it on various days between such date and a designated later date, such defect, appearing for the first time in the papers transmitted to the supreme court, and affecting its jurisdiction, is open to the defendant after verdict by motion in arrest; but, since the municipal court can amend its record, and certify a copy thereof as amended to the superior court, and a new trial can be had the judgment will not be arrested, but the verdict should be set aside. Com. v. Galligan, 118 Mass. 203.

A. W. R.

is substantially the bill that was sustained in State v. Johnson, 67 N. C. 55.

The attorney general cites us to the following foreign authorities which sustained indictments omitting the words "against her will." In Harman v. Com. 12 Serg. & R. 69, it was held "not necessary to charge that the offense was committed forcibly and against the will of the woman," that matter being embraced "in the charge 'feloniously did ravish and carnally know;'" Tilghman, Ch. J., citing English authorities freely to sustain his ruling. The same ruling, exactly, is made in Gibson v. State, 17 Tex. App. 574. In Leoni v. State, 44 Ala. 110, the court sustained an indictment charging simply, "before the finding of this indictment, G. L. forcibly ravished E. L.;" and in O'Connell v. State, 6 Minn. 279, Gil. 190, the court sustained an indictment, "did feloniously ravish C. D." In these last two cases no assault is charged and the indictments are drawn under statutes simplifying the form and which our legislature, it may be, might also adopt to prevent such instances as this, for it gives full information to the prisoner. But we cannot do this. The adoption of simpler forms of indictments for murder, perjury, etc., was by action of the legislature, not of the courts. As the prisoner has not been in jeopardy, he may still be put to trial upon a proper bill. State v. Lee, 114 N. C. 844, 19 S. E. 375; State v. England, 78 N. C. 552, and other cases collected in Wharton, Crim. Pl. & Pr. 9th ed. §§ 457, 507.

Judgment arrested.

A motion having been made by the state for a writ of certiorari to correct the record and for a rehearing, Clark, Ch. J., on October 20, 1903, handed down the following additional opinion:

This case was before us last term. 132 N. C. 1000, ante, 182, 43 S. E. 828. There were numerous exceptions, none of which were considered, because a motion in arrest of judgment was made and allowed for the absence from the indictment (for rape), as sent up in the record, of the words "against her will." This objection was not taken below. It now appears, by the inspection of the indictment by the judge below, and his finding of fact thereon, that those words were in fact in the indictment as found by the grand jury, and upon which the prisoner was tried, and were omitted by the clerk in making up the record. This case has heretofore not been before us, and the state asks for the correction of the indictment by a certiorari to insert the words omitted by the clerk and that the case may be argued upon the record and the exceptions taken at the trial.

67 L. R. A.

If this were an application to rehear a criminal cause the court would not entertain it. State v. Council, 129 N. C. 511, 39 S. E. 814, and cases there cited. A rehearing is based on an allegation that the court committed an error of law in the previous opinion and asks the reconsideration of that opinion. It is an appeal from the court to itself, on the ground of error in its rulings of law, just as an appeal is taken from the superior court. Here there was no error of law. The decision at last term is correct, as the record stood. This is a motion to correct the record to speak the truth, and to place the true record before us for the first time, and to consider the exceptions taken, they not having been passed on. The same point, after similar action upon an untrue record caused by the false certificate of the clerk of the lower court, has been passed upon by the supreme court of Florida, and the motion to restore the cause to the docket allowed (Lovett v. State, 29 Fla. 384, 16 L. R. A. 313, 11 So. 176), in an able and well-considered opinion by Chief Justice Raney. In that case a new trial had been granted on the ground that the record in a trial for murder did not show that the prisoner was personally present at the trial. Subsequently, it being made to appear to the court that the record did show such fact, but that such paragraph had been omitted in the transcript by the clerk, the court ordered a certiorari to correct the omission, and restored the cause to the docket for argument upon the exceptions taken at the trial, and it was so heard upon the true record. 30 Fla. 142, 17 L. R. A. 705, 11 So. 550. The same power is vested in this court by article 4, § 8, of the Constitution which gives it power to issue any remedial writ necessary for a general supervision and control of the lower courts. Instances of supervision to insure justice are Ex parte Biggs, 64 N. C. 202, and State v. Jefferson, 66 N. C. 311. In Lovett v. State, 29 Fla. 384, 16 L. R. A. 313, 11 So. 176, the court said (pp. 404, 405, 407, 29 Fla., pp. 316, 317, 16 L. R. A., and pp. 180, 181, 11 So.): "No advantage can be gained from any action of this tribunal upon an untruthful representation of that record, however ignorant the convict or the counsel may be of the real status of the record, or of the incorrectness of the transcript, and however free from blame the clerk may have been in the mistake characterizing his transcript and certificate. . . . The fact still remains that a false record has been brought here on behalf of the convict, and a reversal has been obtained in his behalf on it, such reversal being based solely upon its false feature; and this fact is not changed nor its result modified, by the innocence of the prisoner, his counsel, and the attorney general, but the extent of the imposition and of the mistake is only made the greater. . . . We have been misled into reversing a judgment on a false record; into acting in a cause when that cause, as it really is and only can be acted on by us, has not been before us. . . . The state is not prohibited by any principle of law known to us from arresting the reversal which has been made of her judgment upon such false representation. She is entitled to require the party seeking relief from such judgments to bring to the appellate court the record of the cause in which it was obtained, for, without this, that cause is not before the appellate tribunal for consideration. Any other doctrine than this must result in the frequent consummation of fraud upon the courts, and its constant encouragement." And at page 395, 29 Fla., page 314, 16 L. R. A., and page 178, 11 So., the chief justice says that, when the judgment has been granted "upon a false suggestion or under a mistake as to the facts of the case, the court will afford relief after the adjournment of the term and, if necessary, recall the remittitur and stay proceedings in the court below."

Mistakes of this court or of its clerk, not mistakes of law, but of fact, have been often corrected after the mandate has gone down, and even at subsequent terms. Scott v. Queen, 95 N. C. 340; Cook v. Moore, 100 N. C. 294, 6 Am. St. Rep. 587, 6 S. E. 795; Summerlin v. Coules, 107 N. C. 459, 12 S. E. 234; Scroggs v. Stevenson, 108 N. C. 260, 12 S. E. 1031; Bernhardt v. Brown, 118 N. C., at page 710, 36 L. R. A. 402, 24 S. E. 527, 715. For as strong a reason, this court can order a correction of a record below when, by reason of the false or erroneous certificate of the clerk, the record, as it was, has never been before us. This is not new practice. "Upon a judgment in the King's bench, if there be error in the process or through the default of the clerks, it may be reversed in the same court, . . . for error in fact is not the error of the judges, and reversing it is not reversing their own judgment." 2 Tidd, Pr. 1137. Also Etna L. Ins. Co. v. McCormick, 20 Wis., at page 269, where it is said that "the errors are not errors in the judgment itself. The court, in rendering the judgment, never acted on them." In this case the court, through error for which the appellant is responsible (for it was his duty to bring up a true record), has taken action on a bill of indictment on which the prisoner was not tried, and on nothing whatever that took place at that trial. We are not asked to reverse our judgment, but to correct an error of fact. The prisoner brought up the record. He presented us, as an alleged error, a statement of a matter which was false. The record he presented stated that the indictment on which he was tried omitted the words "against her will." He relied upon that omission, and asked an arrest of judgment on that account. We allowed it solely on that account. He has no ground to ask to benefit by that untrue statement in the record he presented to us, and it is immaterial that it does not appear how the omission came to be made. The case has never been before us.

In civil cases, counsel on both sides have opportunity to scan the whole record carefully, and, if there is omission or other error, ordinarily a certiorari can and should be applied for before the cause is called for argument. But in criminal actions the rotating solicitor has no opportunity to see the record proper, nor any part of the transcript except "the case on appeal" served on him, and does not see even that after the clerk copies the case "as settled." When, as here, there was no point made below on the bill of indictment, the indictment made no part even of "the case on appeal" served on the solicitor. There is no provision of law, nor any practice requiring solicitors to go back to the county seats, nor to have full transcripts of the record sent them before coming up to this court. The attorney general is bound to rely upon the correctness of the record laid before him. He was not at the trial below. If, therefore, a clerk can omit material parts of the indictment, and the defendant, notwithstanding the duty is on him to bring up a true record, can profit by this error of fact (whether intentional or unintentional could rarely, if ever, be shown), new trials will depend, not upon the correct rulings of the judge below, but upon the greater or less carefulness of the clerk, or of the copyist often furnished him by the appellant. It is not sufficient to say that the appellant can be again put on trial. There is the expense to the public of another trial, and witnesses may have moved away or died. This state is entitled, in the interest of justice, to have the cause presented here on the record as the matter was presented below, and it is the duty of the appellant to bring up such true record. When there is a fatal misstatement of fact therein, appellants must understand that their negligence in presenting a false record (to put it in the mildest form) cannot avail them any more than if they had made the omission fraudulently, which can never be shown. In State v. Daniel, 121 N. C. 575, 28 S. E. 255, the court said that the defendant was "derelict in not sending up a proper transcript; and the court would not permit . . . [him] a continuance of the cause for his own neglect, but would send down, ex mero motu, an instantan certiorari to cure the defects in the transcript." If the court will not allow an appellan a continuance even for omissions or error in the record, it will certainly not permit him to enjoy a new trial by reason of such default by him.

In England a defendant in criminal cases is allowed no appeal. We allow an appeal, but the burden is on the appellan to assign his errors and bring up a true record. When he fails to do either he cannot take profit from his omission of duty.

The judge below having, from inspection of the record, found that the indictment on which the appellan was tried in fact contains the words "against her will," and that being already certified to this court, the record here can be amended to include them, as upon certiorari, and the cause will be restored to the docket to be heard in its order upon the exceptions taken below, when the district to which it belongs is called, unless, for cause shown, it is placed at the end of the district, or at the end of the docket for this term. It does not appear that the words were omitted by the fraud of the appellan, or of any one for him. If it did, the appeal should properly be dismissed.

The motion to restore the cause to the docket is allowed.

Walker, J., dissenting:

The defendant was indicted in the court below for the crime of rape, and having been convicted, appealed to this court. At the last term we arrested the judgment upon the ground that there was no allegation in the indictment that the offense had been committed "against the will of the prosecutrix." 132 N. C. 1000, ante, 182, 43 S. E. 828. The opinion of this court was filed on the 31st day of March, 1903, and the certificate was sent to the superior court on the 1st day of May, 1903, so that the case was retained in this court, under the rule, for the purpose of correction, a full month before it was returned to the lower court. This court adjourned for the term on the 11th day of June, 1903; and it appears, therefore, that the state had ample opportunity, after the filing of the opinion, and before the adjournment at the last term, to have called the alleged error or defect in the transcript to our attention. But it failed to do so. The state is not entitled to any more consideration or indulgence in this court in respect to the trial of cases in which it is concerned, than other litigants, except that the causes in which it is a party may be advanced sometimes, when they affect the public interest, and a speedy hearing is desired. It is bound, however, by the same rules of practice and procedure, and must give the same attention to its cases and exercise the same degree of diligence, as other parties. State v. Price, 110 N. C. 599, 15 S. E. 116. In State v. Cameron, 121 N. C. 572, 28 S. E. 139, we held that "the law which regulates the matter of appeals is the same in both civil and criminal cases," and that "in criminal appeals the respondent is the state, represented by the solicitor of the district in which the case is tried," and that he is as much the representative of the state in all matters pertaining to the preparation of cases, in all respects, for transmission to this court, as is an attorney of record the representative of his client in a civil case. There is no duty imposed upon an attorney in a civil suit with respect to the settlement of the case on appeal, and the transmission of a transcript of the record to this court, that does not equally rest upon the solicitor in an appeal taken in a criminal case. The only difference between the two classes of cases is one which does not materially affect the question we are now discussing, and that difference is that in a civil case the appellan must pay the fees of the clerk for making out the transcript in advance, if he demands it, while the state is not required to do so when it appeals; but the appellan in a civil case is no more bound to see that the record is correctly copied and transmitted to this court than is the state in a criminal case. The duty of copying and transmitting the record is one which, as this court has frequently decided, appertains to the office of the clerk. It is his official duty to send up a perfect transcript, and not in any sense the duty of the appellan, except as hereinafter stated, in any kind of case. This is made perfectly clear in State v. Butts, 91 N. C. 524, 526. In that case it is said by the court that while "it would be well for counsel to see that transcripts are properly made up before they come to this court," in order to protect the interests of their client, yet it is the official duty of the clerk to see that a true and perfect transcript is sent to this court. It may be conceded that, if the record is defective, the appellan in a civil case will not be allowed a continuance in order to have it perfected, or indulged in any other way with respect to it; and, if the defect is one that will injure his client if not corrected, he must abide the consequences of his neglect or omission in not having the record made perfect. He must apply for the necessary process for that purpose in apt time. While this is the rule in civil cases, it also obtains in criminal cases, as to both parties to the record,—the state and the defendant. When it is said to be the duty of the appellant to see that the record is correctly certified to this court nothing more is or can be meant than that, if the record is not here at the proper time, his appeal will be dismissed, or, if the record is defective, and he does not move in apt time to have it corrected, the case must be heard just as if the record was perfect in form, and the party in default must take the consequences of his neglect. Surely the appellee cannot avail himself of a defect which defeated him in the case, and then apply for and obtain a writ of certiorari after the adjournment of the term, upon the ground that the appellant failed himself to apply for the writ. That would be to permit the appellee to take advantage of the laches of his adversary, where he unreasonably relied upon him to look after and care for his interests in this court. If in a civil case a plaintiff (appellee) should permit his case to be argued and decided in this court without having called our attention to a defect in the record, for example, the careless or inadvertent insertion of a material allegation in his complaint, so that it would appear he has no cause of action, and, by reason thereof the judgment is arrested or the action dismissed, would he be heard at the next term to allege the defect and be granted a writ of certiorari, so that the case could be reheard? The mere statement of the proposition carries with it its own sufficient refutation. How, then, can the state, who occupies substantially the same position in this court as the plaintiff (appellee) in a civil case, and is subject to the same rules, be allowed to do so, when the indictment, as certified to this court, is defective? If it is allowed in the latter case, there is no sound reason why it should not be in the former, unless there is something in the mere sovereignty of the state, or her peculiar prerogative, which gives her rights and privileges in this court not enjoyed by a citizen: and no such claim was made by our learned and able attorney general, who lets no point escape him, and it is not even suggested in the opinion of the court. The Supreme Court of the United States has ruled that the government, when it comes into the Federal courts to litigate with one of its citizens, must submit to the rules of practice and procedure of its courts, and its rights and privileges at every stage in the trial of the cause are substantially in every respect the same as those of the citizen, and it cannot have any superior advantages. Fink v. O'Neil, 106 U. S. 272, 27 L. ed. 196, 1 Sup. Ct. Rep. 325; United States v. Union P. R. Co. 105 U. S. 263, 26 L. ed. 1021; United States v. Thompson, 93 U. S. 586, 23 L. ed. 982; Carr v. United States, 98 U. S. 433, 25 L. ed. 209; Sibbald v. United States, 12 Pet. 489, 9 L. ed. 1168.

67 L. R. A.

When it is conceded, as it must needs be, that the state and its citizens stand before this court on terms of perfect equality, and that right and justice under the law must be administered in the same way to each of them, the fallacy of the reasoning by which the conclusion of the court is reached, and its insufficiency to justify that conclusion, is clearly seen, unless we propose to overrule many cases heretofore decided in this court in which it has been held that parties must be diligent in applying for remedial writs for the purpose of perfecting the transcript, and that an application for a certiorari, upon the suggestion of a diminution of the record, cannot be made after the term to which the appeal is taken, and at which the case is decided, and not even at that term unless it is made before the argument commences. A complete reversal of this wise and safe rule is the logical result of the decision in this case, but a consequence more dangerous in its tendency may follow, for no limit of time is set by the ruling of the court for such an application to be made. If it can be made at the first term after the one at which the case is decided, why not at the second term, and so on without limit? It will not answer the argument to say that in the court below the state is represented by one officer, the solicitor, and in this court by another, the attorney general, for the duty of looking after the interest of the state in the lower court, where the transcript is prepared, and from which it is transmitted, devolves solely upon the solicitor, as we have seen, unless he is assisted by private counsel, as in this case, or unless he specially appoints some other member of the bar to represent him, which appointment must be made in the manner pointed out by this court. State v. Cameron, 121 N. C. 572, 28 S. E. 139; State v. Clenny, 133 N. C. 662, 45 S. E. 525. In the case last cited, Montgomery, J., for the court, says: "The solicitor, as we have said in State v. Cameron, represents the state in criminal prosecutions, and the statement of the case on appeal in such cases should be submitted to him for acceptance or objection." It appears, therefore, that he is as fully invested with plenary power and authority in all matters affecting the state's interests, with the corresponding duty of taking care of those interests, as the attorney of a party in a civil case. If there is a duty resting upon the latter to examine the transcript of the record before it leaves the hands of the clerk, the same duty rests upon the solicitor, and the consequence to the state must be the same, if this duty has not been performed in a criminal case, as it would be to a party in a civil case if the duty is neglected by him. There is no greater obligation imposed upon an appellant to examine a transcript than there is upon an appellee, in so far as the party in default may be injuriously affected in this court. The same diligence is required of the appellee as of the appellant in discovering defects and having the record perfected. If there is an omission of matter material to his case, and the appellee fails at the proper time to seek the remedy for supplying it, he must suffer the consequences, just in the same way and in the same degree as the appellant. I must deny the correctness of the proposition impliedly asserted in the opinion of the court that any positive legal duty is devolved upon an appellant or an appellee to see that a true and perfect transcript is sent to this court, and that his failure to do so will be imputed to him as a fraudulent or even a false representation to this court, if the transcript is defective, or is other than a perfect copy of the record below. He makes no representation to this court, but simply relies, as he has a perfect right to do, upon the clerk, whose duty it is to certify the transcript. The appellant's duty is fully performed when he has caused the case on appeal to be settled and filed with the clerk, and paid the latter his fee for sending up the transcript to this court. There his duty ends, and that of the clerk begins, with this possible qualification, if it is a qualification: That, if the record, as certified by the clerk, happens to be defective, and the appellant fails to have it corrected in due time, so that he loses in this court, he must bear the loss, just as the appellant must do if the defect causes him to be cast in the suit, and he has not taken the proper means to have it remedied. It follows from what I have already said that neither the defendant's counsel nor the solicitor was in the least derelict in his duty, as both had the right if they chose to do so, to rely upon the clerk, who is the custodian of the record, and the officer appointed by the law for the purpose of preparing and transmitting a perfect transcript of it to this court; and it is not infrequently the case that counsel and the solicitor thus rely, as they each have a perfect right to do, upon the clerk to perform his duty in the premises. But if the clerk fails, by mere inadvertence or oversight, to make a true copy, the defect may be cured by applying to this court for the proper writ in apt time,—that is, at the term to which the appeal is taken,—and the consequence of the failure to make this application will fall upon him who is prejudiced by it, and who fails to take the necessary steps to protect his interests. This must be so in all cases. I am not denying or questioning the power of this court to correct its own records in order to make them speak the truth. That power is fully conceded, but it is not the one which is being exercised in this case. This court may not only amend its own records at any time, but it may supply any defects in the transcript sent to it from the lower courts, by issuing the proper remedial writ, provided it is done upon seasonable application of a party or of its own motion within the time allotted by law. It has been uniformly decided by the court that an application for a writ of certiorari for the purpose of correcting a record must be made except in rare cases before the cause is submitted for argument (McDaniel v. Pollock, 87 N. C. 503), and in no case can the writ issue after the expiration of the first term; and especially is this so when the case has been decided, and not merely continued, at that term (State v. Blackburn, 80 N. C. 477; State v. Harris, 114 N. C. 830, 19 S. E. 154; State v. Rhodes, 112 N. C. 857, 17 S. E. 164). In the cases cited it is held that, if a party has good ground for a certiorari, he must move for it at least before the argument upon the merits; and, if he fails to do so, he must abide the consequences of his own neglect, although he may be able afterwards to show by proof ever so conclusive, that there is a material defect in the record, and one, too, which would reverse the decision of the court. There must be an end to litigation somewhere. No man should be permitted to prolong it by his own neglect, and thus to profit by his own wrong. But I think the precise question has been decided by the court in Wilson v. Lineberger, 84 N. C. 836. In that case the plaintiff's counsel moved to correct the record at the term next after the case was heard and decided, with the intention of asking for a rehearing. Smith, Ch. J., for the court, said: "The motion is a novel one, and without precedent in the practice of the court. If the evidence shall change the aspect of the case, and make it materially different from what it was when heard, we should be required, not to rehear and correct an error of law, but to try a new case. If there is an error in the former decision, it must be discovered in the case then presented, without modification of facts." And again: "It was the duty of counsel to suggest the diminution before the cause was heard, and then ask for this remedial process, not to wait till the decision, and then demand it. It would be productive of much mischief to relax the salutary rule which requires counsel to see that their cause is properly before the court in the record, and to abide the consequences if it is not." The court did not confine its decision in that case to the particular character of the amendment required, but simply applied the general principle that no amendment of any kind can be made at a subsequent term so as to present a question different from that appearing in the original record. The court well said that it would introduce a novelty into the practice and procedure of the court, which would be productive of untold mischief and incalculable harm.

67 L. R. A.

When this court has decided a case, and the opinion and judgment have been certified to the court below, its jurisdiction with respect to the case is at an end, at least when the court has adjourned for the term at which the decision was made. The terms of this court are fixed by law (Const. art. 4, § 7; Code, chap. 24, § 953; Acts 1887, chap. 49, p. 100; Acts 1901, chap. 660, p. 897) in the same manner as are the terms of the superior court; and when, under the statute, this court has finished the business of any one term, and adjourned, its jurisdiction of a case decided at that term ceases, and it cannot again acquire jurisdiction of it, except by petition to rehear under the established rule of the court, or by a new appeal. In discussing this question, the court, in White v. Butcher, 97 N. C. 7, 2 S. E. 59, says: "The remand arrested further action here at this point. . . . The practical result to be secured was the conveyance of the title to the property, as would have been the case here, had the jurisdiction over the cause been retained. But it was no longer in this court for any further order unless, perhaps, the transmission of the papers and transcript; but the neglect to transmit them did not retain the cause itself after the order, nor impair the efficiency of the order." In Ruffin v. Harrison, 91 N. C. 398, the court, after stating the general proposition that a rehearing will not be granted upon a summary motion to modify a final judgment of this court, proceeds: "The court has no power to amend or modify the final decree, entered at the last term, upon an application like this. After final judgment, the court cannot disturb it, unless upon an application to rehear, or for fraud, accident, or mistake alleged in an independent action, or, perhaps, in some cases, a party might be relieved against a 'judgment, order, or other proceeding taken against him through his mistake, inadvertence, surprise, or excusable neglect,' within a year after the entry of the same. . . . This, of course, does not imply that the court has not power to correct the entry of its orders, judgments, and decrees so as to make them conform to the truth of what the court did in granting them or to set aside an irregular judgment in a proper case. The practical effect of granting the prayer of the petitioners would be to give them the benefit of a rehearing upon a summary application to change the final decree at a term of the court subsequent to that at which it was granted. We are not aware of any rule of procedure or practice that warrants such action. The application must be denied, and the petition in this respect dismissed." In regard to this subject, the court, in Cook v. Moore, 100 N. C. 294, 6 Am. St. Rep. 587, 6 S. E. 795, says in this emphatic language: "It is not contended that this court can reverse, set aside, or modify in any material respect a regular final judgment at a term thereof subsequent to that at which it was entered. It is clear and well settled that it has no such authority, except upon an application to rehear, or because of 'mistake, inadvertence, surprise, or excusable neglect,' as may be allowed by statute." It will not, of course, be contended in the case at bar that this court has the power to correct the judgment at the last term because of "mistake, inadvertence, surprise, or excusable neglect." In Moore v. Hinnant, 90 N. C. 163, it is said: "But the court has not the power at a subsequent term to revoke, set aside, alter, or amend a final judgment entered at a former term, except upon application to rehear, or because of 'mistake, inadvertence, surprise, or excusable neglect' as allowed by law. The exercise of such a power is forbidden by principle and the overwhelming weight of authority if, indeed, there can be any well-considered case found that sustains it. . . . It is a fundamental principle of the common law, as the authorities ancient and modern show, that the court cannot change and modify its final judgments at a term subsequent to the term at which they were entered. During the term the record including the judgment is in fieri, and may be amended or set aside as to the court may seem proper, but after the term the power to interfere with it no longer exists. . . . This court has seldom had occasion to refer to the subject of the power of a court of record to change its judgments after the term at which they were entered but it has repeatedly incidentally recognized the doctrine that such power does not exist." It is also stated in Moore v. Hinnant, 90 N. C. 163, that a judgment regularly entered, if not erroneous, can in no case be altered at a subsequent term, otherwise than by a petition to rehear, except for the purpose of making the record express the intention of the court at that time, upon the record as then before it, so that it may speak the truth as to that record. In that case, from which I have made only a few brief extracts, Merrimon,

J., for the court, goes fully into the question we have under consideration, and denies the existence of the power or jurisdiction now about to be exercised in this case, and concludes that it would give rise to universal distrust, endless strife and confusion, and would violate the cardinal maxim that it is to the interest of the state that there should be an end to litigation. He quotes freely from Coke and Blackstone, and supports the doctrine by the citation of numerous and weighty authorities. His quotation from Coke is an apt one: "During the terme wherein any judicial act is done, the record remaineth in the breast of the judges of the court and in their remembrance, and therefore the roll is alterable during that terme, as the judges shall direct; but when the terme is past, then the record is in the roll and admitteth no alteration, averment, or proof to the contrary." Other and numerous authorities in support of the position will be found collected in Moore v. Hinnant, 90 N. C. 163, and Cook v. Moore, 100 N. C. 294, 6 Am. St. Rep. 587, 6 S. E. 795.

The case of Rice v. Minnesota & N. W. R. Co. 21 How. 82, 16 L. ed. 31, it seems to me, is directly in point. In that case the record upon which the appeal was heard and decided failed to show that there had been a final judgment in the court below, which was required as a basis of a writ of error to the lower court. It was sought at the term next after the decision by writ of certiorari to bring up and file a new record, showing that there had been a final judgment, and to have the former judgment annulled and a rehearing granted. Taney, Ch. J., for the court says: "We think the motion to annul the judgment of the last term and reinstate the case cannot be granted. The suit is a common-law action for a trespass on real property, and the judgment of the court below can be brought here for revision by writ of error only. That writ was issued by the plaintiff in error, returnable to the last term of this court, and it brought the transcript before us at that term. It was judicially acted on, and decided by this court, and when the term closed, that decision was final, so far as concerned the authority and jurisdiction of this court under that writ. The writ was functus officio, and, if the parties desire to bring the record of the case again before this court, it must be done by another writ of error." He then refers to the case of The Palmyra, 12 Wheat. 1, 6 L. ed. 531, which was cited in support of the petition to rehear, and says that it is not in point, as the appellate jurisdiction of the Supreme Court in admiralty cases is quite different from that in cases at common law; it being allowable in admiralty cases to amend the pleadings and take new evidence in the Supreme Court, "so as, in effect, to make it a different case from that decided by the court below." In Sibbald v. United States, 12 Pet. 492, 9 L. ed. 1169, the court says: "No principle is better settled, or of more universal application, than that no court can reverse or annul its own final decrees or judgments, for errors of fact or law, after the term in which they have been rendered, unless for clerical mistakes [in the appellate court], . . . or to reinstate a cause dismissed by mistake, . . . from which it follows that no change or modification can be made which may substantially vary or affect it in any material thing." The doctrine is very strongly stated by the court in Bronson v. Schulten, 104 U. S. 415, 26 L. ed. 799, thus: "But it is a rule equally well established that, after the term has ended, all final judgments and decrees of the court pass beyond its control, unless steps be taken during that term, by motion or otherwise, to set aside, modify, or correct them; and, if errors exist, they can only be corrected by such proceeding by a writ of error or appeal as may be allowed in a court which by law can review the decision. So strongly has this principle been upheld by this court, that, while realizing that there is no court which can review its decisions, it has invariably refused all applications for rehearing made after the adjournment of the court for the term at which the judgment was rendered. And this is placed upon the ground that the case has passed beyond the control of the court." In Bank of United States v. Moss, 6 How. 38, 12 L. ed. 334, the court said: "The action was not regularly on the docket at the new term in May following [the one at which the judgment had been rendered], when the court undertook to set the judgment aside. The power of the court over the original action itself, or its merits, under the proceedings then existing, had been exhausted,—ended. . . . This means the power to decide on it, or to change opinions once given, or to make new decisions and alterations on material points. A mere error in law, of any kind, supposed to have been rendered in a judgment of a court at a previous term, is never a sufficient justification for revising and annulling it at a subsequent term, in this summary way, on motion. . . . We would not be understood by this to deprive a court at a subsequent term of power to set right mere forms in its judgments. . . . Or power to correct misprisions of its clerks. The right to correct any mere clerical errors, so as to conform the record to the truth, always remains."

A case directly in point is that of State v. Dixon, 97 Ind. 125, where it appeared from the record as sent to the appellate court that the indictment had not been returned into open court by the grand jury, and the judgment was arrested. A motion was made for leave to amend the record by showing that the indictment had been returned into open court, and then for a rehearing of the case upon the record as thus amended. This is like our case in all respects. The court said: "Counsel for the state accompany their petition for a rehearing with a motion to have the clerk of the court below certify to this court certain portions of the record alleged to be omitted in the transcript. No objection, so far as the record before us is concerned, is made to our decision. The settled practice of this court forbids the correction of the record after a case has been decided." So in Garner v. State, 36 Tex. 693, after the judgment was arrested for lack of an essential averment in the bill, a motion similar to the one in this case was made and refused because the court had lost its jurisdiction. In each of the following cases, a motion was made at a term subsequent to that at which the judgment of the appellate court was entered to amend the record and rehear the case: In Cruiser v. State, 18 N. J. L. 209, the court says: "These, it is true, are mere mistakes in form; they are clerical errors only; but I have searched in vain for any authority in this court to amend, or order amendment below, after a writ of error in a criminal case. I cannot find a single case in which it has been done." It was said in State v. Daugherty, 59 Mo. 104: "If the record was incomplete or defective when the case was here on a former occasion, diminution should have been suggested, and a rule obtained for sending up a perfect transcript. But the party submitted his case upon the record filed in the court, and the judgment rendered thereon is final, and, whilst it remains unreversed, it conclusively bars any further proceedings. If parties were permitted, after a final judgment in this court, to go back to the circuit court, and there get an amended transcript, and bring the case again here, at their mere will and pleasure, there would be no final disposition of cases." So, in Fielden v. People, 128 Ill. 599, 21 N. E. 585, it was said by the court: "Amendments not in affirmance, but in derogation, of the judgment, are not allowed at a term subsequent to that at which final judgment is rendered." And again it is said: "This motion not having been made at the same term at which final judgment was rendered, nor until the case had passed beyond the power of this court to stay by its order the execution of the judgment, clearly comes too late." A strong case, and one also directly in point, is Cory v. State, 55 Ga. 239, in which the court uses this language: "It is said that the clerk, in copying the bill of indictment, made a mistake and wrote 'with' when he should have written 'without the consent of the owner.' This may or may not be true. It has not been verified to us in the only way it can legally be done, by the suggestion of a diminution of the record on or before the calling of the case. Code, § 4282, rule 9. Our only course is to adhere to the law and to rule on principle. It may sometimes work seeming injustice. A departure from it would open the floodgates of speculation, and unsettle the entire practice of the court. In this case any wrong done can be but temporary: The party can be tried again, and, if found guilty on the second count, properly framed, he can be punished according to law." See also United States v. Adams, 9 Wall. 557, 19 L. ed. 584; Christopher v. Searcy, 12 Bush, 171; 3 Cyc. Law & Proc. p. 214, and note 16, where many cases are collected.

The court, in its opinion, relies very much on the case of Lovett v. State, 29 Fla. 384, 16 L. R. A. 313, 11 So. 176; but the case is not, in my opinion, an authority for its decision. In the first place, the motion in that case for a certiorari for the purpose of correcting the record so that there could be a rehearing of the case upon the amended transcript was made at the same term at which the case was first heard and decided. This is sufficient to distinguish it from the case at bar. The court merely recalled its remittitur while the case was as it said in its possession and under its control, under its rules of practice; but, even in doing that, it went beyond what this court had repeatedly decided to be the law in such cases under its rules. If the facts of that case were like those of the case we are considering, and the same point had been presented, the authorities cited in support of the decision do not, I think, sustain it. They are, in the main, cases in which the courts asserted the right to amend their own records so that they could be made to speak the truth. The case of The Palmyra, 12 Wheat. 1, 6 L. ed. 531, on which that court relied, was, as we have already said, a case in admiralty, and the court gave its decision in it under the rules of the admiralty courts in such cases. But these rules do not apply to cases at common law. The court in Lovett v. State, concedes the general doctrine that, after the appellate court has sent down its certificate or remittitur and adjourned for the term, it has lost its jurisdiction of the case, but not so if the motion for a certiorari is submitted during the term at which the decision was made. "Where a case has been heard," the court says, "upon its merits in an appellate court, according to its rules of practice, and the judgment of the court has been correctly entered, and the time, if any, allowed by statute or its rules for a rehearing having passed, and, no application for a rehearing having been made, the remittitur issues and is lodged in the lower court, it may well be said that the appellate court has lost its jurisdiction of the cause, and has not power to recall or reconsider it. Under these circumstances, it has fairly and duly exercised its appellate functions and exhausted its powers as to the cause. There must be an end of litigation; public policy, as well as the interests of individual litigants, demands it; and the rule just announced is indispensable to such a consummation." The court also says: "It is apparent that the state's motion is made during the term of court at which the judgment which it is sought to have revoked was pronounced and entered, and it is a general rule of the common law that courts have power either to modify or vacate their judgments and decrees during the term at which they were rendered, or while they are in fieri." Even in that case the court relied largely upon decisions in civil cases in which the error or mistake occurred in the appellate court. The case of The Palmyra, which was also cited by the court, and much relied on in support of its decision, has been fully explained, and shown not to be an authority in support of the court's ruling.

No suggestion of fraud upon the court has been made in this case. Indeed, the attorney general admitted there was no fraud, but a mere inadvertence of the clerk in copying the indictment.

My conclusion is that, on principle and authority, the court is without jurisdiction to grant the relief prayed for by the state. The decision of the court, in my opinion, is in conflict with those cases in which it is held that a petition to rehear will not be entertained in a criminal case, and further establishes a new doctrine,—that a criminal case cannot only be reheard in this court, but that the record may be amended for the purpose of a rehearing. The remedy of the state is to send another bill. To a new indictment the plea of former conviction cannot avail the defendant, though some doubt as to this seems to have been entertained in the court below. In order to sustain the plea of former acquittal or former conviction, it must appear that the former judgment "still remains in full force and effect, and not in the least reversed or made void." State v. Williams, 94 N. C. 891.

It is said in the opinion that by article 67 L. R. A.

4, § 8, of the Constitution, this court may issue remedial writs necessary for a general supervision and control of the inferior courts. This is admitted, but it does not follow by any means that they may be issued contrary to the well-established course and practice of the court. In the two cases cited by the court as illustrations of the proper exercise of this power, namely, Ex parte Biggs, 64 N. C. 202, and State v. Jefferson, 66 N. C. 311, the writs were applied for in apt time, and issued regularly and in strict accordance with the well settled rules of procedure in this court. Again, the court says that "mistakes of this court or of its clerk, not mistakes of law, but of fact, have been often corrected after the mandate has gone down, and even at subsequent terms" and numerous cases are cited to sustain the proposition. Citations are not necessary for that purpose. The proposition is also admitted, but the deduction made from it by the court I do not think is either logical or warranted. The citation from Tidd's Practice is, I think, a complete refutation of it. The correction, as Mr. Tidd said, must be made in the same court where the mistake occurred. All the authorities cited by the court in this connection simply refer to the familiar principle that a court may correct its own records so as to make them speak the truth. I venture to assert, with all deference, that there is not a single authority cited by the court which, when properly considered and restricted to its peculiar facts, sustains its conclusion, or which conflicts with the numerous cases decided by this court, and which I have already cited in support of the view I have taken of this case. My deliberate conviction is that the ruling of the court introduces a new and dangerous precedent into its practice and procedure, and unsettles those decisions in which the right to rehear in criminal cases is said not to exist.

The motion of the state, in my opinion, should be denied.

Douglas, J. dissenting:

I fully concur in the able dissenting opinion of Justice Walker which leaves but little for me to say; but there are some parts of the opinion of the court on which I will briefly comment.

The court says: "We are not asked to reverse our judgment, but to correct an error of fact." I do not so understand it. In the first place, we have no power at any time to correct a fact found in the court below, and, even if we give the clerk of the court below any opportunity to correct the record sent up by him, it would do the state no good, as long as our judgment remains, arresting the judgment in the court below.

which in this case would be equivalent to granting the defendant a new trial, as a new bill of indictment could have been sent against him. The motion of the attorney general to correct the "error of fact" is simply preliminary to his further motion to rehear the case on the record as so amended. If the attorney general had simply asked to have the error of fact corrected in the record, without disturbing our judgment, I would not have dissented so strenuously. But when he asks us, after the expiration of the term at which the defendant has been granted an arrest of judgment, to take him back, reverse our judgment and hang him under an old sentence legally set aside at a former term, I must emphatically dissent. It is true, upon the rehearing of the case this court granted the defendant another new trial upon a different ground, but that does not cure the invalidity in the rehearing itself. Suppose that the prisoner had been again tried and acquitted upon a new bill pending the rehearing, and upon the rehearing this court had found no other ground of error; would it have been our duty to have affirmed the judgment and sentence of death? This would have been a greater violation of the letter of the law than the execution of Sir Walter Raleigh, who was executed fifteen years after sentence, upon a judgment which had, however, never been formally reversed. The opinion does not call it a rehearing, but what else is it? Taking the facts as they are, what other name can we apply to it? The case is taken back and reconsidered, and a new judgment rendered. I do not mean to say that this case could properly be reheard. On the contrary, not a single requisite exists for a rehearing, even if this court had not decided in State v. Council, 129 N. C. 511, 39 S. E. 814, that petitions to rehear are not allowable in criminal actions. It may be asked why, having dissented in Council's Case, I should also dissent in the case at bar, which practically overrules every principle underlying the decision in Council's Case. I do so for the sufficient reason that, even admitting, that the state is entitled to a rehearing it has complied with none of the requisites prescribed by the rules of this court. Moreover the opinion of the court cites Council's Case with approval, and it is impossible for both decisions to be right under the same system of jurisprudence. If we cannot rehear a case to do justice to the prisoner by correcting our own error, we surely cannot rehear it simply to hang him.

TEXAS SUPREME COURT.

R. L. BROWN et al., Appts.,
v.

AMERICAN FREEHOLD LAND MORTGAGE COMPANY OF LONDON, Limited, et al.

(.....Tex.....)

1. Statements that loan agents are inattentive and neglectful, and have been guilty of fraudulent conduct, for which their principal has taken the business from them, and that they are insolvent, made for the purpose of breaking them up in business and securing their custom, give them a right of action for the injuries thereby inflicted upon them.
2. The one-year statute of limitations does not apply to a cause of action for breaking one up in business, and driving him therefrom by the use of false and malicious statements.

(May 23, 1904.)

NOTE.—As to combinations or boycotts by dealers or persons engaged in business to injure rivals, see, in this series, Jackson v. Stanfield, 23 L. R. A. 588; Brewster v. C. Miller's Sons Co. 38 L. R. A. 505; Hartnett v. Plumber's Sup-67 L. R. A.

QUESTIONS certified by the Court of Civil Appeals for the Third Supreme Judicial District, which arose upon an appeal by plaintiffs from a judgment of the District Court for McLennan County in favor of defendants, in an action brought to recover damages for wrongful acts done by defendants for the purpose of breaking plaintiffs up in business. Answers favorable to plaintiffs returned.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Messrs. Fiset, Miller, & McClendon, for appellants:

The petition was good.

Haldeman v. Martin, 10 Pa. 369; Van Horn v. Van Horn, 52 N. J. L. 284, 10 L. R. A. 184, 20 Atl. 485, 53 N. J. L. 514, 21 Atl. 1069, 56 N. J. L. 318, 28 Atl. 669; Webb v. Drake, 52 La. Ann. 290, 26 So. 791; Olive v. Van Patten, 7 Tex. Civ. App. 630, 25 S. W. 428; Randolph v. Junker, 1 Tex. Civ. App.

ply Asso. 38 L. R. A. 194; Doremus v. Hennessy, 43 L. R. A. 797; Boutwell v. Marr, 43 L. R. A. 803; Gatzow v. Buening, 49 L. R. A. 475; and State ex rel. Durner v. Huegin, 62 L. R. A. 700.

520, 21 S. W. 551; International & G. N. R. Co. v. Greenwood, 2 Tex. Civ. App. 79, 21 S. W. 559; Wildee v. McKee, 111 Pa. 335, 56 Am. Rep. 271, 2 Atl. 108; State v. Hickling, 41 N. J. L. 208, 32 Am. Rep. 198; Rourke v. Elk Drug Co. 75 App. Div. 145, 77 N. Y. Supp. 373; Hood v. Palm, 8 Pa. 237; Riding v. Smith, L. R. 1 Exch. Div. 91; Gregory v. Brunswick, 6 Mann. & G. 205; 2 Hilliard, Torts, 444, 558; Townshend, Slander & Libel, 4th ed. § 118, note 3.

Proof of a conspiracy was not necessary to justify a recovery.

Dodge v. Bradstreet, 59 How. Pr. 104; Buffalo Lubricating Oil Co. v. Standard Oil Co. 42 Hun, 153, 106 N. Y. 669, 12 N. E. 825; Morton v. Metropolitan L. Ins. Co. 34 Hun, 366, 103 N. Y. 645; Lafitte v. New Orleans City & Lake R. Co. 43 La. Ann. 34, 12 L. R. A. 338, 8 So. 701; Delz v. Winfree, 80 Tex. 400, 26 Am. St. Rep. 755, 16 S. W. 111; Van Horn v. Van Horn, 52 N. J. L. 284, 10 L. R. A. 184, 20 Atl. 485; Booker v. Puyear, 27 Neb. 340, 43 N. W. 136; Rourke v. Elk Drug Co. 75 App. Div. 145, 77 N. Y. Supp. 373; Jones v. Baker, 7 Cow. 445; Buffalo Lubricating Oil Co. v. Everest, 30 Hun, 588; Reed v. Home Sav. Bank, 130 Mass. 443, 39 Am. Rep. 468; Western News Co. v. Wilmarth, 33 Kan. 510, 6 Pac. 786; Hindman v. First Nat. Bank, 48 L. R. A. 210, 39 C. C. A. 17, 98 Fed. 562; Casey v. Cincinnati Typographical Union No. 3, 12 L. R. A. 196, note, 45 Fed. 135.

The court erred in limiting plaintiffs' recovery to damages to their business. Injury to their reputation might also be recovered.

Raymond v. Yarrington, 96 Tex. 443, 62 L. R. A. 962, 97 Am. St. Rep. 914, 72 S. W. 580, 73 S. W. 800; Jenkins v. Pennsylvania R. Co. 67 N. J. L. 331, 57 L. R. A. 309, 51 Atl. 705; Harrison v. Adamson, 86 Iowa, 693, 53 N. W. 334; Washburn v. Gilman, 64 Me. 163, 18 Am. Rep. 246; Phillips v. Phillips, 34 N. J. L. 208; Chicago & N. W. R. Co. v. Hoag, 90 Ill. 339; Learned v. Castle, 78 Cal. 454, 21 Pac. 13, 18 Pac. 872; Gunter v. Astor, 4 J. B. Moore, 12; Riding v. Smith, L. R. 1 Exch. Div. 91; Walker v. San Antonio Light Pub. Co. 30 Tex. Civ. App. 165, 70 S. W. 555; Bank of Commerce v. Goos, 39 Neb. 437, 23 L. R. A. 190, 58 N. W. 84; Schaffner v. Ehrman, 139 Ill. 109, 15 L. R. A. 134, 32 Am. St. Rep. 192, 28 N. E. 917; McDuff v. Detroit Evening Journal Co. 84 Mich. 1, 22 Am. St. Rep. 675, 47 N. W. 671.

A person has a right, under the law, as between himself and other persons, to pursue his calling or business without interference or obstruction from others, and an infringement of this right by others is an illegal act.

Raymond v. Yarrington, 96 Tex. 443, 62 67 L. R. A.

L. R. A. 962, 97 Am. St. Rep. 914, 72 S. W. 580, 73 S. W. 803; Read v. Friendly Soc. of Operative Stonemasons [1902], 2 K. B. 88, 732; Olive v. Van Patten, 7 Tex. Civ. App. 630, 25 S. W. 428; International & G. N. R. Co. v. Greenwood, 2 Tex. Civ. App. 80, 21 S. W. 559; Plant v. Woods, 176 Mass. 492, 51 L. R. A. 339, 79 Am. St. Rep. 330, 57 N. E. 1011; Van Horn v. Van Horn, 52 N. J. L. 284, 10 L. R. A. 184, 20 Atl. 485, 53 N. J. L. 514, 21 Atl. 1069, 56 N. J. L. 318, 28 Atl. 689.

To sustain this case, it is not necessary to prove that the means employed were unlawful. The case, both as to pleadings and evidence, is one upon both theories of conspiracy.

Riding v. Smith, L. R. 1 Exch. Div. 91; Rourke v. Elk Drug Co. 75 App. Div. 145, 77 N. Y. Supp. 373; Morassee v. Brochu, 151 Mass. 567, 8 L. R. A. 524, 21 Am. St. Rep. 474, 25 N. E. 74; Gregory v. Brunswick, 6 Mann. & G. 205; Wildee v. McKee, 111 Pa. 335, 56 Am. Rep. 271, 2 Atl. 108; Webb's Pollock, Torts, p. 406; Townshend, Slander & Libel, 4th ed. § 118, note 3; Keeble v. Hickeringill, 11 East, 573, note; Carrington v. Taylor, 11 East, 571; Gunter v. Astor, 4 J. B. Moore, 12; Tarleton v. McGawley, Peake N. J. Add. Cas. 207; Dreuz v. Domec, 18 Cal. 83; Davenport v. Lynch, 51 N. C. (6 Jones, L.) 545; Smith v. Nippert, 76 Wis. 86, 20 Am. St. Rep. 26, 44 N. W. 846; Phelps v. Goddard, 1 Tyler (Vt.) 60, 4 Am. Dec. 720; Raleigh v. Cook, 60 Tex. 438; Carew v. Rutherford, 106 Mass. 1, 8 Am. Rep. 287; Jones v. Baker, 7 Cow. 445; Old Dominion S. S. Co. v. McKenna, 30 Fed. 48; Farmers' Loan & T. Co. v. Northern P. R. Co. 25 L. R. A. 414, note, 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 744, note, 60 Fed. 803; Sherry v. Perkins, 147 Mass. 212, 9 Am. St. Rep. 689, 17 N. E. 307; Mapstick v. Range, 9 Neb. 390, 31 Am. Rep. 415, 2 N. W. 739; Casey v. Cincinnati Typographical Union No. 3, 12 L. R. A. 193, 45 Fed. 135; Lucke v. Clothing Cutters' & T. Assembly No. 7507, K. of L. 77 Md. 396, 19 L. R. A. 408, 39 Am. St. Rep. 421, 26 Atl. 505; Ryan v. Burger & H. Breacing Co. 37 N. Y. S. R. 287, 13 N. Y. Supp. 660; Buffalo Lubricating Oil Co. v. Standard Oil Co. 106 N. Y. 669, 12 N. E. 825; Dueber Watch-Case Mfg. Co. v. E. Howard Watch & Clock Co. 3 Misc. 582, 24 N. Y. Supp. 647; Hood v. Palm, 8 Pa. 237; Webb v. Drake, 52 La. Ann. 290, 26 So. 791; Gore v. Condon, 87 Md. 368, 40 L. R. A. 382, 67 Am. St. Rep. 362, 39 Atl. 1042; Doremus v. Hennessy, 62 Ill. App. 391; Chipley v. Atkinson, 23 Fla. 206, 11 Am. St. Rep. 367, 1 So. 934, 35 Alb. L. J. 224.

A suit on a conspiracy carried out by illegal means sets up a distinct cause of action. The means employed may each give rise to separate suits, but, if they are steps towards a consummated or a completed plan or scheme to injure, the injured party may ignore the separate causes of action, and sue for his entire damages caused by all the different illegal acts.

Northern P. R. Co. v. Kindred, 3 McCrary, 627, 14 Fed. 81; Bingham v. Lipman, W. & Co. 40 Or. 363, 67 Pac. 98; Oliver v. Perkins, 92 Mich. 319, 52 N. W. 609; Rice v. Coolidge, 121 Mass. 393, 23 Am. Rep. 279; Dodge v. Bradstreet, 59 How. Pr. 104; State v. Howard, 129 N. C. 657, 40 S. E. 71; Haldeman v. Martin, 10 Pa. 369; State v. Hickling, 41 N. J. L. 208, 32 Am. Rep. 198; Van Horn v. Van Horn, 56 N. J. L. 318, 28 Atl. 669; Murray v. McGarigle, 69 Wis. 483, 34 N. W. 528; Jones v. Morrison, 31 Minn. 140, 16 N. W. 857; United States v. Greene, 115 Fed. 350.

Loss of business is the natural and proximate result of false statements circulated to the injury of the party in business, and which are calculated to frighten off his customers.

International & G. N. R. Co. v. Greenwood, 2 Tex. Civ. App. 80, 21 S. W. 559; Dels v. Winfree, 80 Tex. 400, 26 Am. St. Rep. 755, 16 S. W. 111; Olive v. Van Patten, 7 Tex. Civ. App. 630, 25 S. W. 428; Van Horn v. Van Horn, 52 N. J. L. 284, 10 L. R. A. 184, 20 Atl. 485, 53 N. J. L. 514, 21 Atl. 1069, 56 N. J. L. 318, 28 Atl. 669; Texas & P. R. Co. v. Durrett, 57 Tex. 48; San Antonio & A. R. Co. v. Gwynn, 4 Tex. App. Civ. Cas. (Willson) p. 338.

It is not necessary to prove an express agreement between coconspirators. Such cases necessarily are established upon circumstances.

United States v. Wrape, Fed. Cas. No. 16,767; Patnode v. Westenhaber, 114 Wis. 460, 90 N. W. 472; Davis v. Johnson, 42 C. C. A. 111, 101 Fed. 952; Horton v. Lee, 106 Wis. 439, 82 N. W. 360; 4 Enc. Pl. & Pr. p. 707; Page v. Cushing, 38 Me. 523; Jernigan v. Wainer, 12 Tex. 193; Gardner v. Preston, 2 Day, 205; 2 Am. Dec. 91; Redding v. Wright, 49 Minn. 322, 51 N. W. 1056; Jones v. Baker, 7 Cow. 445.

Messrs. Gano, Gano, & Gano and Sleeper & Kendall for appellees.

Brown, J., delivered the opinion of the court:

The court of civil appeals of the third district has submitted the following statement and questions in the above cause:

"R. L. Brown and J. Gordon Brown sued the American Freehold Land Mortgage Company of London, Limited, R. B. King, and T. Mallinson to recover $150,000 damages. The trial resulted in a verdict and judgment for the plaintiffs for $100, and they have appealed. The appellees have filed cross assignments, and having reached the conclusion that appellants' brief points out reversible error, we desire to certify to the supreme court certain questions presented by the cross assignments, which questions are material to the rights of the parties and to a proper disposition of the case.

"The plaintiff's original petition was filed June 27, 1901, and the amended petition, on which the plaintiffs went to trial, was filed February 23, 1903. The latter petition reads as follows:

"[From the petition certified we condense the allegations which we deem necessary to answer the questions submitted as follows: After making the formal allegations of the parties, their residences, etc., the petition alleges, in substance, that R. L. Brown and J. G. Brown, under the firm name of Brown Brothers, had established at Austin and at the city of Waco a business as loan agents, which transacted business throughout the state, and had, from 1888 to the year 1898, conducted the business of lending money on behalf of foreign corporations, receiving for their services a per cent of the annual interest as it accrued upon the loans made; that the plaintiffs had established a good reputation as business men for honesty, promptness, and reliability, and as men who could command money for lending to those who might apply to them to borrow, and, in the transaction of the business of loan agents, had established business relations with many people in Texas who were borrowers of money, who had confidence in plaintiffs and would have continued to do business with them, except for the interference of defendants. Plaintiffs allege that they were appointed agents of the American Freehold Land Mortgage Company of London, Limited, hereafter called the "defendant company," in the year 1888, and continued to transact business as such agents for that company until the year 1898, during which time a profitable business was done for the said defendant company from which the plaintiffs received annually $8,000. The petition alleges that the plaintiffs were at the same time agents for the English & Scottish Land Mortgage & Investment Company, Limited, a foreign corporation, which business was satisfactory to the said corporation, and was profitable to it and plaintiffs, until said English & Scottish Company was induced by the false representations of defendants to take the business from plaintiffs. It is alleged that in the year 1898 the defendant company determined to change the manner of doing business in Texas, so as to pay salaries instead of commissions, as it had done with the plaintiffs, and determined that it would secure for itself the agency for the English & Scottish Land Mortgage & Investment Company, Limited, which the plaintiffs then had and would have continued to hold, but for the wrongful acts of the defendants. It is alleged that by reason of the transactions which the plaintiffs had carried on as agents, lending money for the said two corporations, as well as for others, they had established a valuable business, having loaned money to many persons, which loans were about to mature, and said persons would require to renew the loans or to borrow money to pay them; that plaintiffs would have been able to control that business as agents of other companies, after the agencies for the said two companies had been taken from them, and, to prevent this and to secure the plaintiffs' business for themselves, the defendants, the said defendant company, R. B. King, and T. Mallinson, who are alleged to be agents of defendant company, fraudulently and maliciously combined, confederated, and conspired together for the purpose of weakening and destroying plaintiffs' business influence, financial credit, and standing, to break them up and run them out of business, and, for the purpose of causing the English & Scottish Company to transfer its business to the defendant company, the defendants made certain false and malicious representations to the said English & Scottish Company as to the management of its business by the plaintiffs, which caused the said last-named company to take the business agency in Texas from the plaintiffs, and that by means of the fraudulent combination, and their acts done and performed, alleged specifically in the petition, the said defendants succeeded in preventing the plaintiffs from continuing their business with a large number of their clients, who needed to borrow money and whose loans in the other companies were maturing; and, by the fraudulent and false representations in manner alleged in the petition, defendants prevented the said persons from making application to the plaintiffs for such loans, and succeeded in causing the English & Scottish Company to take its business from the plaintiffs, and thereby weakened and in a large measure destroyed the business of the plaintiffs. It is alleged in the petition that the defendants for the wicked, malicious, and fraudulent purpose before charged, circulated and published reports and statements to the effect that the plaintiffs were insolvent and unable to accommodate their customers who might apply for loans and by the various methods alleged interfered and prevented many persons from applying to the plaintiffs for loans, also by such means and by such false and fraudulent representations prevented the plaintiffs from acquiring agencies for other companies which otherwise they could have done, so as to enable them to furnish money to those persons who applied to them for loans. The petition alleges that the business of the agency made a return annually of $15,000 profits, and would have continued for many years to produce that amount, if it had not been for the wrongful and malicious acts done and performed by the defendants, but that by their interference with plaintiffs' business, and the circulation and publication of false and fraudulent statements with reference to their honesty, their business integrity, and solvency, the plaintiffs were damaged in the sum of $150,000. The petition alleges with great particularity and in detail the many acts, statements, and publications done and performed by the defendants for the purpose of accomplishing the conspiracy charged against them, which it is unnecessary for us to set out. This statement of the contents of the petition will be a sufficient basis for the answer to the questions hereinafter copied.] The trial court sustained exceptions to the sixth, seventh, and twenty-third paragraphs of the petition, overruled other exceptions, and held that the petition stated a cause of action upon a conspiracy to injure the plaintiffs in their business and submitted the case to the jury upon that issue.

67 L. R. A.

"Appellees' first cross assignment of error complains of the action of the court below in overruling their special exception No. 23, which exception was both general and special, and challenged the petition, for the reason, among others, that it showed no cause of action against the defendants. Under the assignment referred to, appellees contend that when the object of a conspiracy is not actionable, nor the means to accomplish the object actionable, no cause of action exists. They also maintain that this case falls within the rule asserted by them; the contention being that it was not unlawful for them as competitors to conspire to obtain the business which the plaintiffs had, thereby breaking plaintiffs up in business, unless in so doing they committed wrongs which were actionable in and of themselves, which they assert the plaintiffs' petition fails to show; and they rely upon the case of Delz v. Winfree, 80 Tex. 400, 26 Am. St. Rep. 755, 16 S. W. 111, as supporting their contention. Under the second cross assignment of error, appellees complain of the action of the court in overruling special exceptions to paragraphs Nos. 9, 9b, 10, 10b, 11, 12, 13, 14b, 15, 16, 17, 18, and 19, by which exceptions they pleaded the one-year statute of limitations as to the matters complained of in said para graphs of the petition. As to the questions certified, and showing that they are properly presented for decision, reference is here made to the first seven pages of appellees' brief on their cross assignments of error. With the foregoing statement and explanation, the court of civil appeals of the third district certifies to the supreme court for decision the following questions:

"(1) Eliminating the sixth, seventh, and twenty-third paragraphs of the plaintiffs' petition, to which paragraphs the court sustained exceptions, does the petition state a cause of action against the defendants, and did the trial court err in overruling the defendants' demurrer thereto, as charged in the first cross assignment of error?"

"(2) If the petition states a cause of action, does the one-year statute of limitations apply to the case, and did the trial court err in overruling the special exceptions referred to in the second cross assignment of error?"

We answer that the plaintiffs' petition states a good cause of action against each of the defendants, and the demurrer was properly overruled. The allegations which charge a conspiracy between the defendants to perpetrate the wrong set up in the petition are immaterial in this case, for the reason that the petition charges that each defendant, with the purpose to accomplish the injury to plaintiffs, participated by performing jointly and individually the various acts which caused injury to the plaintiffs; that the acts done separately by each were for the purpose of accomplishing the aim of all, and contributed thereto, and, if the facts alleged show a right of action, then the defendants are liable jointly and severally for the injury produced by their acts, whether performed jointly or severally. 15 Enc. Pl. & Pr. p. 558; Cooley, Torts, 145. Appellees contend that it was lawful for them to break the appellants up in their business and to run them out of business "by lawful means." We agree to that proposition as being correct, even if it be true that the parties thus acting by lawful means were actuated by malice. If, for instance, the appellees, in the transaction of the business of lending in competition with appellants, had offered money for loan at a rate below that which the appellants could furnish it, and thereby induced the customers of the appellants to borrow from the defendant company, and by reason thereof Brown Brothers were unable to maintain their business, and were broken up and compelled to quit, then no cause of action would exist in favor of the appellants against the defendants, because, however malicious the motive, the means used would be lawful. But the facts alleged do not make such a case; for instance, it is alleged against all of the defendants that "on divers occasions and in the presence of different people in the city of Waco, Texas, and in other parts of McLennan county, Texas, they stated, in substance, that plaintiffs had done a bad business for the defendant company, which, in consequence thereof, had taken its business from plaintiffs, and that plaintiffs had been inattentive and neglectful of its business, and had conducted it in a way very unsatisfactory and unprofitable to defendant company, and had been guilty of fraudulent conduct as such agents; and, further, in said McLennan county at various times, and in Austin at various times in the fall of 1898 and 1899 and in the spring of 1900, made other statements, to the effect that the plaintiffs were financially insolvent and irresponsible, and that they would make them bankrupt when they liked, and that the plaintiffs were going out of the business, and that plaintiffs had been guilty of fraudulent conduct as agents." There are numerous charges of like character against the defendants in the petition, which enters minutely and elaborately into a statement of the various acts and statements of the several defendants, done and made for the accomplishment of the purpose charged, of breaking them up and driving them out of business. It cannot be said that it is fair competition to deal with a competitor in the manner shown by the facts alleged in this petition; for if the facts be true, and we must take them as such in this investigation, they manifest wicked persecution of the appellants by the defendant company, through its agents and officers, with the purpose of destroying appellants' business and of securing the benefits to defendant company which legitimately belonged to Brown Brothers. It can hardly be said that the purpose of breaking a man down in business and driving him out of business is a lawful purpose, even when accomplished by lawful means. The best that can be said of such transaction is that the law affords no remedy for such wrong.

In Delz v. Winfree, 80 Tex. 400, 26 Am. St. Rep. 755, 16 S. W. 111, this court quoted from Walker v. Cronin, 107 Mass. 555, 562, as follows: "Everyone has a right to enjoy the fruits and advantages of his own enterprise, industry, skill, and credit. He has no right to be protected against competition; but he has a right to be free from a malicious and wanton interference, disturbance or annoyance. If disturbance or loss come as a result of competition, or the exercise of like rights by others, it is damnum absque injuria, unless some superior right, by contract or otherwise, is interfered with. But if it come from the merely wanton or malicious acts of others, without the justification of competition or the service of any interest or lawful purpose, it then stands upon a different footing." If the allegations of the petition in this case be true, it was not a matter of competition on part of the defendant company and its agents, but a malicious pursuit of appellants by means wholly without justification in law or morals; therefore, having produced the wrong as charged in the petition, the defendants may be justly held liable for the damage occasioned by the destruction of the business which the plaintiffs by their energy and care had built up for themselves. Delz v. Winfree, 80 Tex. 400, 26 Am. St. Rep. 755, 16 S. W. 111.

The cause of action alleged by the plaintiffs and upon which they sought recovery is the destruction of their business as loan agents by the unlawful and malicious acts of the defendants. The various acts which are charged in the petition—for instance, the representation that plaintiffs were dishonest and unreliable, and that they were bankrupt and insolvent—were simply allegations showing the methods by which the defendants accomplished the purpose of destroying their business. It was not sought to recover upon the allegations constituting libel or slander, but the facts stated were the evidence by which the cause of action would be established. The statute of limitations of one year does not apply to the cause of action set up in this case.

WISCONSIN SUPREME COURT.

R. G. KINGSLEY, Appt.,

v.

City of MERRILL, Rcpt.

(.....Wis.....)

1. Mortgages, and notes of solvent debtors are property at the residence of their owner, within the meaning of a constitutional provision permitting the legislature to levy taxes upon such property as it shall prescribe.
2. For the purpose of determining whether or not the maker of notes is solvent within the meaning of a statute taxing solvent credits, he must be considered solvent if, although indebted to others, he has business or income and pays his debts, or has property out of which collection can be made.
3. The constitutional requirement of uniformity in taxation is not violated with respect to a tax upon credits by imposing it upon those which are solvent only, leaving debts due by insolvent persons untaxed.
4. A taxation of solvent credits does not present a case of double taxation, forbidden by the constitutional requirements of uniformity, although a tax may also be levied on the debtor.
5. The taxation by a state of debts due by solvent debtors is not forbidden by the clause of the amendment to the Federal Constitution forbidding any state to deny to any person the equal protection of the laws, although no tax is laid on debts due by insolvents.

(Dodge, J., dissents in part.)

(June 9, 1904.)

NOTE.—As to situs, for purpose of taxation, of debts evidenced by notes and mortgages, see also, in this series, Boyd v. Selma, 16 L. R. A. 729, and the later case of Holland v. Silver Bow County, 27 L. R. A. 797.

As to taxation of mortgages, including ques-

APPEAL by plaintiff from a judgment of the Circuit Court for Lincoln County in favor of defendant in an action brought to recover money paid as taxes under protest. Affirmed.

Statement by Cassoday, Ch. J.:

This is an appeal from an order sustaining a demurrer to the complaint in an action to recover back $374.32 paid under protest; the same being for $363.42 taxes levied on account of notes and mortgages, and $10.90 fees of the officer in making such collection. The complaint alleges, in effect, that the defendant is a municipal corporation, organized as such; that upon the general assessment roll of the city for 1902 there was carried out by the treasurer against the plaintiff an assessment of $10,430 on account of notes and mortgages owned by the plaintiff, in addition to an assessment of all other personal property of the plaintiff then liable to taxation in that city; that the city clerk made out the tax roll for that year on that basis, and, in doing so, levied and charged on said tax roll against the plaintiff, on account of such notes and mortgages, a tax for that year of $363.42; that such tax was illegal and void, because contrary to the provisions of the Constitution of this state; that such tax roll, with a warrant in due form for the collection of the same, was delivered to the city treasurer in December, 1902; that such tion of double taxation, see Detroit v. Rents, 16 L. R. A. 59, and note.

For tax on obligations of loan association held against borrower, as double taxation, see People's Loan & Homestead Assn. v. Keith, 28 L. R. A. 65.

treasurer demanded payment of all taxes levied against the plaintiff on such tax roll; that the plaintiff paid all of such taxes, except the $363.42 so levied on account of notes and mortgages, which the plaintiff refused to pay, for the reasons stated; that March 4, 1903, said treasurer, pursuant to the command of said warrant, again demanded payment of the $363.42, with the collector's fee of $10.00 added; that, upon the plaintiff's refusal to pay the same, the treasurer seized and levied upon certain personal property of the plaintiff for the purpose of selling the same and collecting such amounts; that thereupon, and in order solely to save his property from being removed and sold, and thereby sacrificed, and solely by reason of such duress, the plaintiff paid to the said treasurer the $374.32 so demanded by him, under protest, however, that such levy and collection was wrongful and unlawful, and that the plaintiff would bring action to recover back the money so paid; that the treasurer paid said sum into the defendant's treasury; that May 15, 1903, the plaintiff presented to the common council of the city, for audit and allowance, his duly verified claim for said $374.32 so illegally and wrongfully collected of the plaintiff; that July 16, 1903, the common council wholly disallowed such claim, and the city clerk thereupon notified the plaintiff, in writing, of such disallowance; that thereupon the plaintiff duly appealed to the circuit court from the decision of the common council disallowing such claim, and prays judgment for the amount so paid, with interest from March 4, 1903, and costs.

Messrs. Curtis & Reid, for appellant:

For the purposes of taxation choses in action are not property, are incapable of being taxed as property, and the tax in question is void for that reason.

Cooley, Const. Lim. 5th ed. p. 479; Cooley, Taxn. 1st ed. p. 3; Hart v. Smith, 159 Ind. 182, 58 L. R. A. 949, 95 Am. St. Rep. 280, 64 N. E. 662.

The power to tax is not an unlimited, despotic power to make exactions, but it is restrained by fundamental constitutional principles, so as to make it a power for public good, and not for public harm, and so as to maintain the liberty and rights of the people, and not oppress them.

Cooley, Const. Lim. 5th ed. 603; State ex rel. New Richmond v. Davidson, 114 Wis. 563, 58 L. R. A. 739, 88 N. W. 596, 90 N. W. 1067; Curtis v. Whipple, 24 Wis. 354, 1 Am. Rep. 187.

Choses in action constitute no part of the aggregate wealth of the community. Their creation adds nothing to that wealth, and their destruction deducts nothing from it; 67 L. R. A.

and they are not "property" according to the constitutional principles of taxation.

People v. Hibernia Sav. & L. Soc. 51 Cal. 243, 21 Am. Rep. 704.

Not everything that is recognized as property is subject to taxation.

Black v. State, 113 Wis. 205, 90 Am. St. Rep. 853, 89 N. W. 522; Hart v. Smith, 159 Ind. 182, 58 L. R. A. 949, 95 Am. St. Rep. 280, 64 N. E. 662.

In order to constitute property subject to a property tax the thing must have intrinsic value, be capable of certain and definite valuation by the process provided for laying property taxes, and constitute a portion of the aggregate wealth of the community.

Black v. State, 113 Wis. 205, 90 Am. St. Rep. 853, 89 N. W. 522; Pippin v. Ellison, 34 N. C. (12 Ired. L.) 61, 55 Am. Dec. 403; Pullen v. Raleigh, 68 N. C. 451; Re Jameson, 1 Mich. 99; White v. Robbins, 21 Minn. 370; Johnson v. Lexington, 14 B. Mon. 648; Covington v. Powell, 2 Met. (Ky.) 226; Chicago v. Hulbert, 118 Ill. 632, 59 Am. Rep. 400, 8 N. E. 812; People v. Hibernia Sav. & L. Soc. 51 Cal. 243, 21 Am. Rep. 704.

At common law choses in action could not be seized or sold on execution because not regarded as property.

Freeman, Executions, § 112; Ingalls v. Lord, 1 Cow. 240; Denton v. Livingston, 9 Johns. 96, 6 Am. Dec. 264; Dart v. Woodhouse, 40 Mich. 399, 29 Am. Rep. 544; People ex rel. Martin v. Wayne County, 5 Mich. 223; Williams v. Reynolds, 7 Ind. 622; Stephens v. Cady, 14 How. 528, 14 L. ed. 528.

It is property in possession and enjoyment, and not merely in right, which must ultimately pay every tax.

People v. Hibernia Sav. & L. Soc. 51 Cal. 243, 21 Am. Rep. 704.

It is the duty of the court to so construe the term "property" as to exclude credits therefrom if such construction would be at all reasonable.

Cooley, Taxn. 1st ed. p. 165.

A purpose to impose double taxation upon property is not to be presumed, but, to sustain a tax which would have that effect, the intent must be clear and unmistakable.

Wright v. Louisville & N. R. Co. 54 C. C. A. 672, 117 Fed. 1007; Salem Iron Factory Co. v. Danvers, 10 Mass. 514; Nashua Sav. Bank v. Nashua, 46 N. H. 389; Amesbury Woollen & Cotton Mfg. Co. v. Amesbury, 17 Mass. 461; Bank of Georgia v. Savannah, Dudley (Ga.) 132; Iron City Bank v. Pittsburgh, 37 Pa. 340; Gordon v. Baltimore, 5 Gill, 231.

A debt due from an insolvent debtor is as much liquidated as a debt due from a solvent debtor.

Choses in action are either all property, or they are not. If, in considering them in connection with the fundamental principles involved in levying a property tax, they cannot all be treated as property, then they must be logically all excluded from the meaning of that term.

Black v. State, 113 Wis. 219, 90 Am. St. Rep. 853, 89 N. W. 522; Knowlton v. Rock County, 9 Wis. 410.

The taxation of choses in action as property violates the 14th Amendment to the Federal Constitution, and it should be held that it also violates § 1, art. 8, of the state Constitution.

Second Ward Sav. Bank v. Milwaukee, 94 Wis. 587, 69 N. W. 359; Railroad Tax Case, 8 Sawy. 238, 13 Fed. 722; Santa Clara County v. Southern P. R. Co. 18 Fed. 385; Stroh v. Detroit, 131 Mich. 109, 90 N. W. 1030.

Mr. E. M. Smart, with Mr. John Van Hecke, for respondent:

The legislature has the power, not only to prescribe what property shall be taxed, but also the rule by which it must be taxed; and the only limitation of that power is that the rule shall be uniform.

Wisconsin C. R. Co. v. Taylor County, 52 Wis. 37, 8 N. W. 833; Cooley, Taxn. 2d ed. pp. 5, 6.

A mortgagee may be taxed on his mortgage, although the land is also taxed for its full value to the mortgagor.

Detroit v. Detroit (Detroit v. Rents) 91 Mich. 78, 16 L. R. A. 60, 51 N. W. 787.

Credits are property. and are therefore proper subjects of taxation.

People v. Worthington, 21 Ill. 171, 74 Am. Dec. 86.

This does not amount to a double assessment.

Second Ward Sav. Bank v. Milwaukee, 94 Wis. 587, 69 N. W. 359, Cooley, Taxn. 2d ed. 225; Griffin v. La Salle County, 184 Ill. 276, 56 N. E. 397; Judge v. Spencer, 15 Utah, 242, 48 Pac. 1097; Illinois Nat. Bank v. Kinsella, 201 Ill. 31, 66 N. E. 338; International Bldg. & L. Asso. v. Marion County, 30 Ind. App. 12, 65 N. E. 297.

Taxation is not invalid because of unequal results.

Cooley, Taxn. 2d ed. 221; Green Bay & M. Canal Co. v. Outagamie County, 76 Wis. 587, 45 N. W. 536.

A mortgage is a "credit," and is "property," and the assessment of the mortgage and of the mortgaged property in full is not "double taxation."

McGregor v. Vangel, 24 Iowa, 436; Taggart v. Sanilac County, 71 Mich. 16, 38 N. W. 639; People v. Worthington, 21 Ill. 171, 67 L. R. A.

74 Am. Dec. 86; Redmond v. Tarboro, 106 N. C. 122, 7 L. R. A. 539, 10 S. E. 845; Perrine v. Jacobs, 64 Iowa, 79, 19 N. W. 861; Jones v. Seward County, 10 Neb. 154, 4 N. W. 946.

Cassoday, Ch. J., delivered the opinion of the court:

Counsel for the plaintiff contend with much ability that the notes and mortgages in question are not property, capable of being taxed as such in this state. Certainly the statutes have treated such debts as property and subject to taxation ever since the state has existed. This is obvious from the wording of different sections of the statutes. Thus the statute declares that "taxes shall be levied upon all property in this state, except such as is exempted therefrom." § 1034, Rev. Stat. 1878; § 1034, Rev. Stat. 1898. The same, in substance, was contained in § 1, chap. 15, Rev. Stat. 1849. Then, after defining the term "real property," "real estate," and "land," the statute provides that "the term 'personal property' as used in this title shall be construed to mean and include . . . all debts due from solvent debtors, whether on account, note, contract, bond, mortgage, or other security, or whether such debts are due or to become due." § 1036, Rev. Stat. 1878; § 1036, Rev. Stat. 1898. Those provisions were taken almost literally from § 19, chap. 130, p. 138, Laws 1868, and are substantially the same as § 3, chap. 15, Rev. Stat. 1849. Among the rules for construing the statutes, as prescribed therein, during the last forty-six years, we find that "the words 'personal property' include money, goods, chattels, things in action, and evidences of debt." And again that "the word 'property' includes property, real and personal." Subdivs. 14, 15, § 1, chap. 5, Rev. Stat. 1858; subdivs. 3, 4, § 4972, Rev. Stat. 1878; § 4972, Rev. Stat. 1898. The statute only exempts the taxpayer from "so much of the debts due or to become due to any person, as shall equal the amount of bona fide and unconditional debts by him owing." Subdiv. 10, § 1038, Rev. Stat. 1878; subdiv. 10, § 1038, Rev. Stat. 1898; subdiv. 10, § 2, chap. 130, p. 132, Laws 1868. Other sections of the statutes clearly require such notes and mortgages to be assessed as personal property. §§ 1055, 1056, Rev. Stat. 1878; §§ 1055, 1056, Rev. Stat. 1898. If such statutes are constitutional, then there can be no doubt but what the tax in question is valid.

The Constitution declares that "the rule of taxation shall be uniform, and taxes shall be levied upon such property as the legislature shall prescribe." Wis. Const. art. 8, § 1. If it is true that notes and mortgages are not property subject to taxation under this clause of the Constitution, then it is very singular that the fact was not discovered by the able lawyers who have revised the statutes from time to time,—first in 1849, and then in 1858,—and especially those who revised the statutes of 1878, because that revision took place several years after the lengthy controversy and numerous conflicting decisions and opinions as to the validity of certain provisions of the statutes under the clause of the Constitution above quoted. The subject related to revenue, and was of vital importance to the state and its citizens; and, in revising the statutes on the subject, the revisers, from time to time, must have scrupulously sought to keep within the bounds of legislative power. The same may be said of the legislature, from time to time, amending the statutes in respect to taxation.

Such long and uniform sanction by law revisers and lawmakers of the right to tax notes and mortgages would, of course, be entitled to great weight in construing an ambiguous or doubtful provision of the Constitution, yet it is entitled to no weight if the statutes in question are in conflict with the plain meaning of the Constitutional provision quoted. State ex rel. Hudd v. Timme, 54 Wis. 318, 336–341, 11 N. W. 785; State ex rel. Weiss v. District Board, 76 Wis. 177, 195–199, 7 L. R. A. 330, 20 Am. St. Rep. 41, 44 N. W. 967; State ex rel. Lamb v. Cunningham, 83 Wis. 90, 141–143, 17 L. R. A. 145, 35 Am. St. Rep. 27, 53 N. W. 35, and cases there cited; Travelers' Ins. Co. v. Fricke, 94 Wis. 258, 266, 68 N. W. 958. The question of such validity is here squarely presented, and must be squarely met, and disposed of on the merits.

Undoubtedly, as stated by the tax commission and urged by counsel, that which gives a credit "value, and which the present assessment laws recognize and treat as property, consists, not in the written instruments or other evidences of the creditor's right or security, but in the right itself,—the creditor's right to receive and enforce payment of his demand. This right of the creditor is admittedly a thing of value, assuming always that the debtor is solvent. In many of its forms, with its evidences, it may be freely transferred from one person to another, and often performs the office of a medium of exchange more efficiently than money." Wis. Tax Com. 1903. p. 116. But that does not indicate that notes and mortgages are not property. On the contrary, it pretty clearly indicates that they are property. One definition of property in the Century Dictionary is: "The right to the use or enjoyment or the beneficial right of disposal of anything that can be the subject of ownership; ownership; estate; especially ownership of tangible things. In the broader sense, a right of action is property." "A vested right of action is property in the same sense in which tangible things are property." Bouvier, Law Dict. That is a quotation from the opinion of the Supreme Court of the United States in Pritchard v. Norton, 106 U. S. 124, 132, 27 L. ed. 104, 107, 1 Sup. Ct. Rep. 102. Mr. Black says, "Personal property is further divided into property in possession and property or choses in action." [Law Dict.] In the latest Encyclopædia of Law, it is stated that, "in general the word 'property,' standing alone, will include choses in action. Thus the word without the qualifying term 'personal' has been held to include solvent credits. So it has been held to include bank notes, promissory notes, bills of exchange, bonds, insurance policies, judgments, and stock." 23 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, 2d ed. pp. 264, 265. In support of the text numerous adjudications are cited. In one of them, Cooley, Ch. J., makes this statement: "A right of action is as much property as is a corporeal possession." Power v. Harlow, 57 Mich. 107, 111, 23 N. W. 606. This court has held, in effect, that notes and mortgages in favor of a nonresident and against a resident of this state are "property within this state," and subject to be reached by creditors' bill. Bragg v. Gaynor, 85 Wis. 468, 481–488, 21 L. R. A. 161, 55 N. W. 919. So this court has held that notes secured by mortgages on land in another state, and in the hands of an agent in such state, but belonging to a resident of this state, are "property in this state," within the meaning of the Constitution and the statutes of this state, and hence are taxable here. Const. art. 8, § 1; Rev. Stat. 1898, §§ 1034, 1036, 1038, 1040, 1056; State ex rel. Dwinell v. Gaylord, 73 Wis. 316, 323–325, 41 N. W. 521. It is there said that "such notes and mortgages, however, are mere evidences of indebtedness. The destruction of such evidences does not necessarily extinguish the debts. They are merely choses or things in action. . . . In the case of such intangible species of property, the thing that is valuable is 'the right of the creditor to receive property or money,' and to enforce such right by action in court." That case has since been sanctioned in this and other states. Perrigo v. Milwaukee, 92 Wis. 241, 65 N. W. 1025; Howell v. Gordon, 127 Mich. 517, 86 N. W. 1042. So it was held in Vermont that debts due from solvent debtors, residing in that state, to a nonresident creditor, upon promissory notes, were personal property, within the meaning of the statutes of that state, and that the legislature of that state had power to enact a law subjecting such property in the hands of an agent there to taxation. Cutlin v. Hull, 21 Vt. 152. So it has been held in Alabama that solvent credits, evidenced by negotiable promissory notes, were taxable at the place of the owner's residence in that state, although secured by mortgage on lands in another state, where they were payable and held by an agent. Boyd v. Selma, 96 Ala. 144, 16 L. R. A. 729, 11 So. 393. There seems to be no escape from the conclusion that the notes and mortgages in question were property, within the meaning of the statutes cited, and the constitutional provision quoted.

2. The more important question is whether "the rule of taxation" prescribed by those statutes is "uniform," within the meaning of such constitutional provision. One of the grounds for claiming that such rule is not uniform is that the statutes mentioned only required taxes to be levied on "all debts due from solvent debtors," after deducting therefrom "the amount of bona fide and unconditional debts" owing by such taxpayer. In other words, the statutes omit from taxation debts due from insolvent debtors. It is claimed that, if "debts due from solvent debtors" are property, then debts due from insolvent debtors are also property, and that the statute requiring taxes to be levied upon the former without being levied upon the latter is in violation of the rule of uniformity required by the Constitution. If the statute is void upon the ground thus suggested, then we have never had a valid statute on the subject in this state. We have already shown that the statute under which the tax in question was levied has existed in substantially the same form ever since the revision of 1849. Before that, and several years prior to the adoption of our Constitution, the territorial legislature enacted that "the term personal property . . . shall be construed to include . . . debts due from solvent debtors, over and above the amount of debts owned by the owner thereof, whether due on account, contract, notes, bond, or mortgage." Wis. Terr. Laws 1841, No. 4, pp. 20, 21. That provision was taken almost literally from the Revised Statutes of New York, where the same has remained in force in substantially the same form ever since. N. Y. Rev. Stat. 1829, chap. 13, pt. 1, § 3, title 1, p. 388; 3 Birdseye's Rev. Stat. art. 1, § 2, sub. div. 4; N. Y. Codes & Gen. Laws, 2d ed. p. 3091. The question recurs, What is meant by the words "solvent debtors," as thus used in the statutes? Of course, "solvent debtors" include all who are not insolvent. Undoubtedly the meaning of the words depends very largely upon the subject to which they are applied, and the circumstances under which they are used. In bankruptcy and insolvency laws and proceedings they have a different meaning than in common discourse. Thus it is said in a recent work that, "as used in the insolvency and bankruptcy laws, especially when applied to traders or persons engaged in commercial pursuits, the term 'insolvency' generally means the condition of a person who is unable to pay his debts as they become due in the ordinary course of business. According to this definition, a person may be insolvent, though he has assets exceeding in value the amount of all his liabilities." 16 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, 2d ed. pp. 636, 637. But the same authority states in the same connection that, "in its popular and general sense, the term 'insolvency' denotes the insufficiency of the entire property and assets of an individual to pay his debts." Undoubtedly the general understanding is that an insolvent debtor is one whose property is insufficient to pay all his debts, or out of which his debts may be collected. Century Dict. The statute in question was made for the guidance of assessors and people generally. It is to have a practical construction. It was never intended that the assessor should engage in a judicial investigation to ascertain the exact balance between the assets and liabilities of such debtors. Where a person although indebted to others, has business or income, and pays his debts, or has property out of which collection can be made, then he may fairly be regarded as a solvent debtor.

Under the constitutional provision quoted, was it competent for the legislature to require taxes to be levied upon "debts due from solvent debtors," without requiring taxes also to be levied upon debts due from insolvent debtors? In other words, was the rule of uniformity broken by such discrimination between good and bad debts? This court held many years ago that "the legislature has power to prescribe, not only the property to be taxed, but the rule by which it must be taxed, and the only limitation of that power is that the rule shall be uniform. The power to prescribe what property shall be taxed necessarily implies the power to prescribe what property shall be exempt." Wisconsin C. R. Co. v. Taylor County, 52 Wis. 37, 89 et seq., 8 N. W. 833. It was there said, in effect, that such rule of taxation had never been regarded as requiring "uniformity as to the subjects of taxation;" and numerous provisions of the statutes were there referred to as illustrating the truth of the statement. While recognizing that "arbitrary classification of inclusion and exclusion," based upon "no rational grounds for distinction in the character, use, productiveness, or circumstances of the property or subjects taxed," could not be indulged, yet this court, in a later case, reaffirmed the authority of the legislature to make legitimate classification of property for the purposes of taxation. State ex rel. Sanderson v. Mann, 76 Wis. 469, 476, 477, 45 N. W. 526, 46 N. W. 51. It was there said that, since the Taylor County Case, "numerous decisions have been made by courts of high authority sanctioning the reasonable classifications of property for the purposes of taxation, and holding that the same were not in violation of the rule of uniformity;" citing a number of cases in support of the proposition. See Black v. State, 113 Wis. 216, 217, 90 Am. St. Rep. 853, 89 N. W. 522. The new Constitution of Pennsylvania of 1873 provides that "all taxes shall be uniform upon the same class of subjects within the territorial limits of the authority levying the tax." Pa. Const. art. 9, § 1. See 52 Wis. 87, 8 N. W. 833. Under that provision it was held in that state that "the power to impose taxes for the support of the government, with the power of classification, still belonging to the legislature under the new Constitution, the selection of the subjects thereof, their classification, and the methods of collection to be provided, are matters purely legislative. The power to classify being given, all that is then required by the Constitution is that the taxes shall be uniform upon the members of a class; and it is the uniformity of taxation according to the classification made which is a question to be determined by the courts. Absolute equality is unattainable, and a mere diversity in the methods of assessment and collection violates no rule of constitutional right, if, when they are applied, there is substantial uniformity in the results." Com. v. Delaware Div. Canal Co. 123 Pa. 594, 615, 2 L. R. A. 798, 16 Atl. 584; Com. v. Lehigh Valley R. Co. 129 Pa. 455, 18 Atl. 406, 410. The Constitution of Missouri of 1875 requires that taxes "shall be uniform upon the same class of subjects within the territorial limits of the authority levying the tax." Mo. Const. art. 10, § 3. In a case arising in that state under that provision of the Constitution, it was held by the Supreme Court of the United States that "diversity of taxation, both with respect to the amount imposed and the various species of property selected, either for bearing its burdens or for being exempt from them, is not inconsistent with a perfect uniformity and equality in taxation, and of a just adaptation of property to its burdens. A system of taxation which imposes the same tax upon every species of property, irrespective of its nature or condition or class, will be destructive of the" 67 L. R. A.

principle of uniformity and equality in taxation, and of a just adaptation of property to its burdens." Pacific Exp. Co. v. Seibert, 142 U. S. 339, 35 L. ed. 1035, 3 Inters. Com. Rep. 810, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 250. If, for the purposes of taxation, any classification of debts is permissible, under the constitutional provision in question, then certainly the difference between "debts due from solvent debtors" and debts due from insolvent debtors is sufficient to furnish a basis for such classification. We must hold that the statute in question is not void by reason of such classification.

3. It is further contended that, if "debts due from solvent debtors" are property, within the sense mentioned, yet that to tax the same necessarily results in double taxation, and hence is repugnant to the rule of uniformity required by our Constitution. Our attention is called to the report of the Wisconsin State Tax Commission on the subject. Pp. 116-118. Undoubtedly it is true, as there said, that "for every credit there exists an indebtedness of equal amount;" that "the sum of all credits in the world is exactly equal to the sum of all indebtedness;" that if, by some method of exchange or transfers, all debts were paid, then the corresponding credits would thereby become wholly extinguished; that "the result would be a great shifting of property or changing of financial resources among individuals," but that, there would be no less actual property in the world; "that to treat credits as property," as well as all lands and tangible things, "is, in substance and effect, a duplication of values;" that "such duplication results in double taxation, in economic consideration, and from the standpoint of substantial justice and equity." There may be great force in such statement when addressed to the legislature engaged in the framing of taxation laws, but they are only entitled to consideration here as bearing upon the constitutionality of the statutes mentioned. The report assumes the constitutionality of such statutes, and does "not contend that such duplication results in double taxation, in technical and legal contemplation, according to the general current of judicial decisions." We are not called upon to consider the wisdom of the statutes, but the power of the legislature to enact the statutes. The case seemingly most relied upon by counsel is People v. Hibernia Sav. & L. Soc. 51 Cal. 243, 21 Am. Rep. 704, where it was held that "credits are not property in the sense in which the word 'property' is used in § 13 of article 11 of the Constitution, and cannot be assessed for taxes or taxed as property, even if secured by mortgage." The section of the Constitution of that state therein referred to declares that "taxation shall be equal and uniform throughout the state. All property in this state shall be taxed in proportion to its value, to be ascertained as directed by law." P. 244, 51 Cal., p. 705, 21 Am. Rep. It will be observed that this provision contains restrictions upon legislative power not found in our Constitution. The equality of taxation and the proportionate value of property are requirements not mentioned in our Constitution. The decision in that case was in obedience to such requirements. It seems to be placed upon the grounds that credits were incapable of proportionate valuation as there required, and that to tax property purchased on credit, and also to tax the credit, was unequal taxation, and hence forbidden by the Constitution. The provision of the Constitution of that state is quite similar to some of those referred to from other states in the Taylor County Case, where it was said that "the provisions quoted from the several state Constitutions have each contained one or more elements of restriction upon legislative power not present in our Constitution." 52 Wis. 88, 8 N. W. 833. See pp. 60-63 and 78-88, 52 Wis., 8 N. W. 833. The decision in that case is certainly not an authority in a case under our Constitution, containing no such restrictions. In Pennsylvania, where, as we have shown, the constitutional restriction is very much like our own, it is held that "the legislature has the power to impose double taxation, provided it is done in such manner as to secure the uniformity which the Constitution requires." Com. v. Fall Brook Coal Co. 156 Pa. 488, 26 Atl. 1071; Com. v. Lehigh Coal & Nat. Co. 162 Pa. 603, 29 Atl. 664. Of course, there is a presumption against the existence of an intention to impose such double taxation, until overcome by the express language of the statute. Ibid. See also Stroh v. Detroit, 131 Mich. 109, 90 N. W. 1029. In this state it has been held that, "in order to render taxation double, one person or known subject of taxation must be required to contribute twice directly to the same burden, while other subjects of taxation are required to contribute but once." Second Ward Sav. Bank v. Milwaukee, 94 Wis. 587, 69 N. W. 359. In that case the shares of stock in the bank were taxed as the property of the shareholder, while the real estate forming a part of the capital stock was taxed as the property of the bank. And in a recent case it was held by this court "that the fact that the capital of such an unincorporated association engaged in banking consists of real property, and was taxed as such to the association, does not affect the question of its being taxable in its intangible form to the members 67 L. R. A.

of such association." State ex rel. Batz v. Lewis, 118 Wis. 432, 95 N. W. 388. The correctness of these decisions has not been questioned, and we perceive no good reason why they are not based upon solid ground. The case at bar does not present a case of double taxation, as defined by this court in the cases cited. We must hold that the statutes in question are not repugnant to the constitutional requirement that "the rule of taxation shall be uniform, and taxes shall be levied upon such property as the legislature shall prescribe." Const. art. 8. § 1.

4. Counsel also contend that the taxation of "debts due from solvent debtors" is prohibited by that clause of the Federal Constitution which declares that "no state shall . . . deny to any person within its jurisdiction the equal protection of the laws." U. S. Const. Amend. art. 14, § 1. The question was determined by the Supreme Court of the United States against such contention of counsel many years ago, in a case wherein it was held that "this court can afford the citizen of a state no relief from the enforcement of her laws prescribing the mode and subjects of taxation if they neither trench upon Federal authority, nor violate any right recognized or secured by the Constitution of the United States. The Constitution does not prohibit a state from taxing her resident citizens for debts held by them against a nonresident, evidenced by his bonds, payment whereof is secured by his deeds of trust or mortgages upon real estate situate in another state. Kirtland v. Hotchkiss, 100 U. S. 491, 25 L. ed. 558, Affirming the same case in 42 Conn. 426, 19 Am. Rep. 546. See also Kentucky Railroad Tax Cases (Cincinnati, N. O. & T. P. R. Co. v. Kentucky) 115 U. S. 321, 29 L. ed. 414, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 57; Gibbons v. District of Columbia, 116 U. S. 404, 29 L. ed. 680, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 427; Davenport Nat. Bank v. Davenport Bd. of Equalization, 123 U. S. 83, 31 L. ed. 94, 8 Sup. Ct. Rep. 73; Gulf, C. & S. F. R. Co. v. Ellis, 165 U. S. 150, 41 L. ed. 666, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 255; Adams Exp. Co. v. Ohio State Auditor, 165 U. S. 194, 41 L. ed. 683, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 305; Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Indiana, 165 U. S. 304, 41 L. ed. 725, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 345; American Sugar Ref. Co. v. Louisiana, 179 U. S. 89, 45 L. ed. 102, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 43; Kidd v. Alabama, 188 U. S. 730, 47 L. ed. 669, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 401. Several of these cases sanction the classification of property in the states for the purposes of taxation. We must hold that the statutes in question are valid enactments, and that the notes and mortgages belonging to the plaintiff were subject to taxation.

The order of the Circuit Court is affirmed.

Dodge, J., dissenting:

I concur in the holding of my brethren that, in the light of constitutional and legislative history, the framers of our Constitution must be deemed to have used the word "property," in § 1, art. 8, in a sense broad enough to include credits, however unphilosophical may be the treatment of such assets as property for purpose of taxation. I also yield to the authority of the heretofore decided cases in this court declaring that taxation both of the credits and of all the property of the debtors does not constitute such double taxation as to breach the uniformity rule of the Constitution, however clear may be the fact that thereby the debtor is pro tanto taxed twice. Weston v. Charleston, 2 Pet. 449, 7 L. ed. 481; San Mateo County v. Southern P. R. Co. 8 Sawy. 238, 13 Fed. 722, 732. Also I agree that inclusion of debts of solvent debtors, and exclusion of others, is legitimate classification, upon distinctions germane to the subject of taxation. So that, as to most of the subjects discussed in the opinion in this case, I am in general accord with that document, but to the conclusion reached I think there is a still further obstacle urged in argument, but passed without comment in the opinion. That I shall attempt to state.

If we concede that, for purposes of taxation, credits are property, the lawmakers must accept with that concession the burdens and limitations imposed on them in exercising their power to tax property. The limitation imposed by our Constitution is that the rule of taxation must be uniform. This is re-enforced by the 14th Amendment to the Federal Constitution, which prohibits the state from denying to any person the equal protection of the law. The state Constitution prohibits discrimination in rules of taxation between different kinds of that property which the legislature prescribes to be taxed, while the Federal Constitution protects the owners of property against discrimination in tax laws, as in all others. Black v. State, 113 Wis. 205, 90 Am. St. Rep. 853, 89 N. W. 522; State v. Whitcom (Wis.) 99 N. W. 468. I have found myself unable to escape the conviction that both of these prohibitions have been defied in that provision of our legislative scheme of taxation which permits the deduction of debts from the value of the credits owned by any person, in ascertaining their taxable value, without permitting such deduction from the values of other property. The statutory rule of taxation of all prescribed property is that the true cash value is to be ascertained, and that all general taxes are to be levied proportionately to such values. Assenting, as I do with some hesitation, to the 67 L. R. A.

view of my brethren that the statutes direct the ascertainment of the cash value of credits, as distinguished from their nominal or face value, I still cannot think that uniformity of rule is maintained when deductions are permitted from the value of one kind of the property prescribed to be taxed, and not from that of other kinds. I think that my brethren would hardly hold that uniformity was maintained in a statute which permitted deduction of the owner's debts from the value of his cattle, but not of his horses; of his wheat, but not of his corn; but I can see no difference between such cases and that now before us, in the principle involved. If a good $1,000 bond and $1,000 worth of lumber are both alike property, in the constitutional sense, why should one be valued for taxation at $500, and the other at $1,000, as they would be if the owner of each owed $500? Such discrimination signifies a perhaps unconscious recognition of a philosophical absurdity in attempting to class credits with tangible assets as taxable property, but only upon such classification does the power to tax credits as property exist at all under our Constitution. Some have suggested that one whose wealth consists of credits has wealth only to the excess of his credits over his debts. This may be conceded without advancing the argument. Equally the wealth of him who has tangible assets is not correctly measured unless his debts be deducted. In neither case, however, is that material to the question of taxation, for it is not the wealth of the individual on which the Constitution authorizes taxes to be laid, but the property within this state. Others have urged that credits constitute a fund from which men ordinarily expect to discharge their debts, and that somehow this justifies taxation of only the balance. The premise, however, is unfounded in fact. The farmer, the merchant, the manufacturer, ordinarily relies on the proceeds of his crops or stock in trade to pay his current debts, rather than the securities in which he may have invested. Usually only he who has not surplus for investment relies on his credits to meet debts. He whose wealth is mainly invested in bonds and mortgage does not. No other ground worthy even of mention has, to my knowledge, ever been advanced to justify such a classification. I find myself unable to conceive any. While, of course, I must concede that not only may the legislature exempt certain classes of property, by implication, from the power to prescribe that which shall be taxed, and may even classify that which they do prescribe for taxation, so that some may be treated differently from other classes, without disobedience of the behest that the rule be uniform, still such classification must be legitimate,—must be based upon distinctions having real relation to the differences in the rule of taxation applied to each. State ex rel. Zillmer v. Kreutzberg, 114 Wis. 530, 58 L. R. A. 748, 91 Am. St. Rep. 934, 90 N. W. 1098; Black v. State, 113 Wis. 205, 90 Am. St. Rep. 853, 89 N. W. 522; State v. Whitcom (Wis.) 99 N. W. 468. Finding, as I do, no differences between credits and tangible property in any wise germane to the valuing one with a deduction for debts, and the other without, I cannot escape the conclusion that the rule of uniformity is infringed by this statute.

The still further classification attempted by the legislation of 1903 (Laws 1903, chap. 378, p. 601, whereby the most solvent class of credits—those secured by mortgage on real estate—is exempted entirely, while others are taxed, will present curious and interesting questions when, if ever, it comes up for judicial consideration.

The further question whether certain persons are denied “equal protection of the laws” by the provision now under discussion, as that phrase is used in the 14th Amendment to the Federal Constitution, is one upon which this court cannot speak finally unless it speak affirmatively. The final construction and enforcement of this prohibition lie with the courts of the United States. The ultimate court of that jurisdiction has not as yet had occasion to declare upon the validity of such a tax scheme as ours, but the circuit court has, and that, too, in no uncertain terms, by the pen of one of the ablest of the then members of the Supreme Court,—Mr. Justice Field. In San Mateo County v. Southern P. R. Co. 8 Sawy. 238, 13 Fed. 722, 732, and Santa Clara County v. Southern P. R. Co. 18 Fed. 385, was considered a law which authorized deduction of mortgage debts from the value of other property in ascertaining its valuation for taxation, but denied such deduction from the value of property belonging to railroad companies. It was held that since the law designated property as the subject of taxation, and its value as the basis of apportionment, the allowance of deduction of mortgage debts from true value of some, and the denial of similar deduction from that of other, property in the taxable class, denied to the owners of the latter equal protection of law. The former of these cases was taken to the Supreme Court, but was affirmed on other grounds; that court recognizing the very grave importance of the question whether the state law was in defiance of the Federal Constitution, but restraining itself from expressing any opinion thereon, because such question belonged “to a class which that court should not decide unless their determination is essential to the disposal of the case.” 118 U. S. 394, 410, 30 L. ed. 118, 123, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1182, 1140. These two cases have, I believe, never since been seriously questioned in the Federal courts, but have often been referred to approvingly and as authority. Nashville, C. & St. L. R. Co. v. Taylor, 86 Fed. 168. They seem in accord with the principle decided in New York v. Weaver, 100 U. S. 539, 25 L. ed. 705, which held that a law permitting deduction of debts from the total of other personal property, but denying such deduction from value of stock in national banks, was discriminatory against the latter, and therefore forbidden by § 5219, U. S. Rev. Stat. (U. S. Comp. Stat. 1901, p. 3502). I shall not feel justified in occupying space to quote, as I should like to do, from the very clear and vigorous arguments of Field, J. Suffice it to say that they convince me that equal protection of the laws is denied when a creditor class is created of those whose credits equal or exceed their debts, and an immunity from taxation granted them which is withheld from the debtor class, composed of those whose debts exceed their credits. Of the policy of such a law, I might properly express opinion only as a citizen.

NORTH CAROLINA SUPREME COURT.

G. O. GOODWIN

v.

A. B. CLAYTOR et al., Appts.

(.....N. C.....)

1. The right to exemption from execution is subject to the law of the forum.
2. A debtor cannot claim the benefit of the exemption law of the state of his domicile, even against his creditor residing there, with respect to a debt due him by a corporation, located and doing business in another state, which is also the situs of the debt, and which debt has been attached by the creditor at the domicile of the corporation.
3. Taking personal judgment against the principal debtor and the gar-nishee does not waive the lien of the attachment, where the statute contemplates personal judgment against the garnishee, and the judgment against the principal debtor is void for lack of jurisdiction.

4. The debt owing by the garnishee to the principal debtor at the time of his appearance and answer, and not that due at the time of service of summons, may be applied in satisfaction of the claim of the attaching creditor, under a statute providing that judgment shall be entered for all sums of money due to the principal debtor from him.
5. A foreign corporation which has its principal place of business and the bulk of its property in a state with whose laws it has complied for the purpose of obtaining the privilege of doing business there, which subject it to the service of process there, is subject to the jurisdiction of the NOTE.—Where debt garnishable.

- I. Domicil of garnishing creditor, 209.
- II. Domicil of debtor, 209.
- III. State, other than his domicile, where debt- or temporarily present, 218.
- IV. State where foreign corporation engaged in business, 214.
- V. Conflict of jurisdiction, 220.
- VI. Exemptions, 222.

Scope.

The earlier cases on this subject are collected in the note to Illinois C. R. Co. v. Smith, 19 L. R. A. 577. The present note covers only the cases upon the point decided since that note, and includes only those cases in which the question is discussed upon general principles of constitutional law and private international law. Cases which turn upon the construction of the language of local statutes are not included.

As to attachment of shares of stock in foreign corporation, see note to Simpson v. Jersey City Contracting Co. 55 L. R. A. 796.

I. Domicil of garnishing creditor.

It is apparent, from the cases cited in the following subdivisions, that the domicile of the principal defendant (i. e., the person to whom the debt sought to be garnished is due), and of the garnishee (i. e., the person owing the debt sought to be garnished), has an important bearing upon the question whether a debt has a situs in a particular state so as to make it competent for that state to subject it to garnishment. The residence of the garnishing creditor, however, has no bearing upon this question, though it may, of course, affect the question whether a particular debt falls within the local garnishment laws, conceding that it may constitutionally be embraced by them.

II. Domicil of debtor.

Since the publication of the note in 19 L. R. A. 577, it has been authoritatively determined by the United States Supreme Court, in Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co. v. Sturm, 174 U. S. 710, 43 L. ed. 1144, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 797, and King v. Cross, 175 U. S. 398, 44 L. ed. 211, 20 67 L. R. A.

Sup. Ct. Rep. 181, that a court of the state in which the debtor is domiciled may, without service on the nonresident creditor except by publication, acquire jurisdiction to render a judgment in garnishment, condemning a debt, payable generally, to the satisfaction of a claim against the nonresident creditor, which judgment shall be entitled to full faith and credit in other states, under the Federal Constitution. To this extent these decisions are, of course, binding upon the state courts, and are conclusive as to the duty of a court of one state to recognize a judgment in garnishment proceedings rendered in another under the circumstances mentioned. They rest upon the fundamental proposition, which is expressly declared in the latter case, that such a proceeding, though the nonresident creditor be served constructively only, does not deny due process of law. But, while they lend strong support to that general proposition, they are not necessarily conclusive upon the state courts with respect to it, so far as it affects the question whether a state court will take jurisdiction in a domestic proceeding under such circumstances, since a decision by a state court in a domestic proceeding that a particular course of procedure does not constitute due process of law, is not reviewable by the Federal Supreme Court. As a state court, however, is bound to concede that such a proceeding, when conducted in another state under these circumstances, constitutes due process of law, it is not likely to decline jurisdiction of a domestic proceeding under the same circumstances upon the ground that it does not constitute due process of law, even if, prior to the decisions of the Supreme Court, it had adopted the other view.

The position of the Supreme Court does not rest upon any abstract reasoning with respect to the situs of a debt, but upon the broad ground suggested by the following quotation from the opinion in the first case: "The essential service of foreign-attachment laws is to reach and arrest the payment of what is due and might be paid to a nonresident to the defeat of his creditors. To do it, you must go to the domicile of his debtor, and can only do it under the laws and procedure in force there." The idea that jurisdiction in such case does courts of that state in actions to collect debts due from it either to foreign or domestic creditors, so far as foreign creditors are permitted to maintain actions in the state.

6. Wages due by a corporation, which, although having its domicil of origin in one state, has acquired a domicil for business purposes by adoption in another one where its property is located, to a salesman whose services are rendered in still another state, where he resides, are subject to attachment for the debt of the salesman in favor of a creditor residing in the state of the latter's domicil at the adopted domicil of the corporation, under a statute providing that an action may be brought against a foreign corporation by a plaintiff not a resident of the state when the cause of action shall have arisen, or the subject of the action shall be situated, within the state.
7. A statute exempting wages from the reach of creditors in supplementary proceedings will operate in favor of non- residents, and will be construed to include property sought to be reached by mesne process, such as writs of attachment and garnishment issued to place the property in the custody of the court to preserve it for application to plaintiff's claim.

(December 13, 1904.)

A PPEAL by defendants from a judgment of the Superior Court for Forsyth County in favor of plaintiff in a garnishment proceeding to reach a debt owing by the defendant corporation to its employee. Reversed.

Statement by Walker, J.:

This action was heard in the superior court of Forsyth county at spring term, 1904, by McNeill, J., upon a case agreed as follows:

The action was commenced before a jus-not depend upon the situs of the debt, but upon the control which is obtained over the debtor, is still further emphasized in Mooney v. Buford & G. Mfg. Co. 18 C. C. A. 421, 34 U. S. App. 581, 72 Fed. 32. In Lancashire Ins. Co. v. Corbetts, 165 Ill. 592, 36 L. R. A. 640, 56 Am. St. Rep. 275, 46 N. E. 631, the court says: "To hold that the situs of the debt determines the question of jurisdiction is practically to hold that a debt cannot be garnished at all in foreign attachments, for the very ground of a foreign attachment is the nonresidence of the principal defendant, who, in cases of garnishment, is the creditor of the garnishee; and, if the debt which the garnishee owes to his creditor can be reached only by proceedings had where such creditor resides,—that is, where the debt has its situs,—it cannot be reached in foreign attachment at all."

While the debt involved in the Sturm Case was for wages earned by the nonresident creditor in the state of his domicil, and would, undoubtedly, in the ordinary course, have been paid there, the decision is nevertheless upon the assumption that the debt was payable generally, and that there was no "special limitation or provision in respect to payment." This assumption introduces a qualification into the doctrine as actually established by the case, though, in view of the broad ground upon which the decision rests, it is difficult to perceive how the question whether the debt is payable generally, or is expressly made payable at some particular place, can have any legitimate effect upon the question. The qualification, nevertheless, must be accepted as attaching to the actual decision made. It is difficult to align the cases with reference to the distinction thus suggested, since it is not always clear, when the court states that the debt was payable in a certain state, whether it means that it was expressly payable there, or was by legal implication payable there. For instance, in the opinion in Missouri P. R. Co. v. Sharitt, 43 Kan. 375, 8 L. R. A. 385, 19 Am. St. Rep. 143, 23 Pac. 430 (referred to in the Sturm Case), the court said that the debt was payable in Kansas, the creditor's domicil; whereas, in the Sturm Case, upon substantially the same state of facts, the court assumed that the debt was payable generally. The distinction has, however, been recognized in other cases. Thus, it will be observed that the case next cited, which upholds the jurisdiction of the court of the debtor's domicil, makes the same qualification as the Sturm Case.

A debt having no special provision in regard to payment is payable at any place, and, hence, may be attached at the domicil of the debtor, although the creditor's domicil may be elsewhere. Barbour v. Boyce, 7 Ohio, N. P. 504. The court said that the question whether a debt due a nonresident is garnishable at the domicil of the debtor when made payable at a particular place outside that domicil was left open in the Sturm Case.

And the distinction is recognized in the cases next cited, which deny the jurisdiction of the court of the debtor's domicil if the debt is payable elsewhere.

A debt due from a domestic corporation to a nonresident, which is payable at the latter's domicil, is not subject to garnishment. Central R. Co. v. Brinson, 109 Ga. 354, 77 Am. St. Rep. 382, 34 S. E. 597. The decision in this case was followed in Johnson v. Southern R. Co. 110 Ga. 303, 34 S. E. 1002.

A debt due a nonresident and payable at the latter's domicil is not subject to garnishment in Georgia. Beasley v. Lennox-Haldeman Co. 116 Ga. 13, 42 S. E. 385. It does not expressly appear in this case that the garnishee was domiciled in Georgia, but that was probably the fact; and the decision is upon the ground that the situs of a debt is at the place where a creditor is domiciled. And this position was adhered to in the subsequent cases of Hugh v. Padrova, 119 Ga. 648, 46 S. E. 859, and Glower v. Glidden Varnish Co. 120 Ga. 983, 48 S. E. 355.

A debtor can be garnished only in the state where the debt is payable if that be the place of the residence of his creditor. Bullard v. Chaffee, 61 Neb. 83, 51 L. R. A. 715, 84 N. W. 604.

It is difficult to determine whether the decisions in the cases last cited are upon the assumption that the debt was expressly payable in a state other than that in which the debtor was domiciled, or upon the assumption that it was, by legal implication, payable in such other state. Upon the former assumption, tice of the peace by Goodwin, a resident of the state of Virginia, against Claytor, also a resident of the state of Virginia, for the recovery of $109.67, with interest on $96.01 from January 14, 1903, due by judgment. The indebtedness of Claytor to Goodwin is admitted. Service of summons was duly had by publication, and by garnishment of a debt due from the R. J. Reynolds Tobacco Company to Claytor. Claytor is an employee of the R. J. Reynolds Tobacco Company in the capacity of traveling salesman, and the money which was attached in the hands of the R. J. Reynolds Tobacco Company was the earnings of Claytor for his personal services; and said earnings accrued within sixty days next preceding the institution of this action, service of garnishment, filing of answer, and the order of the justice. These earnings were used for the support of a family dependent upon him. It is admitted that the R. J. Reynolds Tobacco Company is a corporation duly chartered and created under and by virtue of the laws of the state of New Jersey, and is engaged in the manufacture of tobacco, with its principal place of business and bulk of its property in Winston, North Carolina, it having no property in New Jersey, save that such office as is required by the laws of New Jersey is located there. The said company has complied with the laws of North Carolina in reference to foreign corporations of the nature and character of this company. The contract between Claytor and the company was signed by Claytor in Virginia, and returned to Winston by mail. The preliminary arrangements, however, and the principle involved in the contract were agreed upon at the office of the company in these decisions would not be inconsistent with the decisions of the United States Supreme Court already referred to, but upon the latter assumption they would be.

Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Nash, 118 Ala. 477, 41 L. R. A. 331, 72 Am. St. Rep. 181, 23 So. 825, upon substantially the same state of facts involved in the Sturm Case, denied the jurisdiction of a court of the domicile of the debtor to garnish an indebtedness due to a nonresident creditor, who was served within the state and did not appear. The decision which was rendered prior to the decision in the Sturm Case is upon the broad ground that the situs of a debt for the purpose of garnishment is at the domicile of the creditor, and not at the domicile of the debtor, and does not rest upon any distinction with respect to the place of payment.

McBee v. Purcell Nat. Bank, 1 Ind. Terr. 288, 37 S. W. 55—holding that, where money deposited in a bank by a nonresident is payable over the counter, the situs of the debt for the purpose of garnishment is the place of deposit,—seems to assume that, in order to confer jurisdiction upon a court of the debtor's domicile, it is not sufficient that the debt be payable generally, but that it must, either by contract or by implication of law, be payable at the debtor's domicile.

Some of the cases, however, have expressly applied the doctrine that a debt due a nonresident is subject to garnishment at the domicile of the debtor, in cases in which the debt was expressly payable in another state. Thus, Tootle v. Coleman, 57 L. R. A. 120, 46 C. C. A. 132, 107 Fed. 41, held that debts due from parties domiciled in Kansas, payable in Missouri, for goods purchased in the latter state, were subject to garnishment in Kansas, notwithstanding that the creditors were nonresidents, and were served by publication only. The implication in this case is that the contract expressly made Missouri the place of payment. At all events, it is clear that the court recognizes no distinction based upon the fact whether the debt is payable generally, or is expressly made payable at a certain place.

Wyeth Hardware & Mfg. Co. v. H. F. Lang & Co. 127 Mo. 242, 27 L. R. A. 631, 48 Am. St. Rep. 626, 29 S. W. 1010, also holds that the situs of a debt due a nonresident for the purposes of garnishment is at the domicile of the debtor, even though payable elsewhere; and expressly overrules the exception to the rule made by previous decisions of the appellate court, when the debt, by the terms of the contract, is made payable elsewhere.

So, a debt due from a resident to a nonresident is subject to garnishment, although the debt was payable, and the contract out of which it arose was performed, outside the state. Dinkins v. Crunden-Martin Woodenware Co. 99 Mo. App. 310, 73 S. W. 246.

Under the Illinois statute, a creditor may have an attachment against his debtor, who is a nonresident, and have garnishee process against all residents indebted to such debtor, notwithstanding that the indebtedness garnished is due in the state where the principal defendant resides. Pomeroy v. Rand, McN. & Co. 157 Ill. 176, 41 N. E. 636.

So, Hawley v. Hurd, 72 Vt. 122, 52 L. R. A. 195, 82 Am. St. Rep. 922, 47 Atl. 401, declared that the rule was established in Vermont that a resident trustee is chargeable with respect to a debt payable to a nonresident in the state of his domicile; and applied the rule to notes made by a person domiciled in Vermont which were expressly payable in New York to a person domiciled in the latter state.

Rothschild v. Knight, 176 Mass. 48, 57 N. E. 337, without qualifying the doctrine by any reference to the place of payment of the debt, declares generally that, so far as the attachability of a debt depends upon its situs, it must be held that the situs with reference to collection is the place where the proceedings may be had against the debtor. It does not appear, as a matter of fact, whether the debt involved was payable generally, or at some particular place.

Bragg v. Gaynor, 85 Wis. 468, 21 L. R. A. 164, 55 N. W. 919, declaring that debts owing to nonresidents, although represented by notes and mortgages, have their situs within the state for the purpose of garnishment or creditors' bills in favor of those to whom the creditor is indebted, suggests no distinction based upon the fact whether or not the notes expressly designate a place of payment.

Reimers v. Seacot Mfg. Co. 30 L. R. A. 365, 17 C. C. A. 228, 37 U. S. App. 426, 70 Fed. 573, declares generally, without any reference to Winston. The salary of Claytor is usually paid him by check upon a bank in New York, which is sent to him by mail in Virginia, but occasionally a check is drawn on a bank in Winston and mailed to him in Virginia. These checks are sent from the office of the company in Winston. The contract between the company and Claytor does not fix where or how his salary shall be paid. All services performed and done under and by virtue of this contract are performed and done in the states of Virginia and West Virginia, and no part of said work is done in North Carolina. At the date of the service of the writ of garnishment on the company, it was indebted to Claytor by reason of the contract in the sum of $16.55 for salary and $17.58 expense money, and likewise, since the service of the writ of garnishment, has become indebted to Claytor up to the date of filing the answer in the sum of $86 for salary, and $—— for expense money; the expense money being advanced by Claytor, and the company reimbursing him for the same upon receiving statement thereof.

The laws of Virginia upon the question of exemptions are as follows:

Section 3630 of the Code of 1887 [Code 1904, p. 1935]: "Every householder or head of a family residing in this state shall be entitled . . . to hold exempt from levy, seizure, garnishment, or sale under any execution, order, or process issued on any demand for a debt or liability on contract, hereafter contracted, his real and personal property, or either, to be selected by him, including money and debts due him, to the value of not exceeding $2,000."

Section 3652 [Code 1904, p. 1949]:

the place of payment, that it is within the competence of the sovereign of the residence of the debtor, by reason of its control over its own residents, to pass laws subjecting the debt to seizure within its territorial sovereignty. The case, however, was obiter on this point.

In the two cases next cited it does not appear whether the debt was payable generally, or at a place expressly named.

The situs of a debt due from a New York insurance company to a resident of North Carolina, upon account of a loss which occurred in the latter state, is in New York, so far as to authorize process of attachment or garnishment to be taken out in that state. Sexton v. Phoenix Ins. Co. 132 N. C. 1, 43 S. E. 479.

A debt due from a resident to a nonresident is subject to attachment. Olcott v. Guerinck, 19 Ohio (C. C.) 32.

Rice v. Sharpleigh Hardware Co. 85 Fed. 559, is not opposed to the doctrine that a resident debtor of a nonresident may be garnished on account of the debt, as in this case a person claiming to be a creditor of the nonresident principal defendant undertook to garnish himself upon account of an indebtedness admitted by him to be due to the nonresident, and the decision was merely that the garnishment statute did not contemplate or permit the same person to be both garnishing creditor and garnishee.

The cases above reviewed seem to indicate a tendency to disregard the qualification introduced into the decision in the Sturm Case, by the assumption of the court in that case that the debt was payable generally, and had "no special limitation or provision in respect to payment." It is not probable that the Supreme Court will adhere to that qualification. No mention is made of it in Kling v. Cross, 175 U. S. 396, 44 L. ed. 211, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 131. So far as appears, however, the debt in the latter case was not expressly payable in a state other than that in which the debtor was domiciled, and the decision is not necessarily inconsistent with the qualification. As before suggested, it is difficult to see how the fact that the debt is expressly made payable in a certain state can affect the question, since, even in that case, it is suable wherever the debtor may be found and served with process.

67 L. R. A.

The general question, whether a judgment rendered in one state is subject to garnishment in another, is not within the scope of this note, since it does not turn upon the domicile of any of the parties to the proceedings. It may be said here, however, that the weight of authority holds that a judgment is not subject to garnishment in a state other than that in which it was rendered; and therefore a judgment is not within the rule declared in the Sturm Case, that an indebtedness, not expressly payable elsewhere, is subject to garnishment at the domicile of the debtor; and it has been expressly held by the United States Supreme Court in Wabash R. Co. v. Tourville, 179 U. S. 322, 45 L. ed. 210, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 113,—a case substantially like the Sturm Case except that the indebtedness had been reduced to judgment,—that a judgment rendered against a corporation in Missouri was not subject to garnishment in Illinois, in which state the corporation was separately organized. The decision of the Missouri supreme court in Tourville v. Wabash R. Co. 148 Mo. 614, 71 Am. St. Rep. 650, 50 S. W. 300, to the same effect, was affirmed.

So, it was held in Boyle v. Musser-Sauntry Land, Logging, & Mfg. Co. 88 Minn. 456, 97 Am. St. Rep. 538, 93 N. W. 520, that a judgment obtained in, and by a citizen of, Minnesota against a corporation organized in Iowa, but doing business and having an agent and an office in Minnesota, cannot be impounded or condemned in either attachment or garnishment proceedings in Iowa in an action brought by a corporation of that state against the judgment creditor, who was served constructively only. The decision is upon the ground that the judgment had no situs in Iowa,—whether because the judgment creditor was not domiciled there, or because the judgment was to be regarded as payable elsewhere, it is difficult to determine.

Ward v. Boyce, 152 N. Y. 191, 36 L. R. A. 549, 46 N. E. 180, held that a wife, a resident of New York, to whom a note made by a resident of Vermont was payable, was not concluded by a judgment rendered in a trustee process instituted in Vermont by a creditor of the husband, whereby the note was adjudged to belong to the husband rather than to the wife, and the maker was directed to pay the same to the husband's creditor, it appearing "Wages owing to a laboring man being a householder, not exceeding $50 per month, shall also be exempt from distress, levy, or garnishment."

Section 3656 [Code 1904, p. 1952]: "An injunction may be awarded to enjoin the sale of any property exempt under the provisions of this chapter, and to prevent the wages exempted by § 3652 from being garnisheed or otherwise collected by an execution creditor."

It is admitted that Claytor is a householder, or head of a family, within the meaning of the exemption law of the state of Virginia, and it is likewise admitted that he has never had allotted to him any exemption under and by virtue of the laws of that state.

This agreed statement of facts is made and signed without prejudice to any rights of either of the interested parties to make any motion or enter any special appearance as, in its or his judgment, may be deemed advisable.

The court, upon the case agreed, rendered judgment in favor of the plaintiff and against both defendant and garnishee for the full amount of his debt and the costs. Defendant and the garnishee excepted and appealed.

Messrs. Glenn, Manly, & Hendren, for appellants:

The court below was without jurisdiction.

Haughton v. Allen, 1 N. C. pt. 2, p. 277 (Conference, 157); 6 Thomp. Corp. p. 6427.

In so far as the proceeding by garnishment is a proceeding for the attachment of a debt, considered as property, due by the that there was no personal service upon either husband or wife within Vermont, and that the wife was not made a party to the proceeding until after the rendition of the judgment by which the indebtedness of the husband to the creditor instituting the proceeding was established.

III. State, other than his domicile, where debtor temporarily present.

The court, in Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co. v. Sturm, 174 U. S. 710, 43 L. ed. 1144, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 797, supra, I., limited its decision to a case in which the debtor is domiciled in the state in which the garnishment proceedings are instituted, and expressly refrained from passing upon the question whether a debtor temporarily in a state may be garnished there in respect of an indebtedness due a nonresident, not personally served within the jurisdiction.

In King v. Cross, 175 U. S. 396, 44 L. ed. 211, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 131, also, the garnishee was domiciled in the state in which the garnishment proceedings were instituted. The broad ground upon which the decisions rest, however,—namely, that the jurisdiction to garnish the debt rests upon the power of the court over the debtor,—would seem to cover the case of a debtor temporarily within the jurisdiction of the court and subject to its process, as well as the case of a debtor domiciled within the jurisdiction. Many of the cases, however, expressly distinguish the two cases. Some of them, while not denying altogether the jurisdiction when the debtor is temporarily within the state but is not domiciled there, hold that, in order to support the jurisdiction, the debt due from the nonresident debtor must be expressly payable within the state where the proceedings are instituted, whereas, even in the most restricted view of the decision in the Sturm Case, it is sufficient, in case of a domiciled debtor, that the debt be payable generally; in other words, that it be not expressly payable out of the state.

Thus, Balk v. Harris, 124 N. C. 467, 45 L. R. A. 258, 70 Am. St. Rep. 606, 32 S. E. 799, which concedes that the situs of a debt for the purpose of attachment is where the debtor resides, although the creditor is a nonresident, holds that jurisdiction to attach a debt cannot rest upon service of process upon a nonresident debtor when passing through or transiently in the state, unless he has contracted to pay the debt to defendant within the jurisdiction where the attachment is laid.

So, a nonresident, temporarily in the state, may be summoned and compelled to answer as garnishee, but if, upon his answer, it be established that he is a nonresident, he cannot be subjected to further proceedings in the cause, for want of jurisdiction; unless, when garnished, he has in the state property of the defendant in his possession, or be bound to pay the defendant money or deliver to him property within the state. Pennsylvania R. Co. v. Rogers, 52 W. Va. 450, 62 L. R. A. 178, 44 S. E. 300.

National Broadway Bank v. Sampson (N. Y.) 66 L. R. A. 606, 71 N. E. 766, while not denying that a debt due from a resident debtor to a nonresident creditor may be attached, held that the liability of a nonresident debtor to a nonresident corporation is not subject to attachment while the debtor is temporarily within the jurisdiction. It was further held in this case that service of attachment upon a resident member of a firm indebted to a nonresident corporation confers upon the court jurisdiction only of the debt or liability owed or incurred by him as a partner, and confers no jurisdiction over the debt so as to hold a nonresident member of the firm liable therefor.

A debt in ordinary form, or in the form of wages due from one nonresident of the state to another nonresident of the state, is payable, as a matter of law, or by legal implication, in the state of their common residence, in the absence of a place fixed by the contract; and in such case there is no property in the former state subject to levy or seizure. Central Trust Co. v. Chattanooga, R. & C. R. Co. 68 Fed. 685.

A nonresident creditor cannot have his property in the debt seized in a state to which the debtor may resort, not for the purpose of residence, but merely for the purpose of doing business through agents, if the claim arose on a contract not to be performed within the state, and the debtor does not reside therein. Reimers v. Seateo Mfg. Co. 30 L. R. A. 365, garnishee to the principal debtor, it is a proceeding in rem, and, unless the principal debtor has property in the state,—that is, that the debt due from the garnishee has its situs, is located, in the state of suit,—the court acquires no jurisdiction to proceed to the condemnation of such property.

Patton v. Smith, 29 N. C. (7 Ired. L.) 438; Balk v. Harris, 122 N. C. 64, 45 L. R. A. 257, 30 S. E. 318.

In garnishment the plaintiff is subrogated to the position of the principal debtor.

Balk v. Harris, 124 N. C. 471, 45 L. R. A. 260, 70 Am. St. Rep. 606, 32 S. E. 799; Patton v. Smith, 29 N. C. (7 Ired. L.) 438; Fairfax Forrest Min. & Mfg. Co. v. Chambers, 75 Md. 604, 23 Atl. 1024; Myer v.

Liverpool, L. & G. Ins. Co. 40 Md. 595; Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Nash, 118 Ala. 477, 41 L. R. A. 331, 72 Am. St. Rep. 187, 23 So. 825.

It would be an anomaly in judicial procedure if the garnishee could be made liable upon a cause of action by suit in attachment, when it would not be liable in the same court, upon the same cause of action, by suit commenced by summons and complaint upon personal service, because of the want of jurisdiction in the court.

Pullman Palace Car Co. v. Harrison, 122 Ala. 149, 82 Am. St. Rep. 68, 25 So. 697.

A nonresident can sue a foreign corporation in our courts only "when the cause of action shall have arisen, or the subject of the action be situated, in this state."

17 C. C. A. 228, 37 U. S. App. 426, 70 Fed. 573.

And, conversely: Even if a debtor is not a resident of the sovereignty under which garnishment is attempted, such sovereignty still may subject him to its process and constructive seizure, if he is personally within the service of its process, and the debt is payable within its territory. Ibid.

A debt due a nonresident by a foreign corporation, arising out of a contract made and payable in New York, is subject to attachment in the latter state. Lancaster v. Spotswood, 41 Misc. 19, 83 N. Y. Supp. 572. The court said that Douglass v. Phenix Ins. Co. 138 N. Y. 209, 20 L. R. A. 118, 34 Am. St. Rep. 448, 33 N. E. 938, merely laid down general rules, apparently in the absence of proof as to the actual situs of the debt.

In Wyeth Hardware & Mfg. Co. v. H. F. Lang & Co. 127 Mo. 242, 27 L. R. A. 651, 48 Am. St. Rep. 626, 29 S. W. 1010, the court said that a debt may be garnished at any place where suit thereon may be brought by the creditor if the laws of that place authorize it. In this case, however, the garnishee was domiciled in the state in which the garnishment proceedings were instituted; and the court probably did not mean to extend the rule to garnishees transiently in the state, as distinguished from those domiciled therein.

In Harvey v. Great Northern R. Co. 50 Minn. 405, 17 L. R. A. 84, 52 N. W. 905, the court said that, for the purposes of attachment, a debt has a situs wherever the debtor may be found; that wherever the creditor might sue for its recovery, there it may be attached as his property, provided the laws of the forum authorize it; and it is not material that the debt is not made payable in the state where the attachment proceedings are instituted. This statement, however, was characterized as a dictum in McKinney v. Mills, 80 Minn. 478, 81 Am. St. Rep. 278, 83 N. W. 452, and Boyle v. Musser-Saunrey Land, Logging & Mfg. Co. 88 Minn. 456, 97 Am. St. Rep. 538, 93 N. W. 520; and these cases restrict the doctrine of the Harvey case to the actual facts in that case, which were that the garnishee was a railroad corporation doing business in Montana, where the garnishee proceedings were commenced; that the debt garnished grew out of a Montana transaction, and was incurred in that state while the main debtor was domiciled there, although, at the time of the garnishment proceedings, he was not a resident of that state. As a matter of fact, the garnishee in the Harvey case was a Minnesota corporation, but, for the purposes of an action in Montana, was deemed a resident of that state.

When all the parties to an action brought in Minnesota—the plaintiff, the defendant, and the garnishee—are nonresidents, none of them being within the state except the garnishee, who is served with a summons while temporarily within the state upon business, the garnishee process must be discharged, as the court has no jurisdiction. McKinney v. Mills, 80 Minn. 478, 81 Am. St. Rep. 278, 83 N. W. 452. It is also stated in the opinion that the debt arose and was payable in another state.

The court, in Kansas City, P. & G. R. Co. v. Parker, 69 Ark. 401, 86 Am. St. Rep. 205, 63 S. W. 996, favored the broad position taken in Minors' Conflict of Laws, § 125, et seq., that, regardless of the place of payment, the situs of a debt, for the purpose of garnishment, is not only at the domicile of the debtor, but in any state in which the garnishee may be found, provided the municipal law of that state permits the debtor to be garnished, and provided the court acquires jurisdiction over the garnishee through his voluntary appearance or actual service of process upon him within the state. This, however, was going much further than the facts of the case required. The debtor was a foreign corporation doing business in the state, and the court said that, it having presumably complied with the law, it was to all intents and purposes a domestic corporation. Besides, the indebtedness in this case arose out of the business of the corporation within the state, and was presumably payable therein; and this fact would bring the case within the narrower rule applied by the other cases cited in this subdivision.

This question, as affecting the garnishment of foreign corporations doing business within the state, is further discussed in the next subdivision.

IV. State where foreign corporation engaged in business.

When the debtor of a nonresident creditor is a foreign corporation which has complied with the requirements of the local statute prescribing the conditions of the right of foreign Clark's Code, § 194, subsec. 2; Broghill v. Wellborn, 15 N. C. (4 Dev. L.) 511.

Since all the services of the defendant to the garnishee were rendered in the state of Virginia, the debt would be contracted there, and, as a cause of action on debt arises where the debt was contracted or originated, the cause of action would not arise in this state.

Steele v. Rutherford, 70 N. C. 137; Burckle v. Eckhart, 3 N. Y. 132; Connecticut Mut. L. Assur. Co. v. Cleveland, O. & O. R. Co. 23 How. Pr. 180; Hiller v. Burlington & M. River R. Co. 70 N. Y. 223; Chambers v. Feron & B. Co. 56 N. Y. Supp. 338; Bryun v. Western U. Teleg. Co. 133 N. C. 603, 45 S. E. 938.

The contract was signed in Virginia and corporations to do business within the state, it is apparent that the question as to jurisdiction is somewhat different than when the debtor is a natural person temporarily within the state, but domiciled elsewhere. None of the cases that concede the jurisdiction of a court of the state in which the debtor is domiciled deny altogether and under all circumstances the jurisdiction when the debtor is a foreign corporation, but has complied with the conditions of doing business within the state.

Although the garnishee in the case of Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co. v. Sturm, 174 U. S. 710, 43 L. ed. 1144, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 797, was a corporation of the state in which the debt was garnished, there is probably no doubt, since the establishment in that case of the general principle that a debt may have a situs for the purposes of garnishment apart from the domicile of the creditor, that a debt due from a foreign corporation to a nonresident may constitutionally be subjected to garnishment, if it arose out of business done within the state,—at least if it is not expressly payable out of the state. This is tacitly assumed by the cases subsequently cited in this subdivision upon the question whether the debt is thus subject to garnishment when it arises out of business transacted out of the state; and is expressly declared in Kansas City, P. & G. R. Co. v. Parker, 69 Ark. 401, 86 Am. St. Rep. 205, 63 S. W. 998, holding that a citizen of Arkansas may garnish a foreign railroad corporation operating a line in that state for a debt due one of its employees for labor there, notwithstanding that the employee is a citizen of another state. As a matter of fact, the court in this case had personal jurisdiction of the nonresident creditor; but it was clearly assumed that the court would have had jurisdiction under the circumstances to proceed in rem and without personal jurisdiction of the creditor.

A railroad company incorporated in another state, which operates its line in Vermont, and has a superintendent resident in that state, may be held upon trustee process as to debts arising out of the business conducted by such authorized agent, and payable in Vermont, under Vt. Stat. § 1310, which makes debts due from a nonresident attachable by trustee process served on his duly authorized agent. Holt v. Ladd, 71 Vt. 204, 44 Atl. 69. The court said that the debt sought to be attached must returned to Winston by mail. This makes it a case where a proposal or solicitation to enter into a contract is made in one state and the contract completed in another. In such a case it is a contract of the place where it is accepted.

Armstrong v. Best, 112 N. C. 60, 25 L. R. A. 188, 34 Am. St. Rep. 473, 17 S. E. 14; Hunter v. Randolph, 128 N. C. 91, 32 S. E. 238; 22 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, 2d ed. p. 1324; Perry v. Mt. Hope Iron Co. 15 R. I. 380, 2 Am. St. Rep. 902, 5 Atl. 632; Clark, Contr. p. 43.

The situs of the debt sought to be condemned is not in this state.

Balk v. Harris, 124 N. C. 467, 45 L. R. A. 260, 70 Am. St. Rep. 606, 32 S. E. 799, 122 N. C. 64, 45 L. R. A. 257, 30 S. E.

be one arising in the business conducted by the authorized agent (citing Towle v. Wilder, 57 Vt. 622), but that, when it so arises, and the nonresident debtor has an authorized agent resident within the state, either to conduct the business within the state, or appointed especially to receive service for the nonresident debtor in regard to the business done within the state, the debt may be attached by service, according to the statute, upon such agent (citing Weed Sewing Machine Co. v. Bouteille, 56 Vt. 570, 48 Am. Rep. 821; Chaffee v. Rutland R. Co. 55 Vt. 110, 140).

It was held in Craig v. Gunn, 67 Vt. 92, 27 L. R. A. 511, 30 Atl. 880, that a railroad company incorporated in New York was not subject to garnishment in Vermont in respect of an indebtedness due a nonresident for services rendered in New York under a New York contract. The case upon its facts comes within the exception implied in Holt v. Ladd, supra, since the indebtedness did not arise out of business transacted within the state, and was not payable therein. The decision, however, is put upon the ground that a foreign corporation, under such circumstances, is not a resident of the state within Vt. Rev. Laws, § 1073, providing that no person shall be summoned as a trustee, unless, at the time of the service of the writ, he resides within the state. No mention is made of the statutory provision under which the decision in Holt v. Ladd was rendered.

The question of practical difficulty, is whether a debt due from a foreign corporation to a nonresident, not personally within the jurisdiction, may be thus garnished when it arises out of business transacted out of the state. There is a conflict among decisions upon this point which may be partially explained by differences in the local statutes as to the circumstances under which an action may be maintained against a foreign corporation. There seems to be a tendency to make the ability or disability of the principal defendant (the nonresident creditor), under the local statute, to maintain an action against the garnishee (the debtor) in the state, for the recovery of the debt sought to be garnished, the criterion of the jurisdiction to garnish the debt. According to this criterion, the question whether a debt due a nonresident, not personally within the jurisdiction, from a foreign corporation, arising out of business not transacted within the state, is the subject of garnishment, de-

318; Strause Bros. v. Aetna F. Ins. Co. 126 N. C. 223, 48 L. R. A. 452, 35 S. E. 471; Seaton v. Phoenix Ins. Co. 132 N. C. 1, 43 S. E. 479; Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co. v. Sturm, 174 U. S. 710, 716, 43 L. ed. 1144, 1146, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 797; Reimers v. Seasco Mfg. Co. 30 L. R. A. 367, 17 C. C. A. 228, 37 U. S. App. 426, 70 Fed. 573; Hammond Beef & Provision Co. v. Best, 91 Me. 431, 42 L. R. A. 531, 40 Atl. 338.

The question of domicile or residence of a corporation must be determined, not by the residence of any particular officer, nor of its stockholders or directors, but by the state of its creation where the corporate, as distinguished from its general, business is done, even though it may transact its most important business in another place.

depends upon the question whether the local statute would permit the principal defendant (the creditor) to maintain an action in the state against the foreign corporation to recover the indebtedness in question. This criterion seems to be applied, not merely to the construction of the local garnishment statute as applied to indebtedness due from a foreign corporation, but also to the question of the constitutional right to subject such indebtedness to garnishment. In other words, the ability of the principal defendant, under the local statute, to have maintained an action in the state in respect of the indebtedness sought to be garnished seems to be regarded as necessary to give the debt a local situs in the state.

Thus, a foreign insurance company which has become subject to the service of process in a state where it is doing business with like effect, as if it had been incorporated therein, is subject to garnishment upon account of an indebtedness due to a nonresident principal defendant, notwithstanding that such indebtedness arose out of business transacted in the state of the principal defendant's domicile. Mooney v. Buford & G. Mfg. Co. 18 C. C. A. 421, 34 U. S. App. 581, 72 Fed. 32. The court in this case plainly rests its decision, that the debt, though arising out of business transacted out of the state, was subject to garnishment, upon the fact, to which it expressly calls attention, that, under the broad terms of the local statute, the principal defendant (the creditor) could have maintained an action within the state to recover the debt.

In Lancashire Ins. Co. v. Corbetts, 165 Ill. 592, 36 L. R. A. 640, 56 Am. St. Rep. 275, 46 N. E. 631, the court said that a foreign corporation was subject to garnishment proceedings in any state in which, in compliance with the local law, it has established itself for business purposes,—not for the reason that the debt has a situs in each and all of such states at one and the same time, but because it is liable to suit by its creditors for the collection of a debt in each and all of the states where it has so established itself for business purposes.

So, in the cases next cited, the jurisdiction is upheld, notwithstanding that the indebtedness arose out of business transacted outside the state. While some of these decisions are not expressly put upon the ground that, under the local statute relating to foreign corporations, the nonresident creditor might have maintained an action in respect of the indebtedness sought to be garnished, that was probably the fact.

Cline v. Bryson City Mfg. Co. 116 N. C. 837, 21 S. E. 791; Shaw v. Quinoy Min. Co. (Ex parte Shaw) 145 U. S. 444, 36 L. ed. 768, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 935; New York, L. E. & W. R. Co. v. Estill, 147 U. S. 610, 37 L. ed. 302, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 444; Pennsylvania R. Co. v. St. Louis, A. & T. H. R. Co. 118 U. S. 290, 30 L. ed. 83, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1094; Boyer v. Northern P. R. Co. 8 Idaho, 74, 66 Pac. 826; Moise v. Mutual Reserve Fund Life Assn. 45 La. Ann. 736, 13 So. 170; Voss v. Evans Marble Co. 101 Ill. App. 373.

And this rule is the same, though the corporation was organized to do its chief business in another state.

Filli v. Delaware, L. & W. R. Co. 37 Fed. 65; Savage v. People's Bldg. L. & Sav.

An insurance company incorporated in Connecticut, but having a general agent and office in California for its Pacific coast business, and a fund in that state for the payment of losses on account of that business, may be garnished in that state in respect of an indebtedness due to a resident of Arizona for a loss occurring in that territory. National F. Ins. Co. v. Ming (Ariz.) 60 Pac. 720. This case clearly makes the ability of the principal defendant to sue the garnishee the criterion of jurisdiction to garnish the debt. The court said that, whether or not, under the laws of California, the principal defendant could have maintained a purely personal action against the insurance company by service upon its agent there, it could have attached the fund in that state.

A corporation whose domicile of origin is in Great Britain, but which, having complied with the laws of Illinois and Wisconsin relating to foreign corporations, transacts business and keeps agents and property in those states, is subject to garnishment in either state for an indebtedness due to a resident of Wisconsin for a loss occurring in Wisconsin. Lancashire Ins. Co. v. Corbetts, 165 Ill. 592, 36 L. R. A. 640, 56 Am. St. Rep. 275, 46 N. E. 631.

A nonresident creditor may proceed by attachment against a nonresident debtor and garnish a foreign corporation doing business in the state, and a court of equity is without jurisdiction to enjoin the collection upon the ground that the proceeding was brought in Illinois in order to evade the exemption laws of the state where the parties were domiciled. Missouri P. R. Co. v. Flannigan, 47 Ill. App. 322. The indebtedness was for wages earned and payable in Missouri, where all the parties resided.

The courts of a state have jurisdiction to garnish a debt due to a resident of another state from a foreign corporation having an agent in the state upon whom process may be served, at the suit of a resident of the state. German Bank v. American F. Ins. Co. 83 Iowa, 491, 32 Am. St. Rep. 316, 50 N. W. 53. The debt did not arise out of business transacted in the state where the debt was garnished.

A state court has jurisdiction to garnish a

Asso. 45 W. Va. 275, 31 S. E. 991; Quesenberry v. People's Bldg. L. & Sav. Asso. 44 W. Va. 512, 30 S. E. 73; Overman Wheel Co. v. Pope Mfg. Co. 46 Fed. 578; Baughman v. National Waterworks Co. 46 Fed. 6.

The amount of property that the corporation has, or volume of business it does, in the state of suit is immaterial.

Hammond Beef & Provision Co. v. Best, 91 Me. 431, 42 L. R. A. 531, 40 Atl. 338; Bergner & E. Brewing Co. v. Dreyfus, 172 Mass. 154, 70 Am. St. Rep. 252, 51 N. E. 531; Strause Bros. v. Aetna F. Ins. Co. 126 N. C. 223, 48 L. R. A. 452, 35 S. E. 471; Balk v. Harris, 124 N. C. 467, 45 L. R. A. 260, 70 Am. St. Rep. 606, 32 S. E. 799; Seaton v. Phoenix Ins. Co. 132 N. C. 1, 43 S. E. 479.

debt due to a nonresident defendant by a nonresident corporation doing business in the state. Pittsburg, C. C. & St. L. R. Co. v. Bartels, 108 Ky. 216, 56 S. W. 152. The debt due from the garnishee to the principal defendant was payable in Indiana. The court said that there was no question but that the principal defendant could have come into Kentucky and sued the garnishee.

A railroad company incorporated in Iowa is subject to garnishment in that state by a resident of Missouri upon account of an indebtedness for wages due to another resident of Missouri for work done in the latter state. Howland v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co. 134 Mo. 474, 36 S. W. 29.

In National F. Ins. Co. v. Chambers, 53 N. J. Eq. 468, 32 Atl. 663, it was held that an indebtedness due from a Connecticut insurance company to a resident of New Jersey upon a loss by fire occurring in the latter state was subject to garnishment in Pennsylvania, where the corporation had a permanent business residence. The court takes the view that the liability of such a debt to attachment is not dependent upon the res being within the jurisdiction of the attaching court, and that the real and only ground of jurisdiction in case of attachment over choses in action is the service within the jurisdiction of warning order upon the debtor. It said, however, that it was not necessary to determine whether or not such service upon a debtor casually, and for a temporary purpose within the jurisdiction, is sufficient.

Foreign attachment will lie against a Connecticut insurance company doing business in Pennsylvania for a debt due a citizen of New Jersey. Datz v. Chambers, 3 Pa. Dist. R. 353. The indebtedness did not arise out of business transacted in Pennsylvania, and it was payable at the home office of the company in Connecticut.

A foreign corporation may be charged as garnishee in all cases where an original action might be maintained against it for the recovery of the property or credit in respect to which the garnishment is served. Neufelder v. German American Ins. Co. 6 Wash. 336, 22 L. R. A. 287, 36 Am. St. Rep. 166, 33 Pac. 870. Applying this principle, the court held that a New York insurance company, which kept a fund in California for the payment of losses on the Pacific coast, was subject to garnishment 67 L. R. A.

The debt is not here in the sense that its situs is at the domicile of the garnishee, because the garnishee is not a resident of this state. It is not here in the sense that its situs is that of the domicile of the defendant, because he is a resident of Virginia.

A foreign corporation cannot give a situs to its debts in every state in which it qualifies and does business.

Shaw v. Quincy Min. Co. (Ex parte Shaw) 145 U. S. 444, 36 L. ed. 768, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 935; Southern P. Co. v. Denton, 146 U. S. 202, 36 L. ed. 943, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 44; Southern R. Co. v. Allison, 190 U. S. 326, 47 L. ed. 1078, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 713; New York, L. E. & W. R. Co. v. Estill, 147 U. S. 610, 37 L. ed. 302, 13 Sup. Ct. Rep. 444; Boyer v. Northern P. R. Co.

in that state for an indebtedness due to a resident of Washington on account of a loss in the latter state, although the principal defendant was served by publication only.

The decision in Stewart v. Northern Assur. Co. 45 W. Va. 734, 44 L. R. A. 101, 32 S. E. 218, that an insurance company, whose domicile of origin was in England, but which had its principal office for the United States in Ohio, could not avail itself of a judgment rendered against it as garnishee by a court of Ohio, as a bar to an action by a resident of West Virginia on account of a loss occurring in the latter state, was not upon the ground that the Ohio court had no jurisdiction to render the judgment, but upon the ground that the contract on which the Ohio action was brought was wholly void as against the principal defendant, and that the insurance company wholly failed to notify, or attempt to notify in any way, the principal defendant of the proceeding against her.

A foreign corporation, which exercises no corporate powers or franchises within Ohio is not subject to garnishment in that state in respect of an indebtedness due a nonresident; but, if such foreign corporation has complied with the Ohio statute, and is prosecuting its business within the state, and is capable of suing and being sued there, it is subject to garnishee process in any action against its creditors in which an attachment may rightfully issue. Ritter-Conley Mfg. Co. v. Mzik, 23 Ohio C. C. 164.

In the four cases next cited, it will be observed that the debtor corporation was incorporated in two or more states, including the state in which the garnishment proceedings were instituted and so was domiciled in that state. That was also the case in Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co. v. Sturm, 174 U. S. 710, 43 L. ed. 1144, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 797. These cases are, therefore, only authority for the proposition that a debt may be garnished at the domicile of the debtor.

A railroad company incorporated originally in Georgia, but subsequently in Alabama, is subject to garnishment in the latter state upon account of an indebtedness due to a nonresident, although such indebtedness was created and was payable in another state. Georgia & A. R. Co. v. Stollenwerck, 122 Ala. 539, 25 So. 258. The court, after so holding, states, what seems to be a non sequitur, that the situs of a debt, in the absence of a stipulation to the contrary, is the domicile of the creditor.

8 Idaho, 74, 66 Pac. 826; Rathbun v. Northern C. R. Co. 50 N. Y. 656; Boardman v. Lake Shore & M. S. R. Co. 84 N. Y. 157; Alpha Mills v. Watertown Steam Engine Co. 116 N. C. 804, 21 S. E. 917; Larson v. Aultman & T. Co. 86 Wis. 281, 39 Am. St. Rep. 894, 56 N. W. 915; Clark's Code, 349 (2); 3 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, 2d ed. p. 200; Voss v. Evans Marble Co. 101 Ill. App. 373; Hammond Beef & Provision Co. v. Best, 91 Me. 431, 42 L. R. A. 531, 40 Atl. 338; Bergner & E. Brewing Co. v. Dreyfus, 172 Mass. 154, 70 Am. St. Rep. 252, 51 N. E. 531.

Statutes providing for service of process against such corporations simply appoint a method of bringing corporations invested with a foreign character into the courts of the state where such courts have jurisdiction over them, and do not extend such jurisdiction.

Camden Rolling Mill Co. v. Swede Iron Co. 32 N. J. L. 15; Cumberland Coal Co. v. Sherman, 8 Abb. Pr. 243; Sawyer v. North American L. Ins. Co. 46 Vt. 697; 14 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, 2d ed. p. 816.

It is impossible to find a location within North Carolina of the debts of a New Jersey corporation belonging to a resident of Virginia,—especially when the contract out of which the debt arose was made in Virginia, and the work was done in that state, and the debt is payable in Virginia,—in accordance with the rule that, in the absence of a place fixed in the contract, a debt is payable at the domicile of the creditor.

A consolidated railroad company organized under the laws of Illinois and Missouri, and having lines of railway and business offices in each of those states, may be garnished in Illinois by a resident of Missouri in respect of a debt owed by it to another resident of Missouri for wages earned in the latter state; and the jurisdiction is not affected by the fact that the garnishing creditor's motive was to evade the exemption law of Missouri. Wabash R. Co. v. Dougan, 142 Ill. 248, 34 Am. St. Rep. 74, 31 N. E. 594.

A railroad company chartered both in Alabama and Tennessee may be garnished in the latter state for wages due by it to an employee residing and employed in Alabama. Holland v. Mobile & O. R. Co. 16 Lea. 414.

A railroad company originally chartered in Alabama, but subsequently chartered in Tennessee, is subject to garnishment in the latter state in respect of wages due to a citizen of another state for labor performed wholly within that state. Mobile & O. R. Co. v. Barnhill, 91 Tenn. 395, 30 Am. St. Rep. 889, 19 S. W. 21.

It has been frequently held, even by those courts that concede the jurisdiction of the court of debtor's domicile to garnish an indebtedness due to a nonresident, that the jurisdiction of the courts of a state in which a foreign corporation is doing business to garnish debts due from the corporation to a nonresident is limited to debts which arise out of business transacted within the state, or which are payable within the state.

Thus, Douglass v. Phenix Ins. Co. 138 N. Y. 209, 20 L. R. A. 118, 34 Am. St. Rep. 448, 33 N. E. 938, while conceding that the laws of a state may, for the purposes of attachment proceedings, fix the situs of a debt at the domicile of the debtor, held that a New York insurance company which had appointed an agent in Massachusetts under the laws of that state, upon whom process could be served, could not be garnished in the latter state in respect of an indebtedness due to a resident of New York upon account of a loss occurring in New York. The decision is upon the ground that a corporation has its exclusive residence and domicile in the jurisdiction of origin, and does not acquire a new domicile or residence in another state by complying with the laws of the latter state as a condition of doing business therein. Blanc v. Tennessee Coal, I. & R. Co. 2 App. Div. 248, 37 N. Y. Supp. 906, is to the same effect. 67 L. R. A.

Wages due by a railroad company incorporated in Georgia to a citizen of that state, for services there performed, are not subject to attachment or garnishment in Tennessee, notwithstanding that the railroad company, without being incorporated in the latter state, extends its road into that state, and is subject to suit by process on its local agents. Central Trust Co. v. Chattanooga, R. & C. R. Co. 68 Fed. 685.

A court of Michigan cannot acquire jurisdiction in rem to pronounce judgment against a nonresident to the extent of a debt owed to the latter, and payable at his domicile, by an Illinois corporation, notwithstanding that the corporation does business in Michigan, and is liable by the laws thereof to service of process in garnishment in that state. Reimers v. Seasco Mfg. Co. 30 L. R. A. 365, 17 C. C. A. 228, 37 U. S. App. 426, 70 Fed. 573. This case distinguished Newland v. Rellly, 85 Mich. 151, 48 N. W. 544, upon the ground that, though the principal defendant in that case was a nonresident, and the indebtedness was not to be performed in Michigan, the garnishees were residents of the latter state. Cofrode v. Gartner, 79 Mich. 332, 7 L. R. A. 511, 44 N. W. 623, is distinguished upon the same ground.

Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Nash, 118 Ala. 477, 41 L. R. A. 331, 72 Am. St. Rep. 181, 23 So. 825, held that a Kentucky corporation doing business in Tennessee was not subject to garnishment in the latter state in respect of an indebtedness due to a resident of Alabama, and payable in the latter state. This decision, however, was rendered upon the broad doctrine—which, so far as it affects proceedings in other states, has been overruled by the United States Supreme Court (see supra, II.)—that the situs of a debt for the purposes of garnishment is exclusively at the creditor's domicile; and the court expressly said that it was immaterial whether the corporation garnished is one created by the laws of the state where the debt is sought to be condemned, or is a foreign corporation doing business therein by permission of the state.

Everett v. Connecticut Mut. L. Ins. Co. 4 Colo. App. 509, 36 Pac. 616, while apparently conceding that a debt to a nonresident may be garnished if the debtor is a resident, held that an indebtedness due from a foreign life insurance company to a nonresident was not subject to garnishment in Colorado, although the company had, as a condition of doing business in Central Trust Co. v. Chattanooga, R. & C. R. Co. 68 Fed. 685; National Bank v. Furtick, 2 Marv. (Del.) 35, 44 L. R. A. 115, 69 Am. St. Rep. 108, 42 Atl. 479; Fielder v. Jessup, 24 Mo. App. 91; Reimers v. Seatco Mfg. Co. 30 L. R. A. 366, 17 C. C. A. 228, 37 U. S. App. 426, 70 Fed. 573.

A corporation does not, by appointing an agent or doing business in another state, become subject to garnishment there on account of debts owing by it to residents of the states other than that in which the process of garnishment is served.

Abbeville Electric Light & P. Co. v. Western Electrical Supply Co. 61 S. C. 361, 55 L. R. A. 146, 85 Am. St. Rep. 925, 39 S. E. 559.

Colorado, designated the superintendent of insurance as its agent to receive service of process.

So, wages due from a railroad company incorporated in Kansas, to a resident of that state for services performed there, are not subject to garnishment in Colorado, although the company operates a part of its line in the latter state. Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co. v. Maggard, 6 Colo. App. 85, 39 Pac. 985.

A debt due from a railroad company incorporated in Wisconsin for services performed in North Dakota is not subject to garnishment in Minnesota, although the railroad extends through that state, where neither the plaintiff nor principal defendant is a resident of Minnesota. Northwestern Life & Sav. Co. v. Gippe (Minn.) 99 N. W. 364.

A demand against a foreign insurance company has no situs, for the purpose of garnishment, in a state where it has an agency, when the demand is due to a nonresident for a loss of property insured in another state in which the loss is payable. National Bank v. Furtick, 2 Marv. (Del.) 35, 44 L. R. A. 115, 69 Am. St. Rep. 99, 42 Atl. 479.

In Drake v. Lake Shore & M. S. R. Co. 69 Mich. 168, 13 Am. St. Rep. 382, 37 N. W. 70, it was held that a corporation organized under the laws of Indiana and Michigan, and doing business in both states, was not subject to garnishment in Michigan in respect of an indebtedness contracted and payable in Indiana, of which state the principal defendant was a citizen. This decision, even upon the assumption that the debtor was domiciled in Michigan, is not inconsistent with the actual decision in the Sturm Case, 174 U. S. 710, 43 L. ed. 1144, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 797 (supra, II.), since the debt in this case was expressly payable in another state, which fact brings the case within the qualification of the rule as declared in the Sturm Case.

An indebtedness, due from an insurance company, organized in England, to a resident of North Dakota, upon a loss occurring in that state, is not subject to garnishment in Minnesota, notwithstanding that the insurance company, in compliance with the law of Minnesota and as a condition of doing business in that state, has authorized the insurance commissioner to accept service for it, and has established local agencies and insured property in the state. Swedish-American Nat. Bank v. Blecker, 72 Minn. 383, 42 L. R. A. 283, 71 Am. 67 L. R. A.

Here the situs of the debt within the state is essential to jurisdiction in the absence of summons.

Balk v. Harris, 122 N. C. 64, 45 L. R. A. 257, 30 S. E. 318, 124 N. C. 467, 45 L. R. A. 260, 70 Am. St. Rep. 606, 32 S. E. 799; Strause Bros. v. Etna F. Ins. Co. 126 N. C. 223, 48 L. R. A. 452, 35 S. E. 471; National Bank v. Furtick, 2 Marv. (Del.) 35, 44 L. R. A. 115, 69 Am. St. Rep. 106, 42 Atl. 479; Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Nash, 118 Ala. 477, 41 L. R. A. 331, 72 Am. St. Rep. 184, 23 So. 825.

If for any reason a court is without jurisdiction over the defendant or the cause of action, though it may have jurisdiction over the garnishee, yet it cannot enter judgment.

St. Rep. 492, 75 N. W. 740. The court held that such acts did not give the garnishee a domicile in Minnesota for all purposes, or bring into that state the situs of a debt which it owed elsewhere, by reason of business transacted elsewhere. The court, continuing, said: "Neither the creditor nor the debtor resided in this state; none of the transactions out of which the indebtedness arose took place in this state; and the indebtedness was not payable in this state. Under these circumstances the debt has not a situs in this state."

An insurance company incorporated in Missouri, having sustained a loss in Nebraska, payable in the latter state, cannot be garnished in Illinois if it has neither property nor money of the debtor subject to process in that state, although it has a general agency there, and has complied with the conditions to enable it to do business there. American Cent. Ins. Co. v. Hettler, 37 Neb. 849, 40 Am. St. Rep. 522, 56 N. W. 711.

A foreign insurance company which does business in New York is not subject to attachment in the latter state in respect of a debt due to a resident of South Carolina for a loss which occurred in the latter state. Wood v. Furtick, 17 Misc. 561, 40 N. Y. Supp. 687.

A creditor of a foreign firm cannot attach a debt due from a foreign corporation to such firm in New York. Allen v. United Cigar Stores Co. 39 Misc. 500, 80 N. Y. Supp. 401. It does not appear where the debt was contracted, or where it was payable. The court said that, whether the situs of the debt be fixed at the residence of the debtor or the creditor (the residence of a foreign corporation being confined to the sovereignty which created it), the property attached was never within the state of New York.

A debt due from an insurance company of one state for loss in another state has no situs in a third state so as to sustain a garnishment there by a creditor of the insured, merely because the insurance company, as a condition of the right to do business therein, has, in pursuance of local statutes, appointed an agent in the state on whom services of process may be served. Strause Bros. v. Etna F. Ins. Co. 126 N. C. 223, 48 L. R. A. 452, 35 S. E. 471. In this case it was held that garnishment proceedings, instituted in Pennsylvania against a Connecticut insurance company upon an indebtedness due to a resident of North Carolina for a loss ment against the garnishee or the defendant.

Southern R. Co. v. Newton, 106 Ga. 566, 71 Am. St. Rep. 279, 32 S. E. 658; 14 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, 2d ed. p. 852; Plimpton v. Bigelow, 93 N. Y. 592; Douglass v. Phenix Ins. Co. 138 N. Y. 209, 20 L. R. A. 118, 34 Am. St. Rep. 448, 33 N. E. 938.

The debt sought to be attached is exempt under the laws of Virginia.

Suit was instituted in this state for the purpose of evading the exemption laws of that state.

Where all the parties are residents of the same foreign state the law of comity will not permit a creditor residing in one state to avail himself of the process of another state for the purpose of evading the exemption laws of his own state, thus depriving the debtor of his right of exemption.

Rood, Garnishment, §§ 100, 101; Drake v. Lake Shore & M. S. R. Co. 69 Mich. 168, 13 Am. St. Rep. 382, 37 N. W. 70; Mason v. Beebe, 44 Fed. 556.

Statutory exemption of wages from legal process is not merely a personal privilege, but a declaration of the public policy of the state for the protection of the debtor's family.

Mills v. Colyer (1904; Ga.) Atlanta Super. Ct.; Griffin v. Sutherland, 14 Barb. 456.

Such exemptions cannot be waived.

Mills v. Bennett, 94 Tenn. 651, 45 Am. St. Rep. 763, 30 S. W. 748; Burke v. Finley, 50 Kan. 424, 34 Am. St. Rep. 132, 31 Pac.

in the latter state, were not a defense to an action upon the policy in North Carolina.

A debt, which arose and is payable outside of Ohio, due from one nonresident corporation to another, is not subject to attachment and garnishment in Ohio, notwithstanding that the garnishee corporation has its principal office in Ohio, and has complied with the provisions of the statute of that state by appointing an agent upon whom service of process may be made. R. A. Kelley Co. v. Garvin Mach. Co. 4 Ohio S. & C. P. Dec. 374.

A foreign insurance company doing business in Wisconsin may not be garnished in that state by a resident thereof on account of its indebtedness to a nonresident principal defendant, arising from a loss occurring in another state. Morawetz v. Sun Ins. Office, 96 Wis. 175, 65 Am. St. Rep. 43, 71 N. W. 109. See infra as to this case.

An insurance company which has no office in the province of Manitoba is not subject to attachment therein in respect of a loss which is payable at Montreal. Braun v. Davis, 9 Manitoba L. Rep. 534.

Moneys payable in a foreign country by a foreign corporation for services performed in that country under a contract made there are not seizable under a writ of saque-arret issued out of a court of Quebec, although the foreign corporation may have a branch office, and be served with process, in the province. Goodhue v. O'Leary, Rap. Jud. Quebec, 17 C. S. 201.

The decisions in some of the foregoing cases denying the jurisdiction to garnish an indebtedness due from a foreign corporation to a nonresident, not arising out of business transacted within the state, are attributable to the fact that, under the local statute, the nonresident creditor could not have maintained an action against the corporation within the state in respect of the indebtedness sought to be garnished. Thus, the decision in Morawetz v. Sun Ins. Office, 96 Wis. 175, 65 Am. St. Rep. 43, 71 N. W. 109, supra, is expressly put upon the ground that, under the Wisconsin statute, a foreign corporation can be sued only when it has property within the state, or the cause of action arises therein, or exists in favor of a resident of the state. The court pointed out that, while the garnishing creditor was a resident of Wisconsin, he must, for the purpose in hand, stand in the position of the principal defendant, who was a nonresident. It is difficult to trace this 67 L. R. A. distinction through the cases, and it disappears entirely in some of them; but it is obvious that it may have an important bearing upon the question whether the jurisdiction extends to indebtedness arising out of business not transacted within the state.

So, the decision in Pennsylvania R. Co. v. Rogers, 52 W. Va. 450, 62 L. R. A. 178, 44 S. E. 300, that an indebtedness due from a foreign railroad corporation to a nonresident, and payable out of the state, was not subject to garnishment within the state, where the railroad company operated no road in the state, and did no business therein other than maintaining, jointly with other railroads, an agency relating to through freight service, and for the soliciting of freight to be handled on its lines without the state,—seems to have turned upon the point that the corporation was not doing business within the state so as to make it liable to garnishment there, rather than upon the point that the particular debt in question did not pertain to business transacted within the state; and the court seems to concede that a foreign corporation which does business within the state may, the same as a domestic corporation, be garnished in respect of an indebtedness arising out of business not transacted within the state; for it says that foreign corporations and nonresident individuals stand upon the same footing in respect of garnishment, "except that the former are subject to garnishment when doing business within the state in which the garnishment issues in such sense and to such extent as to have become domiciled therein."

The objections, based upon the possibility that the debtor may be compelled to pay the debt twice, to the doctrine which holds that a debt due from a corporation is subject to garnishment in any state in which the corporation does business and in which it may be served with process, without reference to the place of its domicile or to the place where the business out of which the debt in question arose, or where the debt is payable, are considered in infra, V.

V. Conflict of jurisdiction.

It was said by the court in Douglass v. Phenix Ins. Co. 138 N. Y. 209, 20 L. R. A. 118, 34 Am. St. Rep. 448, 33 N. E. 938,—and the same objection has been urged by other courts,—that the admission of the principle that a foreign corporation is subject, in respect of a 1065; Firmstone v. Mack, 49 Pa. 393, 88 Am. Dec. 507.

The law has set such property apart for a specific purpose. As to it there is neither creditor nor debtor.

Ducall v. Rollins, 71 N. C. 221; Winchester v. Gaddy, 72 N. C. 117; Montgomery County v. Riley, 75 N. C. 146.

It is not an asset, and to it the creditor has no right to look.

O'Conner v. Ward, 60 Miss. 1037; 14 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, 2d ed. p. 221; Central Nat. Bank v. Hume, 128 U. S. 195, 32 L. ed. 370, 9 Sup. Ct. Rep. 41.

The debt is exempt under the laws of North Carolina by virtue of Code, § 493.

Traudi v. Hagerman, 27 Ind. App. 150, 60 N. E. 1012; Northwestern Mut. L. Ins.

Co. v. Gridley, 100 U. S. 616, 25 L. ed. 747; 12 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, 2d ed. p. 75; Rustad v. Bishop, 80 Minn. 497, 50 L. R. A. 168, 81 Am. St. Rep. 282, 83 N. W. 449; Spencer v. Myers, 150 N. Y. 269, 34 L. R. A. 175, 55 Am. St. Rep. 677, 44 N. E. 942; Leavitt v. Metcalf, 2 Vt. 342, 19 Am. Dec. 718; Roberts v. Parker, 117 Iowa, 389, 57 L. R. A. 764, 94 Am. St. Rep. 316, 90 N. W. 744; Rutledge v. Crawford, 91 Cal. 526, 13 L. R. A. 761, 25 Am. St. Rep. 212, 27 Pac. 779; Riggs v. Palmer, 115 N. Y. 506, 5 L. R. A. 340, 12 Am. St. Rep. 819, 22 N. E. 188; State ex rel. Gamble v. Rhyne, 80 N. C. 183; Furners' Mfg. Co. v. Steinmetz, 133 N. C. 192, 45 S. E. 552; Jones v. Alsbrook, 115 N. C. 46, 20 S. E. 170; Montgomery County v. Riley, 75 N. C. 146.

particular debt, to garnishment in any state in which it may do business, gives rise to embarrassing conflicts of jurisdiction, and subjects the creditors of such corporations to great prejudice. The court, in Mooney v. Buford & G. Mfg. Co. 18 C. C. A. 421, 34 U. S. App. 581, 72 Fed. 32, 39, says, in reply to this objection: "The proceedings and judgments of the courts of the United States are entitled to equal respect, and it follows that a proceeding in garnishment, begun in any court of competent jurisdiction, against a corporation doing business and subject to process in two or more states, would be entitled to precedence of any suit for the same cause commenced later in another district or state, and that the supposed inconvenience of different suits in different jurisdictions, and danger of debtors being compelled to discharge their obligations more than once, is more imaginary than real. No court can rightfully disregard the lien upon the debt which is established by the service of process in garnishment upon the debtor."

It is not the intention here to discuss the question as to the proper practice or procedure when two or more actions or proceedings to reach the same indebtedness are pending in different states. It may be said in this connection, however, that there is some difference of opinion whether the pendency of the first suit or proceeding should be pleaded in abatement of a suit or proceeding subsequently commenced in another state, or whether both proceedings should be allowed to proceed until a judgment has been recovered in one of them, and the judgment then interposed as a bar to the further prosecution of the other. However this may be, it is, of course, a fundamental principle of justice that the debtor ought not, by reason of the concurrent jurisdiction of the courts of two or more states, to be compelled to pay the debt more than once. The danger that he may be compelled to do so arises, not from the universal adoption of the principle making a corporation liable to garnishment in respect of an indebtedness in any state in which it may do business, and in which it may have an agent upon whom service of process may be made, but from a conflict of views among the courts of the different states upon this question; and this danger may therefore be removed by a decision of the United States Supreme Court upon the question, just as the decisions of that court have averted further danger of a double liability.

ity arising from the different views of the state courts, upon the question whether a debt payable generally has a situs for the purpose of garnishment at the domicile of the debtor.

The case of Lancashire Ins. Co. v. Corbetts, 165 Ill. 592, 36 L. R. A. 640, 56 Am. St. Rep. 275, 46 N. E. 631, indicates how the debtor may be protected against a double liability, notwithstanding that garnishment proceedings are instituted against him in respect of the same indebtedness in two states. In that case an insurance company, domiciled in Great Britain but doing business in Illinois and Wisconsin, was garnished originally in Illinois by a resident of that state in respect of an indebtedness due to a resident of Wisconsin upon account of a loss occurring in the latter state; while the Illinois garnishment proceeding was pending, the corporation was also garnished in Wisconsin in respect of the same indebtedness by another creditor of the principal defendant. The corporation pleaded the pendency of the Illinois proceedings in abatement of the Wisconsin proceedings, but the Wisconsin court held that the Illinois court was without jurisdiction in the premises, and that its proceedings were no defense to the Wisconsin proceedings, and therefore rendered judgment against the corporation, which it paid under compulsion. The judgment and its payment were subsequently set up by the corporation as a bar to further proceedings under the Illinois garnishment; and this defense was allowed. The Illinois court held that the Wisconsin court was in error in denying the jurisdiction of the Illinois court; but held that the courts of the two states had concurrent jurisdiction, and that the judgment first rendered could properly be pleaded in bar to the further maintenance of the other proceeding, notwithstanding that the proceedings were instituted by different parties. It must be conceded that, if the judgment had been rendered first in the Illinois proceeding, and the corporation had been compelled to pay the same, it would probably have been subjected to a double liability, since the Wisconsin court would doubtless have held that that judgment, having been rendered without jurisdiction, was not conclusive or binding upon the principal defendant, or upon the latter's creditor who instituted the Wisconsin proceeding. It is apparent, however, that the injustice to the corporation upon this assumption would not be legitimately attributable to the Illinois doctrine

This statute is, in effect, a general statute of exemption, and, under the liberal construction accorded such statutes, will be construed to be an exemption from all process.

Collier v. Murphy, 90 Tenn. 300, 25 Am. St. Rep. 698, 16 S. W. 465; Millington v. Laurer, 89 Iowa, 322, 48 Am. St. Rep. 385, 56 N. W. 533; Seymour v. Cooper, 26 Kan. 539; Harding v. Hendrix, 28 Kan. 584; Curlee v. Thomas, 74 N. C. 51; Burgwyn v. Hall, 108 N. C. 489, 13 S. E. 222.

A nonresident who sued here can claim the benefit of this statute.

12 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, 2d ed. p. 78; Mineral Point R. Co. v. Barron, 83 Ill. 365; Missouri P. R. Co. v. Maltby, 34 Kan. 125, 8 Pac. 235; Rood, Garnishment, § 92; Drake, Attachm. §§ 480, 667; Waples, Attachment & Garnishment, p. 164; Montgomery County v. Riley, 75 N. C. 144; State ex rel. Gamble v. Rhyne, 80 N. C. 183; Davis v. Garrett, 25 N. C. (3 Ired. L.) 466; 12 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, 2d ed. pp. 184, 185.

Entry of a personal judgment without an order of sale or condemnation of attached property will effect a dissolution of the attachment, and release the property attached.

Farmers' Mfg. Co. v. Steinmetz, 133 N. C. 194, 45 S. E. 552; 4 Cyc. Law & Proc. pp. 825, 826; Amyett v. Backhouse, 7 N. C. (3 Murph.) 63.

The garnishee is liable only for the amount due at the time of the service of the writ.

Drake, Attachm. §§ 451 (a), 667; Rood, Garnishment, §§ 8, 13, 49; 14 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, 2d ed. p. 835; Arrington v. Screws, 31 N. C. (9 Ired. L.) 42, 49 Am. Dec. 408; Devries v. Summit, 86 N. C. 126; State Bank v. Hinton, 12 N. C. (1 Dev. L.) 397; Skinner v. Moore, 19 N. C. (2 Dev. & B. L.) 145, 30 Am. Dec. 155; Leak v. Moorman, 61 N. C. (Phill. L.) 168.

Mr. A. H. Eller, for appellee:

The court has jurisdiction of the R. J. Reynolds Tobacco Company.

Code, § 194; Balk v. Harris, 124 N. C. 467, 45 L. R. A. 260, 70 Am. St. Rep. 606, 32 S. E. 799.

The court has jurisdiction over the property of the defendant, Claytor, because that property is in the state, in the hands of the Reynolds company.

with respect to jurisdiction, but rather to the conflict between the views of the courts of Illinois and of Wisconsin upon that question. It seems altogether probable, in view of the attitude taken by the Supreme Court in the Sturm Case, that it will adopt the position of the Illinois court, rather than that of the Wisconsin court, when a case involving such a state of facts comes before it.

One garnished for a debt due a nonresident creditor may prevent judgment against him in the garnishment proceeding by showing that, without his collusion, and notwithstanding his plea of the pendency of the garnishment proceeding, a court at the creditor's domicile having jurisdiction rendered a judgment against him on the debt in favor of the creditor, which, having property in that jurisdiction, he was compelled to pay. Virginia F. & M. Ins. Co. v. New York Causual Mfg. Co. 95 Va. 515, 40 L. R. A. 237, 28 S. E. 888.

A judgment against a garnishee, rendered without fraud or collusion, after full disclosure of a prior garnishment in a court of another state having concurrent jurisdiction, must, after it has been satisfied, be held a complete bar to the proceedings in the other state. Lancashire Ins. Co. v. Corbetts, 165 Ill. 592, 36 L. R. A. 640, 56 Am. St. Rep. 275, 46 N. E. 631.

An employer duly garnished and held liable in one state, and who has paid as garnishee a debt due a resident in another state, may interpose such garnishment proceedings and payment in bar of the prosecution in the latter state of another action for the same debt by the employee to whom it is due, although, by the laws of such latter state, such debt is exempt from garnishment. Unlon P. R. Co. v. Baker, 5 Kan. App. 253, 47 Pac. 563.

But payment by a garnishee of a judgment which was void for want of jurisdiction over the nonresident creditor will not be a defense to 67 L. R. A.

an action by the latter. Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Nash, 118 Ala. 477, 41 L. R. A. 381, 72 Am. St. Rep. 181, 23 So. 825.

VI. Exemptions.

For earlier cases see note to Illinois C. R. Co. v. Smith, 19 L. R. A. 577.

The United States Supreme Court, in Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co. v. Sturm, 174 U. S. 710, 43 L. ed. 1144, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 797, not only held that a debt, not expressly payable elsewhere, is subject to garnishment at the debtor's domicile though the creditor is a nonresident and is served constructively only; but also held that exemption laws are not a part of the contract, but are a part of the remedy and subject to the law of the forum; and therefore held that the court of Iowa, where the garnishment proceedings were instituted, was not in error in refusing to admit the exemption allowed by the law of Kansas, the domicile of the creditor (i. e., the principal defendant). The decision upon this point is, perhaps, strictly speaking, obiter, since the Iowa court, having jurisdiction of the proceeding, it would seem that its decision upon this point would be conclusive, whether right or wrong.

Sexton v. Phoenix Ins. Co. 132 N. C. 1, 43 S. E. 470, and Pennsylvania R. Co. v. Rogers, 52 W. Va. 450, 62 L. R. A. 178, 44 S. E. 300, take the same position; and so does Wabash R. Co. v. Dougan, 142 Ill. 248, 34 Am. St. Rep. 74, 31 N. E. 594, with reference to a case not governed by the Illinois statute which expressly declares that a nonresident principal defendant shall be allowed the same exemption in respect of wages as is, at the time, allowed him by the law of the state where he resides. See also Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co. v. Maggard, 6 Colo. App. 85, 39 Pac. 985, infra.

Howland v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co. 134 Mo. 474, 36 S. W. 29, did not pass upon the Balk v. Harris, 124 N. C. 467, 45 L. R. A. 260, 70 Am. St. Rep. 606, 32 S. E. 799; Cooper v. Adel Security Co. 122 N. C. 463, 30 S. E. 348; Winfree v. Bagley, 102 N. C. 515, 9 S. E. 198.

A debt not due, wages to be earned, salary arising under the same continuing contract, have such an existence as to be easily ascertained, and are attachable.

Rood, Garnishment, §§ 65, 73, 74; 8 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, pp. 1150, 1151.

Walker, J., delivered the opinion of the court:

The counsel of the defendant and of the garnishee, in their able and exhaustive brief, rely on several grounds to defeat the plaintiff's recovery. For convenience, we will change somewhat the order in which they are stated in the brief. It is contended: (1) That the debt garnished is exempt by the laws of Virginia from garnishment. (2) That, if the debt was subject to garnishment at all, any lien acquired by the service of the writ was waived and the garnishee released by taking a general and personal judgment against the defendant and the garnishee, instead of taking an order condemning the debt to the payment of the plaintiff's claim. (3) That the judgment is erroneous, as it condemned a debt due after the service of the writ. (4) That the court was without jurisdiction to proceed against the garnishee for the purpose of condemning the debt due by him, because it is necessary to the possession and rightful exercise of such jurisdiction that three things should occur: (a) The corporation who is the garnishee in this case must have such a residence and agency within the state as renders it amenable to the process of the court; (b) the principal defendant, who is the plaintiff's debtor, must himself have the right to sue the garnishee, his debtor, in this state, for the recovery of the debt; (c) it must appear that the situs of the debt is in this state. (5) And lastly, he insists that the earnings of a debtor are exempted from condemnation by the laws of this state. We will consider these contentions in the order thus presented.

The right of exemption under the laws of Virginia cannot be enforced here. It is well settled that exemption laws have no extra-territorial effect. They are not, in respect question whether exemption pertains to the remedy or to the substantive contract; but merely held that the decision of the court of another state on that point was conclusive, whether right or wrong, since that court had jurisdiction of the garnishment proceeding in which the decision was made.

By the converse of the principle that denies the application of the exemption law of the state of the creditor's domicile, upon the ground that such law pertains to the remedy rather than the substantive contract, it might seem that the law of the state in which the garnishment proceeding is instituted should be applied, notwithstanding the nonresidence of the principal defendant (i. e., the creditor to whom the debt sought to be garnished is due). It is clear, however, that this result cannot follow if the local exemption law is, in terms, confined to residents of the state. Even when the statute is not in terms so confined, it is a serious question whether it ought not to be regarded as intended for the protection of residents only. Wabash R. Co. v. Dougan, 142 Ill. 248, 34 Am. St. Rep. 74, 31 N. E. 594, however (a case not governed by the Illinois statute above alluded to), held that the Illinois exemption law was not confined to residents, and was therefore to be applied in a proceeding in that state to garnish an indebtedness due to a resident of another state.

So, Kansas City, Ft. S. & M. R. Co. v. Cunningham, 7 Kan. App. 47, 51 Pac. 972, held that the courts of Kansas would, as a matter of comity, in garnishment proceedings in which the principal defendant was a resident of Missouri, give effect to the exemption law of that state, it being in substantial harmony with the exemption law of Kansas.

A similar result was reached by the Kansas supreme court in Missouri P. R. Co. v. Maltby, 34 Kan. 125, 8 Pac. 235. But, while the actual decision in this case was merely that the debt was exempt from garnishment process in Kansas, and was not expressly referred to the law of Kansas as distinguished from the law of the principal defendant's domicile (the law of the two states being substantially the same), the court intimated that, in its opinion, the exemption law of Kansas applied, notwithstanding the nonresidence of the principal defendant.

In Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co. v. Maggard, 6 Colo. App. 85, 39 Pac. 985, however, the court held that, assuming the jurisdiction of a court of Colorado to garnish an indebtedness due to a resident of Kansas for services performed in the latter state, neither the exemption law of Kansas nor that of Colorado could be applied, even though the exemption statute of the latter state is not expressly, and in terms, confined to residents of that state.

It is obvious that the principle that a debt is subject to garnishment at the domicile of the debtor, in conjunction with the principle that the exemption laws pertain to the remedy, and not to the substantive right, may, as it did in the Sturm Case, operate to deprive the principal defendant of an exemption to which he is entitled under the law of his domicile. Some of the states have undertaken to avoid such result by the enactment of statutes forbidding the sending of claims out of the state for collection in order to evade the exemption laws of the state. The questions relating to the constitutionality and construction of such acts do not come within the scope of the note; but it may be remarked here that the constitutional question has been passed upon in Singer Mfg. Co. v. Fleming, 39 Neb. 679, 23 L. R. A. 210, 42 Am. St. Rep. 613, 58 N. W. 226, and Re Flukes, 157 Mo. 125, 51 L. R. A. 176, 80 Am. St. Rep. 619, 57 S. W. 545. See also, as to liability for evasion of exemption laws by action in other state, note to Stewart v. Thomson, 36 L. R. A. 582.

G. H. P.

to the question now under discussion, a part of the contract, but relate only to the remedy and the right to an exemption is therefore subject to the law of the forum. Rood, Garnishment, § 100; Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co. v. Sturm, 174 U. S. 710, 43 L. ed. 1144, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 797; Sexton v. Phoenix Ins. Co. 132 N. C. 3, 43 S. E. 479. But there is another decisive answer to this claim of exemption. We have concluded, as will appear hereafter, that the domicile of the corporation, the Reynolds Tobacco Company, is, for the purposes of this case, in this state, and it nowhere appears that it has any domicile, or even an agency, in the state of Virginia. Indeed, the case shows that, while it was created a corporation in the state of New Jersey, it has no property in that state, but the bulk of its property and its principal place of business are here. For this reason, it could not be sued by the defendant Claytor in the state of Virginia for the debt garnished in this action, and Claytor therefore could not avail himself of the exemption laws of that state. It is argued that, as the plaintiff and the defendant Claytor are residents of Virginia, if Claytor is not allowed his exemption under the laws of that state the plaintiff will be enabled thereby to evade or "shove by" the law of the domicile of both of them, and set it at defiance. How can this be, if the plaintiff cannot, by the process of the courts of that state, reach and lay hold of the res, which is the debt due by the tobacco company? An exemption, it would seem, can be allowed only in property actually situated in the state where the claim of exemption is asserted, and where the property in which it is claimed is subject to the jurisdiction and process of its courts. As we will presently show, the tobacco company had no domicile and could not be served with process there; and, besides, as will also appear hereafter, the situs of the debt, if any is required, was here. The argument predicated upon the exemption of the particular debt in Virginia must therefore fail, as no exemption exists.

We do not think that, if the plaintiff acquired any lien on the debt due to the defendant by the tobacco company, he lost it by taking a judgment against the defendant and the garnishee. The judgment against the garnishee seems to be expressly warranted and contemplated by the statute (Code, § 364), and that against the defendant is void as a personal judgment, as the court could acquire no jurisdiction to proceed against him, except in so far as it could by its process levy upon or seize his property; and in this respect the suit is to all intents and purposes in the nature of a proceeding in rem, and not of one in personam. 67 L. R. A.

am. Cooper v. Reynolds, 10 Wall. 308, 19 L. ed. 931; Pennoyer v. Neff, 95 U. S. 714, 24 L. ed. 565; Winfrees v. Bagley, 102 N. C. 515, 9 S. E. 198; Fisher v. Traders' Mut. L. Ins. Co. (at this term) 48 S. E. 667; Connecticut Mut. L. Ins. Co. v. Spratley, 172 U. S. 602, 43 L. ed. 569, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 308. Nor do we think the judgment was erroneous in that it included a part of the debt which was not earned and due at the time the garnishee was summoned to answer, if it was due when he actually answered and the judgment was rendered. Code, § 364, provides: "When an attachment shall be served on any garnishee in manner aforesaid, it shall be lawful upon his appearance and examination to enter up judgment and award execution for the plaintiff against such garnishee for all sums of money due to the defendant from him, and for all effects and estates of any kind belonging to the defendant, in his possession or custody, for the use of the plaintiff, or so much thereof as shall be sufficient to satisfy the debt and costs and all charges incident to levying the same; and all goods and effects whatsoever in the hands of any garnishee belonging to the defendant shall be liable to satisfy the plaintiff's judgment, and shall be delivered to the sheriff or other officer serving the attachment." The language thus employed clearly indicates the intention that any money due by the garnishee, or goods in his hands belonging to the debtor, at the time of appearance and answer, shall be applied in satisfaction of the debt. 1 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, pp. 1150, 1151, 1165. It does not appear in this case how or when the salary was to be paid. It is admitted, however, that an amount more than sufficient to pay the plaintiff's claim was due at the time of filing the answer, and judgment was rendered only for the amount of the defendant's indebtedness to the plaintiff.

We come now to the consideration of the defendant's fourth exception, which involves important questions not at all free from difficulty. For the purpose of determining whether any one of the defendant's contentions under the fourth exception is well founded, we may admit the general rule that a garnishment is, in effect, a suit by the principal debtor, the defendant in the action, in the name of the plaintiff, and for his use and benefit, against the garnishee, to recover the debt due to the plaintiff's debtor, and apply it to the satisfaction of the plaintiff's demand. It would appear to be a necessary corollary from the proposition thus stated that the plaintiff in the garnishment is, in his relation to the garnishee, substituted merely to the rights of his own debtor, and can enforce no claim against the garnishee which the debtor himself, if suing, would not be entitled to recover. Shinn, Attachm. § 487; Myer v. Liverpool, L. & G. Ins. Co. 40 Md. 595; Brauser v. New England F. Ins. Co. 21 Wis. 509. The garnishee can be placed in no worse position by reason of the garnishment than he occupied as a debtor to the defendant, nor subjected to any greater liability. This is a just and reasonable doctrine, but it does not by any means sustain the objections of the defendant. It seems to be conceded that, if the creditor of the garnishee can sue the latter in this state, then the plaintiff can proceed here against the garnishee. That the garnishee, the tobacco company, although a corporation having its domicile of origin in New Jersey, was amenable to process such as issued in this case, is too well settled to be now an open question. We are speaking now of the service of process, and not of jurisdiction. It is found as a fact that the company has complied with the laws of this state concerning foreign corporations, which means either that it had an agent in this state upon whom process could be served under the general law in all actions against it, or that it had complied with the provisions of chapter 5, p. 66, Acts 1901. As the tobacco company transacted business here by the favor or comity of this state, it was subject to the state's laws, and to all of its reasonable rules and regulations regarding the service of process; and any judgment of a state court, having jurisdiction of the cause or of the subject of the action, is binding upon the company,—at least in this state,—the same as if it were a domestic corporation or an individual. The subject is fully discussed in Fisher v. Traders' Mut. L. Ins. Co. (decided at this term) 48 S. E. 667. See also St. Louis & S. F. R. Co. v. James, 161 U. S. 545, 40 L. ed. 802, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 621; Louisville, N. A. & C. R. Co. v. Louisville Trust Co. 174 U. S. 552, 43 L. ed. 1081, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 817; Shields v. Union Cent. L. Ins. Co. 119 N. C. 380, 25 S. E. 951. While the company cannot be treated as a domestic corporation or as a distinct entity in this state, for the purpose of determining the jurisdiction of the Federal courts, it may be so regarded in respect to its liability to be sued here; and the jurisdiction of our courts over it, which extends to suits not only by residents of this state, but to those by residents of other states, who are equally entitled to be admitted to our courts to prosecute actions for the protection of their rights and the recovery of their property, in the absence of any law forbidding them to sue in our courts. The state may, it is true, exclude nonresidents from our courts, if it sees fit to do so, without infringing the Constitution of the United States, which protects only citizens of a state against such discrimination by another state; but we do not think the principal defendant, who is the debtor of the plaintiff, has been denied the right to sue his debtor, the garnishee, in our courts, by § 194 of the Code. It having been settled that a foreign corporation exercising its franchises in this state may be subjected to the process of garnishment when it holds property or credits of the debtor for which the latter can sue in our courts, and that the plaintiff in attachment, as against the garnishee, is subrogated to the rights in that respect of the debtor, and can recover only by the same right and to the same extent as the debtor could recover if he were suing the garnishee, his debtor (Myer v. Liverpool, L. & G. Ins. Co. 40 Md. 595), it must follow that the plaintiff may maintain his action, and the garnishment proceedings as ancillary to it, unless he is precluded from doing so by § 194. That section provides that an action may be brought against a foreign corporation by a plaintiff not a resident of this state when the cause of action shall have arisen or the subject of the action shall be situated within this state.

It appears in this case that the terms of the contract between Claytor and the tobacco company were agreed upon in this state, and, while the services were performed by Claytor in Virginia, all checks for his salary or wages were drawn at and sent from Winston, in this state; and it further appears that the tobacco company has no property in New Jersey, which by courtesy may be called its domicile of origin, and that the bulk of its property is in this state, which is actually its domicile by adoption. What a curious result would follow if we should hold that Claytor cannot sue the company in this state! We will force him to seek his debtor in New Jersey, but he will find no property there to satisfy his debt; and there is no good reason why he should be required to resort to the courts of any other state than New Jersey, where there may happen to be some of the property of his debtor, but where the debtor has no domicile of any kind, and where the same law may exist as we have here; nor should he be required to first obtain judgment in New Jersey, and then come here to sue upon it. A construction of our statute, with reference to the special facts of this case, which would produce such an anomaly, by requiring him to pursue any one of the courses indicated, should not be accepted as the true one unless no other is admissible. The transactions out of which the cause of action of Claytor against the company arose occurred in this state, and the debt due to him was as much payable here as it was in Virginia. For some purposes it may be important to determine precisely where a debt is payable or a contract is to be performed, but it is a well-established general rule that "all debts are payable everywhere, unless there is some special limitation or provision in respect to the payment; the rule being that debts, as such, have no locus or situs, but accompany the creditor everywhere, and authorize a demand upon the debtor everywhere." 2 Parsons, Contr. 8th ed. 702. The contract between Claytor and the tobacco company contained no "special limitation or provision in respect to payment," and the debt growing out of it, if not, by reason of the special circumstances of its creation, payable here (Perry v. Erie Transfer Co. 28 Abb. N. C. 430, 19 N. Y. Supp. 239), was payable generally, and could have been sued on by Claytor in this state, and therefore was attachable here. "This is the principle and effect of the best-considered cases,—the inevitable effect from the nature of transitory actions and the purpose of foreign attachment laws, if we would enforce that purpose." Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co. v. Sturm, 174 U. S. 710, 43 L. ed. 1144, 19 Sup. Ct. Rep. 797; Beale, Foreign Corp. § 284. Considering the special facts of this case, we find that the tobacco company obtained a charter in New Jersey for the avowed purpose of establishing its principal office and transacting its business in this state. It was born, it is true, in New Jersey, but it lives, moves, and has its being in this state. It is nominally a corporation of the other state, where it was originally created, but in reality has its home, its domicile, here. There is no valid or practical reason why this case should not be held to come substantially within the principle of Seaton v. Phoenix Ins. Co. 132 N. C. 3, 43 S. E. 479, supra, and Boyd v. Royal Ins. Co. 111 N. C. 372, 16 S. E. 389; and, if that is the correct view, the tobacco company cannot certainly be prejudiced in the least when it is required to pay its debts where it conducts its business and has all or the larger part of its assets. On the contrary, it will be to its advantage if it is required to pay where it has its assets, rather than at the domicile of its origin, where it has none, and where it performs none of its corporate functions. This case is clearly distinguishable from Balk v. Harris, 124 N. C. 468, 45 L. R. A. 257, 70 Am. St. Rep. 606, 32 S. E. 799 and Strause Bros. v. Aetna F. Ins. Co. 126 N. C. 223, 48 L. R. A. 452, 35 S. E. 471. The facts of this case and of those two cases are wholly different. It has been said that a corporation must dwell in the place of its creation, and cannot migrate to another sovereignty (Bank of Augusta v. Earle, 13 Pet. 588, 10 L. ed. 307); but this dictum has been said to be nothing but a rhetorical statement of the perfectly obvious principle that a corporation, wherever it goes, is subject to the law of the state where it was created, and cannot rid itself of the control of that state, nor can it disregard the restrictions of its charter, which embodies the limitations of its legal existence and its corporate powers. It may, though, acquire a domicile or a residence in another state, and be subject to its laws to the same extent as if it had been fully domesticated there. Murfree, Foreign Corp. §§ 8, 9.

Our conclusion on this branch of the case is that the tobacco company was amenable to the process of our courts, both mesne and final; that the cause of action against it and in favor of Clayton arose in this state (Steele v. Rutherford, 70 N. C. 137); and that the subject of the action is situated here; that is, the debt due from the tobacco company to the defendant,—the res, as it is called (Winfree v. Bagley, 102 N. C. 515, 9 S. E. 198),—which has been brought within the jurisdiction of the court by service of the garnishment.

It was necessary to decide the questions we have discussed before considering the defendant's last ground of objection, because a decision for him on any one of those questions would have settled the case in his favor.

The defendant further insists that his earnings for personal services at any time within sixty days next preceding the garnishment were exempt under § 493 of the Code. He admits that this exemption is allowed by that section in supplementary proceedings, but his counsel argue that it is intended by the law that such earnings shall in no way be condemned or applied to the payment of debts. The humane and beneficent provisions of the law in regard to exemptions, being remedial in their nature and founded upon a sound public policy, should always receive a liberal construction, so as to embrace all persons coming fairly within their scope. Black, Interpretation of Laws, 311. This court has uniformly held that, where property is exempted from seizure under final process, it is similarly exempt from levy or seizure under any mesne process issued for the purpose of placing it in the custody of the court, and thus to preserve it until it can finally be applied to the satisfaction of the plaintiff's debt. Virginia-Carolina Chemical Co. v. Sloan (at this term) 48 S. E. 577. Supplementary proceedings are in the nature of final process, when viewed either as a substitute for a creditor's bill to enforce the payment of a judgment at law, or as a proceeding having the essential qualities of an equitable fi. fa.; and, if the defendant comes within the general description of the persons designated in the act, there is no good reason for denying him the exemption under the garnishment. The homestead and personal property exemptions can be claimed only by residents of this state. But this is so by reason of the express words of our Constitution and laws. There is no such limitation in § 493, and we are unable to see why we should restrict its meaning so as to exclude the defendant from the benefit of its wise provisions, and thereby defeat the evident policy and benevolent purpose of the legislature. We prefer to give the section a liberal construction, which will be apt to do justice, and at the same time carry out the legislative intent, and which, too, will not be contrary to the letter of the law.

The defendant should be allowed his exemption out of his earnings in accordance with the provisions of § 493, and to this extent there was error in the judgment upon the case agreed.

We have discussed the case somewhat at length, as it involves questions of great and increasing importance, and, it may be, of far-reaching consequences. It was unusually well presented on both sides by counsel in their briefs.

Error.

W. H. McNEILL

v.

DURHAM & CHARLOTTE RAILROAD COMPANY, Appt.

(135 N. C. 682.)

1. The giving of passes in consideration of the publication of railroad time-tables in a newspaper is within the prohibition of a statute making it unjust discrimination for a common carrier to receive from any person a greater or less compensation for transportation than is demanded or received from any other person by means of any special rate, rebate, drawback, or other device.

On Rehearing.

2. Conditions on the back of a void pass are without effect upon the rights of the person who is attempting to use it for transportation.
3. A railroad company renders itself liable to the penalty, provided by a statute for making unjust discrimination in rates for transportation over its road, not by making a contract for free transportation, but by actually transporting a person without charge or for an inadequate consideration.

4. One accepting free transportation which a railroad company is forbidden, under penalty, to grant is not precluded, on the ground that he is in part delicto, from holding the carrier liable to him for injuries due to its negligence, since he is not in part delicto with a railroad company, and, if he is so with respect to the carriage contract, it does not extend to the negligence causing the injury.
5. The acceptance of free transportation, which a railroad company is prohibited, under penalty, from granting, does not deprive one of the character of a bona fide passenger, or the protection to which he is entitled as such.
6. A person riding on the cars of a railroad company with its consent without any contract between him and the company may hold it liable for injuries inflicted upon him by the negligence of the company or its servants.

(Clark, Ch. J., and Montgomery, J., dissent.)

(April 28, 1903.)

APPEAL by defendant from a judgment of the Superior Court for Moore County in favor of plaintiff in an action brought to recover damages for personal injuries alleged to have been caused by defendant's negligence. Affirmed.

The facts are stated in the opinions.

Messrs. Guthrie & Guthrie and H. F. Seawell, for appellant:

The general drift and weight of authority have unquestionably been towards holding the conditions on free passes, which are pure gratuities, valid and binding on the holders.

Payne v. Terre Haute & I. R. Co. 157 Ind. 616, 56 L. R. A. 472, 62 N. E. 472; Muldoon v. Seattle City R. Co. 7 Wash. 528, 22 L. R. A. 794, 38 Am. St. Rep. 901, 35 Pac. 422.

The old maxim of the law, In pari delicto melior est conditio defendantis, ought to apply to a case like the one at bar.

Turner v. North Carolina R. Co. 63 N. C. 522.

The contract was one of private carriage without hire,—a purely gratuitous bailment,—and lacked the essentials of a contract of common carriage, viz., a duty to carry and reward or hire therefor.

A common carrier may enter into a pri-

NOTE.—For other cases in this series as to rights of person riding on pass, and as to validity of condition exempting carriers from liability for injury, see Muldoon v. Seattle City R. Co. 22 L. R. A. 794, and note; Rogers v. Kennebec S. B. Co. 25 L. R. A. 491; Texas & P. R. Co. v. Smith, 31 L. R. A. 321; Meuer 67 L. R. A.

v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. 25 L. R. A. 81; Davis v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. 33 L. R. A. 654; Doyle v. Fitchburg R. Co. 33 L. R. A. 844; Whitney v. New York, N. H. & H. R. Co. 50 L. R. A. 615; Peterson v. Seattle Traction Co. 53 L. R. A. 586; and Payne v. Terre Haute & I. R. Co. 56 L. R. A. 472.

vate contract of carriage or bailment under special circumstances.

Citizens' Bank v. Nantucket S. B. Co. 2 Story, 32, Fed. Cas. No. 2,730.

Consequently when a common carrier undertakes to do that which he is under no duty whatever to do,—to carry a person gratuitously for charity,—and makes it one of the terms of such gratuitous carriage that in so doing he is not a common carrier, and that the person so carried shall assume all risks, such a contract is not contrary to public policy, and is valid and binding.

Coup v. Wabash, St. L. & P. R. Co. 50 Mich. 111, 56 Am. Rep. 374, 22 N. W. 215; Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. v. Wallace, 30 L. R. A. 101, 14 C. C. A. 257, 24 U. S. App. 589, 66 Fed. 509; Robertson v. Old Colony R. Co. 156 Mass. 525, 32 Am. St. Rep. 482, 31 N. E. 650; Blank v. Illinois C. R. Co. 182 Ill. 332, 55 N. E. 332; Baltimore & O. S. W. R. Co. v. Voigt, 176 U. S. 498, 44 L. ed. 560, 20 Sup. Ct. Rep. 385; Norfolk & W. R. Co. v. Shott, 92 Va. 34, 22 S. E. 811; Kuney v. Central R. Co. 32 N. J. L. 407, 90 Am. Dec. 675, 34 N. J. L. 513, 3 Am. Rep. 265; Griswold v. New York & N. E. R. Co. 53 Conn. 371, 55 Am. Rep. 115, 4 Atl. 261; Quimby v. Boston & M. R. Co. 150 Mass. 365, 5 L. R. A. 846, 23 N. E. 205; Rogers v. Kennebec S. B. Co. 86 Me. 261, 25 L. R. A. 491, 29 Atl. 1069; Higgins v. New Orleans, M. & C. R. Co. 28 La. Ann. 133; Annas v. Milwaukee & N. R. Co. 67 Wis. 46, 57 Am. Rep. 388, 30 N. W. 282; Ulrich v. New York C. & H. R. R. Co. 108 N. Y. 80, 2 Am. St. Rep. 369, 15 N. E. 60; Hosmer v. Old Colony R. Co. 156 Mass. 506, 31 N. E. 652; Muldoon v. Seattle City R. Co. 7 Wash. 528, 22 L. R. A. 794, 38 Am. St. Rep. 901, 35 Pac. 422; Toledo, W. & W. R. Co. v. Beggs, 85 Ill. 80, 28 Am. Rep. 613; Illinois C. R. Co. v. Read, 37 Ill. 484, 87 Am. Dec. 260.

Messrs. Murchison & Johnson also for appellant.

Messrs. U. L. Spence, W. J. Adams, J. D. McIver, Shepherd & Shepherd, and Douglass & Simms for appellee.

Clark, Ch. J., delivered the opinion of the court:

This is an action of tort arising out of contract for personal injuries alleged to have been received by the plaintiff April 6, 1900, by negligence of the defendant, while traveling on its road. The complaint avers that the plaintiff was a passenger on said railroad under a contract by it to carry the plaintiff for a valuable consideration. The defendant, in its answer, among other things, avers that the plaintiff was a "trespasser on its train, having tendered to defendant no ticket, money, or compensation 67 L. R. A.

whatever for its fare,—only a free pass, which had expired 1st January previously by its own limitation," and which further had on its back a stipulation exempting the company from liability under all circumstances for injury to his person, or loss or damage to his baggage. The plaintiff testified that he was "editor of the Carthage Blade, a newspaper published at Carthage. In 1899 I made a contract with the defendant to publish its time-table in my paper, as the consideration for the pass. I did publish the time-table, and the defendant agreed to continue the contract and renew the pass for 1900." It is true, he said he told the conductor he would pay the fare; but, upon his making the above statement, the conductor accepted him as a free passenger.

Upon this evidence the motion for judgment as of nonsuit should have been granted. There is no lawful contract of passage, and the only right the plaintiff could claim against the defendant is that the defendant should not wilfully and wantonly injure him. Cook v. Southern R. Co. 128 N. C. 333, 38 S. E. 925. The general assembly (Laws 1891, chap. 320, p. 277, § 4) provided that "if any common carrier subject to the provisions of this act shall directly or indirectly by any special rate, rebate, drawback, or other device, charge, demand, collect, or receive from any person or persons a greater or less compensation for any service rendered or to be rendered in the transportation of passengers or property subject to the provisions of this act than it charges, demands, collects, or receives from any other person or persons for doing for him or them a like and contemporaneous service in the transportation of a like kind of traffic under substantial similar circumstances and conditions, such common carrier shall be deemed guilty of unjust discrimination." Section 25 of said chapter (p. 286) contains the exceptions which permit handling free and at reduced rates property of the United States, state, or municipal governments, or for charitable purposes, or to or from fairs, and at exhibits thereat, and permits "the free carriage of destitute and homeless persons transported by charitable societies, and the necessary agents employed in such transportation [or the free transportation of persons traveling in the interest of orphan asylums or any department thereof], or the issuance of mileage, excursion, or commutation passenger tickets. Nothing in this act shall be construed to prohibit any common carrier from giving reduced rates to ministers of religion, or to municipal governments for the transportation of indigent persons, or to inmates of the national homes or state homes for disabled volunteer soldiers and of soldiers' and sailors' orphan homes, including those about to enter and those returning home after discharge, under arrangements with the boards of managers of said homes; nothing in this act shall be construed to prevent railroads from giving free carriage to their own officers and employees, or to prevent the principal officers of any railroad company or companies from exchanging passes or tickets with other railroad companies for their officers and employees." These exceptions are very liberal, but they do not embrace newspaper editors. Subject to the liberal exceptions just recited, the general assembly deemed that free transportation or any other discrimination was so much against public policy that a violation of the statute was made punishable with a fine not less than $1,000 and "not exceeding $5,000" for each offense. Nothing could be more clearly a discrimination than the ground upon which the plaintiff asked for and received free passage on this occasion, to wit, that for the year previous he had advertised the schedule of the defendant company in his paper, and had received therefore a free pass over its line for the previous year, and that this contract had been renewed for the year then current. It does not appear what was the value of the advertising done, charging for the space at the same rates as would be charged others; but, let it be what it may, it could not amount exactly—"neither more nor less"—to the value of a free pass to travel ad libitum an unstipulated number of miles over the defendant's road. Besides, it was an illegal discrimination to sell the plaintiff transportation on credit, and not payable in money.

This statute was before this court, and the clear meaning of the statute, and the duty of the court to enforce the public policy indicated by its unequivocal terms were stated in an exhaustive and able opinion by Mr. Justice Montgomery. State v. Southern R. Co. 122 N. C. 1052, 41 L. R. A. 246, 30 S. E. 133. In the concurring opinion of Mr. Justice Douglas in that case it was stated that the number of free passes issued in this state per year was understood to be over 100,000, and, after deducting the free passes issued in the cases allowed by the act, over $250,000 of transportation was given away each year, mostly to the classes best able to pay, and that this quarter of a million dollars was perforce added to the fares of those who paid their way. This was to show the public policy which required that such discriminations should be forbidden. Sections 4 and 25 of the act of 1891, above quoted, were copied from the act of Congress forbidding such discriminations, and the rulings of the Interstate Commerce 67 L. R. A.

Commission and of the Federal courts thereon have been to the same effect as our own; many of those decisions being cited by Justice Montgomery in State v. Southern R. Co. 122 N. C. 1063-1067, 41 L. R. A. 246, 30 S. E. 133. At page 1060, 122 N. C., page 249, 41 L. R. A., and page 135, 30 S. E., it is well said: "The thing which was denounced by the statute, and for which the defendant is indicted, is not the act of giving the free pass,—the mere handing to the passenger the piece of paper on which was written the privilege of riding free,—but the act of transporting the favored passenger without charge or the payment of fare. The law would be violated if no pass was actually issued, if the passenger was carried free. The favored passenger might be known personally to the conductor, or be known to him by preconceived signs, or mileage books distributed gratis or sold at reduced rates, and in other ways."

The plaintiff knew that the defendant had no right to make a contract with him to transport him free an unlimited number of miles for an advertisement which in any aspect would not be the exact rate charged all other passengers. He knew that the statute denounced such attempted contract as unlawful and punishable with a fine "not less than $1,000 nor more than $5,000." While the plaintiff was not himself made indictable, as in some states, he knew that the contract was unlawful, and he cannot now come into a court of justice and ask that the court shall give him compensation for damages sustained by the negligent breach of the contract of safe carriage. That presupposes a lawful contract, and he knew that this was an unlawful contract. He and the defendant are in pari delicto, and the court will leave the parties to settle their own controversy over damages for breach of a contract forbidden by law. In Cook v. Southern R. Co. 128 N. C. 333, 38 S. E. 925, a tramp was stealing a ride. He was on the train unlawfully. In Pierce v. North Carolina R. Co. 124 N. C. 83, 44 L. R. A. 316, 32 S. E. 399, a boy had jumped on a switching train, and was riding thereon, contrary to the town ordinance. The court held that the company was liable in such cases only for any wilful or wanton injury inflicted by the employees of the company. Here the plaintiff was on the train illegally, and against a prohibition more severe than the violation of a town ordinance against the boy, or the stealing of a ride by a tramp. To same purport, Richmond & D. R. Co. v. Burnsed, 35 Am. St. Rep. 656, and notes (70 Miss. 437, 12 So. 958); Hendryx v. Kansas City, Ft. S. & G. R. Co. 45 Kan. 379, 25 Pac. 893, and cases cited. The plaintiff is an educated, reputable gentleman,—a member of an honored profession; but, being on the cars illegally, seeking free transportation, or at least discrimination in rates, contrary to the prohibition of the statute, his rights as against the company are the same as those others who were also riding contrary to law. He neither shows nor avers wilful, wanton, or malicious injury, and cannot recover. In State v. Southern R. Co. 122 N. C. 1052, 41 L. R. A. 246, 30 S. E. 133, the defendant set up the plea of ignorance of the law, but the court said everyone was fixed with knowledge of the law. The plaintiff has had the additional advantage of the notice given by the construction of the statute in that case. In a subsequent case (State v. Southern R. Co. 125 N. C. 670, 34 S. E. 527) the court repeated that free transportation, or reduced rates, except in cases allowed by the statute, "would be an undue preference, forbidden by the statute, equally whether it was given upon a free pass from an official, or by a verbal order, or upon a ticket or mileage book not in truth paid for, but donated by the company. It is the fact of discrimination, and not the method by which it is done, which constitutes the offense." Subsequent to these decisions, the general assembly re-enacted these sections as §§ 13 and 22, chap. 164, pp. 301, 304, Laws 1899, with no substantial change, though some other sections were repealed. The Constitutions of 11 states—Alabama, Arkansas, California, Florida, Kentucky, Mississippi, Missouri, New York, Pennsylvania, Washington, and Virginia—prohibit the issuing of free passes or giving reduced rates to any member of the legislature or other officeholder whatever; and some of these Constitutions, like the Federal statute and our statute and the statutes of yet other states, as Colorado, Massachusetts, North Dakota, Wisconsin, and others, forbid the issuing of free passes or reduced rates to anyone, whether officeholder or not, with exceptions similar to those enumerated in our statute above set out. Indeed, the Constitutions of four states—New York, Missouri, California, and the recently adopted Constitution of Virginia—make the acceptance by any officeholder whatever of a free pass from a railroad or telegraph company, or other discrimination in his favor, a forfeiture of office. This recital will serve to show the importance and general acceptance of the public policy of equality in treatment by quasi public corporations, whose infringement our statute punishes with a fine "not exceeding $5,000," and whose observance it is the duty of all courts to enforce.

The denunciation of the statute is directed against discrimination in the exercise of a quasi public function, which public policy demands shall be discharged with absolute impartiality and equality,—with equal rights to all, and special privileges to none."

We were cited to many authorities holding ineffectual stipulations upon the back of free passes exempting the common carrier from liability for injuries sustained by the holder thereof. These authorities are conflicting (4 Elliott, Railroads, § 1608), and can be considered only when the pass is issued in one of the cases permitted by our statute. They have no application to a case like this, where the contract of free carriage is illegal, and the parties are in pari delicto.

This is a stronger case for the defendant than Turner v. North Carolina R. Co. 63 N. C. 522, in which a soldier contracted with a railroad company for transportation to Johnston's Army to serve against the United States, and was injured en route by negligence of the company, and it was held that he could not recover damages, Reade, J., saying that, the contract of carriage being illegal, the parties "were in pari delicto," and the court "would consult its dignity, and not interfere in their dispute." To same purport, Martin v. Wallace, 40 Ga. 52; Redd v. Muscogee R. Co. 48 Ga. 102; Muscogee R. Co. v. Redd, 54 Ga. 33.

This is the first case in which the illegal discrimination is set up by the common carrier, but it so happens that by the lapse of time it is now protected from indictment by the statute of limitations.

In refusing to grant judgment as of nonsuit, there was error.

Douglas, J., dissenting:

I am inclined to think that the plea in pari delicto, applying solely to the contract of carriage, is not a defense to an action for personal injuries caused by the negligence of the defendant.

A petition for rehearing having been filed, Douglas, J., on June 1, 1904, handed down the following response:

This is a rehearing of the case originally decided in 132 N. C. 510, 95 Am. St. Rep. 641, 44 S. E. 34. We fully concur in our former opinion as to the illegality of the contract by which the defendant agreed to give to the plaintiff free personal transportation to an unlimited extent in consideration of certain advertising. The only ground on which we allow the petition is that the plea in pari delicto, applying solely to the contract of carriage, is not a defense to an action for personal injuries caused by the negligence of the defendant.

The plaintiff testified as follows: "Marsh-burn called on me for my ticket. I told him I had a pass for 1899, and showed it to him, and told him I would pay the regular fare if he wanted it. He said it was all right. I was the editor of the Carthage Blade, a newspaper published at Carthage. In 1899 I made a contract with the defendant to publish its time-table in my paper as the consideration for the pass. I did publish the time-table, and the defendant agreed to continue the contract and renew the pass for 1900. The contract was not in writing."

The superintendent of the defendant company testified that there was no such contract, but that the pass was a gratuity. This raised a question of credibility, which in the view we take of the case becomes of no practical importance. In any event it would be a question of fact for the jury. The contract for transportation was rendered absolutely void by the statute, founded upon public policy, whether based upon no consideration or upon the inadequate consideration of printing a time-table. The pass, issued in pursuance of an illegal contract and for the purpose of carrying out its unlawful purpose, inherits its invalidity. The defendant was free at all times to decline to carry the plaintiff except upon the payment of the usual fare, and to eject him from its train upon his refusal to pay. The fact that the pass had expired makes no difference, as, in its character as a contract, it never had any legal existence. Being without legal existence, it was equally devoid of legal effect, and, conferring no rights upon the plaintiff, imposed upon him no obligations which the law will enforce. A void contract is thus defined in Lawson on Contracts, § 350: "A void contract is one destitute of legal effect. It is a mere nullity, and good for no purpose whatever. It is binding upon neither party, and may be attacked as invalid by strangers. It does not require any disaffirmance to avoid it, but may be simply disregarded, and it cannot be ratified and made valid."

The pass itself being worthless, the conditions on the back thereof could have no application. They were not independent contracts, and, if they had been, were totally wanting in a legal consideration. Therefore this case does not come within the principle laid down in Northern P. R. Co. v. Adams, 192 U. S. 440, 48 L. ed. 513, 24 Sup. Ct. Rep. 408, where the pass was recognized as a lawful and valid contract for free transportation. By citing and distinguishing that case, decided by a divided court, we do not mean to express our approval of its argument or conclusion. It is not necessary for us to consider it in the case now before us.

We may here repeat that it is not the un-67 L. R. A.

lawful contract for free transportation which renders a railroad company liable to the penalty, but it is the transportation itself. In the view of this statute a free pass is a mere incident, as the same result could be obtained by issuing a thousand-mile ticket or one in ordinary form. The offense consists in the free carriage of a passenger, whether with or without a pass or ticket; and the offense is complete when such passenger is carried any appreciable distance. The railroad company may have issued to him a free pass or ticket from Raleigh to New York with impunity, but would become liable to the full penalties prescribed by the statute as soon as it had transported such passenger to the first station out of Raleigh. In using the term "free transportation," we mean to include all transportation which justly comes within the forbidden principle of discrimination. A mere colorable consideration will neither evade the penalties of the statute upon the one hand, nor confer any rights upon the other.

We must bear in mind that while the statute renders absolutely void any contract for free transportation, so that neither party thereto can acquire any rights thereunder, it imposes the penalty only upon the transportation company. The act of free transportation alone is criminal. The party accepting such transportation is not guilty of a criminal act, whatever moral blame may attach to the reception of unlawful favors. Therefore, in contemplation of law, the parties cannot be considered in pari delicto. This difference is well expressed by Pearson, Ch. J., speaking for the court in Melvin v. Easley, 52 N. C. (7 Jones, L.) 356. That was an action for deceit and false warranty in the sale of a horse on Sunday by a horse trader, in violation of Rev. Stat. chap. 118, § 1. The court says, on page 358, 52 N. C. (7 Jones, L.): "It is said the plaintiff knew the defendant was a horse trader and concurred in his violation of the statute, and, consequently, was particeps criminis. Does this consequence follow? In crimes, there are accessories; in misdemeanors, all who aid or concur are held to be equally guilty, and are subject to like punishment with the party who commits the offense. This plaintiff is not guilty of violating the law, and is not subjected to a penalty, so he cannot be particeps criminis in the legal sense of the terms. He is not in pari delicto, and it is against the policy of the law, and will defeat its object, so to consider him. The court will not aid any person who violates the law; therefore the defendant could not maintain an action. This rule is adopted on the ground of policy, for the purpose of preventing a violation of the law, and, if confined in its operation to the actual offender, its application will be salutary; but if it be extended to the party who is not an offender, so far from checking, it will encourage a violation of it, by letting it be known to 'horse traders,' 'shopkeepers,' and 'all whom it may concern,' that they may cheat with impunity, provided always it may be done on the Lord's Day."

The plaintiff was lawfully upon the defendant's train, and testifies that he offered to pay his fare if required by the conductor. The conductor permitted him to ride free, not as a personal favor to him, but in furtherance of a contract between him and the company itself, acting through its superior officers. There is no suggestion that the plaintiff was seeking to defraud the company in any manner, or that there was any collusion between him and the conductor. He was in every respect a bona fide passenger, and entitled to all the protection incident thereto, unless deprived thereof by the acceptance of free transportation.

The cases relied on to sustain the defense of in pari delicto are chiefly of two classes, those involving a violation of the Sunday laws, and those growing out of the relation of the plaintiff towards the national government during the Civil War. The latter class, evoked from conditions now happily passed away forever, furnishes no criterion for the determination of the case at bar. It is enough to say that in both classes of cases the plaintiffs were actually engaged in the performance of an act expressly denounced as criminal by the law of the land, as construed by the courts in which the actions were necessarily brought. The following are illustrative cases: Turner v. North Carolina R. Co. 63 N. C. 522; Martin v. Wallace, 40 Ga. 52; Wallace v. Cannon, 38 Ga. 199, 95 Am. Dec. 385; Muscogee R. Co. v. Rodd, 54 Ga. 33; Connolly v. Boston, 117 Mass. 64, 19 Am. Rep. 396; Smith v. Boston & M. R. Co. 120 Mass. 491, 21 Am. Rep. 533; Lyons v. Desotelle, 124 Mass. 387; Holcomb v. Danby, 51 Vt. 428. While entertaining the highest respect for the Lord's Day, the Sunday of the new law, we have not deemed it our duty to enforce its observance, so as to make it the shield of wrong. Rodman v. Robinson, 134 N. C. 503, 65 L. R. A. 682, 101 Am. St. Rep. 877, 47 S. E. 19.

In the case at bar the plaintiff is certainly neither a tramp nor a trespasser, as both of those terms imply an unlawful presence against the will of the owner. Hence it is needless to examine the cases dealing with such relations. If the plaintiff's evidence be true, he was not a gratuitous passenger in the full sense of the term, inasmuch as he printed in his paper the schedule of trains in consideration of his otherwise free carriage. This was an inadequate consideration which rendered the contract void as an unlawful discrimination, but it was none the less a consideration of some actual value. But while this might, as between the plaintiff and the defendant, bring the case within the principle of New York C. R. Co. v. Lockwood, 17 Wall. 357, 21 L. ed. 627, we deem it proper to treat the plaintiff as a gratuitous passenger, in view of the unlawful consideration, and will cite the able opinion in that celebrated case only in so far as it relates to this view of the case at bar.

It is often said that one becomes a passenger by virtue of a contract. This is not always so. A contract is a voluntary agreement between two parties, a coming together of two minds to a common intent, and yet a passenger may become such without a contract, and, indeed, against the will of the carrier. A common carrier has no right to refuse a passenger without sufficient reasons, and such reasons so rarely occur, and are so exceptional in their nature, as to vary the general rule too slightly for practical consideration. Suppose the carrier without legal excuse should refuse to sell a ticket to one having the bona fide intention of becoming a passenger, and that the passenger should then enter the carrier's train in an orderly manner, take his seat in the proper car, and tender his fare to the conductor, would the refusal of such fare deprive him of his legal status as a passenger? Assuredly not. He would be a passenger in the fullest meaning of the term, entitled to all the rights, privileges, and protection attaching to that relation, and yet there would be no actual contract between him and the carrier. But it may be said that the law raises an implied contract. Even if we accept that form of expression, it simply means that the law imposes upon a common carrier certain duties and liabilities which adhere to the nature of his calling. We prefer to adopt the more direct expression, and say that those duties and liabilities are imposed by law upon common carriers upon considerations of public policy independent of contract, and arise from the nature of their public employment. Contracts may be made with the carrier, but into all such contracts certain conditions are written by the hand of the law. One such condition is the inherent liability of the carrier for all injuries proximately resulting from its own negligence or that of its servants. But, as we have already said, in the case at bar there was no legally existing contract, which is equivalent to saying there was no contract at all. Viewing the plaintiff as a gratuitous passenger, and it appearing from the verdict that he was injured through the negligence of the defendant, we think that he is entitled to recover.

We have given this case most careful consideration, and have examined a very large number of authorities, but will cite those only which directly bear upon the case in the view we take of it, omitting needless repetitions from the same state. Neither time nor space will permit the discussion of cases having no essential relation to that at bar.

It is significant that the greater weight of authority is to the effect that a passenger may recover for injuries received from the negligence of a common carrier or its servants, even when unlawfully traveling on Sunday, or on a lawful pass with conditions indorsed thereon releasing the carrier from all liability. In both cases the cause of action is attributed to injuries resulting from the breach of a public duty. A fortiori the plaintiff can recover for such negligence when the defendant alone is in the commission of an unlawful act, and when there is no release of liability.

We will begin our citations from the supreme court of Pennsylvania, a court which is not addicted to emotional jurisprudence, and has never shown any disposition to burden railroad management with unnecessary conditions or restrictions. In Pennsylvania R. Co. v. Butler, 57 Pa. 335, the intestate was killed while riding on a free pass on which a release was indorsed. Sharswood, J., speaking for the court, says on page 337: "The first error assigned has been properly abandoned, as it is too well settled to be now controverted that a stipulation by a common carrier that he shall not be liable for damages does not relieve him from responsibility for actual negligence by himself or servants." This case is cited with approval upon the same point in Burnett v. Pennsylvania R. Co. 176 Pa. 45, 34 Atl. 972, the latest case upon the subject.

In Carroll v. Staten Island R. Co. 58 N. Y. 126, 17 Am. Rep. 221, where the plaintiff was traveling on Sunday, contrary to the statute, it was held that "the duty imposed by law upon the carrier of passengers to carry them safely, as far as human skill and foresight can go, exists independently of contract. For a negligent injury to a passenger an action lies against the carrier, although there be no contract, and the service he is rendering is gratuitous; and, whether the action is brought upon contract or for failure to perform the duty, the liability is the same. One violating the statute prohibiting travel upon Sunday (1 Rev. Stat. Edmond's ed. p. 628, pt. 1, chap. 20, title 8, § 70) is not without the protection of the law. The carrier owes to him the same duty as if he were lawfully traveling, and is responsible for a failure to perform it, the 67 L. R. A.

same in the one case as in the other." The court says, on pages 133, 134, Am. Rep. pages 224, 225: "But we deem it unnecessary to decide the question, which was argued with great ability by counsel, touching the liability of the defendant in the action, treating it as founded upon the contract between the parties. The gravamen of the action is the breach of the duty imposed by law upon the carrier of passengers to carry safely, so far as human skill and foresight can go, the persons it undertakes to carry. This duty exists independently of contract, and although there is no contract in a legal sense between the parties. Whether there is a contract to carry, or the service undertaken is gratuitous, an action on the case lies against the carrier for a negligent injury to a passenger. The law raises the duty out of regard for human life, and for the purpose of securing the utmost vigilance by carriers in protecting those who have committed themselves to their hands. . . . The liability of the carrier is the same, whether the action is brought upon contract or upon the duty, and the evidence requisite to sustain the action in either form is substantially the same, and when there is an actual contract to carry, it is properly said that the liability in an action founded upon the public duty is coextensive with the liability on the contract. This case, therefore, is not within the principle of many of the cases cited, which forbid a recovery upon a contract made in respect to a matter prohibited by law, or for a cause of action which requires the proof of an illegal contract to support it."

In Delaware, L. & W. R. Co. v. Trautwein, 52 N. J. L. 169, 7 L. R. A. 435, 19 Am. St. Rep. 442, 19 Atl. 178, it was held that the plaintiff could recover although unlawfully traveling on Sunday, the court saying, on pages 171, 172, 52 N. J. L. page 437, 7 L. R. A., page 444, 19 Am. St. Rep., and page 179, 19 Atl.: "A contract to carry, made on Sunday, or to be performed on Sunday, is, by force of the statute, illegal and void. No action could be maintained for the breach of such a contract, nor for services performed under it, where the right of action rests exclusively upon a contract, express or implied. . . . It is also clear that a plaintiff will fail where, to make a cause of action, he is compelled to rely upon an illegal contract. But the duty of persons engaged in these public employments to safely and securely carry is independent of contract. It is a duty imposed by law from considerations of public policy, and arises from the fact that persons or property are received in the course of the business of such employments. . . . Nor was the plaintiff's violation of the Sunday law, in a legal sense, the cause of her injury. It was only the occasion for an injury by the defendant's wrongful act, and hence her wrongdoing did not contribute to the injury in such a sense as to deprive her of her right of action; it was merely a condition, and not a contributory cause of the injury."

In State, use of Abell v. Western Maryland R. Co. 63 Md. 433, it was held that "when a carrier undertakes, without any special contract, to carry a passenger gratuitously, the passenger is entitled to the same degree of care as if he had paid his fare." The court says, on page 443: "The principle announced in this decision, that the duty of the carrier to convey safely does not result from the consideration paid, but is imposed by law, has been recognized by this court on the motion to reargue the case of Baltimore City Pass. R. Co. v. Kemp, 61 Md. 619, 48 Am. Rep. 134, where the court says that a common carrier who accepts a party to be carried owes to that party a duty to be careful, irrespective of contract; and this court illustrates the principle by the example of a child for whom no fare is charged, but who could recover in case of injury, the result of negligence."

In Lemon v. Chanslor, 68 Mo. 340, 30 Am. Rep. 799, a gratuitous passenger injured by the breaking down of a hack was allowed to recover. The court says, on page 357, Am. Rep. page 800: "This, we think, was sufficient to authorize the instruction. The principle announced in it, that, although plaintiff might have been a gratuitous passenger, such fact constituted no defense, is supported by all the authorities which have come under our observation. While in some of them intimations are made that in the case of a gratuitous passenger the carrier may only be liable for gross negligence, it has not been held in any of them that such fact would exempt the carrier from all liability. On the contrary, the weight of authority favors the doctrine of holding the carrier of passengers to the same degree of diligence in all cases where one has been received as a passenger, on the principle that if 'a man undertakes to do a thing to the best of his skill, when his situation or profession is such as to imply skill, an omission of that skill is imputable to him as gross negligence.'"

In Jacobus v. St. Paul & O. R. Co. 20 Minn. 125, 18 Am. Rep. 360, Gil. 110, it was held that the plaintiff could recover although riding on a pass, as the same degree of care was required of the common carrier as if the plaintiff had been a passenger carried for hire. The court says, on page 129, Am. Rep. page 362: "In the case at 67 L. R. A.

bar, however, the plaintiff was not merely a gratuitous passenger, i. e., a passenger carried without payment of fare or other consideration. He was a passenger upon a free pass expressly conditioned that the defendant should not be liable to him for any injury of his person while he was using or having the benefit of such pass. Does this circumstance distinguish his case from that of a merely gratuitous passenger? . . . There are two distinct considerations upon which the stringent rule as to the duty and liability of carriers of passengers rests. One is a regard for the safety of the passenger on his own account, and the other is a regard for his safety as a citizen of the state. The latter is a consideration of public policy growing out of the interest which the state or government, as parens patriæ, has in protecting the lives and limbs of its subjects. . . . So far as the consideration of public policy is concerned, it cannot be overridden by any stipulation of the parties to the contract of passenger carriage, since it is paramount from its very nature. No stipulation of the parties in disregard of it, or involving its sacrifice in any degree, can, then, be permitted to stand. Whether the case be one of a passenger for hire,—a merely gratuitous passenger,—or of a passenger upon a conditioned free pass, as in this instance, the interest of the state in the safety of the citizen is obviously the same. The more stringent the rule as to the duty and liability of the carrier, and the more rigidly it is enforced, the greater will be the care exercised, and the more approximately perfect the safety of the passenger. Any relaxation of the rule as to duty or liability naturally, and it may be said, inevitably, tends to bring about a corresponding relaxation of care and diligence upon the part of the carrier. We can conceive of no reason why these propositions are not equally applicable to passengers of either of the kinds above mentioned."

In Tibby v. Missouri P. R. Co. 82 Mo. 292, the intestate was killed while riding on a free pass on top of a cattle car. The plaintiff was allowed to recover, the court saying, on page 300: "The contract of exemption from damages was properly excluded. A common carrier is not permitted to stipulate against its own negligence. [Citing cases.] This rule in its application to the carriage of passengers has never been relaxed."

In Opsahl v. Judd, 30 Minn. 126, 14 N. W. 575, the plaintiff, unlawfully traveling on Sunday, was permitted to recover. The court says, on page 128, 30 Minn., page 576, 14 N. W.: "It is further contended that the deceased was, by accepting passage upon the steamboat, engaged in an unlawful act, and was particeps criminis with the defendants and their agents in violating the Sunday law. It is a sufficient answer to this objection that the defendants on that day occupied the relation of common carriers of passengers, and their general obligation to use such care and diligence as the law enjoins is not limited by the contract with the passengers, nor with the person who engaged the use of the boat and the services of the crew for that day, but is governed by considerations of public policy. That the undertaking was unlawful does not touch the question. Carroll v. Staten Island R. Co. 58 N. Y. 126, 134, 17 Am. Rep. 221; Jacobus v. St. Paul & C. R. Co. 20 Minn. 125, 18 Am. Rep. 360, Gil. 116. As remarked by the court in that case, 'any relaxation in the rule as to duty or liability naturally, and, it may be said, inevitably, tends to bring about a corresponding relaxation of care and diligence upon the part of the carrier.' "

In Rose v. Des Moines Valley R. Co. 39 Iowa, 246, it was held, quoting the headnote, that "the payment of fare is not necessary to create the relation of common carrier and passenger. A railroad company was held to be liable for causing the death of a passenger by the negligence of its employees, notwithstanding he was at the time riding upon a free pass, upon which was a stipulation, signed by himself, releasing the company from all liability for injury to his person or property while using the same." In its opinion the court adopts the language used in Philadelphia & R. R. Co. v. Derby, 14 How. 468, 14 L. ed. 502.

In Russell v. Pittsburgh, C. O. & St. L. R. Co. 157 Ind. 305, 55 L. R. A. 253, 87 Am. St. Rep. 214, 61 N. E. 678, the release from liability given by a Pullman porter was held valid on the ground that he was not a passenger, but the court uses the following language on page 309, 157 Ind. page 254, 55 L. R. A. page 217, 87 Am. St. Rep. and page 679, 61 N. E.: "The decisions of this state firmly establish that a common carrier of goods or passengers cannot contract with a customer for a release of the carrier from liability resulting from the latter's negligence [Citing cases.] The grounds upon which this prohibition rests are variously stated by the court. It has been said that such exemptions are against public policy, that the public is interested in the exercise of care and diligence on the part of the carrier, that it is unreasonable for any person or corporation to contract for the privilege of being negligent, and that the public is concerned with the life and security of every citizen. The fundamental reason, however, for holding common carriers, such as the appellee, liable for the results of their negligence, notwithstanding contracts exempting them therefrom, is that the state has granted them privileges which they exercise for the benefit of the public; in return for these, the common carrier impliedly undertakes to use due care and diligence in the transportation of both goods and passengers. This being a main inducement for the grant of its special rights, the carrier cannot by any special contract rid itself of the burden of responsibility, which is one of the conditions of its creation. Were it permitted to escape liability by entering into exonerating agreements, its position of advantage over its patrons would in almost every instance enable it to force from them such stipulations as it desired, and the object of the state in creating the carrier would be virtually defeated, the carrier thus being able to abandon the duty imposed upon it by the state. As said in the case of Louisville, N. A. & C. R. Co. v. Faylor, 126 Ind. 126, 25 N. E. 869, at page 130, 126 Ind., page 869, 25 N. E.: 'A stipulation that the carrier shall not be bound to the exercise of care and diligence is in effect an agreement to absolve him from one of the essential duties of his employment, and it would be subversive of the very object of the law to permit the carrier to exempt himself from liability by a stipulation in his contract with a passenger that the latter should take the risk of the negligence of the carrier or of his servants. The law will not allow the carrier thus to abandon his obligation to the public, and hence all stipulations which amount to a denial or repudiation of duties which are of the very essence of his employment will be regarded as unreasonable, contrary to public policy, and therefore void.' In Cleveland P. & A. R. Co. v. Curran, 19 Ohio St. 1, 2 Am. Rep. 362, at page 12, 19 Ohio St., page 365, 2 Am. Rep. the court says: 'Carriers, of the class of the plaintiff in error, are creatures of legislation, and derive all their powers and privileges by grant from the public. They are created to effect public purposes, as well as to subserve their own interest. They are intended, by the law of their creation, to afford increased facilities to the public for the carriage of persons and property, and, in performing this office, they assume the character of public agents, and impliedly undertake to employ in their business the necessary degree of skill and care. This obligation arises from the public nature of the employment, and is founded on the policy of the law for the protection of the persons and property of the public, which must of necessity be committed to a very great extent to the care of public carriers. It cannot be denied that pecuniary liability for negligence promotes care, and, if public carriers, in conducting their business, can graduate their charges so as to discharge themselves from such liability, the direct effect will be to encourage negligence by diminishing the motives for diligence." In Davis v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. 93 Wis. 470, 33 L. R. A. 654, 57 Am. St. Rep. 935, 67 N. W. 16, it was held: "A stipulation in a contract for the carriage of a passenger, exempting the carrier from liability for injuries caused by its negligence or the negligence of its agents or employees, is void as against public policy;" the court saying, on page 479, 93 Wis., page 657, 33 L. R. A., page 938, 57 Am. St. Rep., and page 18, 67 N. W.: "It is very well established in this state that a contract for such an exemption from liability of a common carrier is void as against public policy. The defendant could not by any agreement, however plain and explicit, wholly relieve itself from liability for injuries caused by its negligence or the negligence of its agents or employees."

In Gulf, C. & S. F. R. Co. v. McGown, 65 Tex. 640, it was held, quoting the headnotes, that "a common carrier of passengers cannot by contract relieve itself from responsibility, or even limit its liability, for injuries to a passenger resulting from the negligence of itself or its employees or agents in the scope of their employment; and this is so with reference as well to passengers traveling free of charge as to those paying full fare. The liability of the carrier of passengers does not depend on the fact that compensation for the passenger has been paid to it; but the same degree of care is incumbent on the carrier in the case of a passenger traveling on a free pass as in the case of one paying full fare." The court says, on page 646: "The relation of passenger and carrier is created by contract, express or implied; but it does not follow from this that the extent of liability or responsibility of the carrier is in any respect dependent on a contract. In reference to matters indifferent to the public, parties may contract as they please, but not so in reference to matters in which the public has an interest. For the purpose of regulating such matters, rules have been established, by statute or the common law, whereby certain duties have been attached to given relations and employments. These duties attach as matter of law, and without regard to the will or wish of the party engaged in the employment, or of the person who transacts business with him, in the course thereof; and this is so for the public good. Duties thus imposed are not the subject of contract. They exist without it, and cannot be dispensed with by it. The violation of such a duty is a tort. The law declares that it is the duty of a public carrier of passengers to use the highest degree of care to insure their safety. Why was not this left to be settled by the contract of the carrier and passenger? Certainly for no other reason than that the employment itself was of such a nature as to make it a matter of public concern. None could be of greater public concern at the present day than these employments by which men, women, and children are transported by millions, by agencies of a most dangerous character, and with a speed heretofore unknown."

In Illinois C. R. Co. v. Crudup, 63 Miss. 291, it was held that a mail agent traveling on a "free ticket" could recover. the court saying, on page 302: "The court properly excluded the evidence proposed by the defendant to show that the deceased had accepted a 'free ticket,' by which he relieved the company from liability for the negligence of its servants. By their contract with the government the company received compensation for transporting both the mail and its custodians, and there would have been no consideration for the obligation entered into by the deceased to waive damages; and in addition to this it may be added that such a contract is against public policy. The duty which common carriers owe to all persons carried by it, viz., not to be guilty of negligent injury, is one against the breach of which they may not protect themselves by private contract."

In Mobile & O. R. Co. v. Hopkins, 41 Ala. 486, 94 Am. Dec. 607, the court says: "We do hold, however, that it makes no difference whether the service is performed gratuitously or not, in regard to the obligation to perform it well, after it is once entered upon; for ever since the decision of the leading case of Coggs v. Bernard, 2 Smith, Lead. Cas. 82, it has been regarded as sound law that 'the confidence induced by undertaking any service for another is a sufficient legal consideration to create a duty in the performance of it.' And we hold, further, that, in undertaking the performance of gratuitous transportation, the common carrier can no more stipulate for exemption from liability for damage occasioned by the negligence, or wilful default, or tort of himself or his servants, than he can when he receives a reward for the service to be performed; both are alike prohibited by a sound public policy, which also forbids a gratuitous bailee, not bound by the considerations of public duty attached to the office of a common carrier, from stipulating that he may be fraudulently negligent or safely dishonest. Railroad companies are incorporated in part, at least, from public considerations, and for the public good. As carriers of persons and property, it has been held they may be considered as acting in a public capacity, and as a kind of public officers. The exercise of honesty, care, and diligence by them or their agents and employees is a public duty resulting from their position, the obligation to perform which cannot be thrown off by contract. If thus thrown off, the effect would be to relax or modify the performance of the duty, and to promote a relaxation of proper care in the selection of agents and servants for its performance."

In Waterbury v. New York C. & H. R. R. Co. 21 Blatchf. 314, 17 Fed. 671, it was held that "the right which a passenger by railway has to be carried safely does not depend on his having made a contract, but the fact of his being there creates a duty on the part of the company to carry him safely. It suffices to enable him to maintain an action for negligence if he was being carried by the railroad company voluntarily, although gratuitously, and as a mere matter of favor to him." Wallace, Ch. J., says, on page 315, Fed. page 672: "A careful examination of the evidence shows quite satisfactorily that the case did not justify the assumption, in any aspect of it, that the plaintiff was entitled to be carried as a passenger, as an implied condition of the contract to carry his cattle. The most that can be fairly claimed for the plaintiff upon the evidence is that he was riding upon the engine permissively. If he was riding there with the consent of the defendant, express or implied, it is not material, so far as it affects the defendant's liability for negligence, whether he was there as a matter of right or a matter of favor, as a passenger or a mere licensee. It suffices to enable him to maintain an action for negligence if he was being carried by the defendant voluntarily. If the defendant undertook to carry him, although gratuitously, and as a mere matter of favor to himself, it was obligated to exercise due care for his safety in performing the undertaking it had voluntarily assumed. Philadelphia, & R. R. Co. v. Derby, 14 How. 468, 14 L. ed. 502; The New World v. King, 16 How. 469, 14 L. ed. 1019. The carrier does not, by consenting to carry a person gratuitously, relieve himself of responsibility for negligence. When the assent to his riding free has been legally and properly given, the person carried is entitled to the same degree of care as if he paid his fare. Todd v. Old Colony & F. River R. Co. 3 Allen, 18, 80 Am. Dec. 49. As is tersely stated by Blackburn, J., in Austin v. Great Western R. Co. L. R. 2 Q. B. 442: 'The right which a passenger by railway has to be carried safely does not depend on his having made a contract, but the fact of his 67 L. R. A.

being there creates a duty on the part of the company to carry him safely.'"

In Philadelphia & R. R. Co. v. Derby, 14 How. 468, 14 L. ed. 502, it was held that a gratuitous passenger could recover, the court saying, on page 484, 14 How., page 508, 14 L. ed.: "The liability of the defendants below for the negligent and injurious act of their servant is not necessarily founded on any contract or privity between the parties, nor affected by any relation, social or otherwise, which they bore to each other. It is true, a traveler by stage-coach or other public conveyance, who is injured by the negligence of the driver, has an action against the owner, founded on his contract to carry him safely. But the maxim of Respondeat superior, which, by legal imputation, makes the master liable for the acts of his servant, is wholly irrespective of any contract, express or implied, or any other relation between the injured party and the master. If one be lawfully on the street or highway, and another's servant carelessly drives a stage or carriage against him and injures his property or person, it is no answer, to an action against the master for such injury, either that the plaintiff was riding for pleasure, or that he was a stockholder in the road, or that he had not paid his toll, or that he was the guest of the defendant, or riding in a carriage borrowed from him, or that the defendant was the friend, benefactor, or brother of the plaintiff. These arguments, arising from the social or domestic relations of life, may in some cases successfully appeal to the feelings of the plaintiff, but will usually have little effect where the defendant is a corporation, which is itself incapable of such relations or the reciprocation of such feelings. In this view of the case, if the plaintiff was lawfully on the road at the time of the collision, the court was right in instructing the jury that none of the antecedent circumstances or accidents of his situation could affect his right to recover. . . . This duty does not result alone from the consideration paid for the service. It is imposed by the law, even where the service is gratuitous. 'The confidence induced by undertaking any service for another is a sufficient legal consideration to create a duty in the performance of it.' See Coggs v. Bernard, and cases cited in 1 Smith, Lead Cas. 95. It is true, a distinction has been taken in some cases between simple negligence, and great or gross negligence, and it is said that one who acts gratuitously is liable only for the latter. But this case does not call upon us to define the difference (if it be capable of definition), as the verdict has found this to be a case of gross negligence. When carriers undertake to convey persons by the powerful but dangerous agency of steam, public policy and safety require that they be held to the greatest possible care and diligence. And whether the consideration for such transportation be pecuniary or otherwise, the personal safety of the passengers should not be left to the sport of chance or the negligence of careless agents. Any negligence in such cases may well deserve the epithet of 'gross.'" The citations of this celebrated case will be found in 5 Rose's Notes (U. S.) 275-284.

In The New World v. King, 16 How. 469, 14 L. ed. 1019, Curtis, J., speaking for the court, says, on page 474, 16 How., page 1021, 14 L. ed.: "In the Philadelphia & R. R. Co. v. Derby, 14 How. 468, 14 L. ed. 502, which was a case of gratuitous carriage of a passenger on a railroad, this court said: 'When carriers undertake to convey persons by the powerful but dangerous agency of steam, public policy and safety require that they should be held to the greatest possible care and diligence. And, whether the consideration for such transportation be pecuniary or otherwise, the personal safety of passengers should not be left to the sport of chance or the negligence of careless agents. Any negligence in such cases may well deserve the epithet of gross.' We desire to be understood to reaffirm that doctrine, as resting, not only on public policy, but on sound principles of law."

In the celebrated case of New York C. R. Co. v. Lockwood, 17 Wall. 357, 21 L. ed. 627, than which there are few opinions more able or more widely cited and approved, it was held, quoting the language of the court at the conclusion of its opinion on page 384, 17 Wall. page 641, 21 L. ed.: "First. That a common carrier cannot lawfully stipulate for exemption from responsibility when such exemption is not just and reasonable in the eye of the law. Secondly. That it is not just and reasonable in the eye of the law for a common carrier to stipulate for exemption from responsibility for the negligence of himself or his servants. Thirdly. That these rules apply both to carriers of goods and carriers of passengers for hire, and with special force to the latter. Fourthly. That a drover traveling on a pass, such as was given in this case, for the purpose of taking care of his stock on the train, is a passenger for hire. These conclusions decide the present case, and require a judgment of affirmance. We purposely abstain from expressing any opinion as to what would have been the result of our judgment had we considered the plaintiff a free passenger instead of a passenger for hire." The plaintiff was traveling on what was called a "drover's pass," which expressly stipulated that the acceptance of the pass was to be considered a waiver of all claims for damages or injuries received on the train. The court held that, while the pass was professedly gratuitous on its face, it was in fact given as part of the original contract for shipping the cattle. The case is treated as a carriage for hire, but the reasoning of the opinion clearly applies to all classes of passengers. Justice Bradley, speaking for the court, says, on page 376, 17 Wall., page 639, 21 L. ed.: "It is argued that a common carrier, by entering into a special contract with a party for carrying his goods or person on modified terms, drops his character and becomes an ordinary bailee for hire, and therefore may make any contract he pleases. That is, he may make any contract whatever, because he is an ordinary bailee; and he is an ordinary bailee because he has made the contract. We are unable to see the soundness of this reasoning. It seems to us more accurate to say that common carriers are such by virtue of their occupation, not by virtue of the responsibilities under which they rest." Again the court says, on page 377, 17 Wall., page 639, 21 L. ed.: "In regulating the public establishment of common carriers, the great object of the law was to secure the utmost care and diligence in the performance of their important duties,—an object essential to the welfare of every civilized community. Hence the common-law rule which charged the common carrier as an insurer. Why charge him as such? Plainly for the purpose of raising the most stringent motive for the exercise of carefulness and fidelity in his trust. In regard to passengers, the highest degree of carefulness and diligence is expressly exacted. In the one case the securing of the most exact diligence and fidelity underlies the law, and is the reason for it; in the other it is directly and absolutely prescribed by the law. It is obvious, therefore, that if a carrier stipulate not to be bound to the exercise of care and diligence, but to be at liberty to indulge in the contrary, he seeks to put off the essential duties of his employment. And to assert that he may do so seems almost a contradiction in terms." And again, on page 381, 17 Wall., page 641, 21 L. ed.: "Hence, the exemptions referred to were deemed reasonable and proper to be allowed. But the proposition to allow a public carrier to abandon altogether his obligations to the public, and to stipulate for exemptions that are unreasonable and improper, amounting to an abdication of the essential duties of his employment, would never have been entertained by the sages of the law." The extent to which this case has been cited and approved will be shown by reference to 8 Rose's Notes (U. S.) 48.

In Grand Trunk R. Co. v. Stevens, 95 U. S. 655, 24 L. ed. 535, the court says, on page 660, 95 U. S., page 536, 24 L. ed.: "Since, therefore, from our view of the case, it is not necessary to determine what would have been the rights of the parties if the plaintiff had been a free or gratuitous passenger, we rest our decision upon New York C. R. Co. v. Lockwood, 17 Wall. 357, 21 L. ed. 627. We have no doubt of the correctness of the conclusion reached in that case. We do not mean to imply, however, that we should have come to a different conclusion had the plaintiff been a free passenger instead of a passenger for hire. We are aware that respectable tribunals have asserted the right to stipulate for exemption in such a case, and it is often asked, with apparent confidence, 'May not men make their own contracts, or, in other words, may not a man do what he will with his own?' The question, at first sight, seems a simple one. But there is a question lying behind that: 'Can a man call that absolutely his own, which he holds as a great public trust, by the public grant, and for the public use as well as his own profit?' The business of the common carrier, in this country at least, is emphatically a branch of the public service; and the conditions on which that public service shall be performed by private enterprise are not yet entirely settled."

In Florida C. & P. R. Co. v. Sullivan, 61 L. R. A. 410, 57 C. C. A. 167, 120 Fed. 799, it was held that "riding in the coach set apart for colored passengers, contrary to the rules of the carrier and provisions of the statute, is not negligence on the part of a white person which will prevent a recovery for his death through the negligence of the carrier, although he would not have been injured had he not been in that coach."

In the earlier English reports the doctrine was uniformly held that an action to recover damages for negligent injury by a common carrier arose from a breach of duty imposed by the common law, and needed no contract to support it. In course of time, by some unexplained change of judicial sentiment, the courts began to recognize stipulations for release of liability, until, finally, common carriers were practically allowed to absolve themselves, by stipulation, from liability for all negligence, however gross. This led to the passage of the act of 1854, called the "railway and canal traffic act," declaring that railway and canal companies should be liable for the negligence of themselves or their servants, notwithstanding any notice or condition, unless the judge or court trying the cause should adjudge the condition just and reasonable. The practical effect of this statute was to bring the law back to its original status. However, all the cases seem to hold that there is no implied release in the absence of written stipulations or fraudulent concealment of material facts. This is shown by the following cases, which are typical of others: In Bretherton v. Wood, 3 Brod. & B. 54 the court says, on page 57: "This action is on the case against a common carrier, upon whom a duty is imposed by the custom of the realm, or, in other words, by the common law, to carry and convey their goods or passengers safely and securely, so that, by their negligence or default, no injury or damage happen. A breach of this duty is a breach of the law, and for this breach an action lies, founded on the common law, which action wants not the aid of a contract to support it."

In Marshall v. York, N. & B. R. Co. 11 C. B. 655, Jervis, Ch. J., says, on page 662: "But upon what principle does the action lie at the suit of the servant for his personal suffering? Not by reason of any contract between him and the company, but by reason of a duty implied by law to carry him safely." In the same case Williams, J., says, on page 663: "I am of the same opinion. . . . It seems to me that the whole current of authorities, beginning with Govett v. Radnidge, 3 East, 62, and ending with Possi v. Shipton, 8 Ad. & El. 963, establishes that an action of this sort is, in substance, not an action of contract, but an action of tort against the company as carriers. That being so, the question is whether it was necessary to allege any contract at all in the declaration. The earliest instance I find of an action of this sort is in Fitzherbert's Natura Brevium, Writ de Trespass sur le Case, where it is said (94D): 'If a smith prick my horse with a nail, etc., I shall have my action upon the case against him, without any warranty by the smith to do it well, for it is the duty of every artificer to exercise his art rightly and truly as he ought.' There is no allusion there to any contract. That being so, it seems to me to follow that the allegation of a contract in a case of this kind is altogether unnecessary."

In Austin v. Great Western R. Co. (1867) L. R. 2 Q. B. 442, it was held that a child over the free age prescribed by statute, and having no ticket, and no fare having been asked or paid, could recover for injuries received. Blackburn, J., concurring, says, on page 444: "I am also of opinion there should be no rule. I think that what was said in the case of Marshall v. York, N. & B. R. Co. was quite correct. It was there laid down that the right which a passenger by railway has to be carried safely does not depend on his having made a contract, but that the fact of his being a passenger casts a duty on the company to carry him safely."

A large number of authorities could be cited in addition to those above, but it is needless to do so. We have already quoted at greater length than we should, but for the fact that we wished to show, not simply the decision of the cases, but especially the essential principles by which those results were reached. We will now close by citations from the leading text-books.

In 5 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, 2d ed. p. 507, it is said: "The carrier is liable to persons whom it accepts for transportation over its line, and from whom it demands no fare, to the same extent that it is liable to passengers who pay fare. . . . A person riding on a free pass is as much a passenger as if he were paying full fare, and if the pass is given for a valuable consideration he is a passenger for hire. . . . The fact that the carrier is prohibited by law from issuing free passes does not render a person a trespasser who travels upon such a pass unlawfully issued to him. If the pass is unlawful, the conductor should demand the regular fare, and his failure to do so will not make the passenger a trespasser, nor destroy his right as a passenger."

In 6 Cyc. Law & Proc. 544, it is said that, "while it is no doubt true, as indicated in the definition, that public carriers of passengers are those who carry passengers for hire, there is not in the case of carriers of passengers a distinction as to liability between passengers carried for compensation and those carried gratuitously, analogous to that recognized as to carriers of goods between cases where goods are carried for compensation and those where they are carried free. One who is accepted for transportation as a passenger, without any compensation to be rendered, is nevertheless entitled to all the care and protection which the carrier is under obligation to furnish to paying passengers."

In Lawson on Contracts it is said, in § 335: "A carrier of a passenger who has paid a consideration for his passage cannot exempt himself from liability for damages caused by his own negligence, or that of his servants, by any contract which he may have induced his customer to approve. Such a contract is void as against the policy of the law, even though the passenger is a gratuitous one, riding free and paying no fare."

In 2 Beach, Modern Law of Contracts, it is said, in § 1502: "The weight of authority in this country favors the rule that a common carrier cannot lawfully stipulate for exemption from responsibility when such exemption is not just and reasonable in the eye of the law, and that it is not just and reasonable in the eye of the law for a common carrier to stipulate for exemption from responsibility for the negligence of himself or his servants."

In Fetter on Carriers of Passengers, § 220, it is said: "It is now well settled that a carrier, by its acceptance of a passenger as a passenger, comes under an obligation to take due and reasonable care for his safety, which obligation arises by implication of law, and independent of contract, so that it may exist though the contract of carriage is illegal, or though there is no express contract of carriage. Hence the fact that a contract of carriage is entered into on Sunday, and that plaintiff, when injured, was traveling on Sunday, in violation of a statute, does not preclude him from maintaining an action against the carrier for the injuries. In the language of the New York court of appeals: 'It is certainly a startling proposition that the thousands and tens of thousands of persons who travel on business or for pleasure on Sunday, upon railroads and steam and ferry boats in this state, are at the mercy of incompetent or careless engineers and servants, and that there is no remedy for loss of life or limb resulting from this negligence.'"

In Bishop on Noncontract Law, § 1074, it is said: "Such, therefore, is both the policy of the law and the law itself, in the highest sense fundamental and unyielding. The result of which is that, in just legal reason, it will under no circumstances be competent for a railroad or other common carrier, whether of goods or passengers, to cast off this responsibility by any resort to a by-law, to a usage, or even to an express contract with the party. Particularly in the carriage of passengers, if the road could by contract exempt itself from responsibility for its own negligence, its next step would be to refuse all passengers who would not enter into the contract; thereupon the railroad corporations, freed from the only motive to carefulness which they could appreciate, the danger of being mulcted in damages, would conduct their business with a recklessness rendering travel a horror to every person not permitted to remain at home." See also § 1076.

In Cooley on Torts, on page 826, *685, it is said: "Carriers of passengers, it is also held, cannot relieve themselves from the obligation to observe ordinary care by any contract whatsoever, even in the case of 'drovers' passes', which are given without charge to those who accompany consignments of cattle, or in cases where free passage is given as mere matter of courtesy or favor." The learned author then proceeds to say that, while there are certain exceptions permitted in two states, "the weight of authority is most distinctly the other way, both in this country and in England;" that is, in favor of the rule as above stated.

In Hutchinson on Carriers it is said, in § 566: "It is enough that the person is being lawfully carried as a passenger, to entitle him to all the care which the law requires of the passenger carrier; and the same vigilance and circumspection must be exercised to guard him against injury when he is carried gratuitously, as upon what is known as a free pass, or by the carrier's invitation, as when he pays the usual fare." See also §§ 565 and 567.

In Wharton's Law of Negligence it is said, in § 355: "Is a free passenger to be placed in a different position, so far as concerns his rights to protection from neglect, from a pay passenger? This question, also, was at one time answered in the affirmative, the courts being led astray by the mistaken view of mandates which will be hereafter pointed out. But there is now an almost uniform acquiescence in the true view that a person who undertakes to do a service for another is liable to such other person for want of due care and attention—the diligentia of the bonus et diligens paterfamilias—in the performance of the service, even though there is no consideration for such undertaking. Or, as the question is elsewhere put, the confidence accepted is an adequate consideration to support the duty. Eminently is this the case with what are called 'free' passengers on the great lines of common carriage. As has been already observed, there is, in such cases, not merely confidence tendered and accepted, but some sort of business consideration, though this be a mere courteous interchange of accommodations. For these and other reasons noticed under the last head, the carrier is bound to exhibit the same diligence and skill towards passengers of this class as he is to passengers who pay money for their tickets." Again, the same author says, in § 354: "But if a trespasser take his seat openly in a carriage, in the place assigned to passengers generally, there is no reason why a different standard of care should be applicable to him than is applicable to other passengers. Waiving for the present the point elsewhere discussed, that even a trespasser, supposing him to continue such, is not withdrawn from the protection of that law which requires that no man shall negligently injure another, the carrier, if he permits such trespasser to continue in the carriage, cannot regard him, after such permission, as a trespasser. The carrier has a right to expel the trespasser at once from the carriage. If the carrier omits to do this, and if the person in question remains voluntarily with the carrier's assent, then the trespass passes into a quantum meruit contract of carriage. On the one side, the person so entering the carriage is bound to the carrier for reasonable pay for the carriage. On the other side, the carrier is bound, from the time he assents thus to carry such person, to exercise towards him the diligence, prudence, and skill of a good carrier in that particular kind of transport; in other words, the particular kind of diligence, prudence, and skill which the carrier is bound to exercise towards all other passengers."

In Watson on Damages for Personal Injuries it is said, in § 230, p. 279: "At the outset it may be stated, as a general rule, that the mere fact that the plaintiff, at the time of the injuries received, is engaged in the commission of an unlawful act, is not sufficient to relieve the author of the wrong of liability in damages therefor. 'The question how far a person can defend an otherwise indefensible act,' it has been said, 'by showing a criminal or unlawful act on the part of the party injured, has of late years been fully discussed in the courts of this country and England. The result, generally reached, is that no man can set up a public or private wrong committed by another as an excuse for a wilful, or unnecessary, or even negligent injury to him or his property. This principle is defended on the grounds of morality and law, and it reaches and determines a great variety of cases.'" The same author further says, in § 238: "The liability of the owners of a steamboat for injuries to a passenger is not affected by the fact that the person injured was, at the time the injuries were received, engaged in an excursion with other passengers upon defendants' steamboat in violation of the Sunday law. One traveling on Sunday in violation of a statute prohibiting is not, by reason thereof, without the protection of the law. The carrier owes him the same duty as if he were lawfully traveling, and is liable in damages for personal injuries resulting from a failure to perform it." In § 231 the author adopts the language of an able and elaborate opinion by Dixon, Ch. J., in Sutton v. Wauwatosa, 29 Wis. 27, 9 Am. Rep. 534, as follows: "Himself guilty of a wrong, not dependent on nor caused by that charged against the plaintiff, but arising from his own voluntary act or his neglect, the defendant cannot assume the championship of public rights, nor to prosecute the plaintiff as an offender against the laws of the state, and thus to impose upon him a penalty many times greater than what those laws prescribed. Neither justice nor sound morals require this, and it seems contrary to the dictates of both that such a defense should be allowed to prevail. It would extend the maxim, Ex turpi causa non oritur actio, beyond the scope of its legitimate application, and violate the maxim equally binding and wholesome, and more extensive in its operation, that no man shall be permitted to take advantage of his own wrong. To take advantage of his own wrong, and to visit unmerited and over rigorous punishment upon the plaintiff, constitute the sole motive for such defense on the part of the person making it."

In 3 Thompson's Law of Negligence, § 3326, it is said: "It is thoroughly settled in the American law that a common carrier of passengers cannot, by a contract with one who is a passenger for hire, relieve himself from liability for damages caused by the negligence of himself or his servants." The same author says, in § 3328: "The principle is well settled that a carrier owes the same duty of protection to a simply gratuitous passenger as to a passenger for hire."

In Buswell on Law of Personal Injuries the author, in laying down the rule that a breach of public duty is the foundation of the action for personal injuries, says, in § 3: "The custom of the realm of England, long made a part of the common law, imposes upon common carriers of passengers certain public duties in respect of such passengers, for a breach of which a passenger injured may have his remedy by an action of tort." Again, the author says, in § 116: "In the United States the weight of authority is in favor of the rule that, as to passengers for hire, the stipulation by a common carrier that he will not be liable for damages in case of injury to the passenger will not relieve him from responsibility for the results of the negligence of himself and his servants." Again, the same author says, in § 117: "If a common carrier accepts a person as passenger, there being no contract to relieve the carrier from the legal consequences of his negligence in the case of accident, it is held generally, in the United States, that the carrier remains liable for such negligence, although the plaintiff was to be transported gratuitously. For, having admitted the plaintiff to the rights of a passenger, the defendant is not permitted to deny that he owes to him the duty which, as carrying on a public employment, he owes to all his passengers."

In 2 Parsons on Contracts the author, after referring to various authorities, says, on page 222 [9th ed.]: "Whether a common carrier is liable to a passenger to whom he has given passage, and from whom he has therefore no right to demand fare, is not so certain; but he would certainly be liable for gross negligence, and probably liable for any negligence. He is certainly not excused by mere nonpayment, unless payment has been demanded and refused." In note "x" it is said: "It is now quite generally held that for negligence there is the same liability to persons riding on free passes as to those who pay full fare."

In 2 Wood on Railroads [Minor's ed.] it is said, on page 1207: "In all cases where the company is required by law to carry a person free, or where he is riding free by the consent of the company fairly obtained, he is a passenger, and entitled to all rights and privileges as such. In the case of a free pass the carrier is under the same obligations as to care and vigilance as he is to a passenger for hire, and as to passengers to whom passes are given which are predicated upon any consideration he cannot absolve himself from liability for injuries resulting from gross negligence by any notice to that effect printed upon the pass, as such conditions are against the policy of the law. It has been held, however, that, when tickets or passes are purely gratuitous, the person receiving may by special agreement assume all risks of the journey incident to the mere negligence of the company."

In Whitaker's Smith on Negligence, while the text does not seem to treat the subject, there are full notes on page 309 showing that the rule is that a common carrier "must exercise the same care and attention in the transportation of gratuitous passengers as of those who have paid their fares, and is liable to the same extent for negligence."

These authorities tend to show that this rule is generally held even in the face of express stipulations of exemption, and universally so in the absence of such stipulations.

In 4 Elliott on Railroads it is said, in § 1497: "The rule, supported by the weight of authority, is that a common carrier cannot by any kind of a contract exempt itself from liability as such for loss or injury occasioned by its own negligence or that of its servants. This rule 'rests upon considerations of public policy and upon the fact that to allow the carrier to absolve himself from the duty of exercising care and fidelity is inconsistent with the very nature of his undertaking.' The employment of a common carrier is a public one, and the fundamental principle upon which the law of common carriers was established was to secure the utmost care and diligence in the performance of their duties. For this reason they are held to the extraordinary liability of insurers. To permit them to contract against liability for their own negligence or that of their servants would be contrary to the whole spirit and policy of the law governing common carriers, and would, in effect, authorize them to abandon the most essential duties of their employment. When we also consider that the parties do not stand upon an equal footing, and that railroad companies are given many special privileges as corporations for the very reason that they have such duties to perform for the public, there can be no doubt of the justice of this rule, especially as applied to such corporations." The same author says, in § 1578: "We think it is safe to say that the general rule is that every one on the passenger trains of a railroad company, and there for the purpose of carriage, with the consent, express or implied, of the company, is presumptively a passenger. . . . Persons who pay a consideration for passage, no matter in what form, are generally regarded as passengers." And again, in § 1604, he says: "The general rule is that a person riding on a railway train on a free pass, the possession of which was lawfully and rightfully obtained, is a passenger. The possession of the pass must be lawful, for, if it was obtained by fraud or the wrong of the person attempting to use it, he is not a passenger, and the carrier owes him no duty as such." And again, in § 1606, he says: "But where the person riding on a pass is regarded as a passenger, the carrier usually owes to him the same degree of care that it owes to a passenger paying full fare." Again he says, in § 1608: "Passes usually contain a stipulation which in terms exempts the carrier from liability for negligence. As to the validity of such stipulations the authorities are not agreed, some holding that they are valid and binding upon the persons using the pass, others that they are not. In the majority of the states the courts hold that such a stipulation is void and not binding upon the person using the pass, and that the carrier is liable for injuries negligently inflicted upon a person using a pass containing such a stipulation." Again he says, in § 1609: "The relation which the person using the pass bears to the railroad company is also an important element in determining the liability. If he is regarded as a passenger, then the company is bound to use 'the highest practical degree of care,' and for a failure to use such care it will be liable for all injuries approximately caused thereby. But where the person using the pass is an employee, then the carrier will only be liable for such injuries as result from negligence in failing to perform the duties owing to such employees.

. . . The general rule is that, where the holder of the pass is to be regarded as a passenger, any act of negligence may give a right of action."

We cannot better close these citations than by the following clear and terse statement of the principles from 2 Shearman & Redfield on Negligence, which is fully sustained by the authorities we have examined. The eminent authors say, in § 491: "It is well settled that, in the absence of a special contract, a passenger traveling gratuitously has a perfect right of action for injuries suffered by him through the carrier's negligence. The fact that a traveler who ought to pay has not paid, and does not intend to pay, his fare does not, in the absence of actual fraud, deprive him of redress for injuries. There is no practical difference between the degree of care which a free passenger has the right to claim, and that to which a paying passenger is entitled."

To our minds these authorities, taken in connection with the cases cited in them, are conclusive of the question before us. The greater weight of authority is decidedly in favor of the doctrine that a common carrier cannot in any event stipulate against its own negligence, including that of its servants, while it is overwhelming to the effect that, in the absence of such stipulations, it owes to a gratuitous passenger the same degree of care that it does to those that pay. In the case at bar the plaintiff appears to have been a bona fide passenger, and was so recognized by the conductor in charge of the train. Both are conclusively presumed to have known that the contract for a pass was illegal and void, but there is no evidence that either acted in fraud or bad faith. There is evidence that the plaintiff gave some consideration, although legally inadequate; but in any event the worst position in which he can be placed is that of simply a gratuitous passenger. There were no existing stipulations of exemption between him and the defendant. None had ever existed, except the conditions on the back of the pass. These conditions can have no effect, because, in the first place, the pass had expired, and, secondly, had no legal existence before its expiration. A condition, like the leaf on a tree, must be attached to something from which it can draw its life and strength. By practically all the authorities, in the absence of such express conditions, the plaintiff is held entitled to recover. What would have been the legal effect of such conditions if they existed is not strictly before us. We have shown that the decided weight of authority is against their validity, but we did so to show that, if the liability of a common carrier to a gratuitous passenger could not be waived by an express stipulation, it certainly existed in the absence of any such stipulation. Even those courts that hold it may be waived, necessarily admit its existence in the absence of waiver. If it exists in the absence of contract, and cannot be waived by contract, it must necessarily owe its existence to the policy of the law.

It is contended in behalf of the defendant that there was error in the court below refusing to charge "that there is no evidence to support the plaintiff's allegation [in the complaint] that he was traveling on the defendant's road, on the occasion complained of, as a passenger for hire or compensation." We see no error in its refusal, as, in our view of the case, it was immaterial.

The defendant also contends that its exception to the following charge of the court should be sustained, to wit: "If, when the plaintiff was called on for his fare, he produced to the conductor the pass which had been exhibited in evidence, and the conductor accepted it, the plaintiff was a passenger on the train." We think that whatever error may be found in this instruction is harmless. The pass was in legal effect a blank piece of paper. It had expired by its own limitation, if that can be said to have expired which has never legally existed. Its only effect could have been to convince the conductor of the truthfulness of the plaintiff's statement that he had a contract with the company under which he was entitled to ride free. The result seems to have been his acceptance as a passenger by the conductor, who, being in control of the train, is in the very nature of things the only officer or servant of the company who can accept a passenger. He is charged with that duty by the defendant, who must therefore abide the consequences of his act, especially as there is no evidence of fraud or deception on the part of the plaintiff. The evidence tends to prove that the plaintiff was on the train as a bona fide passenger under an agreement for so-called "free transportation," but ready to pay his fare if demanded. The fact that the previous contract was illegal, and no fare was either demanded or paid, can have no further effect than to reduce the plaintiff to the condition of a merely gratuitous passenger, having no binding contract, and therefore subject to no limitations of liability. As such we now think he was entitled to recover. The petition to rehear is allowed and the judgment below affirmed.

Clark, Ch. J., dissenting:

This is a petition to rehear this cause and reverse our opinion filed therein. 132 N. C. 510, 95 Am. St. Rep. 641, 44 S. E. 34. 67 L. R. A.

That opinion is itself a precedent, and to be set aside, like any other precedent, only upon good cause shown. We have had the benefit of full and able argument upon both hearings, and diligent re-examination of the argument and the authorities shows that our former decision is in accord with our own precedents and those to be found elsewhere.

The complaint alleges that on 6th April, 1900, "the plaintiff, being a passenger on said defendant road," was injured by the derailment of the car in which he was riding, caused by the negligent construction of the roadbed and the negligent failure of the defendant to provide sufficient crew for said train, and its negligent failure to use such air brakes and other machinery as were necessary to the safe and proper operation of said road. There is no allegation of wilful and wanton injury, nor proof of such. The complaint alleges that "the plaintiff was a passenger on said railroad for compensation, . . . the defendant having contracted and agreed to carry the plaintiff between said stations for a valuable consideration," and for a negligent breach of such contract of safe carriage this action is brought.

The plaintiff testified that he was editor of a newspaper; that when called on by the conductor for his fare he told him he had a pass for 1899, and showed it to him; that in 1899 he had made a contract with the defendant to publish its time-table in his paper as consideration for the pass, and the defendant had agreed to continue the contract and renew the contract; that he told the conductor he would pay the regular fare if he wanted it, but the conductor accepted his statement and took him as a passenger without payment of fare or ticket, on the strength of the alleged renewal by the company of the contract of 1899. Such contract was illegal, and is forbidden, under the authority of the lawmaking power in this state, under a penalty of "not less than $1,000 nor more than $5,000" against the company, and, this not being a valid but an illegal transaction, the plaintiff cannot be accessory to and participate in such act and then ask a court of justice to give him damages for the defendant's negligence in executing such illicit arrangement.

The general assembly has declared that public policy forbids discrimination in the exercise of their quasi public duties by common carriers, and, as was said by us in this case, 132 N. C., at page 512, 95 Am. St. Rep. page 643, 44 S. E. page 35, "nothing could be more clearly a discrimination than the ground upon which the plaintiff asked for and received free passage on this occasion, to wit, that for the year previous he had advertised the schedule of the defendant company in his paper, and had received therefor a free pass over its line for the previous year, and that this contract had been renewed for the year then current. It does not appear what was the value of the advertising done, charging for the space at the same rates as would be charged others, but, let it be what it may, it could not amount exactly, 'neither more nor less,' to the value of a free pass to travel ad libitum an unstipulated number of miles over the defendant's road. Besides, it was an illegal discrimination to sell the plaintiff transportation on credit and not payable in money." We need not repeat the discussion and construction of this statute as laid down in the able and exhaustive opinion of Mr. Justice Montgomery in State v. Southern R. Co. 122 N. C. 1052, 41 L. R. A. 246, 30 S. E. 133, and in the very able opinion of Mr. Justice Douglas in that case, in which he referred to evidence of $250,000 of free transportation being given away annually in this state, the cost of which was necessarily considered in fixing the rates charged the unprivileged many. That opinion and subsequent ones have been long published, and the legislature has not seen fit to change the statute by making editors "a privileged class," who can ride free or on credit, with rates unknown, and thus have the cost of their transportation added to the price of transportation charged the public at large. One ground for this legislation is that discrimination in rates gives these corporations improper weight and influence, and this applies with as much force at least to discriminations and favors to editors as to others. The court in Greenleaf v. People's Bank, 133 N. C. 292, 63 L. R. A. 490, 98 Am. St. Rep. 709, 45 S. E. 638, held that lawyers and judges were not a privileged class, and we cannot hold that editors are, unless the general assembly shall give them special privileges as to free or reduced transportation which is forbidden to the public generally.

Either (1) the plaintiff, having produced no ticket, nor paying cash for his transportation, was on the train without authority of any contract, in which case, by all the authorities, he was entitled to what is known as "ordinary care," and hence can recover no damages unless there was wilful and wanton injury (which in this case is neither alleged nor shown) (Pierce v. North Carolina R. Co. 124 N. C. 83, 44 L. R. A. 316, 32 S. E. 399; Cook v. Southern R. Co. 128 N. C. 333, 38 S. E. 925; Lewis v. Norfolk & W. R. Co. 132 N. C. 382, 43 S. E. 919; Higley v. Gilmer, 3 Mont. 90, 35 Am. Rep. 450; Hendryx v. Kansas City, Ft. S. & G. R. Co. 45 Kan. at page 379, 25 Pac. 67 L. R. A.

893, and cases there cited; Richmond & D. R. Co. v. Burnsed, 70 Miss. 437, 35 Am. St. Rep. 656, 12 So. 958; Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Mehlsack, 131 Ill. 61, 19 Am. St. Rep. 17, 22 N. E. 812; Reary v. Louisville, N. O. & T. R. Co. 40 Ia. Ann. 32, 8 Am. St. Rep. 497, 3 So. 390; Illinois C. R. Co. v. Mechem, 91 Tenn. 428, 19 S. W. 232; Whitehead v. St. Louis, I. M. & S. R. Co. 99 Mo. 263, 6 L. R. A. 409, 11 S. W. 751),—for neither the conductor nor the company could give legal assent to his riding contrary to law, without payment of fare, and his condition was that of a trespasser,—not being a passenger; or (2) the plaintiff, as he alleges in his complaint, sues for injuries sustained by breach of the contract of safe carriage caused by negligence of the defendant, and one of his prayers for instruction is based upon the theory that the plaintiff was a passenger for hire and compensation. In such case the rule is thus stated (1 Sutherland, Damages, 3d ed. § 5): "It may be assumed as an undisputed principle that no action will lie to recover a demand or a supposed claim for damages, if to establish it the plaintiff requires aid from an illegal transaction, or is under the necessity of showing and depending in any degree upon an illegal agreement to which he was a party"—citing numerous cases. Judge Sutherland further says that "a bank is not liable for failure to perform its contract to lend or advance money to be used in speculating in futures. Moss v. Exchange Bank, 102 Ga. 808, 30 S. E. 267. . . . The sender of a telegram relating to a gambling contract in stocks cannot invoke such contract, or the loss or gain resulting from it, to measure the damages sustained in consequence of its nondelivery. Morris v. Western U. Teleg. Co. 94 Me. 423, 47 Atl. 926." In Griswold v. Waddington, 16 Johns. 430, Chancellor Walworth says, at page 486: "The plaintiff must recover upon his own merits, and if he has none, or if he discloses a case founded upon illegal dealing, and founded on an intercourse prohibited by law, he ought not to be heard, whatever the demerits of the defendant may be. There is, to my mind, something monstrous in the proposition that a court of law ought to carry into effect a contract founded on a breach of law. It is encouraging disobedience and giving to disloyalty its unhallowed fruits. There is no such mischievous doctrine to be deduced from the books." In Bowman v. Phillips, 41 Kan. 364, 3 L. R. A. 631, 13 Am. St. Rep. 292, 21 Pac. 230, it is held: "The courts will not enforce illegal contracts, nor any supposed rights founded thereon, but will leave the parties and those in pari delicto where they find them." In Oscanyan v. Winchester Repeating Arms

Co. 103 U. S. 261, 26 L. ed. 539, an action for damages for breach of contract, the court held that when such contract is void, because against public policy or in violation of law, the court will nonsuit the plaintiff. In Phalen v. Clark, 19 Conn. 421, 50 Am. Dec. 253, the court held: "Where the plaintiff requires any aid from an illegal transaction to establish his demand, he must fail."

In Welch v. Wesson, 6 Gray, 505, it is said: It may be assumed as an undisputed doctrine that no action will lie to recover a claim for damages if, to establish it, the plaintiff requires aid from an illegal transaction, or is under the necessity of showing or in any manner depending upon the illegal act to which he is a party. In Pullman's Palace Car Co. v. Central Transp. Co. 171 U. S., at page 150, 43 L. ed., at page 113, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. at page 813, Mr. Justice Peckham quotes with approval from Lord Mansfield in Holman v. Johnson (1775) 1 Cowp. 341: "The objection that a contract is immoral or illegal . . . sounds at all times very ill in the mouth of the defendant. It is not for his sake, however, that the objection is ever allowed, but it is founded on general principles of public policy. . . . The principle of public policy is this: Ex dolo malo non oritur actio. No court will lend its aid to a man who founds his cause of action upon an immoral or an illegal act." It can make no difference whether the action is to recover upon such contract, to enforce specific performance, or (as here) to recover damages for breach thereof. The precise point here presented has been three times passed upon in this court, not only in the case here sought to be reversed (132 N. C. 510, 95 Am. St. Rep. 641, 44 S. E. 34), but in two other cases. In Turner v. North Carolina R. Co. 63 N. C. 522, it was held that where a soldier contracted with a railroad for transportation to Johnston's Army, and was injured en route by negligence of the company, he could not recover damages (though there the contract was legal when made), Reade, J., saying that, the contract being illegal (in the purview of the court trying the action), the parties were in pari delicto, and the court "would consult its dignity, and not interfere in their dispute." Exactly the same decision was made in Wallace v. Cannon, 38 Ga. 199, 95 Am. Dec. 385; Martin v. Wallace, 40 Ga. 52; Redd v. Muscogee R. Co. 48 Ga. 102; Muscogee R. Co. v. Redd, 54 Ga. 33,—in all which the court held, as in 40 Ga. 55: "While so engaged, they [the parties] were in pari delicto, and the courts . . . cannot lend their aid to assist either in the case of injury sustained by the negligence or misconduct of the other." Another case in this 67 L. R. A.

state is Waters v. Richmond & D. R. Co. 110 N. C. 338, 16 L. R. A. 834, 14 S. E. 802, where the court hold (at p. 342, 110 N. C., p. 835, 16 L. R. A., p. 803, 14 S. E.) that, where the illegal purpose of the shipper or passenger enters into the consideration of the contract of transportation, the railroad is exempt from liability for negligence, meaning evidently, that the court will not take jurisdiction of such controversies. Here both parties participated in the illegal purpose of transporting the plaintiff, contrary to law, without payment of fare, and, as in the above cases, while so engaged they [the parties] were in pari delicto, and the courts . . . cannot lend their aid to assist either in the case of injury sustained by the negligence or misconduct of the other." It is immaterial whether the plaintiff had in his pocket a free pass from the president of the railroad company, or was allowed by the conductor to ride illegally, without payment of fare, in consideration of the plaintiff's statement that the company had promised to renew the pass. The conductor, no more than the president, could give the plaintiff the legal right to ride free, unless the plaintiff came within one of the excepted classes entitled to that privilege, as railroad employees and officials, charity cases, and the like. It was an illegal contract equally whether made by the conductor or the president. Whether the conductor had the legal right to bind the company by his action, so as to subject it to the penalty denounced by the statute, is not before us. But if he had not, then the plaintiff had no claim to a contract of passage on that ground, and comes under the first head above, not being a passenger, and could only recover for wilful and wanton injury.

The point here presented is well settled in the text-books, and, by decisions in other states, that the plaintiff cannot recover when he is negligently injured while on the train without any valid contract of carriage, i. e., when he is a licensee or trespasser. In such cases he can only recover if wantonly and wilfully injured, or, as it is sometimes styled, for gross negligence, which is the synonym for "wilful and wanton injury," in those cases. Bouvier, Law Dict. Rawle's Rev., Passenger, says that a passenger is "one who has taken a place in a public conveyance by virtue of a contract for the purpose of being transported from one place to another on the payment of fare or its equivalent. Bricker v. Philadelphia & R. E. Co. 132 Pa. 1, 19 Am. St. Rep. 585, 18 Atl. 983, . . . A carrier is not liable to one who rides by stealth (Chicago & A. R. Co. v. Michie, 83 Ill. 427), or who is a trespasser (Muehlhausen v. St. Louis R. Co. 91 Mo. 332, 2 S. W. 315), although invited to ride by an employee of the carrier (Gulf, C. & S. F. R. Co. v. Campbell, 76 Tex. 174, 13 S. W. 19), . . . [nor] a voluntary assistant to an express messenger or mail clerk (Union P. R. Co. v. Nichols, 8 Kan. 505, 12 Am. Rep. 475), or a newsboy permitted to ride free (Flower v. Pennsylvania R. Co. 69 Pa. 210, 8 Am. Rep. 251; Snyder v. Hannibal & St. J. R. Co. 60 Mo. 413). Certainly the plaintiff, who was on this train by an arrangement denounced by the statute, under a penalty of "not less than $1,000 nor more than $5,000 fine," is not in so good a situation as those above named as debarred of recovery.

Hutchinson on Carriers, § 555, says: "To be entitled to the rights of a passenger, the plaintiff who sues for an injury occasioned by the negligence of the company must have been lawfully upon its train; and that if sued for the injury it can defend upon the ground that the plaintiff had induced the servants of the company to carry him upon a ticket on which he had no right to ride. 2 Minor's Wood, Railroads, 2d ed. 1213, instances, among persons not entitled to recover for negligent injuries, one who, contrary to the rules, gets on a freight train, even with the assent of the conductor, and pays no fare, or a trespasser upon a regular passenger train. If the assent of the conductor does not make him a passenger when riding contrary to the rules of the company, such assent cannot set aside a statute forbidding the plaintiff to ride without paying fare. 3 Elliott, Railroads, § 1255, says: "A railroad company owes trespassers no contract duty. Indeed, . . . it owes them no duty except not to wilfully injure them." 1 Fetter, Passengers, § 240, uses almost the same language: "The only duty due by a railroad company to one who is an intruder or trespasser on its trains is to refrain from wantonly, wilfully, or intentionally injuring him. It is not liable for an injury caused by the mistake, inadvertence, or negligence of its employees." 2 Shearm. & Redf. Neg. § 489, holds that "one who, by collusion with a servant of the carrier, rides without intending to pay fare, . . . does not bring . . . [him] into contract relation with the company so as to make it liable to him as a passenger." To same purport, Thomp. Carr. Pass. 43. Booth, Street Railways, § 326, says: "The duty of a common carrier does not extend to the personal safety of one who is not actually a passenger;" and the same work, at § 365: "Newsboys who enter street cars for the purpose of selling papers are not passengers, but mere licensees, who assume all the risks of ordinary negligence on the part of the company's servants." Certainly the newsboys who are legally on the car with 67 L. R. A.

the assent of the company have greater rights than this plaintiff, who was riding without payment of fare, in violation of law. Bishop, Noncontract Law, § 60, says: "If the negligent running of a railroad train injures one who is upon it without right, [he] . . . can recover nothing." 2 Jaggard, Torts, 1081, says: "When no consideration is paid, though the plaintiff was aboard the train by the invitation or request of defendant's employees, he cannot recover for negligence;" citing numerous cases.

All the above are based upon the idea that no one can recover for negligent injuries unless a passenger, and that no one is a passenger unless there is a legal contract, express or implied,—a legal obligation to convey him. The above citations from text-books are amply sustained by authorities, among which: "A railroad company owes no duty to a trespasser on its trains, except to abstain from wantonly or maliciously injuring him." Alabama G. S. R. Co. v. Harris, 71 Miss. 74, 14 So. 263. One who is allowed by the conductor to ride as an assistant express messenger without paying fare, under a misapprehension of the conductor that he need not pay, cannot recover damages for injuries sustained by negligence of the carrier. Union P. R. Co. v. Nichols, 8 Kan. 505, 12 Am. Rep. 475. In the very interesting opinion by Judge Valentine, he says: "The conductor, therefore, did not attempt to confer upon the plaintiff any right to ride upon that train, but simply left the plaintiff with the right which he supposed the plaintiff already had, independent of any authority from himself,"—the same facts as in this case, though under our statute the conductor could confer no right to ride free when the company itself was prohibited by statute from doing so. In Illinois C. R. Co. v. Meacham, 91 Tenn. 428, 19 S. W. 233, it is held that the company is not liable for injuries sustained by a trespasser or intruder upon its trains, "except to refrain from wilfully, wantonly, or intentionally injuring him;" and defines a trespasser as one who rides without payment of fare or authorized invitation. In Toledo, W. & W. R. Co. v. Beggs, 85 Ill. 84, 28 Am. Rep. 613, the same ruling as to nonliability was made as to one riding illegally upon a free pass which had been issued to another person; and this has been cited and affirmed in Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Mehlsack, 131 Ill. 61, 19 Am. St. Rep. 17, 22 N. E. 812. The pass there used was not more illegal than the pass which the plaintiff in this case presented. Eaton v. Delaware, L. & W. R. Co. 57 N. Y. 382, 15 Am. Rep. 513, held that one not lawfully upon the train, as one riding upon a freight train, could not recover for negligent injuries, though upon the train by the invitation of the conductor. In Gulf, C. & S. F. R. Co. v. Campbell, 76 Tex. 174, 13 S. W. 19, it was held that one injured negligently while riding on a freight train could not recover because unlawfully there; and the same ruling was made, and on the same ground, as to one injured while riding upon the engine by permission of the engineer. Chicago & A. R. Co. v. Michie, 83 Ill. 427. The plaintiff in the present case was not lawfully upon the train, it being forbidden by law to carry him without prepayment of fare, and neither the conductor nor the company had authority to receive him on the train without it. In Condran v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. 28 L. R. A. 749, 14 C. C. A. 506, 67 Fed. 522, it is held that one who wrongfully evades payment of fare cannot recover for injuries unless wantonly and wilfully inflicted.

In Kansas City, Ft. S. & M. R. Co. v. Berry, 53 Kan. 112, 42 Am. St. Rep. 278, 36 Pac. 53, it is held that one riding upon a railroad train merely by permission of the conductor and without payment of fare cannot recover for personal injuries like a passenger, affirming St. Joseph & W. R. Co. v. Wheeler, 35 Kan. 185, 10 Pac. 461. In McVeety v. St. Paul, M. & M. R. Co. 45 Minn. 268, 11 L. R. A. 174, 22 Am. St. Rep. 728, 47 N. W. 809, it is held that one "who knowingly induces the conductor of a railway company to carry him without charge" cannot recover as a passenger. In Williams v. Mobile & O. R. Co. (1895, Miss.) 19 So. 90, it was held that one illegally riding free by consent of the conductor could not recover, and the same was held in Alabama & V. R. Co. v. McAfee (1893) 71 Miss. 70, 14 So. 260, as to one riding free by collusion with the railroad crew and beaten by them. The latter case is put on the ground of in pari delicto,—that he had "participated in the violation of duty."

One riding on a train illegally—for instance, contrary to a rule of the company known to him, though with permission of the conductor,—cannot recover for injuries sustained by negligence. Purple v. Union P. R. Co. 57 L. R. A. 700, 51 C. C. A. 564, 114 Fed. 123; Gulf, O. & S. F. R. Co. v. Campbell, 76 Tex. 174, 13 S. W. 19; Greenfield v. Detroit & M. R. Co. 133 Mich. 557, 95 N. W. 546. "The only duty a common carrier owes to one not a passenger is not to injure him wantonly." Hendryx v. Kansas City, Ft. S. & G. R. Co. 45 Kan. 377, 25 Pac. 893. "One who is riding on a railroad train free of charge, by 'invitation and permission' of the conductor, is not a passenger so as to entitle him to recover for injuries received." Staloup v. Louisville, 37 L. R. A.

N. A. & C. R. Co. (1897) 16 Ind. App. 584, 45 N. E. 802; and there are numerous other decisions to the same effect.

The bed-rock principle deduced from all the decisions and text writers is that an action for injuries for negligence of a common carrier is an action of tort arising on contract, and can never be sustained except when there is a breach of a legal and valid contract of safe carriage; that, as to torts not arising out of contract, recovery can only be had when the injury was inflicted wantonly and wilfully. This is sound in principle, and well settled, if any principle can be settled by precedent.

Taking it in the most favorable light for the plaintiff, he was riding on an extension of an illegal pass. That being so, upon the authorities in our state and those from other states and text writers above cited, the plaintiff cannot recover damages sustained by the negligent breach of such illegal contract of carriage. There are other authorities to the same purport. In Massachusetts, where traveling on the Lord's Day, except from necessity or for purposes of charity was made illegal, it was held in an opinion by that eminent lawyer, Shaw, Ch. J., in Bosworth v. Swansey, 10 Met. 363, 43 Am. Dec. 441, that one so traveling illegally could not recover damages caused by a defect in the highway; and to the same purport is Connolly v. Boston, 117 Mass. 64, 19 Am. Rep. 396, and Davis v. Somerville (1880) 128 Mass. 594, 35 Am. Rep. 399. The same was held as to recovery of damages sustained by negligence of a street car company by one traveling thereon on Sunday (Stanton v. Metropolitan R. Co. 14 Allen, 485), and as to one negligently injured at a railroad crossing while illegally traveling along the public road on Sunday (Smith v. Boston & M. R. Co. 120 Mass. 492, 21 Am. Rep. 538). In Gregg v. Wyman, 4 Cush. 322, it was held that the owner of a horse, who let him for driving on Sunday, against the statute, could not recover damages for the death of the horse by immoderate driving, because the parties were in pari delicto, the court saying its conclusion "is fully sustained by numerous decisions both in England and the various states of the Union," many of which it cites; and the same is held in Way v. Foster, 1 Allen. 408, and Parker v. Latner, 60 Me. 529, 11 Am. Rep. 210. In Lyons v. Desotelle, 124 Mass. 387, it was held that one traveling on the Lord's Day in violation of the statute, and who had fastened his horse at the side of the road, could not invoke the aid of the courts to recover damages for injuries to his horse, caused by the negligent act of another in driving against it. In McGrath v. Merwin, 112 Mass. 467, 17 Am. Rep. 119, it was held that one injured by the negligence of the defendant while clearing out a wheel pit, though gratuitously and as an act of kindness, on the Lord's Day, could not recover damages, because participating at the time the injury was sustained in an act in violation of law. In Wallace v. Merrimack River Nav. & Eap. Co. (1883) 134 Mass. 95, 45 Am. Rep. 301, it was held that one sailing his yacht on Sunday, in violation of the statute, could not recover damages for being negligently run into by a steamboat, because he was there in violation of law, as the plaintiff was in this case. These decisions were uniform in that state till changed by statute as to injuries from common carriers (Stat. 1877, p. 629, chap. 252), which provides that the General Statute (chap. 84, § 2) "prohibiting travel on the Lord's Day shall not constitute a defense to an action against a common carrier of passengers for any tort suffered by a person so traveling." There is no statute in North Carolina taking away from common carriers the defense of in pari delicto in case of one traveling on a free pass. The defendant relied on Carroll v. Staten Island R. Co. 58 N. Y. 126, 17 Am. Rep. 221, where it was held that the plaintiff, injured on a ferryboat while traveling on Sunday, contrary to the statute, could recover; but the court put its decision on the ground (p. 132, 58 N. Y., p. 223, 17 Am. Rep.) that, if the plaintiff was going in a case of necessity or charity, he was not traveling illegally, and, as the defendant had the right to carry him and to enforce payment of the fare, if the illegal purpose of the plaintiff was unknown to the defendant, the latter made a valid contract of carriage, and was liable for negligence in executing it. Here the plaintiff solicited the illegal carriage by saying his pass had been renewed, and the conductor acted upon it. Both parties knew of the illegality.

In Smith v. Rollins, 11 R. I. 464, 23 Am. Rep. 509, where a livery-stable keeper let his horse for driving on Sunday, contrary to the statute, and the other party drove to a different place and brought the horse back damaged, it was held that the plaintiff could not recover, the court saying (p. 472, 11 R. I., p. 517, 23 Am. Rep.): "If the tort cannot be made to appear without proof of the contract, certainly the contract can hardly be considered immaterial, or as not affecting the liability of the defendant, even though it may not be a part of the cause of action." In Holcomb v. Dandy, 51 Vt. 428, the court says (p. 435), affirming previous cases: "It has been repeatedly held in this state that, if a party sustain injury by reason of the insufficiency in the highway while such party is traveling in violation of the statute, he cannot recover of the town for such injury." In Lord v. Chadbourne, 42 Me. 429, 66 Am. Dec. 290, it was held that the plaintiff could not recover damages for the alleged seizure of his whiskey if he was keeping it for sale in violation of law.

Among many cases holding that a party participating in an illegal act cannot obtain from the court relief for an illegal act or neglect of the other party, if such conduct of the defendant cannot be shown without showing the precedent conduct of the plaintiff in violation of law, are Winchester Electric Light Co. v. Veal, 145 Ind. 506, 41 N. E. 334, 44 N. E. 353, which held that a county treasurer loaning out county funds contrary to law cannot maintain an action to recover them back. Haggerty v. St. Louis Ice Mfg. & Storage Co. 143 Mo. 238, 40 L. R. A. 151, 65 Am. St. Rep. 647, 44 S. W. 1114, holds that, where it is contrary to law to have game in possession during the "close season," one who has deposited game, in violation of the statute, with a cold-storage company, "cannot recover damages for violation of the contract or for negligence in its performance," the court saying the complaint shows "that plaintiffs contracted with defendant corporation for the commission of a misdemeanor. . . . The law will not stultify itself by promoting on the one hand what it prohibits on the other, and will for this reason leave the parties to this suit where it finds them, unsanctioned by its favor and unaided by its process." That case is identical in principle with this, the plaintiff having committed no misdemeanor, but having procured the defendant to contract to do an indictable act, as in this case.

Upon similar grounds, in Kitchen v. Greenabaum, 61 Mo. 110, it was held that the plaintiff could not recover a prize drawn on a lottery ticket, upholding the maxim, In pari delicto potior est conditio defendentis et possidentis; not that the defendant has right on his side, but because the court will help neither party to an illegal transaction. In Youngblood v. Birmingham Trust & Sav. Co. 95 Ala. 521, 20 L. R. A. 58, 36 Am. St. Rep. 245, 12 So. 579, it was held: "No rights can spring from or be rested upon an act in the performance of which a criminal penalty is incurred, and all contracts which are made in violation of a penal statute are absolutely void." In Ningara Falls Brewing Co. v. Wall, 98 Mich. 158, 57 N. W. 99, it was held that a liquor dealer doing business in violation of the statute could not recover damages for violation of a contract by a company to make him its exclusive agent in that locality. The plea that he could legally buy, though he could not legally sell, was overruled on the ground that he was buying to illegally sell. In Kelly v. Courter, 1 Okla. 277, 30 Pac. 372, it was held that a tenant selling liquor in violation of law could not recover damages to such liquor caused by the failure of the landlord to supply ice as agreed, the court resting its decision upon a citation from Ewell v. Daggs, 108 U. S. 146, 27 L. ed. 683, 2 Sup. Ct. Rep. 412, that the law will not lend its aid where the contract "appears to have been entered into by both the contracting parties for the express purpose of carrying into effect that which is prohibited by the law of the land (Broom, Legal Maxims, 108),"—which was the case in this transaction now before the court. The Oklahoma court neatly sums up thus: "The principle to be extracted from all the cases is that the law will not lend its support to a claim founded upon its violation." Many cases to like purport could be added, but it is useless to multiply authorities upon a principle so well settled in the law and in reason.

The same general principle that no action can be sustained if based in any wise upon an illegal contract which must be put in evidence—ex turpi causa actio non oritur—is supported by all the precedents in this court in which a contract was necessarily alleged, as in this case. Basket v. Moss, 115 N. C. 448, 48 L. R. A. 842, 44 Am. St. Rep. 463, 20 S. E. 733; Burbage v. Windley, 108 N. C. 357, 12 L. R. A. 409, 12 S. E. 839; Puckett v. Alexander, 102 N. C. 95, 3 L. R. A. 43, 8 S. E. 767; Griffin v. Hasty, 94 N. C. 438; Covington v. Threadgill, 88 N. C. 186; King v. Winants, 71 N. C. 469, 17 Am. Rep. 11; Whitaker v. Bond, 63 N. C. 290; Carter v. Greenwood, 58 N. C. (5 Jones, Eq.) 410; McRae v. Atlantio & N. C. R. Co. 58 N. C. (5 Jones, Eq.) 395; Ingram v. Ingram, 49 N. C. (4 Jones, L.) 188; Ramsay v. Woodard, 48 N. C. (3 Jones, L.) 508; Allison v. Norwood, 44 N. C. (Busbee, L.) 414; Sharp v. Farmer, 20 N. C. 255 (4 Dev. & B. L. 122), and "there are others." The plaintiff cannot recover for negligence without showing he was on the train under a valid contract of carriage, and the contract he shows is one against public policy, and makes at least one of the parties indictable. Whether the other party is not also indictable as an accessory in procuring such violation of law is an interesting question, but not now before us.

The plaintiff's allegation is that he was on the train by virtue of his contract for a free pass. Such transaction being a discrimination, as above shown, the penalty denounced by the statute upon the common carrier for such violation of law is a fine "not less than $1,000 nor more than $5,000," and the penalty of the law upon the other party is that, if negligently injured during such illegal transportation, he cannot recover in the courts, since he must put forward such illegal transaction as the basis of his action. If his own act was not indictable, he procured an act by the defendant which was a misdemeanor, and obtained transportation thereby. A court of equity will not interfere with a contract, if it be illegal and against state policy, where the contractors are in pari delicto. Taylor v. McMillan, 123 N. C. 393, 31 S. E. 730, citing Grimes v. Hoyt, 55 N. C. (2 Jones, Eq.) 274. If there was no contract of carriage, the plaintiff had no rights as a passenger, but only the right to be protected against wilful and wanton injury, which is not alleged here. If he had any contract, it was one void under our decisions, being forbidden by statute and against public policy, and he is in no better condition.

The decisions in some courts as to persons injured while riding upon legal free passes are not authority in favor of plaintiff, who asked and accepted free transportation illegally. The conductor had no right to receive him as a passenger, and plaintiff was fixed with knowledge of the law, and is in no condition to ask the court for damages not inflicted wilfully and wantonly.

The former judgment of this court ordering a new trial should be affirmed, and the petition to rehear dismissed upon at least three other grounds, not heretofore discussed, because not deemed necessary.

Jones, a witness for the defendant, testified that he had sent the plaintiff the pass as a gratuity, upon his application; that he paid nothing for it; that there was no contract to publish the time-table; and that he made no agreement to renew the pass when it expired. The defendant asked the court to charge "that there is no evidence to support the plaintiff's allegation [in the complaint] that he was traveling on the defendant's road, on the occasion complained of, as a passenger for hire or compensation." It was error to refuse this, for, whether the plaintiff's or the defendant's testimony was correct, whether the pass had been renewed or not, the plaintiff was not a "passenger for hire or compensation." State v. Southern R. Co. 122 N. C. 1052, 41 L. R. A. 246, 30 S. E. 133.

The defendant also excepted properly to this charge of the court: "If, when the plaintiff was called on for his fare, he produced to the conductor the pass which has been exhibited in evidence, and the conductor accepted it, the plaintiff was a passenger on the train." The pass on its face had expired, and there was no testimony that it had been renewed. The judge does not add the proviso "if it had been renewed," and, if it had not been, certainly it could not make him a passenger. On the contrary, if the plaintiff's own evidence was true that a pass was issued in consideration of publishing the time-table, and, further, that the defendant had agreed to renew it, this being an agreement to make a contract forbidden by our statute against discrimination, the plaintiff was equally not a passenger. In any aspect this instruction was erroneous.

The point here presented has been admirably discussed by Sanborn, United States circuit judge, in a recent case, above cited, of Purple v. Union P. R. Co. 57 L. R. A. 700, 51 C. C. A. 564, 114 Fed. 123, which holds: One who, knowing that a conductor has no authority to grant free transportation rides upon a train under an arrangement, or tacit understanding with the conductor that he shall ride free, is not a passenger, but a mere trespasser to whom the only duty of the company is to abstain from wilful or reckless injury; that a contract of carriage is indispensable to a recovery; and that the implied contract from plaintiff being on the train was conclusively negatived upon showing the illegal agreement to transport without payment of fare. To same purport, Condran v. Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. 28 L. R. A. 749, 14 C. C. A. 506, 32 U. S. App. 182, 67 Fed. 522; Chicago, B. & Q. R. Co. v. Mehlsack, 131 Ill. 64, 19 Am. St. Rep. 17, 22 N. E. 812; Toledo, W. & W. R. Co. v. Beggs, 85 Ill. 84, 28 Am. Rep. 613; Chicago & A. R. Co. v. Michie, 83 Ill. 431; Toledo, W. & W. R. Co. v. Brooks, 81 Ill. 250; McVeety v. St. Paul, M. & M. R. Co. 45 Minn. 269, 11 L. R. A. 174, 22 Am. St. Rep. 728, 47 N. W. 809; Robertson v. New York & E. R. Co. 22 Barb. 91; Gulf, C. & S. F. R. Co. v. Campbell, 76 Tex. 175, 13 S. W. 19; Prince v. International & G. N. R. Co. 64 Tex. 146; Way v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co. 64 Iowa, 48, 52 Am. Rep. 431, 19 N. W. 828, 73 Iowa, 463, 35 N. W. 525; Hendryx v. Kansas City, Ft. S. & G. R. Co. 45 Kan. 377, 25 Pac. 893; Kansas P. R. Co. v. Whipple, 39 Kan. 531, 18 Pac. 730; Aichison, T. & S. F. R. Co. v. Gants, 38 Kan. 608, 5 Am. St. Rep. 780, 17 Pac. 54; Union P. R. Co. v. Nichols, 8 Kan. 505, 12 Am. Rep. 475.

Here the plaintiff was fixed with notice in law that neither the company nor the conductor could transport him without payment of fare. In McGraw v. Southern R. Co. 135 N. C. 264, 47 S. E. 758, at this term, it was held that, though one had a ticket, he cannot recover for wilful expulsion if the conductor erroneously, but reasonably, supposed he had no ticket. A fortiori, the plaintiff cannot recover when he had no ticket, which the conductor knew, 67 L. R. A.

and there was no force used, but merely negligence is averred. In Duncan v. Maine U. R. Co. (1902) 113 Fed. 508, the court says, on this very point, of the plaintiff being injured while riding on a pass illegally, contrary to the Interstate Commerce prohibition (of which ours is a verbatim copy): "Of course if the foundation of the right against a common carrier were contract, it would be apparent that, under familiar maxims of the law, no action would lie, because, even though the plaintiff is not subject to any penalty imposed by the Interstate Commerce Statutes, he would be in pari delicto. Indeed, he would be the party especially enjoying the benefit of the combination in violation of law." Here the complaint bases the action, and necessarily so, upon breach of the contract of safe carriage.

Montgomery, J.: I concur in the dissenting opinion of the CHIEF JUSTICE.

Petition for second rehearing denied.

Jane GODWIN, Appt.,

v.

CAROLINA TELEPHONE & TELEGRAPH COMPANY.

(136 N. C. 258.)

A telephone company will not be required to furnish service to a bawdy house.

(October 18, 1904.)

APPEAL by plaintiff from a judgment of the Superior Court for Lenoir County in favor of defendant in a mandamus proceeding to compel defendant to furnish petitioner with telephone facilities. Affirmed.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Messrs. Dortch & Barham, for appellant:

A corporation, either public or quasi public, owes a duty to the public, and it cannot discriminate in favor of or against anyone.

Munn v. Illinois, 94 U. S. 113, 24 L. ed. 77; Griffin v. Goldsboro Water Co. 122 N. C. 206, 41 L. R. A. 240, 30 S. E. 319; 29 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, p. 19.

The telephone company which refuses to supply all in similar circumstances with similar facilities without discrimination will be compelled by mandamus to do so.

NOTE.—As to compulsory service by telephone companies generally, see note to Rushville v. Rushville Natural Gas Co. 15 L. R. A. 321; also the later cases in this series of Nebraska Teleph. Co. v. State, 45 L. R. A. 113, and State ex rel. Gwynn v. Citizens' Teleph. Co. 55 L. R. A. 139.

State ex rel. Gwynn v. Citizens' Teleph. Co. 61 S. C. 83, 55 L. R. A. 139, 85 Am. St. Rep. 870, 39 S. E. 257; 14 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, p. 163; State ex rel. American U. Teleph. Co. v. Bell Teleph. Co. 22 Alb. L. J. 363.

The remedy by mandamus is the appropriate one.

Vincent v. Chicago & A. R. Co. 49 Ill. 33; State v. Hartford & N. H. R. Co. 29 Conn. 538; People v. Albany & V. R. Co. 24 N. Y. 261, 82 Am. Dec. 295; State ex rel. American U. Teleph. Co. v. Bell Teleph. Co. 36 Ohio St. 296, 38 Am. Rep. 583; State ex rel. Webster v. Nebraska Teleph. Co. 17 Neb. 126, 52 Am. Rep. 404, 22 N. W. 237.

Defendant, being engaged in the business of transmitting intelligence for hire, is a common carrier.

State ex rel. Webster v. Nebraska Teleph. Co. 17 Neb. 126, 52 Am. Rep. 404, 22 N. W. 237; Chesapeake & P. Teleph. Co. v. Baltimore & O. Teleg. Co. 66 Md. 399, 59 Am. Rep. 167, 7 Atl. 809; Missouri ex rel. Baltimore & O. Teleg. Co. v. Bell Teleph. Co. 23 Fed. 539; 25 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, p. 750.

Messrs. Loftin, Mitchell, & Varner also for appellant.

Messrs. Wooten & Wooten, for appellee:

A mandamus will only be granted where one demanding it shows that he has a "specific legal right," and has no other remedy to enforce it.

Hughes v. Craven County, 107 N. C. 598, 12 S. E. 465; Hayne v. Hood, 1 S. C. N. S. 23; Ex parte Mackey, 15 S. C. 324; State ex rel. Conant v. Fuller, 18 S. C. 250.

The maintenance of a bawdy house is against the policy of the law. To compel the placement of modern improvements by a common carrier of messages in a bawdy house would be against the policy of the law.

State v. Thornton, 44 N. C. (Busbee, L.) 252; State v. Wilson, 93 N. C. 608; State v. Patterson (29 N. C.) 7 Ired. L. 70, 45 Am. Dec. 506; State v. Cally, 104 N. C. 858, 17 Am. St. Rep. 704, 10 S. E. 455.

Mandamus will never issue to compel a respondent to do acts which are in themselves unlawful, nor to do things which is not the duty of the respondent to do.

Chicot County v. Kruse, 47 Ark. 80, 14 S. W. 460; Wiedwald v. Dodson, 95 Cal. 450, 30 Pac. 580; Gruner v. Moore County Judge, 6 Colo. 526; People ex rel. Thatcher v. Hyde Park, 117 Ill. 462, 6 N. E. 33; 22 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, p. 918.

Clark, Ch. J., delivered the opinion of the court:

The exception to the verification of the amendment to the answer is without merit. 67 L. R. A.

Since Phifer v. Travelers' Ins. Co. 123 N. C. 410, 31 S. E. 716, the general assembly has amended § 258 of the Code by providing (Laws 1901, p. 854, chap. 610) that when a corporation is a party the verification of any pleading may be made by a "managing or local agent thereof" as well as by an officer, who alone, formerly, was authorized to make verification in such cases.

This is an application for a mandamus to compel the defendant to put a telephone with necessary fixtures and appliances, in the dwelling house of the plaintiff in the town of Kinston, and admit her to all the privileges accorded to other subscribers to the telephone exchange operated by the defendant in said town. It was admitted by the plaintiff that "she is a prostitute, and keeps a bawdy house within the corporate limits of the town of Kinston, and desires to have said telephone put in said bawdy house." The court being of opinion that the plaintiff was not entitled to a mandamus for such purpose, the plaintiff took a non-suit and appealed.

There was no error. A mandamus lies to compel a telephone company to place telephones and furnish telephonic facilities, without discrimination, for those who will pay for the same and abide the reasonable regulations of the company. This is well settled. 27 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, 2d ed. p. 1022; 19 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, 2d ed. p. 877; Joyce, Electric Law, § 1036; and numerous cases cited by all these. In Commercial Union Teleph. Co. v. New England Teleph. & Teleg. Co. 61 Vt. 241, 5 L. R. A. 161, 15 Am. St. Rep. 893, 17 Atl. 1071, it is said: "A telephonic system is simply a system for the transmission of intelligence and news. It is, perhaps, in a limited sense, and yet in a strict sense, a common carrier. It must be equal in its dealings with all." That case cites many authorities, which are, indeed, uniform, that the telephone business, like all other services fixed with a public use, must be operated without discrimination, affording "equal rights to all, special privileges to none." Telephones "are public vehicles of intelligence, and they who own or control them can no more refuse to perform impartially the functions that they have assumed to discharge than a railway company, as a common carrier, can rightfully refuse to perform its duty to the public," is said in Chesapeake & P. Teleph. Co. v. Baltimore & O. Teleg. Co. 66 Md. 399, at page 414, 59 Am. Rep. 167, 7 Atl. 811, which is another very instructive and well-reasoned case upon the same subject. Telephone companies are placed by our corporation act on the same footing, as to public uses, as railroads and telegraphs, and the corporation commission is authorized to regulate their charges and assess their property for taxation. But while it is true there can be no discrimination where the business is lawful, no one can be compelled, or is justified, to aid in unlawful undertakings. A telegraph company should refuse to send libelous or obscene messages, or those which clearly indicate the furtherance of an illegal act, or the perpetration of some crime. But recently in New York the telephone and telegraph instruments were taken out of "pool rooms" which were used for the purpose of selling bets on horse races. "Keeping a bawdy house" was an indictable offense at common law, and is still so in this state. State v. Calley, 104 N. C. 858, 17 Am. St. Rep. 704, 10 S. E. 455; State v. Webber, 107 N. C. 962, 22 Am. St. Rep. 920, 12 S. E. 598. One who leases a house for the purpose of its being kept as a bawdy house, or with the knowledge that it will be used for that purpose, is indictable. 9 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, 2d ed. p. 527. A mandamus will never issue to compel a respondent to aid in acts which are unlawful. Wiedwald v. Dodson, 95 Cal. 450, 30 Pac. 580; Gruner v. Moore County Judge, 6 Colo. 526; Chicot County v. Kruse, 47 Ark. 80, 14 S. W. 469; People ex rel. Thatcher v. Hyde Park, 117 Ill. 462, 6 N. E. 33.

It is argued that a common carrier would not be authorized to refuse to convey the plaintiff because she keeps a bawdy house. Nor is the defendant refusing her a telephone on that ground, but because she wishes to place the telephone in a bawdy house. A common carrier could not be compelled to haul a car used for such purpose. If the plaintiff wished to have the phone placed in some other house used by her, or even in a house where she resided, but not kept as a bawdy house, she would not be debarred because she kept another house for such unlawful and disreputable purpose. It is not her character, but the character of the business at the house where it is sought to have the telephone placed, which required the court to refuse the mandamus. In like manner, if a common carrier knew that passage was sought by persons who are traveling for the execution of an indictable offense, or a telegraph company that a message was tendered for a like purpose, both would be justified in refusing; and certainly when the plaintiff admits that she is carrying on a criminal business in the house where she seeks to have the telephone placed the court will not, by its mandamus, require that facilities of a public nature be furnished to a house used for that business. For like reason, a mandamus will not lie to compel a water company to furnish water, or a light company to supply light, to a house used for carrying on an illegal business. The courts will enjoin or abate, not aid, a public nuisance.

The further consideration of this matter is not required on this application for a mandamus, but should be upon an indictment and trial of the plaintiff for the violation of law so brazenly avowed by her.

No error.

WASHINGTON SUPREME COURT.

Sewall P. STONE and Wife, Respts.,

v.

City of SEATTLE, Appt.

(30 Wash. 65.)

1. That a defect in a street is part of the original plan of construction does not relieve the city from liability for injuries to travelers, caused by it.

2. Whether or not a city is negligent in permitting an electric light to be placed in such a manner that the shadow cast by the supporting pole conceals an opening in a cross walk, which may cause injury to pedestrians, is a question for the jury.

(September 23, 1902.)

NOTE.—Municipal liability for defective plan of street construction as distinguished from other defects.

- I. General principles, 253.
- II. Plan must be formally adopted, 256.
- III. Injury to property rights.
 - a. Interference with rights in street, 257.
 - b. Interference with streams, 258.
 - c. Injury by surface water, 260.
 - d. The Missouri cases, 264.
- IV. Injury to travelers.
 - a. Defective streets, 265.
 - b. Defective walks, 266.
 - c. Defective bridges, 268.
 - d. Courts denying liability, 268.

67 L. R. A.

I. General principles.

Considerable needless confusion has embarrassed the discussion of the question how far a municipal corporation is liable for injuries caused by a defective plan of street construction, owing to a failure clearly to distinguish the grounds on which such a liability might rest. It is very obvious that, in the absence of any constitutional provision on the subject, if the municipality should be regarded as a branch of the general government it would be liable only so far as the legislature saw fit to render it so. And so, if it should be regarded merely as a creature of the legislature, that body would have to impose by express mention any liability which it desired should rest upon its creature.

APPEAL by defendant from a judgment of the Superior Court for King County in favor of plaintiffs in an action brought to recover damages for personal injuries alleged to have been caused by defendant's negligence. Affirmed.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Messrs. W. E. Humphrey and Edward Von Tobel, for appellant:

In the absence of any showing to the contrary, the presumption is that the plans adopted are reasonably safe and proper.

Urquhart v. Ogdensburg, 91 N. Y. 67, 43 Am. Rep. 655; Lansing v. Toolan, 37 Mich. 152; Conlon v. St. Paul, 70 Minn. 216, 72 N. W. 1073; Monk v. New Utrecht, 104 N. Y. 552, 11 N. E. 268.

This latter condition is very nearly that of the various municipal corporations and other quasi governmental bodies in England; and it is therefore held that all liability must depend upon the express terms of the statute.

Thus, in Boulton v. Crowther, 2 Barn. & C. 703, it was held that trustees having charge of a road may raise the grade of the road in front of plaintiff's property so as to render the use of his gates inconvenient, and cause some of the earth used in making the filling to fall over upon his property. The statute under which the act was done provided compensation for injuries sustained in case the course of the way was changed through private lands. The court held that the statute did not provide for compensation, and that, in the absence of statute, there was no liability on the part of the trustees for doing what they were authorized to do by act of Parliament. Littledale, J., as a reason for his judgment, says that, where an act of Parliament vests a power in trustees, to be exercised by them, not for their own benefit, but for that of the public, and gives no compensation for damages resulting from an act done by them in the execution of the power, the legislature must be taken to have intended that individuals should not receive any compensation for the loss resulting to them from an act so done for the public benefit.

So, in British Cast Plate Mfrs. v. Meredith, 4 T. R. 794, commissioners appointed by a paving act in grading the street raised the grade in front of plaintiff's property so as to prevent the use of the old gate, which would have to be taken down and altered to adapt it to the new conditions. He brought an action for his damages, and the majority of the court said that, the statute having provided that the commissioners might allow such part of the damages as they saw fit, the remedy thereby provided was exclusive. But the opinion seems to be entertained by all the court that the question of allowing or withholding damages lay exclusively with the legislature. Buller, J., saying the case was one of the class in which the maxim, Salus populi est suprema lex, applied.

The principles enforced by the English courts can have no application, however, in cases where the act of the municipality will infringe some constitutional right of an individual, or where the municipality is regarded, not as an agent of the legislature in the performance of some governmental duty, but as a corporation organized for the benefit of its own members, 67 L. R. A.

Messrs. J. F. Dore and Noon & Noon, for respondents:

Where a street or walk has been put in a reasonably safe condition for public use, and has subsequently fallen into disrepair and become dangerous, the municipality is liable to the party injured.

McQuillan v. Seattle, 13 Wash. 600, 43 Pac. 893; Sutton v. Snohomish, 11 Wash. 24, 48 Am. St. Rep. 847, 39 Pac. 273; Saylor v. Montesano, 11 Wash. 328, 39 Pac. 653; Rowe v. Ballard, 19 Wash. 7, 52 Pac. 321; White v. Ballard, 19 Wash. 284, 53 Pac. 159.

Where a plan for a public municipal improvement is adopted by a municipal corporation, and the work is not carried out in accordance therewith, but in violation there-and charged with the performance of certain duties for the benefit of the public. Courts have taken different views of the general question as to the liability of a municipality created under such conditions for any defects in its highways; but they have finally come practically to an agreement that there is a liability under such circumstances, for all defects which can be regarded as due to a neglect of mere ministerial duties. With that question this note will not deal, but such liability will, for present purposes, be assumed. The question then arises, What effect if any, on the liability, will result from the fact that the defect is in the original plan of construction, rather than in negligent maintenance. When a municipality is endowed with the right of self-government there is no doubt that this endowment includes certain matters of discretion, with regard to which it cannot be called to account by any individual. Among other things, it may, unless the legislature otherwise directs, determine absolutely whether or not it will make improvements, and, if so, when, and where, and how. No one can require it to locate a street for his accommodation, or to refrain from locating one. No one can dictate the grade of a street which it decides to construct, or the material which shall be used. But a step beyond this point, and the confusion begins. Suppose by the improvement, a direct injury is caused to abutting property, or the improved highway is left unsafe for use. Is the municipality then free from liability? The decisions which attempt to answer these questions are in conflict, but, it would seem, upon principle the answer would not be difficult. Under the spirit of the American Constitutions a municipal corporation, even though it should be regarded as a branch of government, cannot invade or destroy private property rights without condemning them under the power of eminent domain. and, if the duty is imposed upon it to maintain its highways in a condition safe for travel, the liability exists regardless of what may cause the unsafe condition. These principles leave little room for escape from liability because the defect is one of plan, and they have been enforced by a great majority of the courts.

A city, in determining what part of a street it will improve and grade, acts in its delegated governmental capacity, and is not answerable to an individual as for a neglect of duty in determining such question. Ely v. St. Louis, 181 Mo. 723, 81 S. W. 168.

of, and a party is injured thereby, the municipality is liable.

Clemence v. Auburn, 66 N. Y. 334; Gould v. Topeka, 32 Kan. 485, 49 Am. Rep. 496, 4 Pac. 828.

The municipality must make the street or walk encumbered with the product of its plan reasonably safe for travel at all times, even if left unsafe by the original plan at the original completion of such improvement in accordance with such plan.

2 Dill. Mun. Corp. 4th ed. § 1046, note; Elliott, Roads & Streets, 2d ed. § 479; Schrader v. Port Huron, 106 Mich. 173, 63 N. W. 964; Malloy v. Walker Twp. 77 Mich. 448, 6 L. R. A. 695, 43 N. W. 1012; Carver v. Detroit & S. Pl. Road Co. 61 Mich. 584, 28 N. W. 721; Sebert v. Alpena, 78 Mich. 165, 43 N. W. 1098; Joslyn v. Detroit, 74 Mich. 458, 42 N. W. 50; Alexander v. Big Rapids, 76 Mich. 282, 42 N. W. 1071; Circleville v. Sohn, 59 Ohio St. 285, 69 Am. St. Rep. 777, 52 N. E. 788; Alliance v. Campbell, 17 Ohio C. C. 595; Hinds v. Marshall, 22 Mo. App. 208; Donahoe v. Kansas City, 136 Mo. 657, 38 S. W. 571; Chicago v. Seben, 62 Ill. App. 248, 165 Ill. 371, 56 Am. St. Rep. 245, 46 N. E. 244; Chicago v. Langlass, 66 Ill. 361; Gould v. Topeka, 32 Kan. 485, 49 Am. Rep. 496, 4 Pac. 822; Blyhl v. Waterville, 57 Minn. 115, 47 Am. St. Rep. 596, 58 N. W. 817; Conlon v. St. Paul, 70 Minn. 216, 72 N. W. 1073; Kendall v. Albia, 73 Iowa, 241, 34 N.

Under a statute making a municipal corporation liable for defects in cross walks, it is within the discretion of the city authorities as to how many cross walks there shall be, and in what places they shall be laid; and the city cannot be held liable for an accident occurring because of the entire absence of such walk. Williams v. Grand Rapids, 59 Mich. 51, 26 N. W. 279.

The action of a municipal corporation in widening a street is legislative, and it cannot be held liable, although the result is to bring an existing nuisance within the limits of the highway. McCutcheon v. Homer, 43 Mich. 483, 38 Am. Rep. 212, 5 N. W. 668.

Whether or not a cross walk upon which an accident occurred was necessary is a matter within the exclusive jurisdiction of the municipal authorities, and cannot be reviewed by a jury. But, the power to construct the walk having been conferred upon the municipality, the corresponding duty is imposed to construct it in a reasonable, safe, and secure manner, and the question whether it has done so or not may be considered by the jury. Easton v. Neff, 102 Pa. 474, 48 Am. Rep. 213.

As indicated by the above authorities, the city cannot be called in question upon its decision as to what improvements it will undertake. But, as will appear in a subsequent section, it cannot by any plan invade the private property of abutting owners.

Thus, in Seifert v. Brooklyn, 101 N. Y. 136, 54 Am. Rep. 664, 4 N. E. 321, which involved a question of liability for injuries done by a sewer, the court says: We are quite clear that the theory that a municipal corporation has a right, in prosecuting a scheme of improvement, to appropriate without compensation, either designedly or inadvertently, the permanent or occasional occupation of a citizen's property, even though for public benefit, cannot be supported upon the principle, salus populi est suprema lex.

With reference to the condition in which it leaves a street, its right to exercise a discretion is not entirely withdrawn. It cannot adopt a plan which will render the street obviously defective for travel, but, in case several plans are available, all reasonably safe, it may decide which it will adopt, and cannot be held liable because its choice may not have been the best.

If reasonable minds might differ as to which plan is better, the decision of the municipal authorities is exclusive. But if, in adopting the 67 L. R. A.

plan, there is such great error of judgment as to show that in fact no intelligent judgment was ever exercised, the municipality will be liable. Conlon v. St. Paul, 70 Minn. 216, 72 N. W. 1073.

In Louisville v. Norris, 28 Ky. L. Rep. 1195, 64 S. W. 958, which was an action for injuries caused by a sewer, the court says whether the necessity for a given improvement of a highway exists is clearly one for the legislative department of the city to decide; also, the character of the improvement is within the legislative discretion, subject to the qualification that the plan adopted must be one not so palpably insufficient as to indicate want of care, or to imply a failure to exercise judgment by the city governing board.

For errors in judgment in devising a plan there is no liability; but there is liability where lack of care and skill in devising the plan is so great as to constitute negligence. North Vernon v. Voegler, 103 Ind. 314, 2 N. E. 821. The court illustrates its meaning as follows: Suppose the common council of a city determine to build a sewer and cover it with reeds, can it be possible that the municipal corporation can escape liability on the ground that the council erred in devising the plan? or, suppose the council were to devise a plan for a bridge that would require timbers so slight as to give way beneath the tread of a child, can the city escape liability on the ground that there was only an error of judgment in devising the plan?

In a case involving the plan of a sewer the court said, if the common council undertakes to prosecute a public work which requires a plan, and that plan can be devised and prepared only by a skillful or experienced man, it will be negligence for it to undertake the work without exercising reasonable care to secure the assistance of such men. Deliberation on the part of the council is futile, unless the members have a fair knowledge of the matter which forms the subject of their deliberation. If councilmen are not skilled in devising plans, no length of time spent in deliberation can establish the fact that due care was exercised. Due care implies the employment of such means as will secure knowledge, not a deliberation without the knowledge. If reasonable care is used to secure the preparation of plans by competent men, and ordinary care is used to see that the skill of the engineer or expert is brought into exercise, there is no negligence and can be no liability, although, when the plan is carried into

W. 833; Barr v. Kansas, 105 Mo. 550, 16 S. W. 483; Poole v. Jackson, 93 Tenn. 62, 23 S. W. 59; Dallas v. Jones, 93 Tex. 38, 49 S. W. 577, 53 S. W. 377; Sutton v. Snodhomish, 11 Wash. 24, 48 Am. St. Rep. 847, 39 Pac. 273; Saylor v. Montesano, 11 Wash. 328, 39 Pac. 653; Lorence v. Ellensburg, 13 Wash. 341, 52 Am. St. Rep. 42, 43 Pac. 20; Morgan v. Morley, 1 Wash. 464, 25 Pac. 333; White v. Ballard, 19 Wash. 284, 53 Pac. 159; Rowe v. Ballard, 19 Wash. 1, 52 Pac. 321; Gillespie v. Newburgh, 54 N. Y. 468; Jeuchurst v. Syracuse, 108 N. Y. 303, 15 N. E. 409; Ivory v. Deerpark, 116 N. Y. 476, 22 N. E. 1080; Bryant v. Randolph, 133 N. Y. 70, 30 N. E. 657; Rochester White Lead Co. v. Rochester, 3 N. Y. 463, 53 Am.

Dec. 316; Seifert v. Brooklyn, 101 N. Y. 136, 54 Am. Rep. 664, 4 N. E. 321.

The questions of the negligent construction and condition of a street, and whether a defect exists in a walk, are for the jury.

Roice v. Ballard, 19 Wash. 7, 52 Pac. 321; White v. Ballard, 19 Wash. 284, 53 Pac. 159; Saylor v. Montesano, 11 Wash. 328, 39 Pac. 653; Ford v. Des Moines, 106 Iowa, 94, 75 N. W. 630; Urtel v. Flint, 122 Mich. 65, 80 N. W. 991; Palmer v. Andover, 2 Cush. 600; Redford v. Woburn, 176 Mass. 520, 57 N. E. 1008.

Hadley, J., delivered the opinion of the court:

This action was brought to recover for effect, a defect may develop which destroys or impairs its efficiency. But undertaking to exercise judgment without skill in a matter which requires skill is not a mere error of judgment, but it is negligence. Terre Haute v. Hudnut, 112 Ind. 542, 13 N. E. 686.

A municipal corporation is not liable for an injury caused by reason of the improper plan of an alley crossing adopted by it, until it is shown that it had notice that the plan as adopted by it was not reasonably safe for use under ordinary circumstances. Circleville v. Sohn, 20 Ohio C. C. 368, Affirmed in 59 Ohio St. 285, 69 Am. St. Rep. 777, 52 N. E. 788.

There are cases, however, which take the view that whenever a matter of discretion is presented to the municipality it cannot be held liable for the result of its exercise.

Thus, in Welsh v. Rutland, 56 Vt. 228, 48 Am. Rep. 702, the court said, by way of argument, that no action can be maintained against a municipal corporation by an individual, no matter how great an injury he might be able to show for the defects or insufficiency in the plan adopted for sewers or other public improvements; and this is upon the ground that in such matters the corporation is discharging a legislative or quasi judicial function, and its action is not reviewable by the law courts. If the plan adopted for the construction of such public works is not necessarily injurious or dangerous to private individuals, and is executed with skill and prudence, the protection against liability is absolute.

The courts have not been agreed, however, as to the ground of this exemption. As said in Circleville v. Sohn, 59 Ohio St. 285, 69 Am. St. Rep. 777, 52 N. E. 788, Michigan puts the non-liability on the ground that it is the exercise of legislative power which is not subject to judicial control; and New York, on the ground that it is an exercise of judicial power for which the municipal authorities are not answerable.

The Mississippi court seems to take broader ground, and hold that in some way individual rights are subordinate to the public good in much the same way as they were held to be in the English cases cited supra.

Thus, in White v. Yazoo City, 27 Miss. 357, where a ditch was constructed within the limits of a sidewalk in such a manner as to cause injury to abutting property, its owner, who brought an action to recover for the injury, attempted to show the nature and extent of the injury; but the evidence was excluded, and this 67 L. R. A.

ruling was approved by the appellate court upon the general ground that the work was done for the public good and under competent authority, and the case was governed by the principle that the general good must prevail over partial individual inconvenience.

II. Plan must be formally adopted.

Even the states which are inclined to permit the municipality to shield itself from the result of its act on the ground that it was caused by a defect of plan hold that the plan must have been formally adopted by the council, and not merely acted upon by employees.

In order to render the municipality immune from liability for an injury upon a walk which is unsafe because of the plan on which it was constructed it must have formally adopted the plan; and the mere fact that it permits a walk to remain as constructed by abutting owners is not sufficient to show that the plan was adopted. Urquhart v. Ogdensburg, 97 N. Y. 238; Brown v. Syracuse, 77 Hun, 411, 28 N. Y. Supp. 792.

In order to relieve the municipality from liability the plan must have been its own. Collett v. New York, 51 App. Div. 394, 64 N. Y. Supp. 693.

A city cannot escape liability on the ground that the defect was in the plan, if the plan was never adopted by it, but was a mere temporary one utilized by the municipal officers pending the completion of other improvements. In such case, if the device is not reasonably safe for the use for which it is designed, the city is guilty of negligence in permitting it to remain in that condition. Ford v. Des Moines, 106 Iowa, 94, 75 N. W. 630.

In order that the city should be protected because the council had adopted the plan, it is necessary that the board should have the exact matter under consideration, and, after due deliberation, should expressly order that the thing be done. Gould v. Topeka, 32 Kan. 485, 49 Am. Rep. 496, 4 Pac. 828. In that case the court says, before the court should hold that a street manifestly unsafe and dangerous was so planned and so ordered by the governing authorities of the city, the court should be able to say from the city records that it was so planned and so ordered by the city authorities. There should be no presumption that the city authorities ordered or planned that a public street should be dangerous. Courts should not presume, without formal proof, that the governing board personal injuries alleged to have been received by respondent Mary E. Stone from a fall caused by stepping into a hole in the street. The evidence shows that at the junction of Kilbourn and Bowman avenues, in the city of Seattle, the outer plank of the cross walk was some inches short, leaving an opening which was at that time 4 or 5 inches deep, and of sufficient size for a person to step into it. This accident occurred at night. Near this opening stood a large electric-light pole, from which an electric arc light was suspended in such a manner as to cast the shadow of the pole over said opening. Mrs. Stone, while passing over this cross walk, stepped into the opening while it was thus covered by the shadow, and fell, receiving the injuries for which she seeks to recover. It appears from the evidence that the opening had existed from the time of the construction of the walk, some years before. The immediate surroundings had, however, been subsequently changed to the extent of the erection of the electric-light pole and the swinging of the light thereon, by which the shadow was cast over the opening as aforesaid. The evidence further shows that the shadow extended entirely over the opening, and for some distance around it, thus presenting an extended dark and shadowy surface, all having the same general appearance as though cast upon the unbroken surface of the street at that point. The respondent, Mrs. Stone, says that, in

of a city had deliberately done wrong, and especially not for the purpose of relieving the city from the consequences of a wrong for the doing of which it would be held not to be liable if it had done the wrong deliberately, but liable if it had done it merely heedlessly or carelessly.

If the defect is the result of original construction, but no general plan of the improvement has been presented to and adopted by the city council, the work being done by those in charge of the street department merely as a part of their general duties, the defect is regarded, not as one of plan, but of construction, and the liability of the municipality ascertained by the application of the general rules which govern the question of construction or repair according to a previously adopted plan. Clark v. Chicago, 4 Biss, 486, Fed. Cas. No. 2,817; White v. Trinidad, 10 Colo. App. 327, 52 Pac. 214.

This principle has been applied in Massachusetts to relieve the city from liability for acts of its council on the theory that the council, in adopting the plan, was not its agent, but was a governmental body for whose acts it was not responsible.

Thus, in Merrifield v. Worcester, 110 Mass. 216, 14 Am. Rep. 592, which was an action for damages because of the pollution of the water of a stream by emptying a sewer into it, the court says that the council, in determining the outlet of the drain, acted, not as agent of the city or in any manner under the direction of the city, but as public officers. For the incidental disadvantage, loss, or inconvenience necessarily resulting to individuals in their rights of property from such action, no action of tort can be maintained against the city. These exemptions of municipal bodies and their officers from liability, and corresponding subordination of individual rights and interest to the safety, health, and welfare of the general public, are a principle of frequent application.

Such a theory, however, can hardly be relied on as a ground of exemption outside of the jurisdictions where the peculiar Massachusetts theory of municipal corporations prevails.

III. Injury to property rights.

a. Interference with rights in street.

There can be no doubt that the owners of property abutting on a highway have certain property rights in it which cannot be destroyed against their protest. The weight of authority is that the road cannot be closed so as to cut off access to their property without making compensation to them. See note to People ex rel. Hart v. Marin County, 26 L. R. A. 659. So the road cannot be rendered impassable, even though it is the result of a defect of plan.

In Cummins v. Seymour, 79 Ind. 491, 41 Am. Rep. 618, the court in discussing the liability of the municipal corporation for destroying the usefulness of a highway by the construction of a drain through it, says, one would think that the property owner was quite as seriously injured by lack of skill in devising the plan as he could possibly be by any want of care or skill in the performance of the work. Whether unskillfulness of the plan, or the negligent manner of executing it, destroyed the highway, the injury would be the same. The true rule, reasonable in itself and just in its results, is that skill and care must extend both to the plan and its execution. The contention that the action will not lie where the only want of skill is in devising the plan cannot prevail.

Injury caused by altering the grade of a street is usually one of plan, and, as will be seen by referring to the notes to Selden v. Jacksonville, 14 L. R. A. 370, and Hickman v. Kansas City, 23 L. R. A. 658, there is no liability for mere inconvenience in altering the grade if the access to the property is not destroyed or impaired to such an extent as to require a material part of the value of the property to re-establish it. With reference to the new condition, the Texas court deals in Houston v. Bartels (Tex. Civ. App.) 82 S. W. 323. There the city, in constructing an approach to a bridge, lowered the grade of the street to such an extent that it was impossible to construct an approach to abutting property from the street side, whereby the value of the property was greatly lessened, and the owner brought an action for the damages thereby inflicted. The city defended, inter alia, on the ground that it had the right to make the improvement without any liability to adjacent property owners if the work was done with reasonable care and skill, but the court held that the legislature had not the power to clothe the city with authority to appropriate private property for public use without compensation, either directly or indirectly.

The cases upon this branch of the subject are collected in the notes above referred to. The reasons for the doctrine are various, but the most satisfactory one is that the damages for injuries to abutting property, which will rethe absence of the shadow, the light would have revealed the opening, which she could have seen and avoided. When the respondents had introduced all their testimony bearing upon the question of negligence on the part of the city, having, as announced by counsel, no other evidence to offer except that of physicians as to the nature and extent of the injuries, a motion for nonsuit was interposed by the city, on the ground that there was a total failure of proof as to any negligence on the part of the city. The motion was granted, and the jury discharged. Thereafter respondents moved for a new trial on the ground that the court committed error in law at the trial; that the evidence was insufficient to justify the court's decision, and was against the law.

The latter motion was also granted, and a new trial ordered. From the order granting a new trial the city has appealed.

The only error assigned is that the court erred in granting the motion for a new trial. It is asserted in appellant's brief that, since the court granted the motion for nonsuit, and dismissed the action, the motion for new trial, under our statute, is not the proper practice, and should not have been granted. The above position assumed by counsel is not discussed in the brief, and, since we see no merit in it, we will not discuss it here. The real contention of appellant is that the opening in the cross walk was not a defect, but was an opening at the inner corner at the point where the cross walk joins the sidewalk, and as such was sult from the alteration of street grades, are presumed to be assessed and paid at the time the street is opened, so that there is no liability on the part of the municipality for injuries subsequently inflicted on abutting property by raising the roadbed to a new grade. Healey v. New Haven, 47 Conn. 315.

So, in Pontiac v. Carter, 32 Mich. 164, the court applies the doctrine of nonliability for an exercise of legislative discretion to a change of grade of a street by which the access of an abutting owner was rendered less convenient. The court says the injury is incidental to an exercise of public authority which, in itself, must be assumed to be proper, because it is done by a public body acting within its jurisdiction, and not charged with malice or want of good faith. It must therefore be regarded as an injury that every citizen must contemplate as one that with more or less likelihood might happen. When land was taken for the street, if damages were assessed, they would cover this possible injury, and it would never be known subsequently that the jury, in estimating them, had not calculated upon the change of grade of the proposed street as probable, and have attached considerable importance to it in their estimate. The rule in such cases is that all possible damages are covered by the award, except such as may result from an improper or negligent construction of the public work, or from an excess of authority in considering it.

There is no right of action for changing the grade of a street so as to make access from the abutting property more difficult. McCullough v. Campbellsport (Wis.) 101 N. W. 709.

So, if the city adopts a plan for the improvement of the street by grading or otherwise, and the execution of such plan necessarily requires the destruction of the trees, their removal in the prosecution of such work affords no cause of action to the lot owner. Kemp v. Des Moines (Iowa) 101 N. W. 474.

But, if the municipality in grading a street excavates the earth in such a way as to cause the soil from an adjoining lot to fall into the street, the municipality will be liable on the theory that such act amounts to a taking of the premises for public purposes. Damkoehler v. Milwaukee (Wis.) 101 N. W. 706.

A municipal corporation is not liable for the consequential injuries resulting from the improvement of a public street or alley in a careful and skillful manner; but it is liable for negligence, either in devising the plans for such improvement, or in executing the same. Stein v. Lafayette, 6 Ind. App. 414, 33 N. E. 912.

But where a city, in grading streets, fails to exercise proper care and skill in the selection of a plan, and, by reason thereof, an injury to the owner of private property occurs, which by the exercise of reasonable skill and care would have been avoided, the city is liable for such injury. Valparaiso v. Adams, 123 Ind. 250, 24 N. E. 107.

In case the Constitution provides compensation for property injured as well as taken for public use, the owner of injured abutting property may recover, although the injury is the result of a plan.

In Werth v. Springfield, 78 Mo. 107, which was an action to recover for injuries to abutting property by reason of the negligent change of a street grade, the court held that it was not necessary for it to determine the remedy in case the work was negligently done under a proper plan, but that, under the Constitution providing for compensation in case of property taken or damaged for public use, the court said there was a right to compensation in some form of remedy.

b. Interference with streams.

In planning a highway improvement it is frequently necessary to interfere to some extent with flowing streams, and the scope of municipal freedom from liability is well illustrated by this class of cases. If the interference is with navigation rights the municipality cannot be called in question so long as only the rights of the public are affected. The rights of the public must be protected by the public alone, and, therefore, no individual can sue for municipal interference with them, and resort to the doctrine of defect of plan is not necessary to avoid liability. That doctrine has, however, been made to do service in such a case.

In Larkin v. Saginaw County, 11 Mich. 88, 82 Am. Dec. 63, the board of supervisors of a county erected a bridge according to a plan adopted by them across a navigable stream in such a manner as to render the navigation of the stream less easy, and plaintiffs, who were engaged in navigating a boat upon the river, brought an action alleging that they had suffered special injury therefrom. The court held the board of supervisors was clothed with legislative, as well as executive, power; and, a part of the drainage system of the street; that the opening was necessary in order to admit the surface water from the street into the gutter, and to give opportunity to remove any material that might accumulate in the gutter. It is contended that the street was not out of repair, and that the alleged dangerous condition was caused solely from the manner of construction of the sidewalk, cross walk, and gutter; that the city is not liable for an injury caused by a defective plan of construction, for the alleged reason that the adoption of such original plan by the city was a quasi judicial act, and was also the result of the exercise of legislative and discretionary functions, upon which liability cannot be predicated. In support of this contention, appellant cites the following cases: Urquhart v. Ogdensburg, 91 N. Y. 67, 43 Am. Rep. 655; Monk v. New Utrecht, 104 N. Y. 552, 11 N. E. 268; Lansing v. Toolan, 37 Mich. 152; Conlon v. St. Paul, 70 Minn. 216, 72 N. W. 1073. The cases cited seem to support the contention. The Minnesota case cited states the rule substantially as follows: That, if reasonable men might differ as to which is the better plan, the decision of the city authorities on the question is conclusive, and cannot be reviewed by the courts; that neither the court nor the jury can substitute its judgment for that of the city authorities in such a case; but, when there is such gross error of judgment as to show that in fact the city authorities never exercised an intelligent judgment at all, the city may be liable for con-while the county might be liable for its acts in the exercise of the executive, it could not be for the exercise of legislative power. The determination that it was necessary to build the bridge, and the whole action of the board in relation thereto, were legislative, and no action could be maintained against the county for any consequences resulting therefrom. What would be a nuisance if erected by an individual is not such when erected by authority of law and by the public, so as to confer a right of private action against the public therefore.

When, however, water is cast on private property, the fact that it is the result of a plan will not defeat liability, for it is a direct trespass.

Towns will not be justified in doing an act lawful in itself in such a manner as to create a nuisance, any more than individuals. Therefore, if part of a highway and bridge is constructed with a span insufficient to carry all the water of the stream, so that its dam backs on the upper proprietor's land, the town is liable for the resulting injury. Mootry v. Danbury, 45 Conn. 550, 29 Am. Rep. 703.

In Rochester White Lead Co. v. Rochester, 3 N. Y. 463, 53 Am. Dec. 316, where, in the improvement of a highway, a culvert was rendered necessary to carry the water of a small stream and the drainage from a large tract of land under the street, the common council acted upon the advice of the city surveyor, who was not a professional engineer, and the culvert proved to be inadequate, so that water was backed onto upper property, and the city was held liable for the injury. The court said, it will not answer for a corporation to select an incompetent agent, and then shield itself from the consequences of his injudicious acts by justifying under his advice. The court continues, the principal question is whether the city is exempt in consequence of any immunity in its municipal character from those liabilities for malfeasance for which individuals would be liable in a civil action. A good deal of obscurity has rested upon this subject arising from the incident that some duties are judicial in their nature while others are merely ministerial. Wherever duties of a judicial nature are imposed upon a public officer, the due execution of which depends upon his own judgment, he is exempt from all responsibility by action for the motives which influence him in the manner in which his duties are performed. But this judicial immunity can extend no farther. The civil remedy depends exclusively upon the nature of the duty which has been violated. When duties which are merely ministerial are cast upon officers whose chief functions are judicial, and the ministerial duty is violated, the officer, although for most purposes a judge, is still civilly responsible for such misconduct. The determination to construct a public work is merely judicial, but the prosecution of the work is merely ministerial, and the city is bound to see that it is done in a safe and skilful manner. The corporation, having undertaken to build the culvert, was bound to exercise such skill in its construction, and to give such sufficiency of capacity to it, as that it should not become a nuisance to the property of those who reside in the neighborhood.

In Perry v. Worcester, 6 Gray, 544, 66 Am. Dec. 431, where, in the construction of a bridge, the passageway left for the water was so narrow as to set the water back upon upper property to its injury, Chief Justice Shaw, in delivering the opinion, said, the question raised is whether the damage sustained by plaintiffs shall be claimed as damage and awarded as such by the proper commissioners, or whether an action at law will lie to recover them. We think the distinction well established by authorities, and founded upon just principles, that, where damage is necessarily done to the property of an individual by taking his land for a highway, or by changing the grade of a way where such work is authorized by public authority for public use and all damage necessarily incident to such work, and such works are legally regarded as wanted by the public in the exercise of the right of eminent domain, they are legal and rightful; they are not unlawful; and therefore no action will lie as for a tort, but damage must be sought by the owner of the property pointed out by law. But this presupposes that the public work thus authorized will be executed in a reasonable, proper, and skilful manner, with a just regard to the rights of private owners of estates. If done otherwise, the damage is not necessarily incident to the accomplishment of the public object, but to the improper and unskilful manner of doing it. It is unlawful and a wrong for the redress of which an action of tort will lie. It is further said that the default in the case at bar was in adopting a plan for a bridge not contrived with sufficient skill, and with a proper regard to the volume of water structing or maintaining an improvement on a defective plan or scheme so adopted by it. The difficulty with the doctrine as stated in the last-named case, it seems to us, lies in the fact that it would probably be difficult to find a case where city authorities have deliberately adopted a plan about which reasonable men might not differ as to whether an intelligent judgment had been exercised, when all the attendant circumstances are considered. Referring to the Michigan case, Lansing v. Toolan, 37 Mich. 152, cited by appellant, we find that it had been previously held in Michigan that cities were not liable for injuries resulting from defective streets, on the theory that the streets of a city are public highways, like all other roads, and that no distinction existed in that state between the liability of cities and that of counties. Detroit v. Blackeby, 21 Mich. 84, 4 Am. Rep. 450. In harmony with the above case the Toolan Case was decided, in which it was held that a city could not be held liable for injuries resulting from a plan of a public work, where the injured person fell into a ditch which was dug across the street by a city contractor, but was not covered the full width of the street, and which ditch was a part of the plan of certain constructive work. In referring to the Michigan doctrine, and while considering cases from that state here discussed, it is observed in a note under § 1024, 2 Dill. Mun. Corp. 4th ed. as follows: "It seems to the author, however, as he understands the facts, that these are cases where and the capacity of the water way to discharge it; and judgment was given for the plaintiff.

c. Injury by surface water.

Many of the cases involving liability for the defective plan of a street improvement have arisen out of injuries done by surface water. The principles by which this liability is to be determined are clear, but the courts have not been fortunate in all cases in applying them. When natural conditions have not been changed by its own acts the municipality is under no obligation to provide drainage for any private property. Therefore, it cannot be made liable if its plan falls to do so. Moreover, there is no liability for merely altering the relative elevation of adjoining tracts of land so that the natural flow of surface water from one to the other is changed, provided that a natural drainway is not closed. But the city cannot close natural drainways to the injury of private property; nor can it change the course of drainage so as to throw water in a mass on private property, which would not naturally flow there, or gather water from a large section of territory, and either cast it onto private property, or abandon it so that it will find its way there. All these acts are trespasses, and the city cannot escape liability for the result of them by claiming that the injury is due to a plan. If its plan of improvement involves either a change in the natural course of drainage or the gathering together of unusual quantities of water, it must see that no injury is done to private individuals.

The courts, in attempting to apply these principles, have frequently become involved in difficulty by failing to discriminate between the acts which the city had a right to do and those which constituted a direct interference with private property rights, and have in some instances absolved the city from liability in the latter class of cases because it was merely exercising a governmental discretion.

The city is not bound to furnish drainage, and therefore it is not liable for error of judgment in determining the capacity of a drain which forms part of a street improvement so that it does not carry all the water which it was intended to carry, leaving some to find its way onto adjoining property to its injury. Rozell v. Anderson, 91 Ind. 591.

So, where the water flowing in a street gutter is no more than would naturally flow there without the improvement, the municipality cannot be enjoined from maintaining a certain device provided for conducting the water into the sewer, so that at times of heavy rain it overflows the walk onto adjoining property, on the ground that it is not the best that could be provided for that purpose. Palne v. Delhi, 116 N. Y. 224, 5 L. R. A. 797, 22 N. E. 405.

So where, in raising the grade of a street, the ordinance directed that the way should be supported in front of plaintiff's property by a dry wall, and the water flowing along the street percolated through the wall to the injury of plaintiff's property, but it did not appear that more water came through than would naturally find its way there, the court held there was no liability, and, as a ground for the ruling, said that in establishing the grade and adopting the plans for the improvement of the street, the council acted judicially, in the exercise of its judgment, and of the discretionary power vested in it, as to what would best serve the public interest; and the rule is that a civil action will not lie for acts that are judicial in their character, and discretionary. But the court further says, no other or better plan has been suggested; nor is it claimed that there was any error in the judgment or discretion of the common council in approving it. Watson v. Kings-ton, 114 N. Y. 88, 21 N. E. 102, Affirming 43 Hun, 367.

So, it has been held that a municipality is bound to exercise reasonable care, skill, and judgment in the construction of culverts rendered necessary by the extension of its streets. But if it employs a competent engineer to do the work, and he, in the honest exercise of his judgment, fails to make it of a sufficient capacity by which water is thrown back upon adjoining property, there is no liability on the part of the city. If the engineer is sufficiently competent, and makes a mistake after the honest exercise of his best judgment, it is such a mistake as is inseparable from human action. The making of such mistake cannot be attributed to negligence, for negligence is the failure to exercise ordinary care. Van Pelt v. Davenport, 42 Iowa, 308, 20 Am. Rep. 622.

But, if the inadequacy in the size of a sewer which forms part of a street improvement is owing to omission to exercise ordinary skill and care in planning and performing the work, the municipality is liable; but, if the inadequacy of the sewer is attributable to a mere error of judg-the street was rendered unsafe for travel by the direct act of the city or its contractor, and that the city would be held liable in those states in which an implied municipal responsibility is recognized for unsafe streets; which, however, is not the case in Michigan." Thus it appears to be the view of the author that the doctrine of nonliability because of a defective plan, while it may be consistent with the doctrine then announced in Michigan that municipal liability does not exist for any defect in a street, is nevertheless inapplicable in a state where there is an implied liability for unsafe streets. In this view we concur. Since the above Michigan decisions the legislature of that state has passed an act expressly declaring municipal liability for defective streets, and the supreme court of that state has construed the law to include defects in the plan of construction, as well as those arising by neglect to repair. Carver v. Detroit & S. Pl. Road Co. 61 Mich. 584, 28 N. W. 721; Sebert v. Alpena, 78 Mich. 165, 43 N. W. 1098; Schrader v. Port Huron, 106 Mich. 173, 63 N. W. 964. Thus, by the construction placed upon the statute, the earlier Michigan decisions have been overruled, and the doctrine of nonliability of a municipality for a defective plan in street construction no longer exists in that state. The doctrine announced in the New York cases cited by appellant seems to be in conflict with some other decisions in that state. In Clemence v. Auburn, 66 N. Y. 334, the rule is questioned, and the principle of ment, there is no liability. Rice v. Evansville, 108 Ind. 7, 58 Am. Rep. 22, 9 N. E. 139.

A municipal corporation is not liable for adopting and putting into effect a plan of street improvement which merely raises the grades of the streets so as to prevent the surface water from running off of abutting property as it had formerly done, although the result is to create a pond which is a nuisance to neighboring property. Clark v. Wilmington, 5 Harr. (Del.) 243. In that case it did not appear whether the obstruction was to a natural drainway, or to the water in its diffused condition. The court, however, intimates that it would be immaterial, except in case of a running stream, since it said that. In case of such stream, there would be no authority to provide for the obstructed water. In this intimation, however, the court is in error, since there is no right to obstruct ancient drainways, and any plan of improvement which might have that effect interferes with the rights of the abutting owner, and gives him a right of action. See 3 Farnham, Waters, §§ 889 et seq.

The erection of a sewer, rendered necessary by street improvements, of such incapacity that every sane man knows in advance that it will not afford any relief from the consequences of obstruction to the natural drainage caused by the filling of the street, would be dispensing with the use of common sense, and by no means consistent with that reasonable care which the law requires. It would, indeed, be carelessness most gross and wanton,—not merely an error of judgment, but the failure to exercise judgment at all. Indianapolis v. Huffer, 30 Ind. 235.

In a case where the city constructed a street across a ravine, and placed an inadequate conduit under the street to carry the water flowing in the ravine so that the water therein was backed upon plaintiff's property to its injury, the city claimed freedom from liability on the ground that it was merely a result of negligence or unskillfulness in devising the plan; but the court held that, under the rule that the municipality was not responsible for error in the exercise of legislative power, it could not be held liable for undertaking, or failing to undertake, the construction of an improvement; but that, when the improvement was undertaken, the work became a ministerial one, and the corporation must exercise ordinary care and skill in 67 L. R. A. devising the plan as well as in performing the work. Evansville v. Decker, 84 Ind. 325, 43 Am. Rep. 86.

Where, in construction of a culvert, the city extended a gas pipe through it which acted as a dam and cast the water back upon upper property, it was contended that the city was not liable for the injury because the decision to put in the gas pipe across the drain was a judicial act, and for an error of judgment as to its effect as an obstruction, the city is not liable. But the court said, this proposition leaves out of view the important consideration that, in putting in said obstruction, or permitting it to be done, the city exercised reasonable prudence and care, but added, for a mere mistake, notwithstanding the exercise of proper care and the employment of competent skill, the corporation will not be liable. Powers v. Council Bluffs, 50 Iowa, 197.

However, negligence cannot be inferred as matter of law from the simple fact that culverts constructed as part of a street improvement to carry water collected by the gutters were defective in plan, and became obstructed or filled up by accumulations of dirt and sand, without anything to show the grade on which they were built, the care taken to determine their sufficiency, or other facts bearing upon the question of negligence. Peru v. Brown, 10 Ind. App. 597, 38 N. E. 223.

That water is collected in a channel, and poured on the land of an adjoining owner, by the execution of a plan for street improvement adopted by the city council, does not exonerate the city from liability for the injury, since it has no power thus to injure adjoining property without paying the damage, and it is immaterial whether it is done in execution of a plan or not. North Vernon v. Voegler, 89 Ind. 77.

So, if the water is gathered together in artificial quantities it must be provided for.

In Weis v. Madison, 75 Ind. 241, 39 Am. Rep. 135, where plaintiff's property was injured by the collection, for the purpose of street improvement, of the surface water from a large area, confining it to channels and carrying it to a point where a culvert of insufficient capacity was constructed to care for it, the court held that the collection of the water in one channel, causing it to flow onto plaintiff's property, was certainly a ministerial, and not a legislative or judicial, act. But the court continues, it is not alleged that there was any defect in the holding in Seifert v. Brooklyn, 101 N. Y. 136, 54 Am. Rep. 664, 4 N. E. 321, does not seem to be easily reconcilable with the cases cited. But, whatever may now be said to be the rule in New York, the following cases from other jurisdictions clearly refuse to distinguish between the municipal liability, because of a defective plan of construction and that which arises from negligence to repair. It is held that actionable negligence is included in the one as much as in the other. Circleville v. Sohn, 59 Ohio St. 285, 69 Am. St. Rep. 777, 52 N. E. 788; Hinds v. Marshall, 22 Mo. App. 208; Chicago v. Seben, 165 Ill. 371, 56 Am. St. Rep. 245, 46 N. E. 244; Kendall v. Albia, 73 Iowa, 241, 34 N. W. 833; Poole v. Jackson, 93 Tenn. 62, 23 S. W. 57; Dallas v. Jones, 93 Tex. 38, 40 S. W. 577, 53 S. W. 377; Gould

v. Topeka, 32 Kan. 485, 49 Am. Rep. 496, 4 Pac. 822; Blyhl v. Waterville, 57 Minn. 115, 47 Am. St. Rep. 596, 58 N. W. 817. The last-named case modifies the rule by the condition that liability shall exist only when there is no necessity or reason for the defective plan; and Gould v. Topeka, 32 Kan. 485, 49 Am. Rep. 496, 4 Pac. 822, also limits it by the condition that, if the plan is such that different minds may entertain different opinions as to whether it is dangerous or not, the benefit of the doubt may be given to the board that planned it, and the city held not liable, but that, even in such event, it must appear that the exact matter was under consideration by the governing board, and after due deliberation such plan was expressly adopted, or expressly ratified. The latter condition does not appear from the the mechanism of the culvert, and it holds that the skill required of the municipality extended to the plan as well as its execution. The court said that it is stretching the doctrine of immunity from liability for consequential injuries to an unwarranted extent to hold that, if the mechanism is perfect, there is no responsibility in case the collected water is not carried away, no matter how greatly disproportionate and inadequate the size and capacity of the culvert to the volume of the water led to and poured against it by means of the drains of the municipality. It is the plain duty of the corporation, when it confines water in one channel, to see to it that suitable provision is made for the escape of the water into natural water courses, or other channels which will carry it off without injury to private property. And that doctrine was followed in Crawfordsville v. Bond, 96 Ind. 236.

In Nevins v. Peoria, 41 Ill. 502, 89 Am. Dec. 392, the city, by grading its streets for the purpose of disposing of surface water, caused it to flow onto adjoining property and become stagnant to the injury of a neighboring property owner. The city contended that, if the injury was the result of an exercise of its governmental power to grade the streets, it was not liable for the injury. The court said, we can solve more easily and safely questions of this character if we take pains to free our minds from the false notion that a municipal corporation has some indefinable element of sovereign power which takes from the property of the citizen, as against its aggression, the protection enjoyed against the aggressions of a natural person. The city is not liable for errors of judgment which may affect the convenient use of the street as such; but it cannot, even through the execution of a properly adopted plan, so affect adjoining property as to amount to a partial taking of the property for public use, without being liable to make compensation for the injury done. The court asks: If, in raising the grade of a street, the city turns a stream of mud and water upon the grounds and into the cellar of one of its citizens, or creates in his neighborhood a stagnant pond that brings disease upon his household, upon what ground of reason can it be insisted that the city should be excused from paying for the injuries it has directly wrought? It further asks: If the public interest requires that the lot of an individual shall be rendered unsafe for occupancy, either wholly or in part, in the process of grading, why should not the public pay for it to the extent to which it deprives the owner of its legitimate use? The theory that private rights are ever to be sacrificed to the public convenience or interest without full compensation is fraught with danger, and should find no lodgment in American jurisprudence. To prevent this was the object of some of the most important of our constitutional guaranties.

If a municipal corporation, by its system of street improvement, collects the surface water from a large area, it will be liable for the resulting injury in case it provides an outlet which is inadequate to carry the accumulated water, so that it overflows onto adjoining property; and it is immaterial that the inadequacy is because of defect of plan. Seaman v. Marshall, 116 Mich. 327, 74 N. W. 484.

So a county, in improving a highway, should see that the surface water follows its natural course; and it will be liable if it collects water either from the road itself or from adjoining property, and discharges it on private property, where it would not naturally flow. Schofield v. Cooper (Iowa) 102 N. W. 110.

In Lacour v. New York, 3 Duer, 417, the municipality adopted a plan for street improvement which contemplated the lowering of several intersecting streets, and then let the contract for the work on one of the streets to be done separately. The result of this was that the street, when brought to the new grade, was much lower than the intersecting street, and in fact constituted a hole or depression, and the municipality made no provision for draining off the water which would naturally accumulate therein. The result was that water collected there and injured the walls of an abutting owner, who brought an action to recover for his injury. The city defended on the ground that the work was within its discretionary and legislative power, but the court held that, after the passage of the ordinance providing for the improvement, all the work was ministerial, and that the city was liable for negligence in its performance, and that it was negligence to carry on the improvement in the manner in which it was done.

Some courts, in considering the effect of the fact that the injury was caused by an exercise of discretionary power, have lost sight of the evidence in the case at bar. It simply appears that the construction was probably originally made as it now is, but whether the plan was considered and expressly adopted by the proper governing authorities of the city does not appear. We think, in any event, however, that the weight of authority is against appellant's contention, and that a city cannot relieve itself from liability for defective streets because the defect may be part of an original plan of construction. This court held that the question of negligent construction of the street was one for the jury in White v. Ballard, 19 Wash. 284, 53 Pac. 159, although the original-plan doctrine here under consideration seems not to have been discussed. We think it was a question for the jury in the case at bar whether the city neglected to keep the street in safe condition, and it is immaterial whether the defect arose from the original construction or from subsequent causes. There is also an additional element which calls for its submission to the jury, and that is whether the city was negligent in permitting the electric light to be so placed that the shadow of the pole supporting it concealed the opening in the walk, if such be the fact. The evidence introduced by the respondents certainly tended to establish that fact, and it was for the jury to say what was the fact in that particular. We think the case was erroneously withdrawn from the jury, and that the new trial was properly granted.

The judgment is affirmed.

Reavis, Ch. J., and Fullerton, Anders, Mount, Dunbar, and White, JJ., concur.

fact that there had been a positive tort committed against the private individual, and not a mere exercise of a well-defined right by the city.

Thus, in Mills v. Brooklyn, 32 N. Y. 489, it appeared that, by the grading of its streets, defendant brought to a point in front of plaintiff's property certain surface water which flowed along the street, and then provided an inadequate sewer to care for all the water so accumulated, so that part of it overflowed onto plaintiff's property to its injury. The court said the grievance of which plaintiff complained is that sufficient sewerage to carry off the surface water from his lot has not been provided, and then proceeded to show that, there being no duty on the part of the municipality to provide sewerage, no complaint can be made because that which was provided was inadequate. The court argues that the duty of draining the streets and avenues of the city is one requiring the exercise of deliberation, judgment, and discretion. This duty is not in a technical sense a judicial one, for it does not concern the administration of justice between citizens; but it is of a judicial nature, for it requires the same qualities of deliberation and judgment. This is a matter which is committed to the municipal council, and cannot be reviewed by court or jury. And it was decided that the action could not be maintained. In this argument the court appears to have missed the whole point of the controversy. The fact that the question whether drainage should be provided, and if so how much, is a matter wholly within the discretion of the municipal authorities, is not subject to dispute, and no action lies for the exercise or nonexercise of the power. But when, by its own improvements, the municipality has gathered a body of water at a point which it would not have reached but for these improvements, it is no longer a matter of discretion whether the municipality will provide for such water or abandon it to injure the abutting property owner; but its absolute duty is to care for it, and, in case it fails to do so, it is liable for the resulting injury. Since the court did not consider this phase of the case, the decision is of little value upon the general question. The doctrine of the Mills Case was, however, recognized and followed in Hines v. Lockport, 50 N. Y. 238.
67 L. R. A.

So, in Carr v. Northern Liberties, 35 Pa. 324, 78 Am. Dec. 342, the defendant had, by its system of street improvement, conducted large quantities of surface water to a point opposite the plaintiff's store, and then had failed to provide sufficient inlets into the sewer to provide for all of the water. The consequence was that a summer shower precipitated such quantities of water which were not conducted away that it overflowed the sidewalk and filled the basement of plaintiff's property, and he brought an action to recover for the resulting injury. The court said that the question is, Have the citizens of our incorporated towns a legal right to call upon the portion of the people thus incorporated to devise and execute such a system of drainage as will secure all private property against all ordinary or extraordinary flooding by rain or melting snow? Of course the answer to this question must be in the negative, and such answer the court returned; but the trouble was, the court did not correctly state the proposition before it, which was: Must a municipal corporation, which, by its system of street improvement, conducts large quantities of water to a point which it would not otherwise reach, provide a means by which such water can be disposed of without injury to abutting property? The answer to this question must be in the affirmative, so that the decision in the case is of no value because the proposition to be decided was not correctly stated.

But the same principle was applied in Bear v. Allentown, 143 Pa. 80, 23 Atl. 1082.

Magarity v. Wilmington, 5 Houst. (Del.) 530, was brought to recover damages for injuries to plaintiff's house by water because of the grading of one street and the manner of constructing sewers in another. The source of the water does not appear, nor does it appear in what manner the injury was effected, so that the case is of little value; but the court takes the broad ground that, for discretionary acts, the city cannot be called into question by private citizens. It says that the grading of the avenue in this case, and the construction of the sewer, were matters for decision by the city authorities, which involved no sort of responsibility to private persons; the determination to grade and construct, and the form of doing both, were a plan of action entirely judicious.

In Kavanagh v. Brooklyn, 38 Barb. 232, the city, in grading its streets, caused the water to run along them until it came opposite plaintiff's house, and then, because the city failed to provide for the water, it flowed off from the street onto plaintiff's property, and the court held that there was no liability because the injury was the necessary result of the establishment of a plan of street improvement. The court says: "The ground which plaintiff assumed, and must maintain to entitle him to maintain this action, is that a municipal corporation is liable in damages for an injury or inconvenience to the owner of property upon the streets resulting from the improvement of streets by authority of law, where there is no negligence or unskillfulness in conducting the work. Nothing short of the affirmative of this position will uphold the present action." But it is very obvious that the plaintiff was not required to establish that position in the form in which it was stated by the court. All he had to establish was that the improvement gathered surface water out of its courts and conducted it near plaintiff's property, where it was abandoned to his injury. This gave plaintiff a right of action, whether it was the result of the plan of improvement, or was the result of negligent construction.

In Carroll v. Rye Twp. (N. D.) 101 N. W. 894, the defendant township constructed highways by throwing earth from the sides toward the center so as to leave ditches along them. The effect of this was that the ditches acted as drains for the surface water of a large section of territory, and it flowed to a point on the farm of plaintiff where it overflowed, and plaintiff claimed that it had seriously injured his property. Defendant denied the injury. The court says that, in view of its holding with reference to the law of the case, it was not necessary to decide the disputed question; but, for the purposes of the case, they might assume that the plaintiff had been damaged, and that the damage was the proximate result of defendant's acts. The court then discusses the civil-law rule and the common-enemy rule with reference to the right to obstruct the flow of surface water, and holds that, since the highway ditches were not dug for drainage purposes, but were the necessary, incidental result of the only practicable method of making the road fit for travel, whatever damage plaintiff had suffered from surface water diverted by the highways is not traceable to any misconduct on defendant's part, and therefore plaintiff had no right of action. The court, in making this ruling, plainly overlooks the principle on which the decision should have been placed. The controversy between the courts which have adopted the civil-law rule and the common-enemy rule is as to the right to obstruct or dam up natural drainways. All courts, both those which follow the common-enemy rule and the civil-law rule, hold that, if a person or corporation, by means of improvements of his or its own property, gathers surface water from a large section of country, and conducts it to a point where, unless it is cared for, it will do injury to a neighboring property owner, there is a duty to care for the water, and a liability will exist if it is abandoned and permitted to cause such injury. The plaintiff in the case placed his contention of the right to recover directly upon this principle, and it is strange that the court should have failed even to consider the question of liability on this ground in its opinion, but should have diverged to notice the conflict between the civil-law and the common-enemy rules, and thereby missed the entire point of the controversy.

In Wilson v. New York, 1 Denio, 595, 43 Am. Dec. 719, the raising of the grade of a street was alleged to have obstructed the flowing of the surface water from an abutting lot, and to have turned the water and caused it to run upon such premises, and the proof showed that the water ran from a street and from adjacent lots upon the plaintiff's property because of the improvement. The court said that the municipal corporation acted under authority of the legislature, and that, therefore, what was done was lawful, and, if the plaintiff was thereby incommoded, it was damnum absque injuria; and gave no right of action against those who had only exercised a legal power vested in them for the public convenience and welfare.

d. The Missouri cases.

Thurston v. St. Joseph, 51 Mo. 510, 11 Am. Rep. 463, which involved the question of liability for injuries caused by the bursting of a sewer, contains a discussion of the principles involved that is so full that it throws much light on the question under discussion. Adams, J., who delivered the leading opinion, says that, if the court is to follow the rule laid down in St. Louis v. Gurno, 12 Mo. 414; Taylor v. St. Louis, 14 Mo. 20, 55 Am. Dec. 89; and Hoffman v. St. Louis, 15 Mo. 651,—which denied the liability of the city for consequential injuries to adjoining property because of the alteration of the grade of the highway, plaintiff could not recover in the case at bar. The judge proceeds to state that the cases which denied liability in such cases were founded upon British Cast Plate Mfrs. v. Meredith, 4 T. R. 704, but he denied the applicability of the principle of that decision in this case. The ground of that decision seems to be that Parliament was omnipotent, and, if it saw fit to authorize an improvement without providing for compensation, none could be claimed. There the maxim Salus populi est suprema lex applies, and private rights must yield to public convenience. But the Missouri Constitution guarantees a certain remedy for every injury to property, and provides that private property shall not be taken for public use without compensation. Under these provisions, when the legislature confers power upon a municipal corporation to make improvements, the corresponding duty to make compensation must be implied. And since, under the authority of Lackland v. North Missouri R. Co. 31 Mo. 180, the right of an owner of a lot in a town to the use of the adjoining street is as much property as the lot itself, the access cannot be cut off by the alteration of the grade without making compensation, thereby overruling the Gurno, Taylor, and Hoffman Cases. In this opinion Sherwood, J., concurs. Ewing, J., concurs in the result. Wagner, J., dissents, and Vories, J., did not sit. But in Schattner v. Kansas City, 53 Mo. 162, which involved the question of liability for changing the grade 4 feet, the court returned to the doctrine of the Gurno Case, and held that there is no liability. Again, in Imler v. Springfield, 55 Mo. 125, 17 Am. Rep. 645, where, during the process of improving a street, the gutter at its side was temporarily filled up so that the water from a sewer ran over the walk onto plaintiff's property, the court denied the liability of the municipality, saying that in such case no right of action accrues to persons having property fronting on the street improved, unless the injury be shown to have resulted from the negligent or improper manner in which the work is done by the city or its employees. This has been the settled doctrine of this state ever since the case of St. Louis v. Gurno, 12 Mo. 414. The court further says, the case was tried upon the theory that it was the duty of the city during the progress of the work to prevent the surface water from flowing upon the lots of the adjoining proprietors, and that it was negligence in the city not to have done so, for which it is liable. But the court held that no such liability exists. Authorities are then cited to the effect that, in grading streets, the municipality is under no obligation to provide means to keep the surface water from flowing onto abutting property. But the court seems to overlook the fact that in the case under consideration the municipality had not simply failed to provide means for keeping the water off from the abutting property, but actually interfered with its flow so as to change its course, and cast it on to the abutting property, which was sufficient to give a right of action. See 3 Farnham, Waters, § 886. Again, in Wegmann v. Jefferson, 61 Mo. 55, in which damages were sought for injuries to abutting property by the change of the grade of a street, the court said it was well settled in that state that a municipal corporation was not liable for consequential injuries caused by the alteration of street grades if it exercised reasonable care and skill in the performance of the work.

Finally, in Foster v. St. Louis, 71 Mo. 157, an action was brought to recover damages for injuries caused by water which was gathered by the improvement and paving of a street and precipitated by the termination of the gutter onto plaintiff's property. The court said the evidence tended to show that the street was opened according to a plan; that in said plan no method was devised for the disposition of surface water which might flow along the gutters so that adjoining property owners would not be injured by it; so that the injury resulted from an error of judgment on the part of the city council in ordering the opening of the street at a certain grade without providing some method of disposing of the surface water. The court then proceeded to state that the passage of the ordinance was quasi judicial, and that the rule that the city is not liable for consequential damages arising from a defect in a plan adopted is fully established by the Imler, Schattner, and Wegmann Cases, and the case of Saxton v. St. Joseph, 60 Mo. 153, which involved the question of the liability of the city to pay for work done on a street for which the abutting owners were not liable because of a defect in the ordinance authorizing the performance of the work, and in which the court held that the doctrine that the city is liable for the negligent manner in which public duties are carried on does not apply to defective legislation. The question of defective plan was not discussed in either the Imler, Schattner or Wegmann Cases, and the Saxton Case is plainly not in point; so that the court in the Foster Case, without a particle of authority to sustain the decision, justifies the casting of gathered surface water in a body onto adjoining property because it was the result of a defective plan. Such a result is, of course, not justifiable on principle. But the principle of that case was followed in Stewart v. Clifton, 79 Mo. 603, although in the latter case the injury was in fact caused by a pipe which plaintiff had himself laid, so that the case depends upon entirely different principles from those chiefly discussed by the court.

What effect these decisions had in causing the change in the Constitution cannot be stated, but in 1875 an amendment to that instrument provided that private property should not be damaged for public use without compensation, and, under that amendment, it is intimated in Werth v. Springfield, 78 Mo. 107, that compensation must be made in some form for this class of injuries.

IV. Injury to travelers.

a. Defective streets.

When the question of the municipal liability to travelers is considered, such liability is found to depend, not upon any private right of the injured person, but upon his right as one of the public. The public has no rights against the municipality in the absence of legislation conferring them either expressly or impliedly. When it has been established that, under the statutes of a particular state, a city is liable for failure to maintain its streets in a safe condition, the question arises, Is there any ground for distinction between those defects which are the result of the plan on which the work was done, and those which result from the negligent execution of the plan? On principle, it would seem that it was immaterial, so far as the liability of the city was concerned, how the defect arose. If it is bound to keep the streets free from defects, liability is established by an injury caused by a defect, and the city should not be heard to say that it deliberately planned the defect. The majority of the cases take this view of the matter.

The rule of exemption from liability for injuries caused by a defective plan should not be carried to the extent of relieving the city from liability when the plan devised and put in operation leaves the streets in a dangerous condition for public use. And where the injury was caused by a person stepping into the catch basin to a sewer, the court stated that, whatever the evidence as to the original plan might have been, it was shown that it had become enlarged and out of repair after it was finished; but it held that, if the city has adopted a plan and created an existing condition in a street in pursuance thereof, which renders the street unsafe, the city must go further, and perform the duty cast upon it, growing out of the statute, to exercise ordinary care to make the street thus encumbered with the product of its plan reasonably safe for public travel. Chicago v. Seben, 165 Ill. 371, 56 Am. St. Rep. 245, 46 N. E. 244.

A city has no more right to plan or create an unsafe and dangerous condition of one of its streets than it has to plan or create a public or common nuisance. Gould v. Topeka, 82 Kan. 485, 49 Am. Rep. 496, 4 Pac. 822. The court says, while we recognize the rule that the municipality is not liable for an erroneous exercise of its legislative powers, and think it may have application in some cases, yet we do not think it has very much room for application where injuries occur to private individuals on account of defective and manifestly dangerous public streets. The control of the streets of cities was not put into their hands for the purpose that they might plan or order that the streets should be made dangerous or unsafe for the public to travel there; nor was such control put into their hands for the purpose that they might plan or order that the streets should remain in an unsafe or dangerous condition if previously dangerous; but such control was given to them for the sole purpose that they should make and keep the streets safe and convenient for the traveling public. If the city should plan or arrange that a street should be made unsafe and dangerous, we should be inclined to think that it would so transcend its powers as given to it by the legislature, and so violate its duties as imposed upon it by the legislature, that it would be liable for any injury which would occur to any individual by reason of such unwise action. Such action would be substantially the same as planning and creating a public nuisance. Where a street as planned or ordered by the governing board of a city is so manifestly dangerous that a court upon the facts could say, as matter of law, that it was dangerous and unsafe, the rule contended for should not have any application, and the city should be held liable; but where, upon the facts, it would be so doubtful whether the street as planned or ordered was dangerous and unsafe or not, that different minds might entertain different opinions with respect thereto, the benefit of the doubt might properly be given to the city.

So, in Birmingham v. Lewis, 92 Ala. 352, 9 So. 243, where the accident occurred because of an open catch basin or sewer opening extending into the sidewalk, and it did not appear whether the construction was the result of a plan adopted by the council, or merely of the negligence of those in charge of the streets in making repairs, the court says the city has no more right to plan or create an unsafe and dangerous condition in one of its public streets than it has to plan or create a public nuisance.

The duty to keep streets reasonably safe and fit for travel applies to defects in construction as well as defects in repair. Plainview v. Mendelson, 65 Neb. 85, 90 N. W. 956.

Where a traveler in a street fell into an open ditch which had been constructed for drainage purposes, the city contended that the devising of the plan was a legislative or quasi judicial act, for the consequences of which it was not answerable; but the court held that, where jurisdiction over its streets is conferred on a municipal corporation, it carries with it the concomitant and imperative duty and obligation to keep its streets free from obstructions and in a reasonably safe condition for travelers, and it would be absurd to show that it might determine on a plan for the improvement of streets which would expose the public to perils and dangers of life and limb without liability for the result. Hinds v. Marshall, 22 Mo. App. 208.

If, after the completion of the improvement, notice is brought home to the municipality that the street is not reasonably safe for use under ordinary circumstances by reason of the faulty construction of the improvement, it becomes the ministerial duty of the corporation to remove the defect. Dayton v. Taylor, 43 Ohio L. J. 209.

67 L. R. A.

A municipal corporation is liable for injuries caused by a dangerous defect in a street under its control without reasonable notice of its unsafe condition, where it arose from the construction of the street in conformity with a plan adopted by the municipal authorities. Circleville v. Sohn, 59 Ohio St. 285, 69 Am. St. Rep. 777, 52 N. E. 788.

Where plaintiff was injured because of the city's construction of a raised track to carry traffic along the center of the highway, leaving an unguarded embankment on either side, the court said the doctrine of a general plan or system of grading the streets has nothing to do with the case. The streets should be so graded as to leave them reasonably safe for travel. Wilson v. Atlanta, 60 Ga. 473.

A street which is raised over a depression for one half its width, leaving an unguarded embankment several feet high between the improved street and the part left in its natural state, is unsafe as matter of law, and the municipality cannot relieve itself from liability for injuries resulting from such construction by showing that such method of construction was approved by the municipal authorities. Prideaux v. Mineral Point, 43 Wis. 513, 28 Am. Rep. 558.

The question of the sufficiency of a street construction to make it safe for travelers is for the jury. Berg v. Milwaukee, 83 Wis. 599, 33 N. W. 890.

Where an injury occurred by reason of a horse backing off a narrow and elevated portion of a highway, the court said streets must be so constructed that the ordinary horse with the ordinary disposition, employed for the ordinary incidents of commerce or freight, can be driven with reasonable safety on them; and it held that it was a question for the jury to determine whether it had been so constructed or not. White v. Ballard, 19 Wash. 284, 53 Pac. 159.

In Sutton v. Snohomish, 11 Wash. 24, 48 Am. St. Rep. 847, 39 Pac. 273, which was an action to recover damages for injuries caused by a defect in a street, the municipal corporation claimed that it was not liable for neglect of governmental duty; but the court said: We are of opinion that the laying out, repairing, and control of streets by a chartered municipality does not call forth the exercise of strictly governmental functions. In the performance of such duties the municipality acts properly for the benefit of the inhabitants of the particular locality, and for breach of them an action will lie in favor of a person injured.

b. Defective walks.

A municipal corporation having exclusive control of its streets is bound to keep them in safe condition, and cannot escape liability for an accident caused by needlessly leaving a step in a sidewalk, on the ground that the defect was in the plan of the walk, and therefore within the discretionary powers of the municipality. Blyth v. Waterville, 57 Minn. 115, 47 Am. St. Rep. 596, 58 N. W. 817. The court says, if two plans of construction are presented, neither of which will be absolutely safe, the municipality cannot be held liable for adopting one rather than the other. To make the corporation liable the plan adopted would have to be so much and so obviously more unsafe than the other as to show a neglect to employ the diligence, judgment, and skill in determining the plan which ordinary care would require.

In Evans v. Iowa City (Iowa) 100 N. W. 1112, the defendant was held negligent in constructing a sidewalk of pine board of the poorest grade, less than 1 inch in thickness, laid upon stringers 2x4 in size, placed upon the ground; but there is no discussion of the question whether the plan of construction was adopted by the council or by the officers performing the work.

In Dallas v. Jones, 93 Tex. 38, 49 S. W. 577, 53 S. W. 377, a recovery was permitted for injuries caused by the original construction of the walk on a defective plan.

In Belton v. Turner (Tex. Civ. App.) 27 S. W. 831, defendant requested an instruction relieving it from liability if the defect was in the plan duly adopted by ordinance; but the court said it would be contrary to all principles governing the liability of municipal corporations to allow them to relieve themselves by ordinance of liability for injuries resulting by their negligence. If the city had an ordinance authorizing the construction of sidewalks dangerous to people traveling thereon, instead of having a tendency to excuse it from liability for the consequence to one innocently traveling there, it would tend to intensify its negligence and more certainly fix its liability.

In Pfeifer v. Lake, 37 Ill. App. 367, where plaintiff sustained injury because a step had been constructed in the walk at a point where there was no light at the time of the accident, so that in attempting to pass along the walk she stumbled and fell, the court held that the question whether the walk was safe or not in the manner in which it was left, was for the jury; but the dissenting judge says that the complaint is not that the work it did was improperly or negligently done, but that its plan for the work was improper and injudicious. This is a matter over which the courts have no control. Having discretion as to whether it would improve at all, it has, also, discretion as to the kind of improvement, if any, it will make. Its judgment as to what is the best kind of improvement is not subject to review by court or jury in cases where the court cannot say that the plan itself is so dangerous that its construction is negligent. The judge continues, the greater weight of authority, as well as reason, seems to me to be opposed to any extension of the liability of municipal corporations to cases in which the neglect, if any, consists in an alleged defect in the plan or mode of improvement, and is one concerning which men of experience in such matters might well differ. To declare it to be one of the functions of the jury in all cases to pass upon and pronounce safe or dangerous the plan of street improvement resolved upon and constructed by a municipal corporation is simply to take from the authorities the quasi judicial discretion vested in them in respect to such matters, and to leave it ever uncertain as to what shall be done in order that juries may not punish the municipality for not adopting a plan of improvement such as they deem most secure.

The lower court said that, in addition to the fact that the improvement was in accordance with a plan adopted by the city, there must be the further circumstance that, if the plan were such that the condition of the street necessarily resulting therefrom was rendered unsafe and dangerous, reasonable precautions were employed to protect persons using the street in a lawful manner and with due care against injury. Chicago v. Seben, 62 Ill. App. 248.

Where an injury was caused by a plank set on edge and extended above the level of the sidewalk, the trial court granted a peremptory instruction for the city, on the theory that the defect was a structural one for which the city was not liable. The supreme court, however, said: We think this was carrying the doctrine invoked too far. While it is true the plan of improvement of the streets of the city—and, indeed, whether they should be improved at all—is a matter confined to the discretion of the municipal council, yet, if they do improve them, it must be done upon some plan not palpably dangerous to life and limb of travelers. The council cannot authorize or suffer traps or pitfalls, or such obviously dangerous obstructions, to exist in the public streets, whether structural or otherwise, as indicate a disregard of the safety of pedestrians, without making the city liable for injuries sustained therefrom. House v. Covington, 28 Ky. L. Rep. 660, 82 S. W. 374.

As has already been intimated, the city is not liable merely because an accident occurs. It is not possible to insure travelers against all accidents. If several methods of construction are available, either of which is reasonably safe, the city cannot be held liable for adopting one rather than another.

It is for the city to determine and adopt, not only the grade of the streets and sidewalks, but also the material to be used. In this the city acts for and in the interest of the general public. It is not compelled to adopt any particular plan or grade, to use any special kind of material, or to make the improvement to conform to any given standard. The city is not amenable simply because its officers adopt one plan or grade in preference to another, or select one kind of material rather than another, or because streets and sidewalks of a given standard are more perfect and better than that adopted. If the municipality is not negligent in adopting the plan of a sidewalk, the mere fact that it slopes toward the street in such a manner as to afford a smooth and insecure footing when covered with snow and ice will not render the municipality liable for injury to a pedestrian who falls upon the walk. McQueen v. Elkhart, 14 Ind. App. 671, 43 N. E. 460.

In Teager v. Flemingsburg, 109 Ky. 746, 53 L. R. A. 791, 95 Am. St. Rep. 400, 60 S. W. 718, the court says it is inclined to the view that, while the city governing body may exercise its discretion in the selection of a plan of street improvement, if the plan adopted is one unsafe to travelers the city would be liable. But when the plan is one that many prudent men might approve, or where it would be so doubtful upon the facts whether the street as planned or ordered by the city governing body was dangerous or unsafe or not,—that different minds might entertain different opinions with respect thereto,—the benefit of the doubt should be given to the city, and it should not be held liable. Therefore, the city was held not liable for an injury occurring because of a step in a sidewalk.

If, when a section of a sidewalk is brought to the established grade, it is higher than the adjoining section, which has not been improved, and the municipal authorities exercise their best judgment as to the best method of joining one grade with the other, there will be no liability in case the plan adopted proves to be insufficient to prevent all accidents. Rotsell v. Warren, 10 Pa. Super. Ct. 283.

c. Defective bridges.

A city cannot carelessly and negligently adopt an unsafe plan for a bridge, and escape liability for damages resulting from the insufficiency of the plan. Ferguson v. Davis County, 57 Iowa, 601, 10 N. W. 906.

In Weightman v. Washington, 1 Black, 30, 17 L. ed. 52, the injury was caused by the fall of a bridge which was a part of defendant's highway system, and the defense was made that the giving way of the bridge was solely the result of accident resulting from a defect in the plan under which the bridge had been constructed, and that the plan had been adopted by a competent committee under the advice of scientific men. But the court held that the control and management of the bridge had been placed by the legislature upon the municipal corporation, and it had been charged with the expense of keeping the same in repair, and of rebuilding it when necessary. The court then, without discussing the effect upon the cause of the defect in plan, held that, since the bridge was out of repair and unsafe, and caused the injury complained of, it was error to instruct the jury that plaintiff was not entitled to recover.

A municipal corporation is liable for injuries caused by the fall of a bridge because of its defective plan, where it committed the construction of the bridge to its engineer, and he adopted a defective plan for that purpose. Dayton v. Pease, 4 Ohio St. 80. The court says, when a municipal corporation undertakes to execute its own prescribed regulations by constructing improvements for the especial interest and advantage of its own inhabitants, the authorities are all agreed that it is to be treated merely as a legal individual, and as such owing all the duties to private persons, and subject to all the liabilities, that pertain to private corporations or individual citizens. To this class most clearly belong the construction, repair, and maintenance of its streets.

The rule that a municipal corporation acts judicially in selecting a plan on which a public improvement is to be constructed, and that no private action will lie for lack of judgment in that respect, has no application to an injury resulting to a traveler from its negligent construction of a bridge. Jordan v. Hannibal, 87 Mo. 673.

In Kennedy v. Williamsport, 11 Pa. Super. Ct. 91, it is said, while the law invests a municipal corporation with power to establish and construct sidewalks and bridges upon the highways, and determine their form of construction, it requires, also, that their construction shall be reasonably safe and secure. Whether a bridge where an injury occurred was in fact properly constructed and guarded is a question of fact for the determination of the jury.

But a county is not bound to adopt the best plan for bridge building. Its duty is fulfilled by the adoption of a plan approved by a competent mechanic as suitable for the place where the bridge is to be built. Childs v. Crawford County, 176 Pa. 139, 34 Atl. 1020.

So, where there are obstacles to overcome in the construction of a public bridge, and reasonable minds might differ as to whether the plan adopted therefor by the municipality was the best and safest one, the decision of the municipality on the question cannot be reviewed by the courts. But the municipality is liable for an injury caused by an unsafe public structure, although the defect exists in the plan adopted for its construction, if there is no reasonable necessity for having the defect. McDonald v. Duluth (Minn.) 100 N. W. 1102.

It is not competent to show that the plan of a bridge which falls while a traveler is attempting to pass over it was not the best, or as good, perhaps, as it might have been. Woodbury v. Owosso, 64 Mich. 239, 31 N. W. 130.

d. Courts denying liability.

In some cases the liability of the city has been denied. Some of the courts, however, which at first adopted that view, have since changed their opinions, either because of a change in the statute, or upon general principles.

Michigan.

Early cases in Michigan in which the question arose were decided, apparently, upon the ground that there was no liability for a defect in plan, when, in fact, that nonliability was due to the fact that no liability had been imposed by the legislature in any case, and, as soon as this defect was supplied, the liability became general in that state, the same as in others.

In an early case in which the question arose, the court said: The lawful exercise of legislative action cannot be a wrong; and, since the determination of the plan of a public work is in the nature of legislative action, there must be something beside the mere execution of the plan as adopted before the municipality can be held liable as for a tort. Therefore, it was held that the municipality was not liable for injuries to one who fell into an open ditch or sewer which had been constructed across the street, but covered only for a portion of the width of the highway. The court says, in planning a public work a municipality must determine for itself to what extent it will guard against possible accidents. Courts and juries are not to say it shall be punished in damages for not giving the public more complete protection. Lansing v. Toolan, 27 Mich. 152.

In Detroit v. Beckman, 34 Mich. 125, 22 Am. Rep. 507, action was brought for the death of a person who, driving along a street across a culvert, drove off the end of the structure because its length was less than the width of the roadway, and it was unprotected by railing or guard of any kind. The court said: When complaint is made that the original plan of a public work is so defective as to render the work dangerous when completed it is apparent that the fault found is with legislative action, and a suit granted upon it is granted upon a wrong attributable to the legislative body itself. The prescribing of the plan must be a matter of legislation. The court further said: The distinction in principle between the case where the complaint is that the work must necessarily cause an injury to private property equivalent to an appropriation of some enjoyment thereof to which the owner is entitled, and a case where the fault found is that the plan is not most wise and prudent to protect against accidents, seems distinct and palpable. The public authorities cannot appropriate a man's property without making compensation, whether it be done by excluding him from his land, or by flooding, or otherwise injuring, it. But to what extent they shall guard the citizen against dangers when he is making use of a highway or other public convenience is, and must be, a matter of discretion. The court then adds that prior cases decided by that court, to the effect that there is no liability for interfering with navigation by bridging a stream, or in interfering with the access of an abutting owner by changing the grade of the street, are conclusive of the case at bar. And the principle of that case was followed in Toolan v. Lansing, 38 Mich. 315.

The Michigan statute making municipal corporations liable for defects in public highways does not seem to have been passed until 1879. See McKellar v. Detroit, 57 Mich. 158, 58 Am. Rep. 357, 23 N. W. 621.

But when it was passed the court held that the statute applies to defect of plan. Schrader v. Port Huron, 106 Mich. 173, 63 N. W. 964.

In Malloy v. Walker Twp. 77 Mich. 448, 6 L. R. A. 605, 43 N. W. 1012, where an accident occurred because of absence of a railing or barrier along the side of an embankment upon which the highway was constructed, defendant contended that it was not liable for injuries caused by reason of the plan or scheme of construction of the road, either as to width or want of barriers. But the court says that the statute is imperative that the highway shall be kept safe and convenient for public travel at all times, and that in Alexander v. Big Rapids, 76 Mich. 282, 42 N. W. 1071, where, in the process of making an improvement, a cross walk was removed, leaving an opening into which plaintiff fell, the precise question was determined against the municipality, the court saying that in that case while the improvement was going on there was no right to leave the crossing open to travel, unless it was made reasonably safe and fit therefor. The court decided that the question whether the highway was safe for public travel was for the jury, whether the alleged insufficiency was because of defect of plan or want of repair, saying that this statute cannot be given a construction that would relieve the municipality, upon which a burden is cast to keep its highways in repair and reasonably safe for travel, from liability by saying that it had adopted a method of construction and had built according to a plan. Municipalities cannot construct a dangerous and unsafe road,—one not safe and convenient for public travel,—and shield themselves from liability behind their legislative powers to adopt a plan and method of building and constructing in accordance therewith. The negligence consists, not in the plan of the work, or the manner in which it is done, but in failure to provide suitable protection against accidents after the embankment has been made. Campbell, J., in dissenting, said: "I am not prepared to depart from what I conceive to be the settled law of this state, or to hold that the proper or best method of building roads is among the presumable accomplishments of average jurors. The officers intrusted with the discretion are selected under the law and act on their best judgment, and I do not believe their judgment is open to revision unless so manifestly perverted as to show they have never used their discretion at all." 67 L. R. A.

The statute applies to defects in construction as well as to neglect to repair when the road is unsafe. Therefore, the municipality will be liable if, in constructing the road, it leaves a stump so near the traveled path as to render the way unsafe and dangerous. Sebert v. Alpena, 78 Mich. 165, 43 N. W. 1098.

But, even under a statute making the municipal corporation liable for injuries caused by its neglect to keep its streets in repair and in a condition reasonably safe and fit for travel, the city was held not liable for injury caused to one traveling in a buggy by driving upon a stone placed at the end of a drain carrying water across the street to prevent persons from getting off the end of the drain into the gutter, since such defect must be regarded as one of plan, within the legislative discretion of the city, for which it could not be held liable. Davis v. Jackson, 61 Mich. 530, 28 N. W. 526.

No, although the statute requires the municipal corporation to keep its cross walks in safe condition for public travel, it cannot be made liable because, in the construction of the walk, a step is left between the curb and the portion of the walk laid in the street. Shippy v. Au Sable, 65 Mich. 494, 32 N. W. 741. The court says the village authorities have a perfect right, in the use of their discretion, which courts cannot review, to determine how and where cross walks shall be laid, and how access shall be obtained between the foot walk and the carriage way. The court further says: "All municipal ways must be put under the supervision of the public authorities. It is for them to decide what works shall be undertaken, and how the general safety and convenience require them to be built. There must be some final arbiter as to the proper way of doing this. In many cases plans more or less formal must be considered, and taxes or assessments levied to complete them. If it can be referred to a jury to determine on the propriety of such action, there will be as many views as there are juries, and it can never be definitely known when a municipality is safe. It is beyond human ingenuity to devise a plan which is not capable of danger to heedless persons, or to young children, who cannot be expected to appreciate the danger. Reasonable safety is what the law requires and no more."

New York.

The early New York cases in the court of appeals applied the rule of nonliability; but, in view of the fact that that court has recently affirmed, without opinion, lower-court cases which applied the opposite rule, it would seem that the New York court was inclined to change its position.

No action will lie against a municipal corporation for injuries caused by a fall upon a walk which has too great an incline, where the walk was constructed according to a plan adopted or approved by the city. Urquhart v. Ogdensburg, 91 N. Y. 67, 43 Am. Rep. 655. The court says that the rule is well settled that, where power is conferred upon a municipal corporation to make improvements, the duty to make them is quasi judicial or discretionary, involving a determination as to their necessity, requisite capacity, location, etc., and for a failure to exercise this power, or an erroneous estimate of the public needs, no civil action can be maintained; and that case was followed in Rehrey v. Newburgh, 60 N. Y. S. R. 250, 28 N. Y. Supp. 916.

In Monk v. New Utrecht, 104 N. Y. 552, 11 N. E. 268, where plaintiff fell down an unguarded embankment sloping for 30 feet away from the highway, the court held that, under the circumstances, the want of a guard was not a defect; but, upon the assumption that it might be so, it said the commissioners were called upon, in constructing a plan, to decide upon the safety of the route adopted and the dangers thereby to be encountered, and, if safeguards were necessary to protect travelers in passing dangerous places, to provide them; and, if they failed to do so, it constituted merely a defect in the plan of the work, arising from an error of judgment as to its necessities. For such errors it is well settled that no liability exists.

Error in judgment in establishing the grade of a cross walk so that the approach to it descends 6 inches in 3 feet is not negligence which will render the municipality liable to one injured by falling upon the incline. Betts v. Gloversville, 29 N. Y. S. R. 331, 8 N. Y. Supp. 795.

A city is not liable for an accident which occurs because of a defect of plan in a cross walk, whether the plan was such as would meet the approval of a reasonable, careful, and prudent man, or not. Roach v. Ogdensburg, 80 Hun, 467, 30 N. Y. Supp. 450.

There is no liability for adopting a plan for the construction of cross walks so as to leave an uncovered gutter between the end of the cross walk and the curb. Rhinelander v. Lockport, 38 N. Y. S. R. 567, 14 N. Y. Supp. 850.

But in Clemence v. Auburn, 66 N. Y. 384, where plaintiff fell on a walk improperly constructed with too steep a grade, the court held that the question whether the city was liable for a judicial act was not properly in the case, but remarked that it was questionable whether, the absolute duty being imposed by the law upon the city to construct and keep in repair the sidewalk, it would not be liable to one traveling thereon for the improper construction of the walk; affirming 4 Hun, 380, where the court said: It does not require argument to prove that a walk having in it a stone laid upon a grade having a descent of 6 inches in a distance of 3½ feet is dangerous to persons not aware of such grade. The council may establish such grade for its streets as it sees fit, and is not responsible for an error of judgment in establishing such a grade. But this exemption from liability does not relieve the city from liability if, in sinking or repairing the street or walk, it is left so as to be dangerous to the life of limb of persons passing over it.

So, the lower courts have held that if the failure to erect barriers along a dangerous embankment upon which a highway is laid out is negligence, the municipality cannot shield itself from liability for injuries thereby caused to travelers, on the ground that the defect was one of plan. Maxim v. Champion, 50 Hun, 88, 4 N. Y. Supp. 515. Affirmed without opinion in 119 N. Y. 626, 23 N. E. 1144.

So, the failure to erect barriers along a dangerous embankment upon which a highway is laid out is not an error of judgment, but is negligence, for the consequences of which the municipality will be liable. Wood v. Glilboa, 76 Hun, 175, 27 N. Y. Supp. 586.
67 L. R. A.

In Klernan v. New York, 14 App. Div. 156, 43 N. Y. Supp. 538, where the accident occurred because of want of a barrier between the sidewalk and a dangerous embankment, the liability of the city was upheld, the courts saying that it could not escape liability on the ground that it acted judicially in determining to leave the place in that condition. The court says: The city very likely would not be held liable because the plan had not provided for such guard or barrier, but, after the work was completed and accepted and maintained without the barrier, the question whether or not the highway was safe was a question for the jury; the court adding, if the condition was not reasonably safe then the city neglected its duty to the public, who had occasion to use, and did use, the walk, and was liable for any injuries caused by such negligence. It cannot be held, as a general proposition, that a city may excuse itself from a charge of negligence as to the construction and care of its streets, merely by claiming that it acted judicially in determining to leave the street in a dangerous condition for public travel. The cases in which any such rule can be applied at all must necessarily be quite limited.

In Lehmann v. Brooklyn, 30 App. Div. 305, 51 N. Y. Supp. 524, where the accident occurred because of a depression in the street caused by surface water flowing towards a catch basin of a sewer, the court, in affirming a judgment in plaintiff's favor, said: For a method of street construction which, under the natural and ordinary action of the elements, will render street travel dangerous, a municipality is as justly subject to liability when the dangerous condition arises as if it had actually created the dangerous condition in the first instance.

In Collett v. New York, 51 App. Div. 394, 64 N. Y. Supp. 893, the city, in laying out a bicycle path, left a curb so near the entrance as to render it dangerous to persons attempting to turn into the path at night, and sufficient light was not furnished to enable travelers to avoid the obstruction. Plaintiff, in attempting to use the path, was injured, and an action in his favor was held to be maintainable, the court saying: "While it is the duty of every corporation which has occasion to lay out a highway or to open a street to use reasonable care to see that the street should be so laid out as to be reasonably safe for persons using it, the law recognizes that, under certain circumstances, it may be necessary so to construct the street that it may not be perfectly safe for travel, and, when that is the case, and the street is in such a condition that it is unsafe as a necessary result of the plan of its construction, the courts have held that the corporation is not liable for any injury to one passing which arises solely and purely because of the defect in the plan adopted. But it is quite manifest that such a rule, tending, as it does, to relieve a corporation very largely from the results of the carelessness or ignorance of its officers, and which tends to increase the danger to persons using the streets, is not to be extended to cases which are not clearly included within it. Before a corporation can claim exemption from liability for a defect in a highway because of a fault in the plan, it must also appear that, if the defect of the plan is such as to make the street dangerous, some steps have been taken, so far as possible, to remedy the defect, or to advise persons using the highway of the existence of the defect, so that they might protect themselves against it.

In Hubbell v. Yonkers, 35 Hun, 349, the horse drawing the vehicle in which plaintiff was riding shied and carried the wagon over an unguarded embankment. Defendant claimed that the defect, if any, was in the plan of the improvement, but the court held that, if the public had a right to require guards for the side of the street to make it safe for travel, the failure to erect them was negligence, and the city was liable for injury resulting from their absence. The court said: If a bridge was built by a city and left without a side guard, or a street was constructed on a causeway high above the natural level of the ground, and left without side rails or protection, responsibility for injuries resulting from their absence cannot be avoided by showing that they were made in accordance with plan. Such a doctrine, carried to its legitimate conclusion and result, might release all municipalities from the duty imposed on them to maintain the streets within their limits in a safe condition for travel in the usual modes. But this case was reversed on appeal on the ground that the highway was not in fact defective. 104 N. Y. 434, 58 Am. Rep. 522, 10 N. E. 858.

Other cases.

Under a statute making a municipal corporation liable for injuries caused by failure to keep its highways in repair, there is no liability for injury caused by the narrow and crooked condition of the street as laid out, since the duty of the municipality to the public under the statute begins only after the road is laid out and constructed. Smith v. Wakefield, 105 Mass. 473.

The exercise by a municipal corporation of discretion as to which of several methods it will adopt to connect two sections of walk whose grades are at different levels is not subject to review by the courts so long as the one selected is an appropriate and lawful one. Hoyt v. Danbury, 69 Conn. 341, 37 Atl. 1051. The court says the statutory liability placed upon the corporation is for failure to keep the highway in repair. A defect of plan upon which the highway was constructed is not within the statute. If such a defect naturally results in a direct injury to an owner of adjacent land, he has his action at law for this invasion of his proprietary right. But injuries which it may occasion to travelers cannot be made the subject of an action in their favor. They are the result of an error of judgment on the part of the officers of a public corporation on which has been cast the burden of discharging a governmental duty of a quasi judicial nature.

For consequential damage thus occasioned to members of the general public the common law never gave a remedy; nor has the statute changed the rule. If, indeed, a defect in the plan of construction should be so great as soon to require repairs in order to make the highway safe for travel, a neglect to make these repairs might found an action. So, where the plan of construction adopted is one which was utterly inadmissible, the highway would have been in such a defective condition as to be out of repair from the beginning.

A municipal corporation is not liable for injuries to a pedestrian from a fall caused by 67 L. R. A.

too great an incline at the point where the sidewalk is joined to the street pavement, where the incline is a part of the plan of improvement adopted under authority of the legislature. Augusta v. Little, 115 Ga. 124, 41 S. E. 238. The court said it is now settled that, where the legislature delegates governmental authority to a municipal corporation, the municipality is not liable to private individuals for any error in performing legislative or judicial powers. The adoption by a municipality of a plan for grading the streets and sidewalks of a city is a quasi judicial act, and, if the plan adopted be erroneous, the city cannot be held liable to a private person for his injury thereby. Some courts have held that a municipal corporation is liable where it is negligent in selecting a plan in that incompetent persons are employed for that purpose. Even if we considered these decisions sound, they would not be applicable here, for there was no evidence whatever that the city engineer, by whom the plan of the work was adopted, was incompetent. The court continues: Nor do we think that the verdict can be upheld on the ground that the city maintained a dangerous place in the sidewalk after the lapse of a sufficient length of time for it to have ascertained that the place was dangerous. There is a conflict of evidence as to whether the place was dangerous or not.

H. P. F.

S. NORMILE, Appt., v.

NORTHERN PACIFIC RAILWAY COMPANY, Resp't.

(.....Wash.....)

1. A carrier must place freight carried on platform cars to a station where it maintains a freight house, but no agent, in the house, to relieve itself from liability for freight lost through theft, unless it shows that it is not able to do so.
2. Written notice of the arrival of a consignment of freight need not be given to a consignee if he has actual notice thereof.
3. Mailing notice of the arrival of the consignment of freight to the consignee at the place of its destination is sufficient.
4. A consignee of freight loaded on a flat car which is placed on a side track at a station where no agent is maintained by the company is not guilty of laches when, after receiving notice of the arrival of the property and communicating with the agent having supervision of the station, insufficient time remains to effect a removal that day, so that his vehicle does not reach the car until the next morning.
5. The question of what is a reasonable time in which freight is to be removed from the cars by the consignee so as to relieve the carrier from risk of loss is one of law for the court, where there is no dispute about the material facts.

NOTE.—As to liability of carrier for loss of goods after they reach destination, see also, in this series, East Tennessee, V. & G. R. Co. v. Kelly, 17 L. R. A. 691, and note; Missouri P. R. Co. v. Nevils, 28 L. R. A. 80; and Allan v. Pennsylvania R. Co. 39 L. R. A. 635.

(September 21, 1904.)

APPEAL by plaintiff from a judgment of the Superior Court for King County in defendant's favor in an action brought to recover the value of goods placed in defendant's possession for transportation and alleged to have been lost in transit. Reversed.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Messrs. Bennett & Whitham, for appellant:

The transportation company assumes all responsibility, and is the absolute insurer of the property against loss except by act of God or the public enemy.

Michigan S. & N. I. R. Co. v. Day, 20 Ill. 375, 71 Am. Dec. 278; Parsons v. Hardy, 14 Wend. 215, 28 Am. Dec. 521; 5 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, 2d ed. pp. 234, 235.

It was therefore incumbent upon the company:

To place the goods in a safe and proper car, even though there had been an agreement that it should not be responsible on account of the car or manner in which the freight was forwarded.

Ogdensburg & L. C. R. Co. v. Pratt, 22 Wall. 123, 22 L. ed. 827.

To store the goods in its warehouse upon their arrival at their destination, before it could relieve itself of the liability of common carrier, and assume the lesser degree of liability of warehousemen.

Chicago & R. I. R. Co. v. Warren, 16 Ill. 502, 63 Am. Dec. 317; Stone v. Waitt, 31 Me. 409, 52 Am. Dec. 621; 5 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, 2d ed. p. 191; Story, Bailments, § 538; Michigan S. & N. I. R. Co. v. Day, 20 Ill. 375, 71 Am. Dec. 278; Angell, Car. § 282; DeMott v. Laraway, 14 Wend. 225, 28 Am. Dec. 523; 2 Rorer, Railroads, §§ 20, 1282-1294; Crawford v. Clark, 15 Ill. 562; Chicago & N. W. R. Co. v. Bensley, 69 Ill. 630; Hutchinson, Carr. § 371; McMillan v. Michigan S. & N. I. R. Co. 16 Mich. 79, 93 Am. Dec. 208.

When the goods are stored liability as carrier ceases, and as warehouseman begins.

Illinois C. R. Co. v. Friend, 64 Ill. 303; Bortholomeu v. St. Louis, J. & C. R. Co. 53 Ill. 227, 5 Am. Rep. 45; 2 Rorer, Railroads, p. 1224.

Mr. A. A. Booth, with Messrs. James F. McElroy and B. S. Grosscup, for respondent:

Under the custom and practice of the company, of which appellant, as a shipper, must be aware, goods shipped to prepaid stations are at the owner's risk; and it is not 67 L. R. A.

the custom to maintain a warehouse for storing goods so shipped. A delivery on a side track, or on a platform, at such stations, is sufficient in law.

Allan v. Pennsylvania R. Co. 183 Pa. 174, 39 L. R. A. 535, 38 Atl. 709; South & North Ala. R. Co. v. Wood, 71 Ala. 215, 46 Am. Rep. 309; Armistead Lumber Co. v. Louisville, N. O. & T. R. Co. (Miss.) 11 So. 472; Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Gilmer, 89 Ala. 534, 7 So. 654.

Per Curiam:

Action brought in the superior court of King county by plaintiff, S. Normile, against defendant, the Northern Pacific Railway Company, on account of the loss of freight. The cause was tried to the court without a jury. The following findings of fact and conclusions of law were made in the trial court: "(1) That on December 11, 1901, at Portland, Oregon, the defendant received from the plaintiff for shipment to Fremont, Washington, for the sum of $34, the following goods, wares, and merchandise, to wit, one donkey engine and tool box and two coils of steel cable. (2) That the allegations set forth in paragraph 3 of plaintiff's complaint are untrue, and that the defendant did safely carry and deliver to the said plaintiff, at Fremont, Washington, in accordance with its contract of carriage, the goods, wares, and merchandise hereinabove described, and that plaintiff has suffered no damage whatsoever. (3) That the allegations set forth in the fourth paragraph of plaintiff's complaint are each and all untrue, and that plaintiff has suffered no damage in the sum of $100, or in any other sum; that there was no failure on the part of the defendant to deliver said property to plaintiff. Wherefore the court finds as conclusions of law that plaintiff takes nothing by his said action; that the defendant is entitled to judgment for its costs and disbursements herein." Plaintiff duly excepted to each of these findings and conclusions, save as to the first finding of fact above noted. These exceptions were overruled in the lower court. Plaintiff excepted, and judgment was entered dismissing the action, from which plaintiff prosecutes this appeal.

Paragraph 3 of the complaint, which is referred to in the findings, is in the following words and figures: "That the defendant did not safely carry and deliver the said goods pursuant to said agreement, nor any part thereof, except the said engine, but, on the contrary, the said defendant so negligently conducted and so misbehaved in regard to the same, in its calling as carrier, that the said plow, steel cable, and the said tool box, together with the tools contained therein, were wholly lost to plaintiff, to his damage in the sum of $243, the same being the value of said property which the said defendant has failed to deliver to plaintiff." The respondent company denied the material allegations of the complaint, and pleaded as a separate defense: "That at the time said goods were received by defendant for shipment, to wit, December 11, 1901, at Portland, Oregon, it was agreed and understood that said defendant should not be responsible for the loss of any article shipped upon open cars; that said goods were shipped upon open cars and at plaintiff's risk." Appellant, Normile, by his reply, denied all the allegations of this affirmative defense. It was stipulated at the trial that the value of the goods lost was $243, as alleged in the complaint. Fremont was, at the time of the alleged grievances, what was termed a flag or prepaid station located on respondent's line of railroad in King county. The respondent company had no regular agent at such station. The nearest agent of the company at that time was located at Interbay, and had charge of other stations near by, including Fremont, in the matter of the delivery of freight from the cars of respondent company to consignees. Mr. Normile, the appellant, testified that this railway company had a warehouse or some kind of a building at Fremont; that he received the donkey engine, which was shipped with the tools and cables, from the flat car in proper condition; that these tools and cables were designed for use in connection with such engine; that he knew about the shipment of this property from Portland on December 11, 1901; that witness expected it would arrive at its place of destination in three or four days thereafter, and that he purchased such property for use in connection with his business, which was that of a contractor; that in going through Fremont on the street car about 4 o'clock in the afternoon of December 16, 1901; he noticed a donkey engine on one of respondent's flat cars, which he supposed was his property; that the next morning he found his bookkeeper, to whom he gave directions to go and ascertain if his said property had arrived; that when appellant had procured a dray on the morning of December 18th for the purpose of removing this property, the tools and cable were missing; that he did not get his mail at Fremont, and received no notice of the arrival of this freight through the mail; that he did not know that Fremont was a flag or prepaid station; that the weight of this merchandise in question was about 1,500 pounds, and was in two parcels. Mr. Maitland R. Sanford, appellant's bookkeeper, testified in part as follows: "Well, it was on the morning of the 17th, possibly half past nine, that I met Mr. Normile, and 67 L. R. A.

he informed me that in passing through Fremont the night before he had seen a donkey engine on a flat car there. Well, he was expecting an engine for his work on the canal, and he instructed me to look the matter up, and ascertain if that was his, and, if so, to order a dray and remove it. Now, I tried to find the agent; done some telephoning . . . in order to ascertain if that was Mr. Normile's engine before ordering the dray; but I failed to do so. . . . It was nearly noon then; perhaps 11:30. I found a drayman that had a dray of sufficient size to remove the engine, but it was too late for him to get then to Fremont and remove the engine,—too late in the day. Well, of course, if it was too late for him, it was too late for any other drayman to get there. So that was all I could do. I could not get the drayman to take it off on that day. So this drayman came the following morning, and it was too late then. The stuff was taken off then; that is, the tool chest and contents and cable." Witness, continuing his testimony, said that after he was notified by appellant of the arrival of the freight, it took an hour and a half to find the agent of respondent before ordering the dray; that he did not find any agent at Fremont station; that there was none there permanently. A. S. Pattullo, the secretary of the Columbia Digger Company, the consignor of this shipment, testified by deposition that "the Columbia Digger Company had nothing to do with the way it was to be shipped, and there was no arrangement in regard to any reduction of freight." On the part of the defense the affidavit of Mr. James F. McElroy by stipulation was read in evidence. This affidavit related to the testimony of witness Tillotson, who was in the employ of appellant at the time of the arrival of this freight, and was to the effect that the engine and other property which Mr. Normile stated were there for delivery were at Fremont on the morning of December 17, 1901, in the same condition as when loaded on the flat car at Portland, where Tillotson helped load this freight; that the dray Mr. Normile had engaged to convey such property from the car to be used on the Lake Washington Canal did not arrive till December 18, 1901; that witness then went with four assistants to unload such freight from the car on to the dray, and found that the tools and cable had been removed. W. S. Clark, a witness for respondent, testified in part that in December, 1901, he was respondent company's agent at Interbay; that he had in his possession the data with reference to the shipment of the above property to appellant; that it arrived at Fremont on December 14, 1901; that the bill of this shipment was received by witness about 9 o'clock in the morning of that day; that he sent notice of the arrival of this freight to appellant by postal card, which he deposited in the postoffice at Ballard on the afternoon of December 14th, directed to Mr. Normile at Fremont; that the first time witness learned about the loss of this freight was about December 26, 1901, when he received a letter through the mails from appellant's attorney, Mr. Whitham.

The respondent contends that appellant, by preparing to remove these goods on the 17th day of December, 1901, accepted the delivery thereof on the side track at Fremont. For the purposes of this controversy, we think that it is immaterial whether this freight arrived at Fremont on the 14th or 16th of December, 1901, though, from the testimony adduced in appellant's behalf and the statements contained in Mr. McElroy's affidavit, it would seem that the latter date is the correct one. There is no question but that these goods arrived at Fremont in the same condition as when the same were loaded on the car at Portland, and they were at such station on December 17, 1901. We must bear in mind that the days at that season in the year were and are of short duration. "Where goods are shipped to a place where there is a side track, but no depot, platform, or agent of the carrier, and this is known to the parties, and is not unreasonable in view of the small amount of business, it has been held that leaving the car of goods upon the side track is a good delivery, and relieves the company from further responsibility." 4 Elliott, Railroads, § 1521. The rule was enunciated in the case of Kirk v. Chicago, St. P. M. & O. R. Co. 59 Minn. 161, 50 Am. St. Rep. 397, 60 N. W. 1084, that while it is usual for the consignees themselves to unload and carry away certain kinds of freight, such as coal, lumber, and the like, directly from the cars, "it is also true . . . that there is nothing to prevent a carrier, at least under special circumstances, from using the car as its warehouse for the storage of freight. But in the case of portable boxes or packages of valuable merchandise we think that, under any ordinary circumstances, . . . in order to terminate the carrier's liability, he must remove the goods from the car in which they were transported, and place them for safe-keeping in his freight house." It is impossible to formulate any general rule, applicable to all cases, as to what constitutes a good and sufficient delivery of freight by the carrier to consignees. Each case must necessarily to a great extent depend upon its own particular circumstances. The question of delivery to a consignee is usually a question of fact, or a mixed question of law and fact, for the jury under proper instructions 67 L. R. A.

from the court. Sometimes, where the facts are undisputed, a question of law only is presented for the decision of the court. Elliott, Railroads, supra, § 1517, and authorities cited. "It may be stated, generally, that every delivery must be made to the right person, at a reasonable time, at the proper place, and in a proper manner. These are all requisites of a valid delivery, except in so far as a compliance with them may be waived by the party entitled to the goods." Hutchinson, Carr. 2d ed. § 340. Unquestionably, as a general rule, the manner of delivery may be regulated by contract, but, in the absence of any specific stipulation upon the subject, it is in a great measure determined by custom. The carrier must, however, afford the consignee an opportunity to unload and remove his goods. On the other hand, the consignee must exercise reasonable diligence in the matter of the receiving and removal of his freight. The appellant prepaid the regular freight charges on this shipment, and was entitled to the protection that the law afforded him in that behalf. The following propositions of law pertinent to this controversy are enunciated by a learned author: "The carrier's responsibility does not end by mere delivery on the platform or dock at the place of destination. There must be such actual delivery as fills the contract of carriers; or, if not applied for by the consignee, the goods must be safely warehoused. Then the liability as carrier ceases, and that of warehouseman begins. . . . And so jealous is the law in guarding the rights of shippers against contracts of carriers exempting themselves from the consequences of their own negligence, and so obligatory is the duty of carriers to furnish suitable vehicles and appliances for the transportation of property received to be carried, that the knowledge of shippers of the character of cars furnished will not exempt the company from liability for loss occasioned by the insufficiency thereof, although the contract of shipment be that there shall be no such responsibility on the part of the company." 2 Rorer, Railroads, pp. 1292, 1293. While it is true that these goods which were lost or stolen were intended for use in connection with the donkey engine, and that it was more convenient for the respondent to load the whole shipment on one flat car, as such engine could not well have been placed in a box car for shipment, and that it was intended by both carrier and consignee to be unloaded and received direct from the flat car at the place of destination, still it does not appear by any testimony in the record but that this respondent company might have placed these particular goods (the tools and cable) in its warehouse or building at Fremont station; that otherwise respondent is liable to appellant for their value. It would seem from the showing made in the record that appellant was not afforded a reasonable opportunity to enable him to remove these particular goods from the car prior to their loss, and that such loss should be borne by the respondent.

The principal authority cited by respondent's counsel in support of their contentions is Allam v. Pennsylvania R. Co. 183 Pa. 174, 39 L. R. A. 535, 38 Atl. 709. The points decided are fairly presented by the syllabus: "As a general rule, a common carrier must give to the consignee of goods notice of their arrival at the point of destination. While a common carrier cannot stipulate for a release from the consequences of his own negligence or fraud, yet he can modify his liability as such so far as to provide that notice of the arrival of goods need not be given at small stations where no station house has been built and no freight agent located. A contract that at such stations the goods shall be at the 'risk' of the owner until loaded into cars and when unloaded therefrom is not against public policy, and will be enforced. Where goods are carried under such a contract all responsibility for protecting the same after the goods reach their destination is assumed by the consignor." It would seem that in the matter of such shipments the consignor acts as the agent of, or represents, the consignee. In this Pennsylvania case the bill of lading under which the goods were received by the carrier contained the following provision: "When merchandise is destined to or from way stations and platforms where station buildings have not been established by the carrier, or where there are no regularly appointed freight agents, it shall be at the risk of the owner until loaded into the cars and when unloaded therefrom; and when received from or delivered on private turnouts it shall be at the owner's risks until cars are attached to and after they are detached from the train." We find no such stipulation in the bill of lading which was received in evidence in the action at bar. Furthermore, it appeared in the authority last cited that at Strafford, the place where the goods were to be received, there was no shelter, and no regular agent of the carrier company to take charge of the freight upon its arrival. "The only convenience at Strafford for the receipt and delivery of goods was a platform by the side of the road." Thus it is plain to be seen that the facts in the Allam Case are noticeably dissimilar to those in the present controversy; that while it may have been inconvenient for the respondent to have unloaded the goods in question, and stored them in its station house or building at Fremont, still, in the absence of any express stipulation, it was bound to properly care for these goods upon their arrival, both in the capacity of a carrier and warehouseman, under the well-established rules of the common law in that regard. See Rorer, Railroads, pp. 1292, 1293, supra. Regarding the matter of notice to Normile, the consignee, we think that, under the facts as disclosed by the record, no notice was required; but, assuming that such notice was necessary, the agent, unless otherwise advised, had the right to assume that notice addressed to the consignee at the point of destination would reach him in the due course of the mail. Appellant, on the arrival of these goods at Fremont station, pursued the safer method of first communicating with the agent on the 17th day of December, 1901, before removing the same from the car. It would therefore seem unreasonable to charge the appellant with laches in not being prepared to receive and remove this freight until the morning following the date last named. There is no showing made in the record other than that the appellant acted with reasonable diligence in this particular. Where there is no dispute about the material facts, this question of reasonable time in which goods are to be removed by the consignee is one of law for the court. Hedges v. Hudson River R. Co. 49 N. Y. 223.

The judgment of the lower court is reversed, and the cause remanded, with instructions to enter a judgment for the agreed value of the goods lost.

DEER TRAIL CONSOLIDATED MINING COMPANY et al., Respts.,

v.

MARYLAND CASUALTY COMPANY, Appt.

(.....Wash.....)

1. Want of knowledge of the policy by one of two mine operators for whose benefit an insurance against liability for accidents to employees has been effected by the other, and want of knowledge of the accident by the latter, will not excuse failure to comply with a requirement in the policy that immediate notice of an accident be given to the insurer.
2. Notice to the insurer, given eight months after the occurrence, of an accident to an employee, is not within a reasonable time, so as to establish the lia-

NOTE.—For another case in this series as to effect of stipulation in policy against employer's liability requiring immediate notice of loss, see Travelers' Ins. Co. v. Myers, 49 L. R. A. 760.

bility of the insurer upon a policy insuring against liability for accidents to employees which requires immediate notice of the accident to be given to the insurer.

3. The statement of a general agent of a corporation which has insured employers against liability for accidents to their employees by a policy requiring immediate notice of accidents to be given to the company, upon receiving notice of an accident eight months after it occurred, that formal notice would be soon enough if given six or seven days later, does not waive the provision of the policy requiring immediate notice, since liability on the policy had terminated when the accident was first brought to his attention.

(October 5, 1904.)

APPPEAL by defendant from a judgment of the Superior Court for Spokane County in plaintiffs' favor in an action brought to enforce liability on a policy insuring against employers' liability. Reversed.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Messrs. Danson & Huneke, for appellant:

The statement, "Very well; that will be soon enough," evidently meant no more, and was not intended or understood to mean any more, than that notice given on the 28th would do as well as notice given on the 22d, and had no reference whatever to, and was not intended or understood to be a waiver of, any of the provisions of the contract.

Kirkman v. Farmers' Ins. Co. 90 Iowa, 457, 48 Am. St. Rep. 454, 57 N. W. 952; Cleaver v. Traders' Ins. Co. 65 Mich. 527, 8 Am. St. Rep. 908, 32 N. W. 660; Alabama State Mut. Assur. Co. v. Long Clothing & Shoe Co. 123 Ala. 667, 26 So. 655; Fitchpatrick v. Hawkeye Ins. Co. 53 Iowa, 335, 5 N. W. 151; Alston v. Northwestern Live Stock Ins. Co. 7 Kan. App. 179, 53 Pac. 784; Underwood v. Farmers' Joint Stock Ins. Co. 57 N. Y. 501; Iowa L. Ins. Co. v. Lewis, 187 U. S. 335, 47 L. ed. 204, 23 Sup. Ct. Rep. 126.

The acts or conduct of a party, in order to operate as an estoppel against him, or as a waiver of his rights, must have been done with the knowledge of the facts and the true situation of matters.

Dichl v. Adams County Mut. Ins. Co. 58 Pa. 443, 98 Am. Dec. 307; Hubbard v. Mutual Reserve Fund Life Asso. 80 Fed. 682; Bennecke v. Connecticut Mut. L. Ins. Co. 105 U. S. 355, 26 L. ed. 990; Globe Mut. L. Ins. Co. v. Wolff, 95 U. S. 326, 24 L. ed. 387.

The provision in such policy requiring prompt notice of an accident is of the substance and very essence of the contract, and a condition precedent to any liability on the part of the company, and a failure to give notice as required is fatal to any right of recovery on the policy.

Travelers' Ins. Co. v. Myers, 62 Ohio St. 529, 49 L. R. A. 760, 57 N. E. 458; Employers' Liability Assur. Corp. v. Light, Heat & P. Co. 28 Ind. App. 437, 63 N. E. 54; Ermentrout v. Girard F. & M. Ins. Co. 63 Minn. 305, 30 L. R. A. 346, 56 Am. St. Rep. 485, 65 N. W. 635; Shapiro v. Western Home Ins. Co. 51 Minn. 239, 53 N. W. 463; Home Ins. Co. v. Lindsey, 26 Ohio St. 348; Underwood v. Farmers' Joint Stock Ins. Co. 57 N. Y. 500; Blossom v. Lycoming F. Ins. Co. 64 N. Y. 162; Gould v. Dwelling-House Ins. Co. 90 Mich. 302, 51 N. W. 455; Armstrong v. Agricultural Ins. Co. 130 N. Y. 560, 29 N. E. 991; Patrick v. Farmers' Ins. Co. 43 N. H. 621, 80 Am. Dec. 197; Trask v. State F. & M. Ins. Co. 29 Pa. 198, 72 Am. Dec. 622; Erway v. Fire Asso. 119 Iowa, 304, 93 N. W. 290.

The delay in this case of more than eight months to give notice is, as a matter of law, fatal to the right of recovery.

Trask v. State F. & M. Ins. Co. 29 Pa. 198, 72 Am. Dec. 622; Quinlan v. Providence Washington Ins. Co. 133 N. Y. 356, 28 Am. St. Rep. 645, 31 N. E. 31; Ermentrout v. Girard F. & M. Ins. Co. 63 Minn. 305, 30 L. R. A. 346, 56 Am. St. Rep. 485, 65 N. W. 635.

The agents had no power or authority to waive notice.

Travelers' Ins. Co. v. Myers, 62 Ohio St. 529, 49 L. R. A. 760, 57 N. E. 458; Kirkman v. Farmers' Ins. Co. 90 Iowa, 457, 48 Am. St. Rep. 454, 57 N. W. 952; Crutchfield v. Union Cent. L. Ins. Co. 113 Ky. 53, 67 S. W. 67; Thornton v. Travelers' Ins. Co. 116 Ga. 121, 94 Am. St. Rep. 99, 42 S. E. 287; Cleaver v. Traders' Ins. Co. 65 Mich. 527, 8 Am. St. Rep. 908, 32 N. W. 660; Quinlan v. Providence Washington Ins. Co. 133 N. Y. 356, 28 Am. St. Rep. 645, 31 N. E. 31; Hankins v. Rockford Ins. Co. 70 Wis. 1, 35 N. W. 34; Cook v. Standard Life & Acc. Ins. Co. 84 Mich. 12, 47 N. W. 568; Union Cent. L. Ins. Co. v. Hook, 62 Ohio St. 256, 56 N. E. 906; Murphy v. Royal Ins. Co. 52 La. Ann. 775, 27 So. 143; Lippman v. Etna Ins. Co. 108 Ga. 391, 75 Am. St. Rep. 62, 33 S. E. 897; Carey v. German American Ins. Co. 84 Wis. 80, 20 L. R. A. 267, 36 Am. St. Rep. 907, 54 N. W. 18; Smith v. Niagara F. Ins. Co. 60 Vt. 682, 1 L. R. A. 216, 6 Am. St. Rep. 144, 15 Atl. 353; Employers' Liability Assur. Corp. v. Light, Heat & P. Co. 28 Ind. App. 437, 63 N. E. 54; Dwelling-House Ins. Co. v. Snyder, 59 N. J. L. 18, 34 Atl. 931; Gould v. Dwelling House Ins. Co. 90 Mich. 302, 51 N. W. 455; Maier v. Fidelity Mut. Life Asso. 24 C. C. A. 239, 47 U. S. App. 322, 78 Fed. 566; Northern Assur. Co. v. Grand View Bldg. Asso. 183 U. S. 308, 46 L. ed. 213, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 133; Nixon v. Travellers' Ins. Co. 25 Wash. 254, 65 Pac. 195.

Messrs. Tolman & Kimball and Happy & Hindman, for respondents:

Forfeitures are odious in the eyes of the law, and will not be decreed unless it is manifestly the plain intention of the contract that such is the intention of the parties.

4 Joyce, Ins. § 3282; Steele v. German Ins. Co. 93 Mich. 81, 18 L. R. A. 85, 53 N. W. 515; Tubbs v. Dwelling-House Ins. Co. 84 Mich. 646, 48 N. W. 298; Kenton Ins. Co. v. Downs, 90 Ky. 236, 13 S. W. 882; Hall v. Concordia F. Ins. Co. 90 Mich. 403, 51 N. W. 526; Vangindertaelen v. Phenix Ins. Co. 82 Wis. 112, 33 Am. St. Rep. 29, 51 N. W. 1123; American Cent. Ins. Co. v. Heaverin, 18 Ky. L. Rep. 190, 35 S. W. 922.

The company is not restricted by a limitation contained in the policy, but can itself waive such limitations, either orally or in writing. They can also delegate to an agent coextensive powers with the company.

Hall v. Union Cent. L. Ins. Co. 23 Wash. 612, 51 L. R. A. 288, 83 Am. St. Rep. 844, 63 Pac. 505; Globe Mut. L. Ins. Co. v. Wolff, 95 U. S. 320, 24 L. ed. 387; Graton & K. Mfg. Co. v. Redelsheimer, 28 Wash. 370, 68 Pac. 879, 16 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, 2d ed. p. 942; Knickerbocker L. Ins. Co. v. Norton, 96 U. S. 234, 24 L. ed. 689; Citizens' Ins. Co. v. Stoddard, 197 Ill. 330, 64 N. E. 355; Joyce, Ins. § 580; Stevens v. Citizens' Ins. Co. 69 Iowa, 658, 29 N. W. 769; Lycoming County Mut. Ins. Co. v. Schollenberger, 44 Pa. 259.

The giving of notice, as required by this policy, is a condition subsequent, and not precedent, to the right of recovery. The liability of the company becomes complete by the happening of the accident, and the defense that immediate notice was not given is construed by the courts to be a technical defense, and only slight evidence is necessary for an adjudication of the court that an agent has waived such provisions.

Munz v. Standard Life & Acci. Ins. Co. 26 Utah, 69, 62 L. R. A. 485, 99 Am. St. Rep. 830, 72 Pac. 182; Woodmen Acci. Asso. v. Pratt (Woodmen Acci. Asso. v. Byers) 62 Neb. 673, 55 L. R. A. 291, 89 Am. St. Rep. 777, 87 N. W. 548; Union Casualty & S. Co. v. Mondy, 18 Colo. App. 395, 71 Pac. 677; Remington v. Fidelity & D. Co. 27 Wash. 429, 67 Pac. 992; Citizens' Ins. Co. v. Stoddard, 197 Ill. 330, 64 N. E. 365; Harrison v. German-American F. Ins. Co. 67 Fed. 587; Indiana Ins. Co. v. Capehart, 108 Ind. 270, 8 N. E. 287; Franklin F. Ins. Co. v. Chicago Ice Co. 36 Md. 102, 11 Am. Rep. 468; Viele v. Germania Ins. Co. 26 Iowa, 9, 96 Am. Dec. 107; Firemen's Fund Ins. Co. 67 L. R. A.

v. Western Refrigerating Co. 162 Ill. 322, 44 N. E. 746; New Orleans Ins. Asso. v. Matthews, 65 Miss. 301, 4 So. 62; Carson v. Jersey City Ins. Co. 43 N. J. L. 300, 39 Am. Rep. 584; O'Brien v. Ohio Ins. Co. 52 Mich. 131, 17 N. W. 726; Loeb v. American Cent. Ins. Co. 99 Mo. 50, 12 S. W. 374; Whited v. Germania Ins. Co. 76 N. Y. 422, 32 Am. Rep. 330; Travelers' Ins. Co. v. Harvey, 82 Va. 949, 5 S. E. 554; May, Ins. § 511, p. 777; 16 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, 2d ed. p. 952; Dwelling House Ins. Co. v. Dowdall, 159 Ill. 179, 42 N. E. 608; 1 Joyce, Ins. § 439.

The time for furnishing proof of the accident was extended or waived by the agents.

Frasier v. New Zealand Ins. Co. 39 Or. 342, 64 Pac. 815; Knickerbocker L. Ins. Co. v. Norton, 96 U. S. 234, 24 L. ed. 689; New York L. Ins. Co. v. Eggleston, 96 U. S. 572, 577, 24 L. ed. 841, 843; Hartford Life Annuity Ins. Co. v. Unsell, 144 U. S. 439, 36 L. ed. 496, 12 Sup. Ct. Rep. 671; Hollis v. State Ins. Co. 65 Iowa, 454, 21 N. W. 774; Hudson v. Northern P. R. Co. 92 Iowa, 231, 54 Am. St. Rep. 550, 60 N. W. 608; Phenix Mut. L. Ins. Co. v. Doster, 106 U. S. 30, 27 L. ed. 65, 1 Sup. Ct. Rep. 18; Lyon v. Travelers' Ins. Co. 55 Mich. 141, 54 Am. Rep. 354, 20 N. W. 829; Dibbrell v. Georgia Home Ins. Co. 110 N. C. 193, 28 Am. St. Rep. 678, 14 S. E. 786; Trippe v. Provident Fund Soc. 140 N. Y. 23, 22 L. R. A. 432, 37 Am. St. Rep. 529, 35 N. E. 316; 16 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, 2d ed. p. 938; Dwelling House Ins. Co. v. Dowdall, 159 Ill. 179, 42 N. E. 607; Mia v. Royal Ins. Co. 169 Pa. 639, 32 Atl. 460; Kingman v. Lancashire Ins. Co. 54 S. C. 599, 32 S. E. 762; New York L. Ins. Co. v. Baker, 27 C. C. A. 658, 49 U. S. App. 690, 83 Fed. 652; Smith v. St. Paul F. & M. Ins. Co. 3 Dak. 80, 13 N. W. 355; 1 Joyce, Ins. p. 555.

The company retained the premium, and has not offered to return it.

Schmurr v. State Ins. Co. 30 Or. 32, 46 Pac. 363; Hibernia Ins. Co. v. Malevinsky, 6 Tex. Civ. App. 81, 24 S. W. 804; Phenix Ins. Co. v. Spiers, 87 Ky. 285, 8 S. W. 453; New York L. Ins. Co. v. Baker, 27 C. C. A. 658, 49 U. S. App. 690, 83 Fed. 652.

The defendant in this case required the furnishing of proof of the accident, and it is fundamental, where a company requires such a condition, that it waives the breach.

16 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, 2d ed. p. 941; New York L. Ins. Co. v. Baker, 27 C. C. A. 658, 49 U. S. App. 690, 83 Fed. 652.

Giving time to furnish the proof of accident waives the forfeiture.

1 Joyce, Ins. p. 554; Home F. Ins. Co. v. Kuhlman, 58 Neb. 488, 76 Am. St. Rep. 111, 78 N. W. 936; Brink v. Hanover F. Ins. Co. 80 N. Y. 112; Ostrander, Fire Ins. p. 278; Frasier v. New Zealand Ins. Co. 39 Or. 342, 64 Pac. 815; Union Casualty & S. Co. v. Mondy, 18 Colo. App. 395, 71 Pac. 680; Goodwin v. Massachusetts Mut. L. Ins. Co. 73 N. Y. 480; Shelden v. National Masonic Acci. Asso. 122 Mich. 403, 81 N. W. 266; Moore v. Wildcy Casualty Co. 176 Mass. 418, 57 N. E. 673; Searle v. Duelling House Ins. Co. 152 Mass. 263, 25 N. E. 290.

The question whether notice was given immediately is a question of fact for the jury, under all the circumstances surrounding this particular transaction.

Munz v. Standard Life & Acci. Ins. Co. 26 Utah. 69, 62 L. R. A. 485, 99 Am. St. Rep. 830, 72 Pac. 182; Horsfall v. Pacific Mut. L. Ins. Co. 32 Wash. 132, 63 L. R. A. 425, 98 Am. St. Rep. 846, 72 Pac. 1028; Woodmen Acci. Asso. v. Pratt (Woodmen Acci. Asso. v. Byers) 62 Neb. 673, 55 L. R. A. 291, 89 Am. St. Rep. 777, 87 N. W. 546; Carey v. Farmers' & M. Ins. Co. 27 Or. 146, 40 Pac. 91; 2 Wood, Fire Ins. 2d ed. 952; Remington v. Fidelity & D. Co. 27 Wash. 429, 67 Pac. 991; Joyce, Ins. §§ 3289, 3292.

The respondent the Deer Trail Consolidated Mining Company had no knowledge of the accident until the commencement of the proceedings by Johnson against it. This would excuse that company from giving notice.

McElroy v. John Hancock Mut. L. Ins. Co. 88 Md. 137, 71 Am. St. Rep. 400, 41 Atl. 114; Phillips v. United States Benev. Soc. 120 Mich. 142, 79 N. W. 1; 4 Joyce, Ins. § 3283; Trippe v. Provident Fund Soc. 140 N. Y. 23, 22 L. R. A. 432, 37 Am. St. Rep. 529, 35 N. E. 316.

And the Yarwoods had no notice or knowledge of the issuance of the insurance policy, and they were also excused.

Konrad v. Union Casualty & S. Co. 49 La. Ann. 336, 21 So. 721.

Mount, J., delivered the opinion of the court:

In the years 1900 and 1901 the respondents were the owners of certain mines in Lincoln county, Washington. The respondents Yarwood Brothers were operating these mines, and the net proceeds thereof were divided equally between the Yarwood Brothers and the Deer Trail Consolidated Mining Company. On March 20, 1900, the Deer Trail Consolidated Mining Company applied to the appellant for an indemnity insurance contract in favor of itself and the Yarwood Brothers. This contract was issued by appellant in favor of the respondents, indemnifying them for the period of one year against loss from statutory and common-law liability for damages on account of bodily injury suffered by an employee of the assured. It was delivered to the Deer Trail Consolidated Mining Company, and the premium paid. The Yarwood Brothers were not informed and did not know of the contract of insurance. On the 19th of May, 1900, one Nels Johnson, while in the employ of respondents, and while performing his duty as such employee, was injured through the negligence of respondents. W. J. Yarwood was general manager of the mines at the time of the injury, but he did not know of the injury, and did not hear thereof for several days after it had happened. When he heard of it he went to Johnson, and asked him if he was hurt. Johnson replied, "My thumb is sore yet, but I will get to work in a day or two." A few days after this Johnson went to work in the mine, and continued to work until the mine closed down in September following. During the time he was working he made no complaint on account of being injured. Yarwood did not know of the existence of the policy of insurance, and did not notify the Deer Trail Consolidated Mining Company of the accident. In January, 1901, Johnson commenced an action against respondents to recover damages for his injuries. This was the first time he had made any claim for his injuries. The complaint was served on the Deer Trail Consolidated Mining Company on January 22, 1901. On the same day P. A. Daggett & Co., the local agents of the appellant, were notified of the action, and requested to defend the same, which they refused to do. The respondents thereupon defended the action, and subsequently a judgment was rendered against them in favor of Johnson for $1,717.60. Respondents paid this judgment in favor of Johnson, and also paid costs of defending the action amounting to $268.85, in addition to the amount of the judgment named. Respondents thereupon brought this action against appellant upon the contract of insurance. The complaint sets out a copy of the policy, alleges its execution and delivery on March 20, 1900, and the payment of the premium. It alleges the injury to Johnson on May 19, 1900, while he was in the employ of respondents; that the injury was not known to the Deer Trail Consolidated Mining Company until January 21, 1901, and that Yarwood did not know of the insurance until January 22, 1901; that respondents did not know that Johnson intended to make any claim for damages until that time; that Johnson, on January 21, 1901, commenced an action for $2,000 damages against the respondents; that thereupon respondents notified appellant thereof, and that appellant thereupon agreed to and did extend the time for giving notice of the accident to January 28, 1901, and furnished blanks to respondents for that purpose; that, relying upon this extension of time, respondents, at great trouble and an expense of $50, gave a written notice to appellant on January 28, 1901. The complaint also alleges that Daggett & Company are the general agents of the appellant, authorized to issue and settle policies of insurance, and that, knowing of the facts, they extended the time for giving notice of the accident and authorized the attorneys for the appellant company to appear in the action of Johnson v. Yarwood Brothers and the Deer Trail Consolidated Mining Company, and that said attorneys thereupon did appear in said cause, and filed a motion requiring said Johnson to give a bond as security for costs; that thereafter appellant refused to proceed further in said case. The complaint then alleges that Johnson obtained a judgment against respondents, and the payment thereof. The appellant appeared and demurred to the complaint. This demurrer was overruled, whereupon appellant filed an answer denying any liability under the policy of insurance. Upon a trial of the cause to a court and jury a verdict was returned for the full amount claimed, and judgment was entered upon the verdict.

Appellant defended the action in the lower court upon the ground that no notice had been given of the accident according to the terms of the policy, and that there had been no waiver of the notice. Upon this appeal they rely on the same points. The contract sued on provides, among other things, as follows: "This insurance is subject to the following conditions, which are to be construed as conditions precedent to this contract: 1. The assured, upon the occurrence of an accident, shall give immediate notice thereof in writing with the full particulars to the home office of the company at Baltimore, Maryland, or to its duly authorized agent. . . . 10. An agent has no authority to change this policy or to waive any of its provisions, nor shall notice to any agent or knowledge of his or of any other person be held to effect a waiver or change in this contract, or in any part of it. No change whatever in this policy, nor waiver of any of its provisions, shall be valid unless an indorsement is added hereto, signed by the president or secretary of the company, at its home office, expressing such waiver or change." It is conceded that the accident occurred on May 19, 1900, and that no notice thereof was given to the appellant until January 21, 1901. The excuse offered in the complaint and by the witnesses for this failure to give notice was that the Yarwood Brothers, who had charge of the mine and the men working therein, had no knowledge or notice of the policy. The Deer Trail Consolidated Mining Company, which procured the policy, had no notice of the accident. This condition of affairs was brought about solely by the neglect of one of the insured to notify the others of the contract, and, as a matter of course, is no excuse for failure to notify the appellant of the accident according to the terms of the policy. This court has heretofore held that "immediate notice" in policies of this kind means notice within a reasonable time. Remington v. Fidelity & D. Co. 27 Wash. 429, 67 Pac. 989; Kleeb v. Long-Bell Lumber Co. 27 Wash. 648, 68 Pac. 202; Horsfall v. Pacific Mut. L. Ins. Co. 32 Wash. 132, 63 L. R. A. 425, 98 Am. St. Rep. 846, 72 Pac. 1028. Under this rule, we think the lower court properly held that eight months was not within a reasonable time, and that respondents did not comply with this requirement of the policy, which was a reasonable one for appellant's protection and benefit.

The respondents' evidence upon the question of the waiver of the notice was given by Mr. Kimball, one of the respondents' attorneys, and is as follows: "I went to the office of P. A. Daggett & Company, general managers of the Maryland Casualty Company, taking the complaint with me. In the meantime I had looked up the number of the policies which the Deer Trail Consolidated Mining Company held, and I went down to report to them that we had been sued upon an accident policy, which was alleged to have happened in May previous, and we took the complaint and went over it and looked up the dates and descriptions, and Mr. Daggett asked me if any proof of this accident had been sent in, and I told him not to my knowledge had there been any sent in. . . . As I say, I told Mr. Daggett to the best of my knowledge there had been no proof of this accident furnished this company, and there was no papers in my possession, or in Mr. Tolman's possession as general manager, speaking of any accident of this kind; that it was absolutely unknown in our office, and that this was the first advice or knowledge of the accident that had been brought to our knowledge; and Mr. Daggett made this statement: 'Well, if you didn't know about it, you could not very well make a report of the accident. and we must get in a report as soon as possible.' . . . We took the complaint, and went over it carefully as to the dates and everything else, so as to acquaint ourselves as best we could of the nature of the claim and the history of the injury as alleged by Mr. Johnson. . . . Mr. Daggett stated that Messrs. Danson & Huneke were attorneys for the company, and that they would defend the action, and told me I had better see them, and acquaint them with the facts. I left the complaint with P. A. Daggett & Company, and the next morning I went to the office of Danson & Huneke, and found the complaint in their possession. . . . As I stated a moment ago, Mr. Daggett said, 'You could not very well make proof of the accident without knowing about it, and we must get in proof as soon as possible,' and he asked me when I could furnish proof, and I said that we would have to correspond with the people at the mine, and then I told him that Mr. Leyson, the foreman and superintendent, would be down here on the 28th or 29th of January, and that I would write to him at once, and have him ascertain all the facts, so that we could make out proof of the accident at the time; and he says, 'Very well, that will be soon enough.' " The testimony of this same witness shows that subsequently, on the 28th day of January, he notified Mr. Daggett that Mr. Leyson had come to Spokane, and that thereupon Mr. Daggett went to Mr. Kimball's office with blanks, which were filled out upon information furnished by Mr. Leyson, and that Mr. Daggett took a copy away with him. This is all the evidence on the part of the respondents to show a waiver of the provision for immediate notice of an accident. Mr. Daggett, for the appellant, denied the statements attributed to him. Before the cause was submitted to the jury, the appellant moved the court for a directed verdict, upon the ground that the evidence of the respondents failed to show a waiver. This motion should have been granted. Assuming that the evidence given by Mr. Kimball was true, it was clearly insufficient to show a waiver on the part of the company. The statement of Mr. Daggett, "Very well; that will be soon enough," when taken in connection with the rest of the conversation, cannot be reasonably interpreted to mean that the company thereby waived its right to have notice of the accident within a reasonable time after it had happened. What he said clearly meant that, if the proof or statement of Mr. Leyson was furnished by the 28th or 29th, it would do as well then as at the date of the conversation, which was on January 22d. Eight months had already expired since the accident, without any reasonable excuse for not complying with the terms of the policy. It was too late on January 22d to give the notice. The respondents were then in default. The conversation with Daggett, even if relied upon, caused no injury to the respondents which they had not already suffered. We think there is nothing in this evidence to show any intent to waive the time for giving the notice, or to waive any right of the company under the policy. If the respondents had 67 L. R. A.

actually made out their notice of the accident and handed it to Mr. Daggett, the agent of the company, on January 22, 1901, the fact that he received the notice for the company would certainly not be held to be a waiver of the right of the company to defend against the policy upon the ground that notice had not been given within a reasonable time. The most that can be claimed for the evidence above set out is that notice of the accident was given to the company on January 22d, the date of the conversation. The lower court rightfully held that this did not comply with the requirements of the policy. He should have held also that the evidence failed to show a waiver of the time for notice of the accident.

The judgment is therefore reversed, with instructions to dismiss the action.

Fullerton, Ch. J., and Hadley and Anders, JJ., concur.

STATE of Washington, Respt.,

v.

C. W. IDE, Appt.

(35 Wash. 576.)

1. Popular acquiescence in a particular mode of levying taxes for a long period of time cannot make it legal if it clearly contravenes the provisions of the Constitution.
2. A poll tax for street purposes upon male inhabitants between the ages of twenty-one and fifty, except members of voluntary fire departments, contravenes a constitutional provision authorizing the legislature to empower municipal corporations to levy taxes which shall be equal and uniform in respect to persons within the jurisdiction of the body levying them.

(Fullerton, Ch. J., dissents.)

(August 24, 1904.)

APPEAL by defendant from a judgment of the Superior Court for Jefferson County convicting him of refusal to pay a street poll tax as required by a municipal ordinance. Reversed.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Messrs. Brinker, Coleman, & Ballinger, for appellant:

"Poll," or "capitation" taxes must be shared equally by all, except under governments where privileged orders are recog-

NOTE.—For full collection of authorities respecting poll taxes, see also note to Short v. State, 29 L. R. A. 404; also the later case in this series of Kansas City v. Whipple, 35 L. R. A. 747.

nized, and where they might be graded according to the orders to which the several persons taxed belong.

Cooley, Taxn. 2d ed. 26; Sutton v. Louisville, 5 Dana, 28.

If the burden is arbitrarily imposed upon the few, from which the many are exempt, it is of no consequence whether it is imposed through the taxing power, or in some other manner.

Jolliffe v. Brown, 14 Wash. 155, 53 Am. St. Rep. 868, 44 Pac. 149.

The mere fact of classification is not enough. It must be natural, not arbitrary.

McDaniels v. J. J. Connelly Shoe Co. 30 Wash. 549, 60 L. R. A. 947, 94 Am. St. Rep. 889, 71 Pac. 37; Dorgan v. Boston, 12 Allen. 223; Gulf, C. & S. F. R. Co. v. Ellis, 165 U. S. 150, 41 L. ed. 666, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 255; Connolly v. Union Sewer Pipe Co. 184 U. S. 540, 560, 46 L. ed. 679, 690, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 431; American Sugar Ref. Co. v. Louisiana, 179 U. S. 89, 45 L. ed. 102, 21 Sup. Ct. Rep. 43; Magoun v. Illinois Trust & Sav. Bank, 170 U. S. 283, 294, 42 L. ed. 1037, 1043, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 594.

Acquiescence in the law is not conclusive of its validity.

State ex rel. Chamberlin v. Daniel, 17 Wash. 111, 49 Pac. 243; State ex rel. Heaton v. Beman, 15 Wash. 24, 45 Pac. 652; Graves v. Seattle, 8 Wash. 248, 35 Pac. 1079; Semon v. Callvert, 27 Wash. 679, 68 Pac. 350; State ex rel. Rogers v. Jenkins, 21 Wash. 364, 58 Pac. 217.

Mr. A. W. Buddress for the State.

Anders, J., delivered the opinion of the court:

On June 22, 1903, William Furlong filed a verified complaint in the police court of the city of Port Townsend, alleging, in substance, that he was at said time the city marshal and city street poll-tax collector of the city of Port Townsend, a city of the third class, in the county of Jefferson, and state of Washington, and that on said day one C. W. Ide, then and there being a male inhabitant of said city between the ages of twenty-one and fifty years, and not a member of any volunteer fire company of said city nor a member of the militia of the state of Washington, did then and there commit the misdemeanor of failing and refusing to pay to said city street poll-tax collector, on demand, his (the said defendant's) city annual street poll tax for the year 1903, committed as follows: That the said city street poll-tax collector did then and there personally demand of and from said defendant, C. W. Ide, the sum of $2 for the payment by defendant to said city and to its said street poll-tax collector, the said city annual street poll tax for the year 1903, 67 L. R. A.

but said defendant did then and there willfully and unlawfully fail and refuse to pay to said city street poll-tax collector said sum of $2 for his city annual street poll tax of said city for the year 1903, contrary to ordinance No. 675 of said city, entitled "An Ordinance Imposing and Levying an Annual City Street Poll Tax for the Year 1903, and Providing for the Collection Thereof," approved June 3, 1903, and contrary to ordinance No. 639 of said city, entitled "An Ordinance to Provide for the Collection of a City Street Poll Tax, and Making the Refusal to Pay the Same a Misdemeanor, and to Provide for the Appointment of a Tax Collector and Deputy," approved on May 3, 1899. A warrant was issued on this complaint, and the defendant, having been arrested thereon and brought into court, filed a demurrer to the complaint on the following grounds: First, that it appears upon the face of the complaint that defendant has not violated any law; second, that said complaint fails to state facts sufficient to constitute a crime or misdemeanor of any kind; third, that said complaint does not charge any offense against the laws of the state of Washington; fourth, that said complaint does not charge defendant with the commission of any crime or misdemeanor under the ordinances of the city of Port Townsend. The demurrer was overruled, and on the hearing in the police court the defendant was convicted and fined, and from the judgment he appealed to the superior court. The demurrer was again argued and considered in the superior court, and was by that court overruled. Upon the trial in the superior court the defendant was convicted, and fined $2 and costs, and it was thereupon adjudged that he be imprisoned in the county jail until such fine and costs be paid, unless otherwise discharged by law. From this judgment and sentence the defendant has appealed to this court.

Section 1 of ordinance No. 675, which is mentioned and referred to by its title and date of approval, provides "that there be and hereby is imposed and levied an annual city street poll tax upon each male inhabitant between the ages of twenty-one and fifty years, residing in said city, excepting any member of any volunteer fire company in said city, the sum of $2, payable on demand between the 1st day of June, 1903, and the 1st day of September, 1903." And § 2 provides "that the poll tax hereby imposed and levied shall be collected as provided by ordinance No. 639 of said city entitled 'An Ordinance to Provide for the Collection of a City Street Poll Tax, and Making the Refusal to Pay the Same a Misdemeanor, and to Provide for the Appointment of a Tax Collector and Deputy,' passed by the city council of said city on the 2d day of May, 1899, and approved on the 3d day of May, 1899." Ordinance No. 639, above mentioned and described, contains, besides others, which it is not necessary to mention, the following provisions:

"Section 1. That it shall be the duty of the city marshal between the 1st day of May and the 1st day of September, of each year, to collect all city street poll taxes levied or assessed by the city council, as herein provided, and shall give to each person paying such city street poll tax a receipt therefor. . . .

"Sec. 2. That the said city marshal shall receive in full compensation for his services for the collection of the said city street poll tax, under this ordinance, the sum of 10 per centum upon all moneys so collected.

"Sec. 3. If any person liable for the city street poll tax herein provided for shall fail, refuse, or neglect to pay the same upon demand by the city marshal, the city marshal shall proceed to collect the same as herein provided."

"Sec. 5. That any person who shall fail, refuse, or neglect to pay upon demand to the city marshal, or his deputy, the annual street poll tax, which shall have been levied or assessed by the city council of said city, or which may be hereafter levied or assessed by the city council of said city, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction thereof shall be fined in any sum not exceeding $25, or be imprisoned not exceeding thirty days, or both such fine and imprisonment in the discretion of the court.

"Sec. 6. That it shall be the duty of the city marshal to collect all the city street poll tax from every person liable therefor, and on the neglect or refusal of such person to pay the same, he shall collect the same by seizure and sale of any personal property owned by such person. The sale to be made after three days' written notice of time and place of such sale to be posted in three of the most public places of said city before the day of sale."

"Sec. 13. The city marshal shall enforce the payment of the city street poll tax by any and all the modes herein provided in the name and at the cost of the city."

The Constitution of the state (art. 11, § 10) provides that the legislature shall, by general laws, provide for the incorporation, organization, and classification, in proportion to population, of cities and towns, and it is conceded that Port Townsend is a city of the third class, duly organized and existing under and by virtue of a general law passed by the legislature in accordance with the mandate of the Constitution. By that 67 L. R. A.

law (§ 938 of Ballinger's Anno. Codes & Statutes) the city council of such city is empowered: "(7) To impose on and collect from every male inhabitant between the ages of twenty-one and fifty years an annual street poll tax not exceeding $2 and no other road poll tax shall be collected within the limits of such city: Provided, that any member of a volunteer fire company in such city shall be exempt from such tax." "(16) To impose fines, penalties, and forfeitures for any and all violations of ordinances, and for any breach or violation of any ordinance to fix the penalty by fine or imprisonment, or both; but no such fine shall exceed $300, nor the term of such imprisonment exceed the term of three months." If the provisions of § 938 of the Code, which we have quoted, are not in conflict with the Constitution of the state or of the United States, it can hardly be disputed that the ordinances founded thereon, and numbered 675 and 639, are valid enactments of the city of Port Townsend. And, if the ordinances in question are valid, we think the averments of the complaint are sufficient to constitute an offense, and that the demurrer thereto was properly overruled.

But it is earnestly insisted by the learned counsel for the appellant that the ordinances and statute providing for the imposition and collection of this city street poll tax are, each and all, violative of the Constitution of the state and of the 14th Amendment to the Constitution of the United States. Before proceeding to the consideration of the objections interposed by appellant to this poll-tax law and these city ordinances, we deem it proper to observe that it is settled by the highest authority that a legislative enactment is presumed to be constitutional and valid until the contrary clearly appears. In other words, the courts will presume that an act regularly passed by the legislative body of the government is a valid law, and will entertain no presumptions against its validity. And when the constitutionality of an act of the legislature is drawn in question the court will not declare it void unless its invalidity is so apparent as to leave no reasonable doubt upon the subject. Cooley, Const. Lim. 7th ed. pp. 252-254, and cases cited; Id. p. 255. See also Francis v. Atchison, T. & S. F. R. Co. 19 Kan. 303-306. We have mentioned these well-established rules because we believe that they should always be kept in mind when the court is called upon to declare invalid an act of the law-making body, a co-ordinate and independent department of the government.

The first and chief contention of appellant is that subdivision 7 of § 938 of the Code, above quoted, and the ordinances founded thereon, are unconstitutional and void, for the reason that the tax attempted to be levied and collected under the ordinance is levied and imposed upon males between the ages of twenty-one and fifty years alone, and not upon females, nor upon males over the age of fifty years, nor upon males under the age of twenty-one years, nor upon the members of volunteer fire companies. Although the sum involved in this case is small, the question presented for our determination is one of great importance to the various municipalities of the third class throughout the state. This is the first time this precise question has been before this court for determination, and we find, upon investigation, that the decisions of other courts of last resort bearing directly upon the question are far from numerous. It is true, we have several times had occasion to pass upon the validity of statutes, and ordinances providing for the payment of license taxes or fees by persons engaged in certain occupations or callings, and have held that such exactions, although imposed by the taxing power, are not taxes within the meaning of the Constitution or of the ordinary revenue laws. See Fleetwood v. Read, 21 Wash. 548, 47 L. R. A. 205, 58 Pac. 665; Stull v. De Mattos, 23 Wash. 71, 51 L. R. A. 392, 62 Pac. 451; Walla Walla v. Ferdon, 21 Wash. 308, 57 Pac. 796. And in State v. Clark, 30 Wash. 439, 71 Pac. 20, we held that the inheritance tax law, which exempts from its provisions sums below $10,000 when the estate passes to direct heirs and kindred, but grants no such exemption to collateral heirs or strangers to the blood who are devisees, and which does not require all classes of persons mentioned therein to pay taxes on the property received by them at a uniform rate, is not in conflict with the constitutional provisions requiring uniformity in the rate of assessment and taxation of property, for the reason that the so-called inheritance tax is only a charge upon the passing of the estate by succession and the privilege of the heirs or devisees to take it, and not a tax on property. The tax in question is not a tax on property, but it is, nevertheless, a tax, under any proper definition of that term. It is a poll or capitation tax, and is so denominated both in the statute and the ordinances. It is levied for a public purpose, and is clearly a revenue measure. But its assessment is not governed by the general revenue law, or, strictly speaking, by § 2 of article 7 of the state Constitution, which declares that the legislature shall provide by law a uniform and equal rate of assessment and taxation on all property in the state according to its value in money. It is settled law that the power of taxation is a legislative power, and an incident of sovereignty, and when the people adopt a Constitution, and thereby create a department of government upon which they confer the power to make laws, the power of taxation is conferred as a part of such general power. And, unless its power of taxation is limited by constitutional provisions, the state, by virtue of its sovereignty, has the power to tax all persons and property within its jurisdiction. Cooley, Taxn. 2d ed. pp. 4, 5; Id. 3d ed. pp. 7-9, and cases cited. See also Judson, Taxn. § 431. Several of the state Constitutions provide for the imposition of poll taxes, but such taxes are, it seems, prohibited by the Constitutions of Ohio and Maryland. See 1 Desty, Taxn. p. 296. Our Constitution does not expressly mention such taxation, and, as that instrument is not a grant of power, but a limitation of power inherent in the state, independent of that instrument, it follows that this tax must be declared valid, unless the legislature was indirectly and by necessary implication prohibited from authorizing it to be levied by some provision of the Constitution. While it is conceded by counsel for appellant that the legislature may, in the absence of constitutional restrictions, "confer upon a city almost supreme power over local taxation," yet they contend that the tax in question, by reason of its lack of uniformity, is repugnant to § 9 of article 7 of our Constitution, and therefore void. That section of article 7 reads as follows: "The legislature may vest the corporate authorities of cities, towns, and villages with power to make local improvements by special assessment or by special taxation of property benefited. For all corporate purposes, all municipal corporations may be vested with authority to assess and collect taxes, and such taxes shall be uniform in respect to persons and property within the jurisdiction of the body levying the same." Section 12 of article 11 of the Constitution provides that "the legislature shall have no power to impose taxes upon . . . cities . . . or upon the inhabitants or property thereof, for . . . city . . . purposes, but may by general laws vest in the corporate authorities thereof the power to assess and collect taxes for such purposes." These two provisions are the only ones relating to the vesting of the power of taxation in municipal corporations. And they clearly indicate—especially the latter—that the legislature may authorize the taxation, by cities, of persons, as well as property, within their limits. Conceding, as we must, that the legislature had the right to delegate to cities of the third class the power to levy poll taxes on the inhabitants thereof, the question naturally arises whether, in this instance, they exercised the power in conformity with the Constitution. As we have seen, § 9 of article 7 of the Constitution, empowers the legislature to vest all municipal corporations with authority, for corporate purposes, to assess and collect taxes; such taxes to be uniform in respect to persons and property within the jurisdiction of the body levying the same. It is claimed by the learned counsel for the respondent, as we understand his argument, that this constitutional provision applies only to the taxation of property, and that this court has so decided in several cases. But counsel is in error, so far as the decisions of this court are concerned. The cases referred to relate to license taxes and the like, which are not deemed taxes, as that term is ordinarily understood, and they are, therefore, not applicable to the case in hand. The Constitution says, in effect, that all municipal corporations may tax persons, as well as property, if authorized so to do by the legislature; and we are not at liberty to construe that provision so as to eliminate, or give no effect to, the words "as to persons," therein contained, which we would be obliged to do in order to hold that it was the intention of the framers of that instrument that property alone should be taxed by municipal corporations. All the power possessed by cities and other municipal corporations to tax either property or persons is conferred upon them by the legislature, whose power, as we have already intimated, is practically, though perhaps not absolutely, unlimited, in the absence of constitutional restrictions. And it will be observed that the only restriction imposed by the Constitution upon the power of the legislature to vest municipal corporations with the authority to tax persons and property is that "such taxes shall be uniform in respect to persons and property within the jurisdiction of the body levying the same." It is conceded by counsel for appellant that the uniformity rule in taxation usually prescribed by law does not preclude the legislature from selecting and classifying, in a proper and reasonable manner, the subjects of taxation; and that rule is so firmly established that the citation of cases in support of it is entirely unnecessary.

But it is claimed on behalf of the appellant that the rule of uniformity prescribed by the state Constitution was in this instance wholly disregarded and ignored by the legislature in exempting from the tax all females, all males not within the designated ages, and members of volunteer fire companies; and that the classification of the persons to be taxed is arbitrary and unlawful.

reasonable, because it is not based upon any "difference which bears a just and proper relation to the attempted classification." As to the right to classify subjects of taxation, this court, in McDaniels v. J. J. Connelly Shoe Co. 30 Wash. 549, 60 L. R. A. 947, 94 Am. St. Rep. 889, 71 Pac. 37, where the question of classification was under consideration, said: "It is true that the mere fact of classification is insufficient to relieve a statute from the reach of this clause of the Constitution,—that it must appear that the classification is made upon some reasonable and just difference between the persons affected and others to warrant classification at all." And in Gulf, C. & S. F. R. Co. v. Ellis, 185 U. S. 150, 41 L. ed. 666, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 255, in which the question of the power of classification is elaborately discussed, the Supreme Court, respecting such power, observed: "That must always rest upon some difference which bears a reasonable and just relation to the act in respect to which the classification is proposed, and can never be made arbitrarily, and without any such basis." The classification made in imposing this tax is based solely upon age and sex. It has no relation to the property of the persons to be taxed, or to their ability to pay. The persons selected to bear the burden are under no greater obligations to pay for keeping the streets in repair than others who are exempted from the payment of the tax. Does such classification, then, rest upon a reasonable difference between the persons taxed and others who are not taxed? It has been stated by our highest court that there is no precise application of the rule of reasonableness of classification, and that there cannot be an exact exclusion or inclusion of persons and things. Magoun v. Illinois Trust & Sav. Bank, 170 U. S. 296, 42 L. ed. 1037, 18 Sup. Ct. Rep. 594. Where exemptions from taxation are permissible, the reasonableness of the classification of subjects must, therefore, be determined from the facts and circumstances appearing in each particular case. It is urged on the part of the respondent that the statute under consideration ought to be upheld, because the people have acquiesced in it, and these taxes have been levied and collected under it in cities throughout the state ever since the organization of the state government; and Faribault v. Misener, 20 Minn. 396, Gil. 347, is cited in support of that proposition. The Constitution of Minnesota contained the following clause: "All taxes to be raised in this state shall be as nearly equal as may be." Pursuant to the authority given by its charter, the city of Faribault in each of the years 1872 and 1873 levied and assessed a poll tax of $2 on every qualified voter, except members of fire engine, hook and ladder, and hose companies. The defendant, Misener, refused to pay the poll tax assessed against him for each of those years, and an action was brought against him before a justice of the peace to recover the same. The justice rendered judgment in favor of the defendant, which on appeal was affirmed by the district court, and the plaintiff appealed to the supreme court. The principal question before the court in that case was whether the clause in the city charter exempting firemen from the payment of poll tax was repugnant to the provision of the state Constitution above set forth, and the court held that it was not. It seems apparent from expressions in its opinion that the decision of the court was largely influenced by the fact that a long-continued acquiescence of the people in the statute under which the taxes in question had been collected had established a legislative and popular construction of the Constitution, which, in the opinion of the court, was entitled to great consideration. And it is true that in case of doubt in the mind of the court as to the proper construction of any particular provision of the Constitution a contemporaneous interpretation or the subsequent practical construction of such provision is entitled to great weight. But, in the language of Judge Cooley: "Acquiescence for no length of time can legalize a clear usurpation of power, where the people have plainly expressed their will in the Constitution, and appointed judicial tribunals to enforce it. A power is frequently yielded to merely because it is claimed, and it may be exercised for a long period, in violation of the constitutional prohibition, without the mischief which the Constitution was designed to guard against appearing, or without anyone being sufficiently interested in the subject to raise the question; but these circumstances cannot be allowed to sanction a clear infraction of the Constitution. We think we allow to contemporary and practical construction its full legitimate force when we suffer it, where it is clear and uniform, to solve in its own favor the doubts which arise on reading the instrument to be construed." Cooley, Const. Lim. 7th ed. pp. 106, 107. See State ex rel. Chamberlin v. Daniel, 17 Wash. 111, 49 Pac. 243.

The Minnesota case above cited is confidently relied on by counsel for the respondent as supporting the ruling of the trial court in this case, and it is in fact more nearly in point than any other of the numerous cases cited. But, conceding that decision to be correct under the Constitution and laws of Minnesota, it cannot be 67 L. R. A.

said to be entitled to controlling influence here, for the reason that the general constitutional provision there considered is materially different from the provision of our Constitution now before us for interpretation, and which declares, as we have seen, that taxes for corporate purposes "shall be equal and uniform in respect to persons and property within the jurisdiction of the body levying the same." The tax attempted to be collected in this instance is not uniform, even as to the persons included in the classification made by the legislature for some persons in the general class are exempted from the payment of the tax. It would therefore seem clear that the section of the statute now under consideration is repugnant to § 9 of article 7 of the Constitution, and consequently void. This conclusion is fully supported by the decision of the supreme court of Illinois in Hunsaker v. Wright, 30 Ill. 146, wherein the constitutionality of a county tax levied upon property within the limits of the city of Cairo was in question, the provision of the Constitution there interpreted being, in substance, identical with § 9 of article 7 of our Constitution. The lower court in that case enjoined the collection of the tax, and its ruling was affirmed by the supreme court. The Constitution of that state declared that "the general assembly shall provide for levying a tax by valuation so that every person and corporation shall pay a tax in proportion to the value of his or her property," and that "the corporate authorities of counties, . . . cities, towns, and villages may be vested with power to assess and collect taxes for corporate purposes, such taxes to be uniform in respect to persons and property within the jurisdiction of the body imposing the same." And with regard to those provisions the court said: "These provisions were manifestly inserted in the fundamental law for the purpose of insuring equality in the levy and collection of the taxes to support the government, whether levied for state, county, or municipal purposes. The design was to impose an equal proportion of these burdens upon all persons within the limits of the district or body imposing them. Under these provisions the legislature has no power to exempt or release a person, or community of persons, from their proportionate share of these burdens. Not having such power themselves, they are unable to delegate such power to these inferior bodies." See also, to the same effect, Cooley, Taxn. 2d ed. pp. 25, 26.

We have refrained from discussing the numerous cases cited by counsel upholding levies of taxes payable in labor on highways, for the reason that we have deemed such cases inapplicable to the case at bar. Though in the nature of a tax, such levies are, in general, referable to the police power. "Neither in common speech, nor in the customary revenue legislation, would a burden of this nature be understood as embraced in the term 'tax;' and statutory provisions for assessment are not, therefore, applicable to it, unless made so in express terms." Cooley, Taxn. 2d ed. p. 15.

Our conclusion is that both the ordinances for the violation of which appellant was tried and convicted and the provision of the statute upon which they are founded are unconstitutional and void, and the judgment and sentence is therefore reversed, and the action dismissed.

Hadley and Mount, JJ., concur. Fulleton, Ch. J., dissents.

Rehearing denied.

ALABAMA SUPREME COURT.

Columbus TONEY, Appt.,

v.

STATE of Alabama.

(.....Ala.....)

A statute making it a misdemeanor for one under contract to labor, or work land, to break his contract and enter into another with a different person, without the consent of his employer, and sufficient excuse, to be adjudged by the court, and without giving notice of his contract to the person with whom he makes the new one, violates the constitutional guaranties of life, liberty, and property, and abridges the privileges and immunities of citizens of the United States.

(July 21, 1904.)

A PPEAL by petitioner from a decree of the Probate Court for Russell County denying him release, in a habeas corpus proceeding, from custody to which he had been committed for violation of the statute against breach of a labor contract. Reversed.

The case sufficiently appears in the opinion.

Mr. Frank M. De Graffenried for appellant.

Mr. Massey Wilson, Attorney General, for the State:

Farm laborers, the class referred to in the act, have been under the regulation of the legislature for many years. An employer is entitled to the protection of the statute in dealing with his laborers. The statute is a wise one, and should be upheld.

Tarpley v. State, 79 Ala. 272; Murrell v. State, 44 Ala. 367.

Sharpe, J., delivered the opinion of the court:

Authority for the warrant under which petitioner is imprisoned does not exist unless in an act approved March 1, 1901 (Acts 1900, 1901, p. 1208), which purports to apply in Russell and other counties of this state, and which declares "that any person who has contracted in writing to labor for, or serve, another for any given time, or any person who has by written contract leased or rented land from another for any specified time, or any person who has contracted in writing with a party furnishing the lands, or the lands and teams to cultivate it, either to furnish the labor, or the labor and teams to cultivate the land, with stipulations, express or implied, to divide the crops between them in certain proportion, and who before the expiration of such contract and without the consent of the other party, and without sufficient excuse, to be adjudged by the court, shall leave such other party, or abandon said contract, or leave or abandon the leased premises, or the land furnished as aforesaid, and who shall also make a second contract, either parol or written, of a similar nature or character to any of said aforementioned contracts, though differing in some particulars in the terms, stipulations, or period of time, with a different person, without first giving notice to such person of the existence of the said first contract, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and on conviction be fined not exceeding $50, or sentenced to hard labor for not exceeding six months, one or both," etc. This enactment cannot operate consistently with the guaranties of equality, liberty, and property made by the Federal and also by the state Constitution. In the state Constitution as it existed when this act was passed, and as it now exists, "life, liberty, and property" are enumerated as being among the inalienable rights of all men; and to protect the citizen in the enjoyment of "life, liberty, and property" is declared to be the sole object and only legitimate end of government. In the 14th Amendment to the Federal Constitution it is declared: "No state shall make or enforce any law which shall abridge the privileges or immunities of citizens of the United States; nor shall any state deprive any person of life, liberty, or property without due process of law." In interpretation of this it was said in Allgeyer v. Louisiana, 165 U. S. 578, 579, 41 L. ed. 832, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 427: "The liberty mentioned in that amendment means, not only the right of the citizen to be free from the mere physical restraint of his person as by incarceration, but the term is deemed to embrace the right of the citizen to be free in the enjoyment of all his faculties; to be free to use them in all lawful ways; to live and work where he will; to earn his livelihood by any lawful calling; to pursue any livelihood or avocation, and for that purpose to enter into all contracts which may be proper, necessary, and essential to his carrying out to a successful conclusion the purposes above mentioned." In support of that interpretation the court rendering it quoted approvingly from the opinion of Justice Bradley in Butcher's Union S. H. & L. S. L. Co. v. Crescent City L. S. L. & S. H. Co. 111 U. S. 746, 28 L. ed. 585, 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 652, the following: "The right to follow any of the common occupations . . . is an inalienable right. It was formulated as such under the phrase 'pursuit of happiness' in the Declaration of Independence, which commenced with the fundamental proposition that 'all men are created equal; that they are endowed by their Creator with certain inalienable rights; that among these are life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness.' This right is a large ingredient in the civil liberty of the citizen. . . . I hold that the liberty of pursuit—the right to follow any of the ordinary callings of life—is one of the privileges of a citizen of the United States." The court further said in Allgeyer's Case, 165 U. S. 591, 41 L. ed. 836, 17 Sup. Ct. Rep. 427: "In the privilege of pursuing an ordinary calling or trade, and of acquiring, holding, and selling property must be embraced the right to make all proper contracts in relation thereto," etc. On the same subject, the court said in State v. Goodwill, 33 W. Va. 179, 6 L. R. A. 621, 25 Am. St. Rep. 863, 10 S. E. 285: "A person living under the protection of this government has the right to adopt and follow any lawful industrial pursuit, not injurious to the community, which he may see fit. And as incident to this is the right to labor or employ labor, make contracts in respect thereto upon such terms as may be agreed upon by the parties," etc. In the same case it was said: "The right to use, buy, and sell property, and contract in respect thereto, including contracts for labor—which is, as we have seen, property—is protected by the Constitution. If the legislature, without any public necessity, has the power to prohibit or restrict the right of contract between private persons in respect of one lawful trade or business, then it may prevent the prosecution of all trades, and regulate all contracts." The principles so announced are by the above-cited and other authorities recognized as correct. See Com. v. Perry, 155 Mass. 117, 14 L. R. A. 325, 31 Am. St. Rep. 533, 28 N. E. 1126; People ex rel. Valentine v. Berrien Circuit Judge, 124 Mich. 664, 50 L. R. A. 493, 83 Am. St. Rep. 352, 83 N. W. 594; Chicago v. Nether, 183 Ill. 104, 48 L. R. A. 261, 75 Am. St. Rep. 93, 55 N. E. 707. Occupations there are in which the public have such interest as will make them subject to statutory regulation, or even prohibition. The constitutional provisions referred to were not designed to interfere with the states' public powers; and within the limits set by the Constitution, state and Federal, the legislature is free to determine what subjects are proper to be legislated upon in conservation of order, morals, health, and safety; but a constitutional right "cannot be imposed on or destroyed under the guise or device of being regulated." South & North Ala. R. Co. v. Morris, 65 Ala. 193; Joseph v. Randolph, 71 Ala. 499, 46 Am. Rep. 347.

NOTE.—As to constitutionality of statutory restrictions on contracts between master and servant, see also, in this series, Com. v. Perry, 14 L. R. A. 325, and note; State v. Loomis, 21 L. R. A. 789; Braceville Coal Co. v. People, 22 L. R. A. 340; Re House Bill No. 1,230, 28 L. R. A. 344; Ritchie v. People, 29 L. R. A. 67 L. R. A.

79; State v. Julow, 29 L. R. A. 257; Harding v. People, 32 L. R. A. 445; Re Morgan, 47 L. R. A. 52; State v. Haun, 47 L. R. A. 369; Re Preston, 52 L. R. A. 523; State ex rel. Zillmer v. Kreutzberg, 58 L. R. A. 748; Wenham v. State, 58 L. R. A. 825; and Republic Iron & Steel Co. v. State, 62 L. R. A. 136.

The act in question purports to prohibit the employee and renter to make contracts of the kind he may have abandoned except under one of three alternative conditions. The first of these, the employer in the case of the employee, or the landlord in the case of the renter, could, by withholding his consent, render unavailable; the second—the existence of an excuse for the abandonment, to be judged of by the court—could never be known to be available except at the risk of, and at the end of, a criminal prosecution; the third—that of giving notice of the existing contract—would tend to prevent the making of a similar contract with a new employer or landlord, and this for reasons which are obvious, if regard be had to the risk of prosecution to which such new employer or landlord would be subject under another act in pari materia with this, and approved on the day before the approval of this act. Acts 1900, 1901, p. 1215. If the conditions prescribed by this act can be validly imposed, the door is open for the imposition of others more onerous. "Questions of power do not depend on the degree to which it may be exercised. If it may be exercised at all, it must be exercised at the will of those in whose hands it is placed." Brown v. Maryland, 12 Wheat. 419, 6 L. ed. 678. Because of the restrictions it purports to place on the right to make contracts for employment and concerning the use and cultivation of land, this act is wholly invalid. Whether a like conclusion might be reached upon other considerations urged in the brief for petitioner, it is unnecessary to consider.

A forceful opinion opposed to the constitutionality of this act was recently rendered by Judge Jones, and is reported in 123 Fed. 671 (Peonage Cases).

The act for which petitioner is held was not a criminal offense, and therefore the judgment appealed from will be reversed, and it will here be ordered that the petitioner be discharged from custody.

Reversed and rendered.

NORTH DAKOTA SUPREME COURT.

Celestia E. VAN DUSEN, Respt.,
v.

Benjamin F. BIGELOW, Appt.

(.....N. D.)

*Where a party accepts an agency to take charge of a house and lot belonging to his principal, collects the rents, pays taxes, and sees to repairs, and gives advice as to the value of the principal's unimproved farm lands, a fiduciary and confidential relation is thereby created between them in regard to everything connected with such property; and, if the agent purchases such farm lands for himself and in his own name, he is bound to make full disclosure of all facts bearing on the value of such lands material for the principal to know in order to act intelligently, and if the agent conceals such facts the conveyance is voidable at the principal's election.

(July 5, 1904.)

APPEAL by defendant from a judgment of the District Court for Stutsman County in favor of plaintiff in an action brought to compel reconveyance of certain real estate alleged to have been obtained by defendant from plaintiff by means of a fraudulent concealment of facts which it was his duty to disclose. Affirmed.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Messrs. John Knauf and Oscar J. Seiler, for appellant:

The complaint does not state a cause of action in equity. It is necessary for the plaintiff to allege that, before beginning the action, he had restored, or had offered to restore, to the defendant everything of value received from the defendant under the contract.

Kelley v. Owens, 120 Cal. 502, 47 Pac. 369, 52 Pac. 797; Loaiza v. Superior Court, 85 Cal. 31, 9 L. R. A. 376, 20 Am. St. Rep. 197, 24 Pac. 707; Dotterer v. Freeman, 88 Ga. 479, 14 S. E. 863; American Freehold Land & Mortg. Co. v. Jefferson, 69 Miss. 770, 30 Am. St. Rep. 587, 12 So. 464; Burgett v. Teal, 91 Ind. 260; Godding v. Deoker, 3 Colo. App. 198, 32 Pac. 832.

Therefore this action is one at law for the recovery of damages for fraud and deceit, and the defendant was entitled to a jury trial.

Agency is a simple question of fact.

Mechem, Agency, § 106; Roberts v. People, 55 Mich. 367, 21 N. W. 319; Saginaw, T. & H. R. Co. v. Chappell, 56 Mich. 190, 22 N. W. 278.

Power to superintend, make contracts relating to, with power to release and bind as to, real and personal estate does not constitute agency to sell real estate. Authority to sell real estate must be clear, concise, and express.

Billings v. Morrow, 7 Cal. 171, 68 Am. Dec. 235; Lord v. Sherman, 2 Cal. 498; Jones v. Marks, 47 Cal. 242; De Rutte v. Muldrow, 16 Cal. 505; Treat v. De Celis, 41 Cal. 202; Hay v. Mayer, 8 Watts, 203, 34 Am. Dec. 453.

The burden of showing agency to sell was upon the plaintiff, and she testified that the authority was made and accepted in writing. It should have been established at the trial in writing, as she alleged it to have been made.

1 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, 2d ed. p. 968; Montgomery v. Pacific Coast Land Bureau, 94 Cal. 284, 28 Am. St. Rep. 123, 29 Pac. 640; Busch v. Wilcox, 82 Mich. 336, 21 Am.

*Headnote by MORGAN, J.

NOTE.—For other cases in this series as to rule that agent must not profit at his principal's expense in the matter of his agency, see Tyler v. Sanborn, 4 L. R. A. 218, and note; McNutt v. Dix, 10 L. R. A. 680; Jansen v. Williams, 20 L. R. A. 207; Boswell v. Cunningham, 21 L. R. A. 54; Kimball v. Ranney, 46 L. R. A. 403; Holmes v. Cathcart, 60 L. R. A. 734; and Trice v. Comstock, 61 L. R. A. 176.
67 L. R. A.

St. Rep. 563, 47 N. W. 328; Kelly v. Strong, 68 Wis. 152, 31 N. W. 721.

Such proof must be clear and succinct.

Hodge v. Combs, 1 Black, 192, 17 L. ed. 157; Louisville & N. R. Co. v. Gilmer, 89 Ala. 534, 7 So. 654; Taylor v. Merrill, 55 Ill. 52; Proudfoot v. Wightman, 78 Ill. 553; Hood v. Adams, 128 Mass. 207.

Agency to sell is a contract, to constitute which the principal must appoint and the agent must accept. In this case neither appointment nor acceptance is shown.

Hermann v. Niagara F. Ins. Co. 100 N. Y. 411, 53 Am. Rep. 197, 3 N. E. 341; Anderson v. State, 22 Ohio St. 305; Mechem, Agency, p. 1.

One cannot be held liable as an agent where he has never accepted appointment as such, and no appointment takes effect until accepted.

Mechem, Agency, § 108; First Nat. Bank v. Free, 67 Iowa, 11, 24 N. W. 566; Collar v. Ford, 45 Iowa, 331; Cameron v. Seaman, 49 N. Y. 396, 25 Am. Rep. 212.

To constitute an agency to sell real estate in this case, the contract of agency must be in writing and acknowledged.

N. D. Rev. Code 1899, §§ 3531, 3887, 4314, subdiv. 5; Reese v. Medlock, 27 Tex. 120, 84 Am. Dec. 611; Mechem, Agency, § 103.

Messrs. E. M. Sanford, W. A. Martin, and F. Baldwin, for respondent:

A party will not be permitted to purchase an interest in property, and hold it for his own benefit, where he has a duty to perform in relation thereto which is inconsistent with his character as a purchaser on his own account.

Jansen v. Williams, 36 Neb. 869, 20 L. R. A. 207, 55 N. W. 279.

Where confidence is reasonably reposed, that confidence must not be abused.

Casey v. Casey, 14 Ill. 112; 1 Wait, Act. & Def. 246.

Morgan, J., delivered the opinion of the court:

This equitable action is brought for a reconveyance of certain real estate which was conveyed to the defendant by the plaintiff while defendant is alleged to have been plaintiff's agent for the sale of such real estate and failed to communicate to plaintiff that he had received an offer for said land for a much larger sum than that for which the plaintiff sold the same to the defendant. The substance of the allegations of the complaint is that defendant took advantage of the confidence reposed in him by plaintiff as her agent and purchased the land himself, under fraudulent concealment of facts, for a sum much less than that which he could have sold it for, and much less than the actual value of the land. In the complaint 67 L. R. A.

plaintiff offers to return all money and the security received by her from the defendant under such conveyance. The defendant by answer denies that he was plaintiff's agent for the sale of such land, and denies that he was offered a larger sum for such land than he paid for it, and denies that he fraudulently concealed any facts from plaintiff, and denies that the land was worth any more than he paid for the same. Whether defendant was plaintiff's agent for the sale of her lands, and whether defendant had an offer for the land of $1,400 when he purchased it for himself for $900, were the issues that were contested at the trial. The trial court found against the defendant on both these issues, and ordered that a reconveyance be made upon restoration by plaintiff of all that she had received under the sale. The defendant appeals from a judgment rendered on such findings, and requests a review of the entire record under § 5630, Rev. Codes 1899.

It is urged that the judgment is not sustained by any evidence that defendant was plaintiff's agent for the sale of the land. This contention is based on the fact that secondary evidence was received of the contents of exhibit A, which was found missing from plaintiff's deposition taken at Chicago, to which said exhibit should have been attached. The notary taking the deposition certifies that exhibit A was attached, but upon being opened it was not attached nor inclosed in the envelope containing the deposition. For the purposes of this case it will be conceded that all of plaintiff's evidence pertaining to the contents of said exhibit A, and all secondary evidence given as to its contents, would be excluded on trials not under § 5630, Rev. Codes 1899. The evidence will not, therefore, be considered on this appeal. Without such evidence we think the record contains evidence sufficient to warrant a recovery by the plaintiff. There is evidence in the record that is not disputed that, for nearly four years prior to the sale of the land to the defendant by the plaintiff, defendant had been the general agent of the plaintiff for taking care of her property in the city of Jamestown. He had charge of renting and repairing her house in said city, and collected the rent for the same, and paid the taxes on this house and lot, as well as on the land that is the subject of this action. Plaintiff and defendant had corresponded in reference to the sale of said land and its value. Her testimony is that she relied on him as to the value of said land, and made no inquiries elsewhere as to its value. On June 19, 1901, the defendant wrote her that he considered this land worth $4 per acre, and further said: "It would be well for you to name the amount you could sell for, and a purchaser might be found." Prior to this, and on December 21, 1899, he wrote her as follows: "As to price of house and land, would say if you were going to trade I would think about $1,600 for house and quarter section of land. If you could get cash you might take less. Harvey sold his quarter for $650, crop payment plan." It is also shown by uncontradicted evidence that he had full charge of her city property, and that she left matters to his judgment, and relied on him to protect her interests as to repairs and collections of rents, and in one letter said: "It seems as though it was not best to let them get so far behind, but you, of course, being there, understand the circumstances best." She further testified that she relied on him as her agent to fix the selling price of her land, and that she did not know the value of the land in March, 1902, when she sold it to the defendant. On March 7, 1902, defendant wrote her on other matters, and at the close of the letter asked her: "Would you accept $900 for the south half of section 6; $500 cash, balance in two years at 6 per cent interest? Please let me know." She answered that she would accept such an offer. She conveyed the land to him in March, 1902, and he paid her $500 cash and gave her a mortgage on the land for $400. This action was commenced September 10, 1902. The trial court found as a fact that defendant was plaintiff's agent for the sale of this land on March 7, 1902, and for a long time prior thereto.

That he was in correspondence with her about the sale and value of this land, and advised her concerning the same, is undisputed, and is shown by his own letters outside of exhibit A. That he was her sole agent to care for her other property is also beyond dispute. That he alone looked after all her interests in Jamestown and vicinity is also beyond question. Defendant was her agent as to certain matters, and as to those matters he had her confidence, and as to those matters she relied on his judgment. Whether he was her authorized agent to sell the land—that is, whether he was such agent in respect to the sale of the land that his contract for the sale of the land would bind her—need not be determined. We think that he was her agent in respect to the land, and, as such agent, he was under obligations to advise her fully as to all facts within his knowledge bearing upon the value of the land, and upon all matters in reference to the sale thereof. Defendant had been her agent for several years. We think the evidence in the record, outside of exhibit A, is sufficient to show that he was her agent to sell this land. That such agency to sell the land is not shown by explicit writing is entirely immaterial in this kind of action. It is not a case of enforcing a contract against a principal made by an agent with a third person. In a case like the one at bar the agency may be shown by parol, as there is no statutory provision that requires an agency to negotiate for a sale to be in writing. It is the confidential relation existing between them, followed by concealment of facts, that is the gist of the cause of action. He was her agent for specific purposes connected with this land and with her other property. By virtue of such agency he became acquainted with the value of the land, and knew that she knew nothing of its value, and that she was relying wholly upon him. It is the existence of such confidence, arising out of their business relations as to a specific agency, that gives rise to a duty on his part to disclose all facts known to him in reference to the value of the land if he chose to buy it himself. It is not claimed that he made false or fraudulent statements. It is claimed that he should have disclosed that he had an offer of $1,400 for the land when he bought it for $900, and that this was a fraudulent concealment. The relation existing between them, as shown by the evidence referred to, was such as demanded frank and full disclosures of all facts known to him bearing on the value of the land before he could become a purchaser of the same, although avowedly made for himself. In Norris v. Taylor, 49 Ill. 17, 95 Am. Dec. 568, it was said: "Where a party accepts the position of an agent to take charge of the lands of his principal, collect the rents and royalty, and pay the taxes, a fiduciary and confidential relation is thereby created in regard to everything relating to such lands; and, in treating with his principal for the property, the agent is bound to make the fullest disclosures of all matters connected therewith, within his knowledge, which it is important for his principal to know in order to treat understandingly." In Davis v. Hamlin, 108 Ill. 39, 48 Am. Rep. 541, it was said: "It is contended by appellant's counsel that the rule we apply, which holds an agent to be a trustee for his principal, has no application to the case at bar, because Davis was not an agent to obtain a renewal of the lease, and was not charged with any duty in regard thereto; that his was but the specific employment to engage amusements for the theater, and that he was agent only within the scope of that employment; that Hamlin, having a lease which would expire April 16, 1883, had no right or interest in the property thereafter; and that Davis, in negotiating for the lease, did not deal with any property wherein Hamlin had any interest, and that such property was not the subject-matter of any trust between them.

Although there was no right of renewal of the lease in the tenant he had a reasonable expectation of its renewal which courts of equity have recognized as an interest of value, secretly to interfere with which and dis-appoint, by an agent in the management of the lessee's business, we regard as inconsistent with the fidelity which the agent owes to the business of his principal. . . . In applying the rule, it is the nature of the relation which is to be regarded, and not the designation of the one filling the relation." In Cook v. Berlin Woolen Mill Co. 43 Wis. 433, the court said: "But, whatever may be the nature of the agency, a court of equity regards every purchase by an agent from his principal with jealous scrutiny, to see that the agent takes no advantage from the confidence of his principal; with jealousy almost invincible, as Judge Story calls it. And there is a class of agents who are held to a very strict rule, a good deal like the rule which courts of equity once generally applied to trustees, and some few courts still apply. When the nature of the agency has given the agent control in the management of the principal's property, and peculiar opportunity of knowing its condition and value, a purchase of it by the agent will be avoided at the suit of the principal, unless the agent make it affirmatively appear that the transaction was fair, and that he imparted to the principal all his information concerning the property, and acted throughout uberrima fide." Pomeroy on Equity Jurisprudence (vol. 2, § 959) lays down the rule as follows: "Any unfairness, any underhanded dealing, any use of knowledge not communicated to the principal, any lack of the perfect good faith which equity requires, renders the transaction voidable, so that it will be set aside at the option of the principal. If, on the other hand, the agent imparted all his own knowledge concerning the matter, and advised his principal with candor and disinterestedness as though he himself were a stranger to the bargain, and paid a fair price, and the principal on his side acted with full knowledge of the subject-matter of the transaction and of the person with whom he was dealing, and gave a full and free consent,—if all these are affirmatively proved,—the presumption is overcome and the transaction is valid." See also Ingle v. Hartman, 37 Iowa, 274; Rubio v. Parks, 48 Cal. 215; Cotton v. Holliday, 59 Ill. 176; Jackson v. Pleasanton, 95 Va. 654, 20 S. E. 680; Andrews, Am. Law, p. 813, and cases cited; Mechem, Agency, § 466, and cases cited; 1 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, p. 1081, and cases cited; Wharton, Agency, § 235, and cases cited; Ruckman v. Bergholz, 37 N. J. L. 437; Jansen v. Williams, 36 Neb. 869, 20 L. R. A. 207, 55 N. W. 279; Casey 67 L. R. A.

v. Casey, 14 Ill. 112; Stewart v. Gilruth, 8 S. D. 181, 65 N. W. 1085.

A duty of full disclosure of all material facts within his knowledge bearing on the value of the land rested upon the defendant, and, unless he made such disclosures before himself becoming a purchaser, the conveyance becomes voidable upon plaintiff's election to so consider it. The concealment charged against the defendant is as to the value of the land. It is insisted that defendant knew its value to have been greater than that offered, and the fact claimed, that he was offered $500 more than he bought it for, is cited as conclusive evidence that he failed to disclose a material fact bearing upon its value. The trial court found that such an offer was made, and further found that the value of the land, when conveyed to defendant by plaintiff for a consideration of $900, was $1,920. The evidence as to the value of the land and as to the making of an offer of $1,400 for the land is conflicting. On reading the entire record, we find that defendant's testimony upon three disputed questions is contradicted by three witnesses, one alone testifying upon one disputed question. There is no more reason for finding that defendant is telling the truth upon the question of the offer to him for the land than as to the other disputed questions. To reverse the judgment and find for the defendant would be finding that the plaintiff's witnesses are each mistaken upon material matters testified to, concerning which they have no interest. Defendant's interest in the result is apparent. The trial court saw and heard the witnesses testify, and had superior advantages for determining as to the credibility of the witnesses. The finding that an offer of $1,400 had been made to the defendant, as agent for the plaintiff, when he commenced negotiating for the purchase of the land for himself on March 7, 1902, is justified by the evidence.

Before the trial commenced, the defendant demanded that the issues be submitted to a jury for determination, and now claims that he was entitled to a jury trial as a matter of right. His contention is that the action is one for damages, and that all issues "of fact in an action for the recovery of money only" must be submitted to a jury, under § 5420, Rev. Codes 1899, if demanded. We do not agree with appellant that the action is one for the recovery of money only. The relief demanded in the complaint is that the defendant "be required to reconvey said land . . . to plaintiff, . . . and that in lieu thereof that defendant have judgment for $1,020," etc. The primary relief asked is equitable in its nature, and does not pertain to damages. The damages are asked as alternative relief to meet a possible state of facts where the defendant had placed it beyond his power to reconvey. A court of equity will always award damages in case equitable relief cannot be given, or has become impracticable for any reason. 1 Pom. Eq. Jur. § 237. The action being not one for the recovery of money only, the defendant was not entitled to a trial to a jury as a matter of right.

Objections were also made on which was based a motion to suppress the deposition of the plaintiff. Such objections relate to the alleged fact that the notary before whom the deposition was taken acted as attorney for the plaintiff. The record fails to show any misconduct on his part. The defendant was represented by his attorney at the taking of the deposition, and defendant's interests were protected in every way.

The judgment is therefore affirmed.

All concur.

Petition for rehearing denied August 2, 1904.

IOWA SUPREME COURT.

STATE of Iowa

v.

Jack PHILLIPS, Appt.

(119 Iowa, 652.)

1. Proof of absolute necessity is not necessary to justify an officer in killing a person whom he is attempting to arrest for misdemeanor, where the statute requires him to employ no more force in effecting the arrest than to him, acting as an ordinarily prudent person would, under the circumstances, seem reasonably and apparently necessary to effect the result.
2. An officer cannot be convicted of murder for killing a person whom he is attempting to arrest for misdemeanor or by striking him on the head with a billy, if he uses no more force than is necessary in case of an ordinary person, although it proved fatal in the particular case because of the thinness of the prisoner's skull, of which the officer had no knowledge.
3. The jury must decide whether, under all the circumstances, an officer attempting to arrest for misdemeanor a drunken person who resists the arrest at a time when bystanders are present, who presumably would render assistance, is justified in striking him on the head with a billy, and, if so, whether or not he exerts more force than is permissible, where the blows result in death.

4. In a criminal case, if the accused has actually overlooked an error in the original submission which might have misled the jury in reaching their verdict, the court will correct it on rehearing.

5. A grand jury which has been adjourned to the next term of court "unless sooner called by the court" may be recalled for the purpose of considering other cases before the termination of the existing term, although the statute provides that the jury shall, on completion of its business, be discharged.

(April 8, 1903.)*

*A decision was reached and opinion handed down in this case on April 10, 1902, affirming the conviction. But a rehearing was granted and the present conclusion reached, which supersedes the former opinion, and the publication of that opinion is therefore omitted.

NOTE.--Homicide by official action or by officers of justice.

- I. Scope, 293.
- II. Homicide by authority of law or under official direction.
 - a. In execution of death sentence, 293.
 - b. In discharge of ordinary official duty, 293.
 - c. In the discharge of military duty, 295.
- III. Effect of official character and action in case of arrest, 297.
- IV. General rules as to use of force in making arrest.
 - a. In case of felony, 297.
 - b. In case of misdemeanor, 298.
- V. Checking flight.
 - a. In case of felony, 299.
 - b. In case of misdemeanor, 300.
- VI. Meeting actual physical resistance, 301.
- VII. Preventing escape or rescue.
 - a. In case of felony, 302.
 - b. In case of misdemeanor, 302.

67 L. R. A.

VIII. Recapture.

- a. Generally, 303.

- b. Of escaped convicts, 303.

IX. Limitation as to force which may be used.

- a. General rules, 303.

- b. Self-defense as a test, 304.

- c. When use of deadly weapon is justified, 305.

- d. Appearance as a test of the right of self-defense, 306.

- e. Necessity a question for the jury, 306.

X. Effect of question of legality or propriety of officer's action.

- a. General rule as to illegal action, 307.

- b. Action without a warrant, 308.

- c. Action outside of territorial jurisdiction, 309.

- d. Negligent action, 310.

- e. Malicious action, 310.

- f. Notice of character and purpose, 311.

- g. Further authority, 312.

XI. Action by deputy or assistant, 312.

XII. Conclusion, 312.

A PPEAL by defendant from a judgment of the District Court for Wapello County convicting him of manslaughter. Reversed.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Messrs. I. H. Tomlinson and M. A. McCoid for appellant.

Messrs. Charles W. Mullan, Attorney General, and Charles A. Van Vleck, for appellee:

It was absolutely unnecessary, under the circumstances, to strike the blows in the manner in which they were struck, for they were not necessary to subject Debard to the submission and control of the officer, and to enable him to conduct him to the lock-up. They were inflicted as punishment, and not for the purpose of subduing and subjecting him to the control and custody of the officer.

Skidmore v. State, 2 Tex. App. 20.

Officers should use such means to secure their prisoners as will enable them to hold them in custody, without resorting to the use of firearms or dangerous weapons, and they will not be excused for taking life in any case where, with diligence and caution, the prisoner could be otherwise held.

Reneau v. State, 2 Lea, 722, 31 Am. Rep. 626; Head v. Martin, 85 Ky. 485, 3 S. W. 622.

Ladd, J., delivered the opinion of the court:

The accused was acting as special policeman in the town of Eldon during the period

I. Scope.

This note is designed in a general way to cover all cases of homicide committed by persons acting officially, or in the performance of official duty, or under superior orders emanating from governmental authority, or by persons assuming so to act, including homicide in carrying out death sentences, and by persons charged with other official duties, either civil or military, as well as homicide in making arrest. Homicide committed for the purpose of preventing criminal acts, however, and homicide in defense of property, or the person of another, though frequently committed by officers of justice owing to the character of their duties, seem to some extent to be governed by different principles, and to furnish proper subjects for independent notes, and, therefore, have not been included in this note.

II. Homicide by authority of law or under official direction.

a. In execution of death sentence.

The law on the question of homicide in the execution of a death sentence, as laid down by the early writers, seems to have been so clear and so just as to have remained unquestioned ever since. As stated by Blackstone, citing earlier writers (4 Bl. Com. 178), it is, that the putting a malefactor to death who had forfeited his life by the laws and verdict of his country, by one whose office obliges it, is a civil duty, and not only justifiable, but commendable where the law requires it. But the laws must require it; extrajudicially to kill the greatest malefactor is murder. And, if judgment of death be given by a judge not authorized by lawful commission, and execution is done accordingly, the judge is guilty of murder. And such judgment, when legal, must be executed by the proper officer or his duly appointed deputy, and, if another person doth it of his own head, it is murder, even though it be the judge himself. And the execution must pursue the sentence of the court, the substitution, by the officer charged with the duty of execution, of one method of killing for another being murder. In modern times these matters are controlled largely by statutory enactments, which, like all penal provisions, must be strictly construed and accurately followed.

Justifiable homicide is where a person takes another's life by unavoidable necessity, without any will, intention, desire, negligence, or inadvertence on his part, as where a sheriff hangs a prisoner in pursuance of the sentence of the court and in conformity therewith, or where an officer, in due execution of his office, kills a person who assaults or resists him. State v. Dugan, Houst. Crim. Rep. (Del.) 563.

b. In discharge of ordinary official duty.

Where an officer, in the performance of what he conceived to be his duty as such, transcends his authority, and invades the rights of individuals, he is answerable to the government or power under whose authority he is acting, but he is not liable to answer to criminal process of a different government. This is the general rule laid down and acted upon in Re Fair, 100 Fed. 149, a homicide case, and it is also asserted in Re Lewis, 83 Fed. 159, and Re Waite, 81 Fed. 359, and numerous other cases involving matters other than homicide.

And where an officer of the United States is held in custody under process of a state court for a homicide committed within the authority conferred upon him by the laws of the United States, the United States government will protect itself by procuring his release through its judicial department. Re Fair, 100 Fed. 149.

And a United States court will not, in habeas corpus proceedings by an officer of the United States charged with homicide in a state court, examine the evidence for the purpose of determining whether he should be found guilty or innocent; but it may and should examine the evidence for the purpose of determining whether the act alleged to be criminal was done while in the performance of his duty as such officer. Ibid.

Thus, a deputy marshal of the United States, charged with protecting and guarding a judge of the United States court, while in the discharge of his official duty, against assault, being present at the critical moment when prompt action is necessary, is justified in killing a person making such assault if necessary to protect the life of the judge. Re Neagle (Cunningham v. Neagle) 135 U. S. 1, 34 L. ed. 55, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 658.

Such a killing for the purpose of saving the life of the judge, or saving him from great bodily harm, if an offense at all, is an offense under of the fair, and on the 4th day of September, 1900, had cautioned the deceased, Clarence Debard, who was somewhat intoxicated, against "kicking up a disturbance" and returning to the saloon. Notwithstanding this, the deceased undertook to return, but seems to have stopped on the way at a wienerwurst stand, and, while there, grabbed for, but did not reach, a knife. Thereupon he was put under arrest by defendant, and taken toward the jail, all the time making resistance by jerking and trying to get away, and also using profane and threatening language. This continued until they reached a point in front of a printing office, where the defendant struck the deceased over the head with a club or "billy" such as is usually carried by policemen. The evidence is in conflict as to whether Debard had broken loose at the time, some of the witnesses testifying that there was no halt, and that the prisoner had not broken away, and others that he had, and had turned upon the defendant with his fists. In any event, he fell to the ground on one hip and his hand, and, though repeatedly requested, refused to arise and go with the officer. As the defendant walked around him, Debard turned, attempting to guard himself from seizure, and, as the officer reached for his shoulder, he kicked at him, and was dealt another blow on the head. The defendant denied striking the deceased more than twice, and in this is somewhat corroborated; but several eyewitnesses testified that he beat him on the head three or four times.

the laws of the state, and only the state can deal with it in that aspect; but, when done in the performance of his duty in protecting the life and person of the justice from assault and violence because of his judicial decisions, it is an act done in pursuance of a law of the United States, and is not and cannot be an offense against the laws of the state no matter what the statutes of the state may be, the laws of the United States being the supreme law of the land. Re Neagle, 5 L. R. A. 78, 14 Sawy. 232, 39 Fed. 833, Affirmed in 135 U. S. 1, 34 L. ed. 55, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 658.

And where the deputy marshal acted under instructions from his superior officers, and was arrested upon state authority, and held upon a charge of murder for such act, the United States circuit court may, upon habeas corpus, discharge the marshal from the custody of the state authorities upon its being shown that the homicide was necessary, or that it was reasonably apparent to the mind of the deputy marshal at the time and under the circumstances surrounding him that the killing was necessary in order to protect and defend the justice from great bodily injury, or save his life. Ibid.

And where several lives were in danger, the deputy marshal, being in a position to judge as to the dangers and requirements of the occasion, was the one to determine when the proper moment arrived to slay such assailant in order to be justified by law, and, if he acted in good faith and with reasonable judgment and discretion, the law will justify him, though he erred. Ibid.

So, one who, acting under a valid process issued from a Federal court commanding the arrest of a person, was suddenly set upon and violently resisted by the person sought to be arrested, who actually endeavored to kill him, was justified in killing such person where it was necessary in his own defense; and where he was imprisoned, under state authority for such killing, he was imprisoned for an act done in pursuance of a law of the United States, or of a process of a court or judge of same, and is entitled to discharge on habeas corpus. United States ex rel. Roberts v. Fayette County Jailor, 2 Abb. (U. S.) 265, Fed. Cas. No. 15,463.

And where United States deputy marshals attempt to make an arrest under a warrant charging a person with conspiracy and murder, which is an offense indictable under the laws of the 67 L. R. A.

United States, and the party sought to be arrested resists so as to compel them to take his life, either in their own self-defense, or for the purpose of executing the warrant, and they are arrested for murder by the state authorities, Federal courts have jurisdiction to issue a writ of habeas corpus, and, on its return, summarily to hear the evidence, and dispose of the accusation against the officers in such a manner as justice may require. Kelly v. Georgia, 68 Fed. 652.

And the right of revenue officers in such case to a writ of habeas corpus to remove the case to a Federal court is not affected by the fact that there is no provision of law for trial by jury in the enactments of Congress providing for the writ of habeas corpus and the procedure thereunder. Ibid.

An officer acting under process issued from a Federal court, who kills the person sought to be arrested, and is prosecuted in a state court for the homicide, however, is not entitled to discharge on habeas corpus issued from a Federal court, where the evidence does not justify the conclusion that the shooting was done in order to enable the officer to perform his duty, or execute the process in his hands; and in such case he must be remanded to the state court there to stand trial. United States ex rel. Weeden, 2 Filipp. 76, Fed. Cas. No. 14,412.

And a soldier in a time of peace is as much bound as a citizen to respect the laws of the state, and is justified in disobeying improper and illegal orders; and, where he constitutes a part of the posse of a revenue officer, he has only the same rights of self-defense that a citizen would have under the same circumstances, and, even though ordered by his military commander to fire a fatal shot, he is responsible for the result if the order is unlawful. Georgia v. O'Grady, 3 Woods, 496, Fed. Cas. No. 5,352.

And where the only danger to be feared by officers within a building from a mob outside is the breaking in of the door, the officer in charge is not justified or excused in ordering his men to fire on the crowd in case the door is broken open, on the ground that he is endeavoring to protect the public property. State v. Colt, 8 Ohio S. & C. P. Dec. 62.

And if a person came to his death by a bullet shot by a person inside the building under such an order, it devolves upon the person giving the order to show by a preponderance of the evi-and that, when last hit, deceased threw back his head, and fell to the ground unconscious. He was then carried to the jail by defendant and others, and died the next morning. From the time of his arrest until the last blow, the deceased was violent in manner and in speech, declaring that "there was not enough . . . officers in Eldon to take him to jail;" that "the officers could beat his head off, but could not take him;" that he would whip defendant if he would discard the "billy." Some of the evidence was to the effect that the first blow was very severe, and that the last ended all conscious resistance. Undoubtedly, the conduct of Debard was extremely exasperating, but his only offense prior to arrest was drunkenness and disorderly conduct. The court, in the sixth paragraph of the charge, instructed the jury that "the defendant had the right to use such a degree of force as was reasonably necessary to reduce said Debard to submission; and if resistance, if any there was, was violent and determined, the defendant was not required to make nice calculation as to the degree of force necessary to accomplish the purpose. But, to excuse the taking of life in making an arrest in cases of misdemeanor, it must be shown that the killing was necessary to effect the object. Hence, if you find from the evidence in this case beyond a reasonable doubt that the defendant, whilst making the arrest of Debard, struck him with a club or billy, and that Debard died from the effects of such blow, and you further find that it was not necesdence that he was legally justified and excused in giving the order to fire. Ibid.

So, it is murder on the part of a jailer, or any person employed under him, to cause a person's death by putting him against his will in an unwholesome and dangerous room, and keeping him there. Rex v. Huggins, 2 Ld. Raym. 1574, 2 Strange, 882.

And a subject of Great Britain, who, under directions from the legal authorities of Canada, commits homicide in New York in time of peace, may be prosecuted in New York courts as a murderer, even though his Sovereign approves his conduct by adopting the directions under which he did it as a lawful act of government. People v. McLeod, 1 Hill, 377, 25 Wend. 483, 37 Am. Dec. 328.

And in such case the jurisdiction of the New York courts in respect to the person committing the deed is not superseded by the fact that the whole matter has become a subject of diplomatic negotiation between the United States and Great Britain. Ibid.

c. In the discharge of military duty.

It is legal for a soldier to kill an alien enemy in the heat and exercise of war. State v. Gut, 18 Minn. 341, Gll. 315.

Rules, laws, and regulations for the efficiency and discipline of the Army of the United States are matters vested by the Constitution solely in the general government, and an officer or general of the United States who commits a homicide, or does some other act which is within the scope of his authority as such officer or agent, cannot be held to answer therefor under the criminal laws of another and different government. Rc Fair, 100 Fed. 149.

And an order given by a military officer to a private soldier should be obeyed by the private, and will be his full protection in a criminal prosecution, unless the illegality of such order is so clearly shown on its face that a man of ordinary sense and understanding would know when he heard it read or given that it was illegal. Ibid.; McCall v. McDowell, 1 Abb. (U. S.) 212, Fed. Cas. No. 8,673; Riggs v. State, 3 Coldw. 85, 91 Am. Dec. 272.

So, the authority of ordinary civil officers of the government is subordinated to that of the military officer, when the government, in response to a call for military aid to restore order which the civil officers are unable to maintain, details a military officer, with troops at his 67 L. R. A.

command, to perform that duty; so that, when the military forces are in active service for the suppression of disorder and violence, a soldier killing a person under military orders cannot be punished by civil authorities. Com. ex rel. Wadsworth v. Shortall, 206 Pa. 165, 65 L. R. A. 193, 98 Am. St. Rep. 759, 55 Atl. 952.

And the acts of a subordinate officer in compliance with his supposed duty as a soldier are justifiable, and he will be protected against the consequences, unless they are manifestly beyond the scope of his authority, and such that a man of ordinary sense and understanding would know to be illegal, where he acts in good faith and without malice. United States v. Clark, 31 Fed. 710.

And a sergeant of the guard in charge of a person under conviction of a court martial for conduct prejudicial to military discipline has the right to shoot him to prevent an escape, where it can be accomplished by no other means. Ibid.

Nor can officers of the United States in charge of a war vessel, charged with manslaughter in taking the life of a seaman belonging to the ship, claimed by them to have been done in the rightful exercise of their authority as such officers, be held for trial by a court of civil jurisdiction when cognizance thereof has been taken by court martial. United States v. Mackenzie, 1 N. Y. Legal Obs. 371.

And the killing of a person by a soldier under orders from a superior was not unlawful, where, at the moment he fired he had reasonable ground to believe, and did believe, that the killing or serious wounding of the deceased was necessary to the suppression of a mutiny, then and there existing, or of a disorder, which threatened speedily to ripen into mutiny. United States v. Carr, 1 Woods, 480, Fed. Cas. No. 14,732.

And a private soldier, who has been stationed to guard a residence which, during a time of rioting and disorder, has been dynamited, and against which threats have been made to repeat the offense, with orders to shoot to kill any person found prowling about the house, is guilty of no crime if he shoots a person approaching the building and refusing to obey his command to halt. Com. ex rel. Wadsworth v. Shortall, 206 Pa. 165, 65 L. R. A. 193, 98 Am. St. Rep. 759, 55 Atl. 952.

And the principle of law that, when men are assembled for an illegal purpose, the commission sary to strike and kill Debard, if he did, in order to effect such arrest, you will find the defendant guilty of manslaughter." This general statement of the right of the officer finds support in many authorities. See State v. Garrett, 60 N. C. 144, 84 Am. Dec. 359; State v. Dierberger, 96 Mo. 666, 9 Am. St. Rep. 380, 10 S. W. 168; 2 Bishop, New Crim. Law, § 650; 1 Bishop, Crim. Proc. § 161; 1 Wharton, Crim. Law, 402 et seq.; note to Hawkins v. Com. 61 Am. Dec. 163. On the other hand some authorities, while admitting that the officer is never required to retreat, and may meet force with force, seem to hold that in arresting for a misdemeanor only, as well as preventing the escape of a person after being arrested therefore, life may not be taken, even though of any offense by any one of the party is the act of the whole, is not applicable to a soldier entering the military service; and he cannot be held liable for the killing of a person, unless it was his act, or he aided and abetted the act. Riggs v. State, 3 Coldw. 85, 91 Am. Dec. 272.

But, while an alien enemy may be killed in the heat and exercise of war, it is murder to kill him after he has laid down his arms, and especially when he is in prison. State v. Gut, 18 Minn. 341, Gil. 315.

And a state officer cannot, by proclamation, offer a reward for the killing of Indians, making the killing of an Indian legal if not done in the heat and exercise of war. Ibid.

And an order of a nation at war, directing the destruction of the property or life of its enemy within the territory of a neutral power, is void, and affords no protection to persons acting under it. People v. McLeod, 1 Hill, 377, 25 Wend. 483, 37 Am. Dec. 328.

And a plea of an Indian war by members of Indian tribes living within the bounds and under the protection of an organized territorial government cannot avail to secure immunity, for acts of treachery and murder committed by individual Indians belonging to tribes, not engaged in war, living among whites and in a part of the country not involved in hostility. Yelm Jim v. Territory, 1 Wash. Terr. 63.

And it is doubtful whether such tribes have such a national character that they can at their will make war, and claim immunity for acts of indiscriminate and barbarous murder on the plea of legal hostility. Ibid.

Nor does the mere fact that a person killing another was sergeant of the guard at a fort, and the person killed was at the same time and place a private soldier, of itself, make the killing a lawful homicide. United States v. Carr, 1 Woods, 480, Fed. Cas. No. 14,732.

And, while a soldier in the service of the United States is bound to obey all lawful orders of his superiors, and his acts in obedience to such orders will not constitute an offense against the law, and killing in obedience to such orders would not be an offense,—if the order is illegal in itself and not justified by the rules and usages of war, so that a person of ordinary sense and understanding would know when he heard it read or given that it was illegal, it would afford no protection in a prosecution for a criminal act. Riggs v. State, 3 Coldw. 85, 67 L. R. A.

necessary to make the arrest or prevent the escape, save when the officer has the reasonable apprehension of peril to his own life or great bodily harm. 1 McClain, Crim. Law, § 298; Thomas v. Kinkead, 55 Ark. 502, 15 L. R. A. 558, 29 Am. St. Rep. 68, 18 S. W. 854; Brown v. Weaver, 76 Miss. 7, 42 L. R. A. 423, 71 Am. St. Rep. 512, 23 So. 388; Reneau v. State, 2 Lea, 720, 31 Am. Rep. 626; United States v. Clark, 31 Fed. 710; 2 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, p. 849, and cases cited. But the correctness of the instruction in this respect is not challenged, for it was, if anything, too favorable to the defendant. Appellant does insist, however, that it is defective in that (1) it requires a finding of absolute necessity in order to justify the taking of De-91 Am. Dec. 272; United States v. Carr, 1 Woods, 480, Fed. Cas. No. 14,732.

And if a sentinel stationed at the gate of a fort should wantonly shoot a civilian endeavoring to enter in the daytime; or an officer should recklessly slay a soldier for some misconduct or breach of discipline,—no supposed obligation on his part to do so would excuse so gross an outrage. United States v. Clark, 31 Fed. 710.

It has been held, however, that military officers, when called in aid of the civil authorities, have no power, under a constitutional provision declaring the military shall be in strict subordination to the civil power, to act independently of the civil authority; they can act as an armed police subject to exclusive control and direction of civil authorities, and the civil authorities cannot delegate their authority to the military force summoned to their aid, or vest in the military authorities any discretionary power to take any independent step, or do any act, or suppress a mob or riot; though military officers have discretion as to the best methods of carrying out such orders. State v. Colt, 8 Ohio S. & C. P. Dec. 62.

And it was also held in that case that a military officer called upon by civil authorities to quell a riot and prevent a lynching is under duty to use only such force as is necessary and proper for the purpose of protecting the prisoner and the public property, and he cannot legally take human life in accomplishing those ends, unless he has first ascertained, by prudent and reasonable exercise of his faculties, that the same is necessary and proper to accomplish the purpose in hand; and that a colonel of a regiment of a state national guard is not a public officer in such case, and is entitled to none of the usual presumptions in favor of the legality of the acts of public officers; and that if he acted solely in his capacity as a military officer in performing orders given him by the civil authorities, and not as an individual in self-defense, or in preventing a felony, or dispersing a riot,—the rightfulness or wrongfulness of his conduct is to be measured by the rules which govern the conduct of military officers while acting in aid of the civil authority. Ibid.

Homicide is presumed to be malicious until the contrary appears, and, whether it is justifiable or excusable on the facts as an act of war or of self-defense is a question for the jury in bard's life, and (2) that it excludes all questions with respect to the result being accidental. The only answer to the first of these is the caution concerning nice distinctions as to the degree of the force employed. But this is followed by the unqualified statement that the killing, to be excusable, must have been necessary, and that, before the jury could convict, it must be found to have been unnecessary. Certainly, proof of absolute necessity was not required. The law exacted no more from defendant than that in what he did he employed no more force in effecting the arrest than to him, acting as an ordinarily prudent person, would, under like circumstances, seem reasonably and apparently necessary to effect the arrest of deceased. Section 5194 of the Code. The state argues that, even if this instruction is not sufficiently explanatory, the error is cured in the instruction following. The error is the rather emphasized in that, for, while exacting a finding that the killing was not necessary to justify a conviction, the jury are told to acquit if "you further find that it was reasonably necessary, taking into consideration all the circumstances in evidence, for the defendant to use such club or billy, if he did use one, in the manner it was used; and further find beyond a reasonable doubt that the defendant could not have effected the arrest of said Debard, and taken him to jail, without so using such club or billy, if he did use a prosecution therefor. People v. McLeod, 1 Hill, 377, 25 Wend. 483, 37 Am. Dec. 328.

And the trial and acquittal of a soldier of the United States by a court martial for homicide is not a bar to an inquiry and prosecution as to the crime by the proper civil authorities. Re Fair, 100 Fed. 149; United States v. Clark, 81 Fed. 710.

Though great weight should be given the finding as an expression of opinion of the military court on the question of the magnitude of the offense. United States v. Clark, 31 Fed. 710.

III. Effect of official character and action in case of arrest.

An officer charged with preserving peace and good order, and maintaining the supremacy of the law, and executing its mandates, must, of necessity, act on the aggressive in many instances, and is not confined, in the use of physical force, to that which may be lawfully used by a private person in his relations with others; he is clothed with authority to exert such force as may be necessary to the proper performance of the functions of his office, though death be the result. State v. Dierberger, 96 Mo. 666, 9 Am. St. Rep. 380, 10 S. W. 168; State v. McNally, 87 Mo. 644; Bowman v. Com. 96 Ky. 8, 27 S. W. 870.

While the law will generally presume murder in the second degree from the simple act of killing, an instruction to that effect should not be given in a prosecution against an officer for killing a person while seeking to arrest him for a breach of the peace. State v. Dierberger, 96 Mo. 666, 9 Am. St. Rep. 380, 10 S. W. 168.

And under Mo. Rev. Stat. § 1235, declaring a homicide justifiable when necessarily committed in the attempt, by lawful ways and means, lawfully to suppress a riot or insurrection, or in preserving the peace, where a peace officer is sent to quell a disorderly person, and in doing so kills him, it is error, in a prosecution for the killing, for the court in its instruction to ignore his official character. State v. McNally, 87 Mo. 644.

So while, under Mo. Const. § 6, art. 14, requiring all officers under the authority of the state, before entering upon the discharge of the duties of their office, to take and subscribe to an oath of affirmation to support the Constitution and faithfully demean themselves in office, a duly appointed deputy constable, who has not taken the oath of office, is not an officer de jure; 67 L. R. A.

he is an officer de facto; and, where he kills a man in an attempt to arrest him for a breach of the peace, the instructions in a prosecution for the killing should proceed upon the theory that he was such an officer. State v. Dierberger, 96 Mo. 369, 2 S. W. 286, 96 Mo. 666, 9 Am. St. Rep. 380, 10 S. W. 168.

But error in an instruction in a prosecution against a marshal for killing a person in an attempt to arrest him for disorderly conduct, in not assuming that he was a marshal, is not ground for reversal on appeal, where it was admitted by the prosecution that he was a marshal, and the fact was testified to by several witnesses without contradiction. Davis v. Com. 25 Ky. L. Rep. 1426, 77 S. W. 1101.

And an instruction in a prosecution for homicide against an officer for killing a person whom he attempted to arrest, that if certain things are proved beyond a reasonable doubt, among which are that the defendant at the time of the homicide was a constable in the exercise of his official duty, the jury should find the defendant guilty, is not subject to objection that the official character of the defendant is a matter of defense, and that the instruction virtually required that it must be proved beyond a reasonable doubt. People v. Adams, 85 Cal. 231, 24 Pac. 629.

A surety on a bail bond occupies the same position toward the person for whom he is surety, and has the same rights and privileges, that a sheriff or constable has when acting under a warrant on a charge of a misdemeanor; and, where such a surety endeavors to surrender the other, and is resisted, he has a right to remain firm and use all reasonable means to take him to the jailer for the purpose of relieving himself from liability on the bond, and he need not flee to avoid or avert danger, but may meet force with force. Finney v. Com. 26 Ky. L. Rep. 785, 82 S. W. 636.

And the refusal of the jailer to accept into his custody the person sought to be surrendered does not affect the right of the surety thereafter to hold the person sought to be surrendered; and an instruction that it deprives him of the right of restraint in a prosecution against him is damaging and prejudicial. Ibid.

IV. General rules as to use of force in making arrest.

a. In case of felony.

Any peace officer or private person present it." The matter is referred to only incidentally in the other instructions, and not in connection with the evidence. The second criticism possibly is included in the first. The jury might have found that defendant had no intention of killing deceased. The post mortem demonstrated that the latter had an exceedingly thin skull, and there was evidence tending to show that force which, if applied to the ordinary head, would cause no serious injury, might have produced a fracture in Debard's skull. If so, then death might have resulted from a blow of the "billy" applied with no greater force than might have seemed reasonably necessary to subject deceased to restraint, and the jury should have been advised that, if no more force was exerted than permissible, as hereinbefore stated, and yet death resulted because of the character of Debard's skull, when, had it been of ordinary thickness, this would not have happened, the defendant should not be held responsible. As argued by the state, there is much evidence tending to prove that the blows were severe, and unnecessarily administered. The deceased was intoxicated, and unarmed, as defendant knew. Bystanders were within easy call during the entire transaction, and presumably would have rendered assistance, according to their duty, had this been required. But the defendant testified that the blows were not administered with unusual force, and it was for the jury to say from the evidence whether, under the circumstances disclosed, the defend-when a felony is committed is bound by law to arrest the felon, and may justify killing him when he cannot otherwise be taken. Brooks v. Com. 61 Pa. 352, 100 Am. Dec. 645; People v. Adams, 85 Cal. 231, 24 Pac. 629; Lamma v. State, 46 Neb. 236, 64 N. W. 956; State v. Dugan, Houst. Crim. Rep. (Del.) 563.

And it is his duty to make such arrest either with or without a warrant. People v. Adams, 85 Cal. 231, 24 Pac. 629; State v. Bryant, 65 N. C. 327; North Carolina v. Gosnell, 74 Fed. 734.

And a person seeking to arrest a felon need not engage with him on equal terms, but may overcome resistance by superior force. State v. Bryant, 65 N. C. 327; North Carolina v. Gosnell, 74 Fed. 734.

Nor does the fact that the discharge of an officer's pistol while he was attempting to arrest a person for a breach of the peace was accidental, instead of intentional, affect his right to justify the shooting, where the person sought to be arrested was killed, on the ground that it was necessary in order to effect the arrest. State v. McNally, 87 Mo. 644.

And felonious rioters resisting lawful authority may be slain with impunity by officers of justice proceeding in the lawful execution of their duty to suppress riots. Re Riots of 1844, 2 Clark (Pa.) 275.

So, a conviction of manslaughter in the fourth degree under Wis. Rev. Stat. § 4363, providing that every other killing of a human being by the act, procurement, or culpable negligence of another, when such killing is not justifiable or excusable, or is not declared in this chapter murder or manslaughter of some other degree, shall be deemed manslaughter in the fourth degree, cannot be upheld if it appears in proof that accused is guilty of some other degree of crime; and, where it appears that deceased was shot when engaged in resisting the service upon him of legal process by an officer legally authorized to make such service, thus attempting to commit an unlawful act, and that the officer shot him while resisting such attempt, the officer would be guilty of no crime unless he shot unnecessarily; and if he shot unnecessarily he was guilty of manslaughter in the second degree, under Wis. Rev. Stat. § 4351, providing that any person who shall unnecessarily kill another while resisting an attempt by such other to commit any felony, or do any unlawful act, or after such attempt shall have failed, shall be deemed guilty of manslaughter in the second degree, so that he cannot be held for manslaughter in the fourth degree. Doherty v. State, 84 Wis. 152, 53 N. W. 1120.

b. In case of misdemeanor.

The security of person and property is endangered by a bad offender being at large, as in the case of a felon; but the taking of human life in the name of the law is the punishment inflicted after conviction of the highest grade of felony, and it would ill become the law to justify such a sacrifice to avoid a failure of justice in not arresting one charged with a misdemeanor, when, if taken and convicted, a sentence of fine or imprisonment only could be imposed. Com. v. Rhoads, 23 Pa. Super. Ct. 512.

In making an arrest for a misdemeanor, therefore, the officer may exert such physical force as is necessary to effect the arrest by overcoming the resistance he encounters, or to subdue the efforts of the prisoner to escape. Thomas v. Kinkead, 55 Ark. 502, 15 L. R. A. 558, 29 Am. St. Rep. 68, 18 S. W. 854; Smith v. State, 59 Ark. 132, 43 Am. St. Rep. 20, 26 S. W. 712; Bowman v. Com. 96 Ky. 8, 27 S. W. 870; State v. Dierberger, 96 Mo. 666, 9 Am. St. Rep. 380, 10 S. W. 168; State v. McNally, 87 Mo. 644.

And he is not bound to retreat or give way. Smith v. State, 59 Ark. 132, 43 Am. St. Rep. 20, 26 S. W. 712; Com. v. Rhoads, 23 Pa. Super. Ct. 512.

And, if he uses no more force than is reasonably necessary to accomplish the arrest, he should be acquitted on a prosecution for the killing of the person sought to be arrested. State v. Dierberger, 96 Mo. 666, 9 Am. St. Rep. 380, 10 S. W. 168; Golden v. State, 1 S. C. N. S. 292.

And the burden of proof rests with the state, in a prosecution for such killing, to show the absence of such necessity. State v. Dierberger, 96 Mo. 666, 9 Am. St. Rep. 380, 10 S. W. 168.

But an officer making an arrest cannot take the life of the accused, or inflict upon him great bodily harm, except to save his own life, or prevent like harm to himself. Smith v. State, 59 Ark. 132, 43 Am. St. Rep. 20, 26 S. W. 712; Thomas v. Kinkead, 55 Ark. 502, 15 L. R. A. 558, 29 Am. St. Rep. 68, 18 S. W. 854.

An officer, in arresting for a misdemeanor, may oppose force to force and sufficient to overcome it, even to the taking of life, where the offender puts the life of the officer in jeopardy; but he must not use any greater force than is ant was justified in beating the prisoner in his inebriated condition, and, if so, whether more force was exerted in so doing than was permissible.

2. It is true, as contended by the state, that the points on which the judgment is reversed were made for the first time in the petition for rehearing. In civil causes this alone would prevent reconsideration. But the law is more indulgent in actions involving the liberty of the citizen, and the practice has long prevailed in this court of granting rehearings for the purpose of correcting errors which might reasonably be thought to have vitally affected the result of the trial. Of course, the point must not have been intentionally omitted. If the accused has actually overlooked an error in the original submission, and it was such as might have misled the jury in reaching their verdict, the court will correct it on rehearing. But for this practice having been adhered to for many years, the writer would be inclined to make no distinction between civil and criminal actions in this respect, and to treat errors which have not impressed counsel sufficiently to be remembered and discussed in the first instance as having been waived.

3. The grand jury, having completed the business then before it, was, on the 5th day of September, 1900, by the court adjourned "until the second day of next term, unless sooner called by the court;" and on the following day, it appearing "that since said adjournment important cases have reasonably and apparently necessary for his protection. Head v. Martin, 85 Ky. 480, 3 S. W. 622; Dilger v. Com. 88 Ky. 550, 11 S. W. 651.

This is the rule of STATE V. PHILLIPS.

And killing a man who was out at night dressed in white to represent a ghost for the purpose of frightening persons in the neighborhood cannot be excused on the ground that he could not otherwise be taken. Rex v. Smith, cited in 3 Russell, Crimes, 6th ed. 132.

A bastardy proceeding, though a civil one, is in the nature of a prosecution for a misdemeanor within the rules of law with reference to the amount of force which may be used in making an arrest, where it proceeds in the name of the commonwealth, and the offender is subject to arrest. Head v. Martin, 85 Ky. 480, 3 S. W. 622.

V. Checking flight.

a. In case of felony.

By the common law it is lawful to kill a fleeing felon where he cannot otherwise be taken, flight being tantamount to resistance. Jackson v. State, 66 Miss. 89, 14 Am. St. Rep. 542, 5 So. 690; Rex v. Finnucane, Craw. & D. (Ir.) 1.

And Miss. Code, § 2878, making homicide justifiable when necessarily committed in arresting any felon fleeing from justice, is merely declaratory of the common law, and warrants killing a fleeing felon when he cannot otherwise be taken. Jackson v. State, 66 Miss. 89, 14 Am. St. Rep. 542, 5 So. 690.

And generally an officer, in making an arrest in a case of felony, may use such force as is necessary to capture the felon, even to killing him when in flight. Head v. Martin, 85 Ky. 480, 3 S. W. 622; Dilger v. Com. 88 Ky. 550, 11 S. W. 651; Thomas v. Kinkead, 55 Ark. 502, 15 L. R. A. 558, 29 Am. St. Rep. 68, 18 S. W. 854; Carr v. State, 43 Ark. 99; Com. v. Long, 17 Pa. Super. Ct. 641.

In Thomas v. Kinkead, 55 Ark. 502, 15 L. R. A. 558, 29 Am. St. Rep. 68, 18 S. W. 854, supra, State v. Sigman, 106 N. C. 728, 11 S. E. 520, infra, VI., was distinguished upon the ground that the rule there announced seems to be laid down with reference only to cases where a prisoner resists by force the efforts of the officer to prevent him from breaking away, and is killed in the struggle or effort which follows; and 67 L. R. A.

Head v. Martin, 85 Ky. 480, 3 S. W. 622, infra, V. b, was distinguished upon the ground that the only ruling there made was that a peace officer, having arrested one accused of a misdemeanor, cannot, when he is fleeing, kill him to prevent his escape.

And a private person is also justified in killing a fleeing felon who cannot otherwise be taken, if he can prove that the person is actually guilty of felony. Com. v. Long, 17 Pa. Super. Ct. 641; Carr v. State, 43 Ark. 99.

But if the felon may be taken in any case without such severity the killing is at least manslaughter. Thomas v. Kinkead, 55 Ark. 502, 15 L. R. A. 558, 29 Am. St. Rep. 68, 18 S. W. 854.

And a person who, suspecting that a larceny has been committed, does not go for a warrant, or to an officer, but takes his gun and goes to the suspected felon's house, and calls him out, and informs him that he has come to look for the stolen property, and shoots him as he runs off, without informing him that he has come to arrest him, or commanding him to surrender, uses unnecessary force, and is guilty of manslaughter at the least. State v. Bryant, 65 N. C. 327.

And while an officer attempting to arrest a felon may use all the force necessary to apprehend him, where an attempted arrest is made upon suspicion of a felony without a warrant, the killing of the fleeing man cannot be justified, unless there is proof that the felony was in fact committed. Com. v. Greer, 20 Pa. Co. Ct. 535.

And an officer who kills one for whom he has a warrant for felony must satisfy the jury trying him for the homicide that he tried in good faith and with reasonable prudence and caution to make the arrest, and was unable, because of his flight, to secure him, and that he resorted to the means employed only after all other proper means had failed. Jackson v. State, 66 Miss. 89, 14 Am. St. Rep. 542, 5 So. 690.

And revenue officers, seeking to arrest a man for violation of the revenue laws, who shot and killed him, are criminally responsible therefor, where he had desisted from his attack upon them, and was fleeing from them at the time. State v. Port, 3 Fed. 124.

It has been held, however, that it is the duty of every officer, and the privilege of every private citizen, to prevent the commission of crime, and to arrest the felon when crime has been arisen," the court ordered said grand jury to return on the 10th day of said month, during the same term, which it did, and subsequently found the indictment against the defendant. He moved the court to set aside the indictment on the grounds (1) that the grand jury was not selected, drawn, summoned, impaneled, or sworn as prescribed by law; and (2) that, although the grand jury, after being discharged, was recalled for the sole purpose of investigating this case, defendant, though held to answer and in custody, was not permitted to appear in said court to challenge said jury. This motion was overruled. It will be observed that the grand jury had not been discharged for the term, but excused from attendance until called by the court to return. The authority of the court to do this is not questioned in argument. Section 5252 of the Code directs that "the grand jury, on completion of its business, shall be discharged." This evidently means for the term of court at which it is empaneled, and does not limit the authority of the court to excuse the jurors from attendance temporarily, or until required again at the same term. In the more populous counties such has frequently been the practice, and it is not open to just criticism. The alleged irregularity in adjourning the jury and recalling it appears to be the only objection to the panel, and, regardless of whether the defendant was in a situation to raise the point, we think it without merit. That defendant was not given an opportunity to challenge the jurors is not a statutory ground for setting aside an indictment. Code, § 5319; State v. Baughman, 111 Iowa, 71, 82 N. W. 452.

Other errors complained of are not such as are likely to arise upon another trial. For those pointed out, the judgment is reversed, and the cause remanded for new trial.

committed; and a private person may kill a felon, if necessary, where he resists or flees, whenever the felony is a capital or personal offense, such as murder, or rape; but he has no right to kill a person guilty of a felony of an inferior grade, in which the person is not endangered, such as theft, if he does not resist, but merely attempts to escape by flight. State v. Bryant, 65 N. C. 327.

See also Jackson v. State, 66 Miss. 89, 14 Am. St. Rep. 542, 5 So. 690, infra, IX. e.

b. In case of misdemeanor.

An officer has no right to shoot a person who is merely running away from him without committing any violence, when under arrest, or to avoid arrest for a misdemeanor. Brown v. Weaver, 76 Miss. 7, 42 L. R. A. 423, 71 Am. St. Rep. 512, 23 So. 388; Head v. Martin, 85 Ky. 480, 3 S. W. 624; Petrie v. Cartwright, 114 Ky. 103, 59 L. R. A. 720, 70 S. W. 297; State v. Coleman (Mo.) 84 S. W. 978; Com. v. Greer, 20 Pa. Co. Ct. 585; State v. Anderson, 1 Hill, L. 327; North Carolina v. Gosnell, 74 Fed. 734.

In making an arrest for a mere breach of the peace the officer must at least stop short of force which will result in the sacrifice of human life. Stephens v. Com. 20 Ky. L. Rep. 544, 47 S. W. 229.

And where a person charged with a misdemeanor flees from an officer, who is intrusted with a warrant, in order to avoid arrest, and the officer kills him, the officer is guilty of manslaughter at least. State v. Sigman, 106 N. C. 728, 11 S. E. 520.

And voluntarily to kill a person accused of a misdemeanor for fleeing from arrest is murder, though he cannot be otherwise taken, and though there is a warrant for his apprehension. Williams v. State, 44 Ala. 41.

And the killing of a prisoner by an officer and his guard while the prisoner was unarmed and not resisting or attacking them, but simply running away to make his escape from their custody, the acts not having been prompted by express malice, but by a desire to prevent the prisoner's escape, is murder in the second degree. Caldwell v. State, 41 Tex. 86.

Nor can a peace officer acting without a warrant kill a fleeing person who refuses to stop when commanded to do so on suspicion that he is one guilty of felony, where the offense is, in fact, only a misdemeanor. Petrie v. Cartwright, 114 Ky. 103, 59 L. R. A. 720, 70 S. W. 297.

In the above case the rule laid down in State v. Evans, 161 Mo. 95, 84 Am. St. Rep. 669, 61 S. W. 590, which was a case of the killing of an officer in resisting arrest, that, when a supposed offender fails to stop when ordered to do so by an officer, he may be shot, was criticised, the court saying that the question was not before the court in that case.

And a verdict of guilty of homicide is justified by evidence that a deputy sheriff with a warrant for a person for a misdemeanor shot and killed him while he was fleeing to avoid arrest, and when he had never been in actual custody, and when he was without firearms, and did not physically resist the officer. Com. v. Rhoads, 23 Pa. Super. Ct. 512.

So, an officer is not justified in shooting a person whom he sought to arrest, and who had put himself in resistance, where at the time he had abandoned his deadly purpose of resisting to the death, and was attempting to make his escape by moving off. State v. Garrett, 60 N. C. (1 Winst. L.) 144, 84 Am. Dec. 359.

And whether a person shot by an officer in an attempt to arrest him was then acting in resistance of the execution of the law to the death, or whether he had abandoned his deadly purpose of resistance and was attempting to make his escape by moving off, is a question for the jury in a prosecution for the killing. Ibid.

But whenever a party liable to arrest by his conduct puts in jeopardy the life of anyone attempting to arrest him, he may be killed, and the killing will be excusable. State v. Anderson, 1 Hill, L. 327.

And while it is murder as a general rule to kill a party accused of a misdemeanor for fleeing from an arrest though he cannot be otherwise taken, flagrant misdemeanors, as where a dangerous wound has been inflicted, or a riot exists, are an exception to the rule, since in such case the presumption is great that the offense may turn out to be a felony. Com. v. Max, 8 Phila. 422.

And where an officer sought to arrest a man who had put himself in resistance to his authority, and afterwards moved away, retaining his gun in his hands, the officer was not bound to risk his life by rushing after him, where he still retained his purpose of resisting and to make a running fight. State v. Garrett, 60 N. C. (1 Winst. L.) 144, 84 Am. Dec. 359.

So, a person attempting to arrest a runaway slave has no right to kill him to prevent his escape. Morton v. Bradley, 30 Ala. 683; Brady v. Price, 19 Tex. 285.

The law does not authorize the killing of a runaway slave, unless the person attempting to take him is in danger from resistance, as by assaulting or striking. Arthur v. Wells, 2 Mill, Const. 314.

And a constable, though having a warrant therefor, endeavoring to arrest a slave on a charge of committing misdemeanors, is not justified in killing him when the slave is fleeing from him, his only object being to escape. Midleton v. Holmes, 3 Port. (Ala.) 424.

But where a slave is hailed by members of a patrol company on duty, and repeatedly called upon to stop, and is fired upon by them after they have every reason to suppose that he will otherwise effect his escape, and cannot be overtaken by pursuit, they are justified in the act, where it is without a deliberate intention to kill, by La. act 1855, § 65, providing that, if any slave shall be found absent from his usual place of work or residence without some white person accompanying him, and shall refuse to submit himself to examination, any freeholder shall be permitted to arrest him, and, if he shall attempt to make his escape, the freeholder is authorized to make use of arms. Duperrier v. Dautrive, 12 La. Ann. 664.

VI. Meeting actual physical resistance.

While it is the duty of every citizen to submit to lawful arrest, there is a broad distinction on the question of the force which may be used in making an arrest, between active resistance and forcible opposition to arrest, and mere avoidance of a lawful warrant by fleeing from it. Com. v. Rhoads, 23 Pa. Super. Ct. 512.

If a person sought to be arrested turns upon the officer seeking to arrest him, and resists arrest, the officer is protected in the use of a degree of force that a jury would ordinarily consider excessive, if he is acting in good faith, and is free from malice. State v. Sigman, 106 N. C. 728, 11 S. E. 520; State v. Mahon, 3 Harr. (Del.) 588; Com. v. Max, 8 Phila. 422; Plasters v. State, 1 Tex. App. 673.

And where a person sought to be arrested, though for a misdemeanor, puts himself in resistance to the officer and his guard, they are not only authorized, but bound, to use such a degree of force as is necessary to execute the warrant of arrest; and, if they kill him, they are entitled to a verdict of acquittal on the ground that the homicide is justifiable, if no unnecessary violence has been used. State v. Garrett, 60 N. C. (1 Winst. L.) 144, 84 Am. Dec. 359; People v. Brooks, 131 Cal. 311, 63 Pac. 464; Lindle v. Com. 111 Ky. 866, 64 S. W. 986; State v. Coleman (Mo.) 84 S. W. 978; Mesmer v. Com. 26 Gratt. 976; Re Riots 67 L. R. A.

of 1844, 2 Clark (Pa.) 275; State v. McNally, 87 Mo. 644; Com. v. Rhoads, 23 Pa. Super. Ct. 513; Plasters v. State, 1 Tex. App. 673; North Carolina v. Gosnell, 74 Fed. 734; Mack-alley's Case, 9 Coke, 65a.

And the person seeking to make the arrest may repel force by force, and need not give back; and, if the person making resistance is unavoidably killed in the struggle, the homicide is justifiable. Clements v. State, 50 Ala. 117; Lindle v. Com. 111 Ky. 866, 64 S. W. 986; Com. v. Rhoads, 23 Pa. Super. Ct. 512; North Carolina v. Gosnell, 74 Fed. 734.

And though he shoots unnecessarily, he is only guilty of manslaughter in the second degree, under a statute providing that any person who shall unnecessarily kill another while resisting an attempt by such other to commit a felony, or do any other unlawful act, or after such attempt shall have failed, shall be deemed guilty of manslaughter in the second degree. Mesmer v. Com. 26 Gratt. 976.

So, where an officer acting under lawful process commanding the arrest of a person is resisted by such person, and is obliged to take his life as in self-defense, his act is justifiable. United States ex rel. Roberts v. Fayette County Jailer, 2 Abb. (U. S.) 265, Fed. Cas. No. 15,463.

And an officer who has a person in his custody under arrest, who is attacked by such person and overpowered, and who uses every reasonable means to prevent an escape in vain, and who then shoots and kills the prisoner, commits no crime, the homicide being justifiable. Com. v. Max, 8 Phila. 422.

Nor can revenue officers seeking to arrest a man for violation of the revenue laws, who shot and killed him, be held guilty of murder where the deceased received the fatal shot while in ambush, from which he had fired upon the revenue officers, and at or immediately after the time of the discharge by himself and his comrades of their weapons at the revenue officers. State v. Port, 3 Fed. 124.

And if a runaway slave resists apprehension, or presents a hostile attitude, his captor is not bound to desist from or abandon the arrest, but may press forward in the prosecution of his purpose, and, after having used all reasonably available means at hand to effect the arrest, may lawfully take the slave's life under circumstances which would render any other homicide justifiable on the ground of self-defense. Morton v. Bradley, 30 Ala. 683.

Resistance to an arrest may begin in the use of words which import defiance and indicate a purpose to use violence if necessary, and, after the use of such words, the officer may instantly employ such degree of force as is necessary to reduce the party to submission and accomplish the arrest. Ramsey v. State, 92 Ga. 53, 17 S. E. 613.

And where a person taken in a criminal assault upon another defies the authority of the officer, and by threats of violence seeks to intimidate him, the officer is not bound to wait until he is actually assaulted before himself resorting to force; and if it is apparent that such person intends and is able to resist with violence, the officer may at once use such force as he may consider necessary to compel surrender. Ibid.

And that a person sought to be arrested pulled away from the officer, and said, let's argue this thing, is admissible in evidence, in a prosecution against the officer for killing him in making the arrest, as a fact occurring at the time of the killing. Stephens v. Com. 20 Ky. L. Rep. 544, 47 S. W. 229.

And the admission in evidence, in a prosecution against an officer for homicide, of a statement of the person shot by him in an attempt to arrest him, that he did not think he was going to shoot, if erroneous, is not material or reversible error. Ibid.

But a mere attitude of defiance, or preparation to resist, not amounting to an assault, on the part of the person sought to be arrested, does not justify the officer seeking to arrest him in killing him. Clements v. State, 50 Ala. 117.

VII. Preventing escape or rescue.

a. In case of felony.

The general rule is that an officer having custody of a person charged with felony may take his life if it becomes absolutely necessary to do so to prevent his escape. United States v. Clark, 31 Fed. 710; Thomas v. Kinkead, 55 Ark. 502, 15 L. R. A. 558, 29 Am. St. Rep. 68, 18 S. W. 854; Conraddy v. People, 5 Park Crim. Rep. 234.

And where an officer has a person in custody under a lawful arrest, and other persons attempt to rescue him from such custody, the officer, in resisting such attempt, will be protected in the use of force that a jury would ordinarily consider excessive, if he is acting in good faith and without malice. State v. Rollins, 113 N. C. 722, 18 S. E. 394.

And where, after a lawful arrest is made, other persons assault the officer for the purpose of a rescue, he has the power to arrest them for such assault, and to use such force as is necessary to make such arrest, even to the extent of killing. Ibid.

So, in Com. v. Megary, 8 Phila. 607, it was held, on habeas corpus for a release from confinement, that an officer who attempted to arrest a man for larceny, and was beset by a party of men who attempted a rescue, and shot one of them in the height of the assault, only did his duty in the premises; but a discharge was refused on the ground that, where death is the result of even justifiable violence, a jury should pass upon the case.

But officers whose duty it is to make arrests are not ordinarily authorized to use firearms or dangerous weapons; and they are not ordinarily excusable for killing the person sought to be arrested in an attempt to escape, though he is charged with a felony, where with diligence and caution, the prisoner can be otherwise held. Reneau v. State, 2 Lea, 720, 31 Am. Rep. 626.

And if an officer had been apprised that his prisoner contemplated an escape, the jury, in a prosecution against the officer for killing the prisoner, is warranted in finding that the killing was not justifiable, where it appears that the prisoner was within the walls of the jail, and he is not shown to have been armed, and his escape could have been prevented by closing the outside door, or by putting him in a cell, or otherwise securing him, and it does not appear that he failed to comply with a request to halt, or that the fatal shot was not fired after he had complied. Iamma v. State, 46 Neb. 236, 64 N. W. 956.
67 L. R. A.

The criminality of the act of an officer in killing a prisoner who sought to escape is the same whether he held the prisoner in custody before or after judgment. Reneau v. State, 2 Lea, 720, 31 Am. Rep. 626.

b. In case of misdemeanor.

The force or violence which an officer may lawfully use to prevent the escape of a person arrested for a misdemeanor is no greater than such as might have been rightfully employed to effect his arrest. Thomas v. Kinkead, 55 Ark. 502, 15 L. R. A. 558, 29 Am. St. Rep. 68, 18 S. W. 854.

And an officer having in his custody a prisoner accused of a misdemeanor may not take his life if he attempts to break away, though no other means are available to prevent his escape. Ibid.; Smith v. State, 59 Ark. 132, 43 Am. St. Rep. 20, 26 S. W. 712; Handley v. State, 96 Ala. 48, 38 Am. St. Rep. 81, 11 So. 322; Head v. Martin, 85 Ky. 480, 3 S. W. 624; Conraddy v. People, 5 Park Crim. Rep. 234; Skidmore v. State, 2 Tex. App. 20; United States v. Clark, 31 Fed. 710; Forster's Case, 1 Lewin, C. C. 187.

Where a person is arrested or held in custody for a misdemeanor, and he attempts to escape, it is murder, as a general rule, in the officer to kill him, though he cannot be otherwise overtaken; though it will be only manslaughter if it appears that death is not intended. Reneau v. State, 2 Lea, 720, 31 Am. Rep. 626.

And where a person called upon by an officer to assist in arresting a misdemeanant shoots him to prevent an escape, the jury, in a prosecution for the killing, will not be justified in finding him guilty of manslaughter only, or authorized to conclude that he did not entertain the formed design to kill which is necessary in murder; since the law presumes the design from the fact that he intentionally used a deadly weapon with a fatal result. Handley v. State, 96 Ala. 48, 38 Am. St. Rep. 81, 11 So. 322.

And an officer who beat a drunken man into insensibility in order to effect his arrest or prevent his escape, where the drunken man was violent in manner and speech, is guilty of manslaughter if death resulted therefrom, where the deceased was unarmed, to the knowledge of the officer, and bystanders were within easy call during the entire transaction, from whom assistance might have been had. State v. Phillips (Iowa) 89 N. W. 1092.

And evidence in a prosecution for homicide against a special policeman that the deceased was intoxicated and the policeman put him under arrest, and that deceased tried to get away, when the policeman struck him on the head with his club, whereupon the deceased fell down and sought to avoid the policeman and kicked at him, when he was dealt another blow on the head with the club, and afterwards fell back unconscious and died the next morning, is such that the jury might well find the force applied excessive and unnecessary. Ibid.

So, where a police officer, without a warrant, arrests a man who is guilty of no offense, and, in preventing an escape, strikes and kills him, it is sufficient, at least, to warrant a verdict, in a prosecution therefor, of involuntary manslaughter in the commission of an unlawful act. O'Connor v. State, 64 Ga. 125, 37 Am. Rep. 58.

And where a collector of the King's duty went to a house to make a demand for money, and, not being paid, distrained a silver cup found there, and a maid, to prevent carrying it away, stood by the door to prevent his going out, when he took her by the arm and beat her head against the door, whereby her death was caused, he is criminally responsible for the homicide. Goffe's Case, 1 Vent. 216.

That a person sought to be arrested for intoxication, who was afterwards killed by the officer, offered to go if he was permitted to do so, however, is irrelevant in a prosecution against the officer for the killing, as not having the slightest bearing on the issue. State v. Phillips (Iowa) 89 N. W. 1092.

And in State v. Sigman, 106 N. C. 728, 11 S. E. 520, it was held that, after an accused person has been arrested, an officer is justified in using the amount of force necessary to detain him in custody, and to kill the prisoner to prevent escape if necessary, whether he be charged with a felony or a misdemeanor.

VIII. Recapture.

a. Generally.

A sheriff, or any other person acting under and by his authority, has the right to recapture a prisoner escaping from lawful arrest and custody, and has the right to use such force as may be necessary to overcome resistance to his lawful authority in making such rearrest. James v. State, 44 Tex. 314.

But when a prisoner charged with a misdemeanor has already escaped, an officer cannot lawfully use any means to recapture him that he would not have been justified in employing in making the first arrest, and if, in the pursuit, he intentionally kills him, it is murder. State v. Sigman, 106 N. C. 728, 11 S. E. 520.

And Paschal's Texas Dig. art. 2215, § 10, providing that a prisoner under sentence of death or imprisonment in the penitentiary, on attempting to escape from the penitentiary, may be killed by the officer having legal control over him if his escape can be prevented in no other way, applies only to original arrests and the prevention of escape, and not to rearrests after an entire escape, and does not give an officer attempting such rearrest the same authority to kill in order to prevent escape that it gives to an officer having the legal custody of a convict who is attempting to escape. Wright v. State, 44 Tex. 645.

b. Of escaped convicts.

The duty of a guard of penitentiary convicts is to keep those placed in his charge in safety and to prevent their escape, and if one of them falls into a river and he shoots him, the homicide is justifiable if the circumstances are such as to lead him, as a reasonable man, honestly to conclude that the convict is trying to escape, and that it is necessary to kill him in order to prevent the escape. Jackson v. State, 76 Ga. 473.

And under a statute making it a felony for anyone confined in any jail, upon conviction for any criminal offense, to break jail and escape therefrom, a guard has the right, when a prisoner attempts to escape, to oppose force to force to the extremity of killing the prisoner. State v. Turlington, 102 Mo. 642, 15 S. W. 141.

The superintendent of a convict camp, however, is not authorized to arrest an escaped convict by N. C. Code, § 1128, conferring the power to arrest upon a sheriff, coroner, constable, or 67 L. R. A.

other officer of police, or other peace officer intrusted with the care and preservation of the public peace, so as to justify or mitigate a charge of killing a convict in making the arrest. State v. Stancill, 128 N. C. 606, 38 S. E. 926.

And Paschal's Texas Dig. art. 2215, § 10, providing that a prisoner under sentence of death or imprisonment in the penitentiary, on attempting to escape from the penitentiary, may be killed by the officer having legal control over him, if his escape can be prevented, in no other way, though applying to convicts at labor on a plantation, does not apply to convicts who have entirely escaped from custody; and after one has so entirely escaped a guard will have only such authority to effect a capture as belongs to ordinary peace officers in making arrests, and can only take life in effecting a recapture when it becomes necessary to do so to protect his own life, or save himself from serious bodily harm. Wright v. State, 44 Tex. 645.

So, in order to justify the homicide of a convict by a guard, the circumstances must have been such as to enable the jury to find that the guard, as a reasonable man, was impressed at the moment of the killing that the necessity was upon him to kill in order to prevent the convict's escape, and that he did kill with intent solely to discharge his duty and prevent escape. Jackson v. State, 76 Ga. 473.

And a superintendent of a convict camp is not justified in shooting an escaped convict after an arrest, where the convict does not know him, or that he is such superintendent, and does not resist arrest, but runs for his life. State v. Stancill, 128 N. C. 606, 38 S. E. 926.

So, a guard in charge of a number of penitentiary convicts who were engaged in emptying and filling cans with water from a river, who saw one of them fall into the stream, and, knowing that he was not attempting to escape, but making efforts to return, nevertheless fired upon and killed him, is guilty of murder. Jackson v. State, 76 Ga. 473.

And whether the guard halted the convict, or commanded him to stop or return, is a circumstance to be weighed with other circumstances in the case in a prosecution for the killing. Ibid.

And in such a case, if it did not appear whether he was attempting to escape, or whether he fell in accidentally and was about to return, a charge should be given, in a prosecution for the killing, on the subject of involuntary manslaughter in the commission of a lawful act without due caution and circumspection. Ibid.

IX. Limitation as to force which may be used.

a. General rules.

The amount of force which a person may use in making an arrest is limited to so much as is necessary to effect his object. Golden v. State, 1 S. C. N. S. 292; People v. Brooks, 131 Cal. 311, 63 Pac. 464; State v. Phillips, 119 Iowa, 652, 94 N. W. 229; Dilger v. Com. 88 Ky. 550; 11 S. W. 651; Head v. Martin, 85 Ky. 480, 3 S. W. 622; State v. Colt, 8 Ohio S. & C. P. Dec. 62; North Carolina v. Gosnell, 74 Fed. 734.

And persons acting in aid of an officer are only warranted in using the same force. State v. Colt, 8 Ohio S. & C. P. Dec. 62.

To excuse the taking of life in making an arrest it must be shown that the killing was necessary to effect the object. State v. Weston, 98 Iowa, 125, 67 N. W. 84.

It is a criminal act to take life in making an arrest where the arrest could have been made without it. Dover v. State, 109 Ga. 485, 34 S. E. 1030.

Even a felon cannot be killed in an effort to arrest him without criminal responsibility, unless he cannot otherwise be captured. Williams v. State, 44 Ala. 41; State v. Bryant, 65 N. C. 327; Lander v. Miles, 3 Or. 35.

And if he can be taken, or his escape prevented, without killing him, and he is slain, the officer is guilty, at least, of manslaughter. Lamma v. State, 46 Neb. 236, 64 N. W. 956.

An officer, or person acting under his authority, has no right to take life in making an arrest, except to defend himself from threatened violence by the person sought to be arrested, and such officer is authorized to use such force only as is necessary to defend himself against the resistance offered. James v. State, 44 Tex. 314.

The law does not require an officer, in making an arrest for a misdemeanor or criminal offense committed in his presence, when resistance to arrest is offered, to determine with absolute precision what force is necessary to accomplish his purpose; but it does require that he shall not use any more force than may seem to him to be reasonably necessary for the purpose. State v. Rose, 142 Mo. 418, 44 S. W. 329.

And the mere fact that a person seeking to arrest another, and using force in order to do so, was an officer of the police force of the city, and was engaged in the execution of his duty, does not render the use of such force justifiable; it must also appear that the force was necessary, and the necessity is to be determined, not by the officer, but by the jury. Golden v. State, 1 S. C. N. S. 292.

And where an officer killed a prisoner in attempting to put him into a cell, and it does not appear that such killing was necessary, or that the officer reasonably believed that it was necessary to effect his purpose, the jury cannot acquit him upon the ground that he was an officer engaged in making an arrest or an imprisonment following an arrest. State v. Lane, 158 Mo. 572, 59 S. W. 967.

Nor will proof that an officer in making an arrest did not intend to use unnecessary force excuse the use of such force. Golden v. State, 1 S. C. N. S. 292.

And the fact that a person who was beaten to death by an officer in making an arrest or in preventing his escape had an exceedingly thin skull is important for the jury, in a prosecution against the officer for the homicide, to consider in estimating the character and probable effect of the blows delivered, but will not warrant any interference with a finding for manslaughter. State v. Phillips (Iowa) 89 N. W. 192.

But while evidence that an officer, who struck a person sought to be arrested several blows upon the head, said, in answer to a bystander's request not to hit him any more, that it was not his intention to do so, is a part of the res gesta in a prosecution against the officer for the homicide, striking it out would not be error, since it sheds no light upon the controversy. Ibid.

With reference to limitation as to force used 67 L. R. A.

in checking flight in case of the commission of a felony, see also Thomas v. Kinkead, 55 Ark. 502, 15 L. R. A. 558, 29 Am. St. Rep. 68, 18 S. W. 854; State v. Bryant, 65 N. C. 327; Jackson v. State, 66 Miss. 59, 14 Am. St. Rep. 542, 5 So. 690; State v. Port, 3 Fed. 124,—supra, V. a; and with reference to such limitation in case of the commission of a misdemeanor, see also supra, V. b.

And with reference to such limitation in case of an attempted escape or rescue after arrest see also supra, VII. a, b; and with reference to such limitation in case of an attempted recapture after escape from arrest or imprisonment, see also supra, VIII. a, b.

b. Self-defense as a test.

The justification of an officer killing a person sought to be arrested by him for a misdemeanor rests solely upon the ground of self-defense. Com. v. Rhoads, 23 Pa. Super. Ct. 512; Com. v. Greer, 20 Pa. Co. Ct. 535.

And the rule is the same in case of an attempted arrest in a civil action. Com. v. Greer, 20 Pa. Co. Ct. 535.

And an officer seeking to make an arrest for a misdemeanor is not justified in taking life, even if the arrest cannot otherwise be effected, except when resistance is so violent as to put the officer in danger of death or great bodily harm. Com. v. Rhoads, 23 Pa. Super. Ct. 512; Plasters v. State, 1 Tex. App. 673. And see Smith v. State, 59 Ark. 132, 43 Am. St. Rep. 20, 26 S. W. 712; Thomas v. Kinkead, 55 Ark. 502, 15 L. R. A. 558, 29 Am. St. Rep. 68, 18 S. W. 854,—supra, IV. b.

A degree of resistance to arrest for a misdemeanor not amounting in itself to a crime, and only unlawful on account of the obligation of the person sought to be arrested to surrender, will not justify the officer seeking to arrest him in killing him. Clements v. State, 50 Ala. 117.

An officer when resisted in lawfully making an arrest is not justified in killing the offender for the purpose of guarding his person from bodily harm, unless the injury threatened is a serious one. State v. Hickey (N. J. L.) 57 Atl. 264.

A person appointed to aid a deputy sheriff in arresting and imprisoning a person, who is driven away at the point of a knife by an assistant of the resisting prisoner, however, is not required, in order to free himself from liability for killing such assistant, to fall, or refuse to return, or, having returned, to escape impending danger by flight. Cockrill v. Com. 95 Ky. 22, 23 S. W. 659.

And instructions laying down the law of self-defense are not objectionable in a prosecution against an officer for a homicide committed in effecting an arrest where the whole theory of defense was that the killing was necessary, not for the purpose of making the arrest but to prevent the person arrested from killing the officer. People v. Adams, 85 Cal. 231, 24 Pac. 629.

And an instruction as to the right of self-defense, where it appeared to the officer, in the exercise of reasonable judgment, that there was no other safe means to avert the real or apparent danger at the hands of the other but to shoot him, is not subject to the objection that it required the officer to avoid the danger, if any, by flight. Stephens v. Com. 20 Ky. L. Rep. 544, 47 S. W. 229.

c. When use of deadly weapon is justified.

An officer may not exert force in effecting an arrest for a misdemeanor, or in preventing an escape or rescue from such an arrest, to the extent of employing a deadly weapon, or of taking human life, even though without such force the wrongdoer may escape. State v. Smith (Iowa) 101 N. W. 110.

If an officer seeking to arrest a person for a misdemeanor uses his pistol in the pursuit, so as to constitute an assault upon him, and death results, he is criminally responsible whether his purpose is to kill, or merely to stop the other's flight. State v. Sigman, 106 N. C. 728, 11 S. E. 520.

But where a warrant of arrest is placed in the hands of an officer, though for a misdemeanor only, and the person sought to be arrested resists the arrest by the use of a deadly weapon, the officer has the right, if he believes, and has reasonable ground to believe, that the other will shoot him if he attempts to arrest him, to use his own weapon, even to the taking of life, if necessary, to enable him to execute the warrant. Bowman v. Com. 96 Ky. 8, 27 S. W. 870; North Carolina v. Gosnell, 74 Fed. 734.

And an officer having a prisoner in charge may, in case of resistance, use a deadly weapon to defend himself, where, by previous violence, he has been incapacitated from using a less deadly one. Forster's Case, 1 Lewin, C. C. 187.

And he may, if he has reasonable ground for apprehending his life to be in danger, or bodily harm, have recourse to a deadly weapon for defense if no other is at hand. Ibid.

And though the testimony in a prosecution for homicide warrants the jury in finding a verdict of guilty, it is error to refuse instructions as to self-defense, where there is any evidence supporting the theory of the accused that deceased was killed while trying to draw a pistol to resist an effort upon the part of the accused to arrest him. Harris v. State, 72 Miss. 99, 16 So. 360.

So, where two persons made a dangerous attack upon an officer seeking to arrest them, it was the officer's duty to proceed to the last extremity, even to the use of dangerous weapons, to overcome them, though they were somewhat under the influence of liquor. Com. v. Max, 8 Phila. 422.

Nor is an officer seeking to make an arrest, who is resisted by the use of dangerous weapons, ever required to afford the resisting offender the opportunity for a fair and equal struggle, but may avail himself of any advantages that arise in the conflict. North Carolina v. Gosnell, 74 Fed. 734.

And an officer authorized to arrest a person charged with an offense against the law, who has made public threats against the life of any officer ordered to arrest him, is justified, where such person with a rifle in hand so acts as to lead to the belief that he intends to execute his previous threat, in taking the life of the person sought to be arrested. United States v. Rice, 1 Hughes, 560, Fed. Cas. No. 16,153.

And United States deputy marshals seeking to arrest a man under a warrant charging him with murder and conspiracy under the laws of the United States, who shot and killed him in the effort to effect the arrest, are guilty of no offense where he had violently resisted arrest. 67 L. R. A.

in another matter, and had been rescued by a mob of his friends, and dwelt habitually in woods and swamps with his two sons, all habitually armed with deadly weapons, and had sent threats and messages of defiance to the officers announcing his intention to kill them if they attempted to arrest him, and opened fire upon them with a magazine rifle upon their approach. Kelly v. Georgia, 68 Fed. 652.

And duly authorized revenue officers of the United States, in the performance of official duty, searching for illicit distilleries, who discovered traces of such a distillery, and found a man standing not far off observing their movements, who offered to conduct them to a designated house, and went before them for that purpose, and afterwards started to run toward the house, were justified in suspecting his purpose to be to communicate information to the illicit distillers in the neighborhood; and, where he reached the house and procured weapons and attacked the officers, they were justified in resisting his attack by shooting him. North Carolina v. Kirkpatrick, 42 Fed. 689.

A rock used in close conflict is a deadly weapon, and, if a person sought to be arrested used a rock, and wounded the officer, and had another rock in his hands, and manifested a purpose to throw it, he was in a condition of deadly resistance which justified the officer in shooting him to prevent an immediate and serious injury. North Carolina v. Gosnell, 74 Fed. 734.

Officers making an arrest, however, must take care not to exceed the necessity of the case; and, to warrant the use of a deadly weapon, it ought to appear that the resistance offered either put the officer in great personal danger, or that an escape from actual arrest was intended, and could not otherwise be prevented. Com. v. Max, 8 Phila. 422.

And where a much intoxicated man about to be arrested struggles to release himself from the grasp of the officer, and is assisted by another equally intoxicated, the use by the officer of a deadly weapon is not justified. Ibid.

And a charge of homicide cannot be defended upon the ground that a justice of the peace had appointed the accused a special policeman to arrest the person killed, and placed a warrant in his hands, which he had lost, where the proof is uncontradicted that deceased was expelled by the direction of the accused from a trading boat and shot without excuse or cause and without informing him that he had a warrant for his arrest, while he was begging for his life. Angel v. Com. 14 Ky. L. Rep. 10, 18 S. W. 849.

So, where officers go to arrest a man for a debt, and, after some difference as to terms, he arms himself declaring that he does not design to hurt them, but will not be ill used, and they afterwards kill him with their swords, it is murder, or at least manslaughter, on their part, where, at the time of the killing, he is some distance from his arms, and they are between him and them, and they have no ground to fear any harm from them, and he is entirely in their power. Rex v. Reason, 1 Strange, 499.

While the burden of proving the accusation on a charge of murder rests with the prosecution, where the case is one of an officer who uses a deadly weapon against a person fleeing from him the burden of justifying its use rests with him. People v. McCarthy, 110 N. Y. 309, 18 N. E. 128.

See also Reneau v. State, 2 Lea, 720, 31 Am. Rep. 626, supra, VII. a.

d. Appearance as a test of the right of self-defense.

The danger to the person of an officer, or a person acting as such, which will authorize him to act in his self-defense, need not be real, but may be apparent only. Finney v. Com. 26 Ky. L. Rep. 785, 82 S. W. 636; Cockrill v. Com. 95 Ky. 22, 23 S. W. 659; Doolin v. Com. 95 Ky. 29, 23 S. W. 663.

An officer under prosecution for killing a person whom he attempted to arrest for an offense committed in his presence is entitled to have the jury apply the law to the facts, not as they appear to the jury, but as they reasonably appeared to him at the time of the killing. State v. Rose, 142 Mo. 418, 44 S. W. 320.

This is the rule of State v. Phillips.

And a police officer engaged in making an arrest, who is assaulted by the person sought to be arrested in a way that leads him honestly to believe, and under circumstances which would induce a like belief in a reasonable man, that he is about to receive great bodily harm or lose his life, is not obliged to retreat to save his life, but may stand his ground if necessary, even to the extent of taking human life. Boyd v. People, 22 Colo. 496, 45 Pac. 419.

And where a person is called upon by an officer to assist him in making an arrest has grounds to believe as a reasonable man, and does believe, that the person sought to be arrested has unlawfully shot at or mortally wounded the officer in resisting arrest, he not only has the right, but it is his duty, to pursue and arrest such person, and use all necessary means of effecting his arrest, even to the taking of life. People v. Brooks, 181 Cal. 311, 63 Pac. 464.

So, where one who was resisting arrest by a constable and his posse was shot and killed by one of them, and on a prosecution for the murder the defense was made that the deceased was seeking to commit a felony on the constable, or at least that the person doing the shooting acted under reasonable fears thereof, it is not necessary to show that the killing was actually necessary to prevent the felony; it is enough that the circumstances were sufficient to excite the fears of a reasonable man that it was the purpose of the deceased to perpetrate a felony, and that he acted under the influence of such fears, and not for revenge. Adams v. State, 72 Ga. 85.

And where an officer was armed and pursuing another with intent to arrest him but without intent to kill him, and others shouted, "Shoot him," and the person pursued was also armed, the circumstances are such that it might be that the pursued thought the officer intended to shoot him unlawfully to stop his flight, and the pursuer thought the pursued intended to shoot him to prevent the arrest, so that each would be mistaken as to the purpose of the other; and each might be excusable, on the ground of self-defense, for shooting at the other under the supposition that he was about to be shot at. Doolin v. Com. 95 Ky. 29, 23 S. W. 663.

Refusal to instruct the jury, in a prosecution against an officer for killing a person while attempting to arrest him, however, that it is immaterial whether such person was armed 67 L. R. A.

or not, if the officer believed he was armed, is not error unless the circumstances were such as reasonably to warrant such belief. People v. Adams, 85 Cal. 281, 24 Pac. 629.

And an instruction, in a prosecution for homicide, confining the right of the accused to kill the deceased to the existence of actual, instead of apparent, danger to his life or person at the hands of the deceased, and ignoring his right to act in defense of his brother, if the latter was in good faith aiding him in making the arrest of the deceased, though erroneous, is not reversible error, where in another instruction the jury were correctly advised upon what state of facts the accused might avail himself of the law of self-defense. Havens v. Com. 26 Ky. L. Rep. 706, 82 S. W. 869.

And where, in a prosecution for murder, the defense is set up that accused was a member of the posse of an arresting officer, seeking to arrest the deceased, and that when he killed deceased he was acting under the fear of a reasonable man that his life was in danger, a charge that to justify the killing such fear must have been that of a reasonably courageous man, and not that of a coward,—the fear of a man who wants to do his duty and is trying to do it,—is not sufficient cause for ordering a new trial. Dover v. State, 109 Ga. 485, 34 S. E. 1030.

So, where a person attempts to use a pistol, and it is taken from him, and afterwards an officer, in seeking to arrest him, kills him, the failure of the officer to search him when he has a right to do so may be considered by the jury in a prosecution for the killing as bearing upon the probability of his statement that he had not been informed that the other's pistol had been taken from him. People v. Adams, 85 Cal. 281, 24 Pac. 629.

And an instruction in such case, that any person making an arrest may take from the person arrested all offensive weapons which he may have about his person, is not subject to the objection that it tended to produce upon the minds of the jury the belief that his failure to search the person killed for arms was a neglect of duty, which would give rise to an inference of guilt. Ibid.

Nor is the fact that a person sought to be arrested, who was shot by the officer, was of bad character, admissible in evidence in a prosecution for the killing, for the purpose of showing that the officer was justified in shooting to scare and stop him in order that the arrest might be made. Com. v. Greer, 20 Pa. Co. Ct. 535.

In Conraddy v. People, 5 Park. Crim. Rep. 234, however, it was held that, to justify a homicide in arresting a felon, there must be an actual necessity for such homicide, and not merely reasonable grounds to suspect that it was necessary.

See also Re Neagle, 5 L. R. A. 78, 14 Sawy. 232, 39 Fed. 833, Affirmed in 135 U. S. 1, 34 L. ed. 55, 10 Sup. Ct. Rep. 658, supra, II. b; Bowman v. Com. 96 Ky. 8, 27 S. W. 870; North Carolina v. Gosnell, 74 Fed. 784,—supra, IX. c.

c. Necessity a question for the jury.

The law does not clothe an officer with authority to judge arbitrarily of the necessity of killing a prisoner to secure him, or of killing a person to prevent the rescue of a prisoner; he cannot kill unless there is a necessity for it.

and whether there is such a necessity is a question for the jury in a prosecution for the killing. State v. Bland, 97 N. C. 438, 2 S. E. 460; Williams v. State, 44 Ala. 41; Jackson v. State, 66 Miss. 89, 14 Am. St. Rep. 542, 5 So. 690; Conraddy v. People, 5 Park. Crim. Rep. 234; Lander v. Miles, 3 Or. 35.

And see STATE V. PHILLIPS.

And it is to be determined upon consideration of all the circumstances of the case, a reasonable doubt as to whether the killing was not necessary entitling the officer to an acquittal. Jackson v. State, 66 Miss. 89, 14 Am. St. Rep. 542, 5 So. 690.

When such force was used in making an arrest that death was caused, there is no presumption of law that the officer acted in good faith, or without malice or excess of force; the jury must judge of the reasonableness of the force used, the burden resting with the prisoner to show matter of excuse or mitigation. State v. Rollins, 113 N. C. 722, 18 S. E. 394.

And a record in a prosecution against an officer for killing a person he had arrested, showing that the prisoner was drunk and had been disarmed, and that the officer was sober and a much more powerful man than the prisoner, and had an assistant with him, and that the prisoner resisted by attempting to elude the officer when he sought to push him into the cell, whereupon the officer struck and killed him, presents a case where the question is one of fact whether or not the death of the prisoner was caused by an unnecessary blow by the officer in compelling obedience. State v. Lane, 158 Mo. 572, 59 S. W. 967.

It is proper, however, for the judge, in a prosecution against an officer for homicide in making an arrest, to tell the jury that what would be excessive force in an individual in an ordinary encounter might not be so in an officer resisting an escape or rescue of a prisoner; though the omission to do so is not error when the instruction is not asked for. State v. Rollins, 113 N. C. 722, 18 S. E. 394.

And in State v. McNinch, 90 N. C. 696, it was held that the amount of force, and the employment of the usual means in making an arrest and detention within the compass of the means ordinarily resorted to for securing one found committing a criminal act, must be left to the discretion and judgment of the officer, when he is engaged in discharging a public and official duty, and is actuated by no ill will; but the case was one of assault, and not of homicide.

See also State v. Garrett, 60 N. C. (1 Winst. L.) 144, 84 Am. Dec. 359, supra, V. b.

X. Effect of question of legality or propriety of officer's action.

a. General rule as to illegal action.

A peace officer who attempts illegally to make an arrest, and in doing so invades the right of liberty of the person sought to be arrested, cannot plead self-defense in justification of the killing of such person, where the necessity grows out of resistance to such arrest. Roberson v. State, 53 Ark. 516, 14 S. W. 902.

Where one engaged in an attempt to make an unlawful arrest, and on account of such arrest is placed in a situation rendering it necessary for him to defend himself against an attack made upon him, superinduced by his wrong, 67 L. R. A.

the law justly limits his right of self-defense, and regulates it according to the magnitude of that wrong. Carter v. State, 30 Tex. App. 551, 28 Am. St. Rep. 944, 17 S. W. 1102.

Rules as to good faith and want of malice apply to the question as to the extent of force necessary for an officer to use in order to prevent a rescue and escape where the arrest is legal; they do not validate an illegal arrest. State v. Rollins, 113 N. C. 722, 18 S. E. 394.

And one who kills another, or a person mistaken for such other, in an attempt illegally to arrest him, is guilty of a homicide which cannot be of a less degree than manslaughter, though he acts upon a reasonable apprehension of danger; the slayer in such case standing in the attitude of a trespasser, or one who provokes a difficulty, or furnishes an occasion therefor. Peter v. State, 23 Tex. App. 684, 5 S. W. 228.

And where a police officer, without warrant, arrested a man who was guilty of no offense, and in preventing an escape killed him, he is at least guilty of involuntary manslaughter in the commission of an unlawful act. O'Connor v. State, 64 Ga. 125, 37 Am. Rep. 58.

So, if the wrongful acts and conduct of a person brought on a difficulty in which he killed another, he cannot take shelter behind his character as an officer, and claim that he was acting in his official character in seeking to preserve the peace when he did the deed, or that he killed the person in attempting to arrest him for a breach of the peace, as a defense for the killing. Johnson v. State, 58 Ark. 57, 23 S. W. 7.

And that, when a warrant of arrest was given to an officer it was read and explained to him, and that he was informed what to do under it, are inadmissible in evidence in a prosecution against him for killing the person sought to be arrested under it. Jackson v. State, 66 Miss. 89, 14 Am. St. Rep. 542, 5 So. 690.

Though the act of an officer seeking to make an arrest was illegal, and though death resulted, however, it is not necessarily murder; and if the intention was, not to take life, or maliciously inflict great bodily harm, but simply to maim the prisoner and thus capture him, it would be manslaughter, and not murder. Com. v. Max, 8 Phila. 422.

And a request to charge, in a prosecution against an officer for homicide in making an arrest for an alleged felony, that, if the jury had any doubt about the lawfulness of the means adopted by the defendant to arrest the deceased they should acquit, is properly refused as too indefinite. People v. Matthews (Cal.) 58 Pac. 371.

And where an officer had good reason to believe that he had authority to arrest a person for the violation of a town ordinance, committed in his presence, and acted in good faith in making such arrest, and the person sought to be arrested resisted, he had the right to apply force to accomplish it, and, if necessary, to kill such person to save his own life or person from great bodily harm; and such a killing is justifiable where he used no more force than was reasonably necessary to then and there accomplish the arrest, though the person killed was not guilty of either felony or misdemeanor, for the reason that there was, in fact, no ordinance prohibiting the act which he engaged in; and in such case an instruction tending to neutralize the effect of the officer's good faith as a justification should not be given. State v. Coleman (Mo.) 84 S. W. 978.

b. Action without a warrant.

An arrest of, or attempt to arrest, a person without a warrant, made by an officer for a misdemeanor not committed in his presence, is illegal, and the person's resistance to such arrest, or his escape therefrom, constitutes no justification for the taking of his life; and, where the officer kills such person in an effort to overcome his resistance or recapture him, he is guilty of either murder or manslaughter according to the facts and circumstances of the case. State v. Dietz, 59 Kan. 576, 53 Pac. 870.

And an officer who, on the plea, that he had heard that a colored man had threatened to kill a negro girl, and that he was in town for the purpose of carrying out his threat, watched near the house of the colored girl, and during a dark night shot and killed a white man, claiming to have mistaken him for such colored man, is guilty of murder if he intended to use the occasion as a pretext on which to kill the colored man; but, if he only intended to arrest the colored man, and was making the attempt illegally without a warrant, the offense might be of no higher grade than manslaughter, and a charge on manslaughter is called for in a prosecution therefor. Carter v. State, 30 Tex. App. 551, 28 Am. St. Rep. 944, 17 S. W. 1102.

And an ordinance against persons being on the street after 10 o'clock P. M. without reasonable excuse is not admissible in evidence in a prosecution against a marshal for killing a person in an attempt to arrest him, where the arrest was made for disorderly conduct, and no claim was made that the officer was undertaking to enforce the ordinance. Davis v. Com. 25 Ky. L. Rep. 1426, 77 S. W. 1101.

So, N. C. Code, § 1125, making it imperative upon a person summoned by a proper officer to aid in the restoration or preservation of the public peace and prevent a breach of it applies only to present breaches of the public peace, and does not warrant an arrest by a private person after the offense has been committed and the offenders have dispersed and gone away; and when such an arrest is attempted, and the person sought to be arrested resists, as is his right and the other slays him, he is guilty, at least, of manslaughter. State v. Campbell, 107 N. C. 948, 12 S. E. 441.

An officer may arrest without warrant for wife beating, however, if he arrives at the scene during the progress or immediately after the beating, being attracted thereto by the noise of the disturbance or the outcry of the woman, and in such case is entitled to use such force as is necessary to overcome resistance. Ramsey v. State, 92 Ga. 53, 17 S. E. 613.

And a peace officer has the right, without a warrant, to arrest any person in the night when he has reasonable ground to believe that such person has committed a felony; and an instruction to that effect is correct in a prosecution against him for killing an alleged felon in an attempt to arrest him. People v. Kilvington, 104 Cal. 86, 43 Am. St. Rep. 73, 37 Pac. 799.

And the rule protecting a person killing a felon, or a person who had given a dangerous wound in an attempt to arrest him when fleeing from justice, is not confined to those who were present so as to have ocular proof of the fact of the commission of the felony, or to those who first had knowledge of it, but extends to all who joined or aided in the pursuit. Carr v. State, 43 Ark. 99.

And, within this rule, a quarrel and fight between two persons are admissible in evidence, in a prosecution against an officer who killed one of them while seeking to arrest him, as bearing upon the question whether or not he had committed a felony, and whether the officer had a right to arrest him without a warrant, and kill him if necessary to effect his arrest. People v. Adams, 85 Cal. 231, 24 Pac. 620.

And, upon the trial of an action against a peace officer for shooting one fleeing after having a scuffle with a man who had insulted his wife and sister, evidence as to the insult and the complaint of the wife to the husband is admissible and part of the res gestæ, where the shooting and the scuffle all occurred within a short space of time. Petrie v. Cartwright, 114 Ky. 103, 59 L. R. A. 720, 70 S. W. 297.

So, if a police officer sees a person running at night pursued by another crying, "Stop, thief," and he refuses to stop on being ordered by the policeman to do so, the policeman has reasonable cause to believe that the person thus fleeing has committed a felony, so as to justify him in shooting over his head for the purpose of frightening him and causing him to stop and permit the officer to arrest him; so that, in case he accidentally kills him in thus shooting, he will be relieved from liability therefor. People v. Kilvington, 104 Cal. 86, 43 Am. St. Rep. 73, 37 Pac. 799.

And in such case evidence that the pursuer and the pursued had had a quarrel a short time previously, and that the pursuer had threatened the pursued, is inadmissible, in a prosecution against the officer for the homicide, to support the theory of the prosecution that confused wounds upon the face of the deceased had been inflicted by his pursuer, and that deceased was fleeing from him, and not as a criminal, when shot. People v. Kilvington (Cal.) 36 Pac. 13.

And evidence that the person shot went to the place where he was shot on lawful business is irrelevant, where the officer who killed him knew nothing of the matter, and did not recognize the deceased at the time of the shooting. People v. Kilvington, 104 Cal. 86, 43 Am. St. Rep. 73, 37 Pac. 799.

And evidence that two men who had a quarrel and fight made up their differences and became reconciled before an officer attempted to arrest one of them for an alleged felony, is immaterial, and inadmissible in a prosecution against the officer for killing the person sought to be arrested in effecting the arrest, since the only use that could be made of it would be to show that no arrest was necessary. People v. Adams, 85 Cal. 231, 24 Pac. 629.

The fact that a party arrested, or sought to be arrested, without a warrant, however, may have been shown to have been justly suspected of a felony, will not justify a homicide on the part of the officer seeking to make the arrest if he had no warrant, unless he brings himself within some of the rules authorizing such arrests without a warrant. Carter v. State, 30 Tex. App. 551, 28 Am. St. Rep. 944, 17 S. W. 1102.

To warrant an arrest without a warrant, so that it would not be deemed wrongful in a prosecution for a homicide committed in making the arrest, there must be such a state of facts as would lead a man of ordinary care and prudence to believe, or entertain a strong suspicion, that the person sought to be arrested had been guilty of a felony. People v. Kilvington, 104 Cal. 86, 43 Am. St. Rep. 73, 37 Pac. 799.

And it has been held that, where no process has been issued for the commission of a felony, a homicide in making an arrest therefor can only be justified, even by an officer, by showing the actual commission of a felony, and that there was a positive necessity to take the life of the felon in order to arrest or detain him; it is not sufficient merely to show a belief or apprehension upon the part of the person seeking to make the arrest that a felony had been committed. Conraddy v. People, 5 Park. Crim. Rep. 234.

Nor does the mere fact that a person ran upon a public street in the night when pursued by a stranger, and failed to obey a command of the stranger to stop, offer any justification to the stranger, who was an officer in citizen's clothes, in shooting at him, though burglaries had recently been committed in the neighborhood, and the officer was searching for the offender. People v. McCarthy, 47 Hun, 491, affirmed in 110 N. Y. 309, 18 N. E. 128.

And a conspiracy for the escape from a chain gang of a person under sentence for a misdemeanor is not a felony, under a statute defining it to be an offense for which the offender, on conviction, shall be liable to be punished by death or imprisonment in the penitentiary; and self-defense cannot be interposed as a justification for the killing by a private person in an effort to arrest the conspirator. State v. Whittle, 59 S. C. 297, 37 S. E. 923.

And if a convict took a gun from a guard forcibly for the purpose of making safe his escape, but not feloniously with intent to appropriate the same to his own use, the offense is not robbery, and not a felony in which a killing by a private person in an effort to arrest the culprit could be justified on the ground of self-defense. Ibid.

And having a stolen horse in one's possession, and taking it through a county when it was stolen in another county, are not a felony in the former county, within the meaning of Tex. Rev. Code, Crim. Proc. art. 226, providing that a peace officer, or any other person, may, without warrant, arrest any offender when the offense is committed in his presence, or within his view, if the offense is one classed as a felony, or as an offense against the public peace; and evidence of such theft and taking through the county is not admissible in behalf of the defense in a prosecution against one who killed the thief in an attempt to arrest him in the latter county for the theft. Lacy v. State, 7 Tex. App. 408.

Private persons may forcibly interfere to suppress a riot or resist rioters, however, although a riot is not necessarily a felony in itself, and, if they cannot otherwise suppress it or defend themselves from the rioters, they may justify a homicide in killing them, since it is their right and duty to aid in preserving the peace. Pond v. People, 8 Mich. 150.

And all that is required of a deputy sheriff and persons summoned to assist him in case of an alleged illegal assemblage is that he shall in good faith believe, and have reasonable ground to believe, that the persons assembled have banded themselves together and gone forth armed for the purpose of alarming, injuring, or intimidating any person or persons; in which case they have a lawful right to disperse and arrest such persons without a warrant, and use such force as is reasonably necessary to effect the purpose; and, if the others resist the arrest, it is lawful, if necessary to make such arrest, to shoot the persons so resisting. Lindle v. Com. 111 Ky. 866, 64 S. W. 986.

And declarations made by members of a mine-workers' association as to plans and purposes of the organization with reference to closing up certain mines, and declarations made by them to certain nonunion miners that, if they did not cease work peaceably they would be forced to do so, are admissible in evidence on behalf of the defense, in a prosecution against deputy sheriffs, who killed members of the mine-workers' association in an attempt to break up an alleged illegal assemblage of striking miners assembled for the supposed purpose of closing such mines. Ibid.

And so is the fact that certain leaders of a mine-workers' association were armed when coming from the scene of the conflict. Ibid.

And a contract between union miners and mine operators in neighboring counties, which furnished a motive upon the part of the miners for closing certain mines, is also admissible. Ibid.

And in such case questions as to the relative rights of united mine workers to assemble and march in a peaceable manner, and of the right of the operators of the mines to protect their property from violence and invasion, should not be submitted to the jury. Ibid.

In determining the question of the existence of probable cause to warrant an officer in making an arrest, the facts and circumstances presented to him at the time he was required to act are only to be taken into account. People v. Kilvington, 104 Cal. 86, 43 Am. St. Rep. 73, 37 Pac. 799.

And it is not the province of the jury to decide whether the facts and circumstances were sufficient to constitute probable cause to believe that a felony had been committed so as to warrant the arrest; the question of the probable cause or reasonable ground for suspicion is one of law, unless the evidence out of which it arises is conflicting, in which event it is the duty of the court to instruct the jury what facts, if established, will constitute probable cause, submitting to them only the question as to the existence of such facts. Ibid.

See also O'Connor v. State, 64 Ga. 125, 37 Am. Rep. 58, supra, X. a.

c. Action outside of territorial jurisdiction.

The fact that a person had been deputized by a sheriff to arrest another does not authorize him to do so outside of the sheriff's county, so that such an arrest could be regarded as an official act in a prosecution against him for killing the person arrested or sought to be arrested. York v. Com. 82 Ky. 360.

And a copy of an indictment and bench warrant against a person, with indorsements thereon, are not admissible against a person deputized by the sheriff to make an arrest under such warrant, who killed the person sought to be arrested for the homicide, where the arrest was not in the sheriff's county. Ibid.

So, a warrant issued by a justice of the peace in one state, authorizing the arrest of a person upon a charge of larceny, gives no authority to arrest such person in another state, and an attempt to arrest such a person thereunder in the latter state is unauthorized and illegal; and, where several persons armed themselves, and went in search of the party sought to be arrested, and found him in the latter state, and presented their loaded guns at him ready to fire, and the gun of one of them was accidentally discharged, killing him, they are guilty of murder in the second degree. Tarvers v. State, 90 Tenn. 485, 16 S. W. 1041.

An instruction that a deceased person was liable to arrest by a private person, without a warrant, for such crimes committed in another state as were punishable in that state by imprisonment in the state prison for one year or more, which would include robbery, grand larceny, and assault with intent to murder with a deadly weapon, is proper, however, in a prosecution for the killing of a person sought to be arrested, in which the defense was self-defense, in a lawful attempt to arrest him as a fugitive from such other state for crime, where the statutes of the state so provided. State v. Whittle, 50 S. C. 297, 37 S. E. 923.

And refusal to instruct, in a prosecution against an officer for killing a person sought to be arrested, that the officer had the right to exercise the duties of his office outside the corporate limits of his city, if erroneous, is cured by an instruction that he had a right to arrest anyone who was creating a disturbance, that being the act for which the arrest was sought to be made. State v. Weston, 98 Iowa, 125, 67 N. W. 84.

d. Negligent action.

An officer seeking to make an arrest may be guilty of a negligent homicide, as well as may any other person; and the question, in a prosecution against an officer for shooting a man whom he saw another pursuing, claiming to have intended to shoot over his head merely for the purpose of stopping his flight, is whether, under the circumstances as they appeared to him, he acted recklessly and with criminal negligence; and testimony as to the reason why the person killed was at the place where he was killed is improperly admitted. People v. Kilvington (Cal.) 36 Pac. 13.

In such case the question whether or not his act was one of criminal negligence is one of fact, the determination of which must be left to the sound judgment and discretion of the jury in a prosecution for the killing, and, in the decision of it, the defendant is entitled to the benefit of any reasonable doubt arising upon the evidence. People v. Kilvington, 104 Cal. 86, 43 Am. St. Rep. 73, 37 Pac. 790.

To constitute, in law, a crime, there must exist a union or joint operation of act and intent, or criminal negligence; and, where an officer shot a person being pursued by another, intending to shoot over his head, an instruction that an act and evil intent must combine to constitute, in law, a crime, is properly refused, as it entirely eliminates the important factor of criminal negligence. People v. Kilvington (Cal.) 36 Pac. 13.

So, the question whether the defendant was cool and clear headed or otherwise, and whether he had been drinking intoxicating drink, is admissible in evidence, either in chief or in rebuttal, in a prosecution for homicide, on the ground that the killing was done by a peace officer in order to make an arrest. Stephens v. Com. 20 Ky. L. Rep. 544, 47 S. W. 220.

One who discharges his gun at a fleeing felon in a careful and heedful manner, however, not for the purpose of killing him, but slightly to injure him and prevent his flight, where he cannot otherwise stop him, is justified in his act, though death results, where it is due to the fact that the felon suddenly and unexpectedly changes his position, so that the wound is delivered in a place not intended. Com. v. Long, 17 Pa. Super. Ct. 641; People v. Matthews (Cal.) 58 Pac. 371.

e. Malicious action.

Here, as elsewhere, premeditated killing, or killing with malice aforethought, is murder; and the fact that the person doing it is an officer, or that he does it in making or attempting an arrest, is of no effect.

Thus, the fact that a person had committed a felony would not justify an officer in shooting at him with intent to do him grievous bodily harm in an attempt to arrest him, where he did not know of the felony at the time he fired. Reg. v. Dadson, 4 Cox, C. C. 358, 2 Den. C. C. 35, 14 Jur. 1051, 3 Car. & K. 148, 20 L. J. Mag. Cas. N. S. 57.

And the rule is the same when the killing was with malice and premeditation, though the officer supposed, whether mistakenly or otherwise, that he had authority to arrest. State v. Coleman (Mo.) 84 S. W. 978.

And the killing of a person unnecessarily, wantonly, and wilfully, by a peace officer or any of his posse, is not justified by the fact that the person killed was engaged in the habitual violation of the revenue laws of the United States. Georgia v. O'Grady, 3 Woods, 496, Fed. Cas. No. 5,352.

So, officers who killed members of an alleged riotous and unlawful assemblage in an attempt to arrest them cannot rely upon the protection with which the law clothes them, and be excused on the ground of self-defense, where they did not in good faith believe, and have reasonable grounds to believe, that the persons assembled were then going forth for the purpose of alarming, intimidating, disturbing, or injuring any person or persons, and where they were not acting in good faith in what appeared to them to be the discharge of their official duty. Lindle v. Com. 111 Ky. 866, 64 S. W. 986.

And evidence in a prosecution for homicide that, after a police officer had emptied his revolver at a person he was seeking to arrest, he called to a bystander, saying, "Help me," and, "Shoot him," who immediately began firing at the person sought to be arrested, who retreated, the other following him and emptying his pistol, after which he got another and continued to pursue and fire at him, voluntarily killing him, amply warrants the jury, in a prosecution for the killing, in finding that he was actuated by a murderous design to kill. People v. Brooks, 131 Cal. 311, 63 Pac. 464.

So, evidence of an unprovoked assault with a deadly weapon, and an attempt to use it upon the person attacked, and that it was without justification, and done in aid of another in carrying out a purpose to kill, is sufficient to go to the jury in a prosecution for the subsequent killing, though the blow causing death was inflicted by another, and warrants a verdict of guilty of manslaughter, as against a claim that it was done in a lawful manner in attempting to arrest the deceased for disturbing the peace. Havens v. Com. 26 Ky. L. Rep. 369, 82 S. W. 369.

And evidence that an officer had used harsh terms about a person whom he had killed in an effort to arrest him, and that he had stated that he would not mind killing him, is for the jury to consider in a prosecution against him for the killing, on the question whether or not such person showed deliberate purpose to kill. North Carolina v. Gosnell, 74 Fed. 734.

And evidence that officers charged with killing certain members of a mine-workers' association had been employed as guards by certain coal companies previous to their appointment as deputy sheriffs is admissible in a prosecution for the homicide committed while they were employed in an attempt to break up an alleged illegal assemblage of striking miners assembled for the supposed purpose of closing certain mines. Lindle v. Com. 111 Ky. 866, 64 S. W. 986.

So, a statement by the defendant in a prosecution for killing to prevent an escape that he had killed or shot five men while guarding convicts is sufficient to warrant a refusal to charge that there was no evidence that he had ever shed any other man's blood, notwithstanding the fact that such statement might have been excluded as irrelevant testimony had objection been made to it. Handley v. State, 96 Ala. 48, 38 Am. St. Rep. 81, 11 So. 322.

And where several persons acting under an unauthorized and illegal warrant armed themselves with shotguns and went in search of another, apparently to arrest him under such warrant, but making threats upon the way to kill him, and, upon overtaking him, pointed their loaded guns at him, and one of them shot and killed him, claiming that the gun was discharged accidentally, an instruction in a prosecution for such killing that such act would be murder in the second degree, if erroneous as to the degree of the crime, is without prejudice, where the jury returned a verdict of murder in the first degree, which required that they should be satisfied beyond a reasonable doubt that the killing had been premeditated. Tarvers v. State, 90 Tenn. 455, 16 S. W. 1041.

The mere fact that an officer having a warrant for the arrest of a person went out with a predetermination to kill him, however, is not alone sufficient to render him guilty of murder in the first degree, the evil intention and the deed must coexist, and the intention must have prompted the deed. Clements v. State, 50 Ala. 117.

So, where there is an affray between an officer and a person sought to be arrested by him, and mutual blows are exchanged, and the officer kills the other while in a heat of passion, it is manslaughter, although the other was originally engaged in an unlawful act. Forster's Case, 1 Lewin, C. C. 187.

And if no resistance to an arrest is interposed, or if resistance is discontinued, it is murder or manslaughter to slay the party arrested, according to the circumstances of the case,—murder if the officer had time to cool his passions; and manslaughter if the killing took place in the heat of excitement or passion. Com. v. Max, 8 Phila. 422.

f. Notice of character and purpose.

It is the duty of an officer attempting to make an arrest to make known his purpose and the 67 L. R. A.

capacity in which he acts, if they are not already known to the person sought to be arrested, a failure to perform which may render him the aggressor, or the apparent aggressor, so as to warrant resistance by the accused, and so as to deprive the officer of the right to claim to have acted in self-defense in overcoming the resistance, though so forcible as to put him in danger of the loss of life or of serious bodily harm. Plasters v. State, 1 Tex. App. 673; State v. Rollins, 113 N. C. 722, 18 S. E. 894.

And in such case the person making the arrest and slaying the person arrested is guilty of murder, unless excessive force was used by those resisting, in which case he would be guilty of manslaughter. State v. Rollins, 113 N. C. 722, 18 S. E. 894.

So, to justify the killing of a felon by a private person for the purpose of arresting him, the slayer must show, not only that a felony was actually committed, but also that he avowed his object, and that the felon refused to submit. State v. Roane, 13 N. C. (2 Dev. L.) 58.

But if the purpose and capacity of the officer are known to the person sought to be arrested when the arrest is attempted, and the arrest is otherwise legal, submission to arrest is a duty, and resistance is unjustifiable, and warrants the use of such force as may be necessary to overcome it. Plasters v. State, 1 Tex. App. 673.

And an attempt to arrest a person found violating the law without first notifying him of the charge upon which the attempted arrest is made is not unlawful, so as to be no justification for a killing in effecting the arrest, where both the official character of the person making the arrest, and the charge upon which it was made, are known to the party arrested. Wolf v. State, 19 Ohio St. 248.

And an officer known to be such, having legal authority to arrest, is not bound to show or read the warrant before arrest is secured, where resistance is made. North Carolina v. Gosnell, 74 Fed. 734; United States v. Rice, 1 Hughes, 560, Fed. Cas. No. 16,153.

But if no resistance is offered, in order to warrant the use of such force as may be necessary to effect the arrest the officer should always, upon demand, show his warrant to the party to be arrested, or notify him of the substance of it. United States v. Rice, 1 Hughes, 560, Fed. Cas. No. 16,153.

And where an officer plainly announces his purpose to make an arrest for a breach of the peace which has just taken place in his presence or hearing, and all the demonstrations of force which follow the announcement are in line with that purpose, and would indicate to a reasonable man no intention at variance with it, and the person sought to be arrested ought to know that, by submitting, he can instantly terminate all demonstration of force, the case is not one in which such person can have reasonable ground to believe a felony is intended or about to be committed upon him, so as to justify his resistance. Ramsey v. State, 92 Ga. 53, 17 S. E. 613.

So, while a person who is not a known officer ought to show his warrant and read it if required, a failure to do so will not make him a trespasser ab initio so as to deprive him of the right to overcome the resistance of the other by such force as may be necessary, where the other has notice of the warrant, and is fully aware of its contents, and has made up his mind to resist its execution at all hazards. State v. Garrett, 60 N. C. (1 Winst. L.) 144, 84 Am. Dec. 359.

And the question whether a feeling felon, who was about to reach a place of safety, should have been notified of the cause of arrest by a private person before shooting, is one of fact for the jury under the evidence. Com. v. Long, 17 Pa. Super. Ct. 641.

g. Further authority.

The question of an officer's authority to act, and of the propriety of his methods, and as to whether or not they confer a right of resistance upon a person sought to be arrested, and as to their effect upon a resulting homicide, seems to be precisely the same whether the officer killed the person sought to be arrested, or the person sought to be arrested killed the officer. Reference is made for further authority on this question, therefore, to note to Keady v. People, 66 L. R. A. 353, on the subject of Homicide in resisting arrest or official action.

XI. Action by deputy or assistant.

A principal cannot be held to answer criminally for the act of his deputy, unless it was done with his consent or by his command; and where a deputy jailer causes the death of a prisoner by confining him against his will, and keeping him confined in an unwholesome and dangerous room, the deputy, and not the principal jailer, is criminally responsible for the death. Rex v. Huggins, 2 Ld. Raym. 1574, 2 Strange, 882.

And a principal cannot delegate to his agent the authority to do an illegal act; and authority, given by the owner of a slave, to kill the slave if he cannot otherwise be taken, is illegal, and imposes no obligation of performance. Morton v. Bradley, 30 Ala. 683.

But the owner of a slave, who authorizes an agent to kill him if he cannot otherwise be taken, cannot relieve himself from liability for the killing of the slave by the agent, on the theory that the killing was the act of the agent, and not his act. Ibid.

Though, where authority is given by the owner of a slave to an agent to kill the slave if he cannot otherwise be taken, and the agent delegates such authority to a third person, and the third person kills the slave, he is not relieved from liability therefor, on the theory that the owner cannot take advantage of his wrong; since the delegation to the agent of the power to kill the slave carries with it no authority to employ assistants in the work of destruction, or to transfer his immunity from liability to another. Ibid.

A duly summoned assistant of an officer, however, is entitled to the same protection of law which is afforded to an officer who has process in his hands; and, where he obeys the orders of his superior officer, and resistance is made to his performance of duty, he may, even in the temporary absence of the officer with process, resort to such extreme measures as may be necessary for self-protection, and the arrest of the offender. North Carolina v. Gosnell, 74 Fed. 734.

Though the right of a person called upon by an officer to aid in making an arrest of a misdemeanant, to kill the misdemeanant to prevent an escape, is no greater than that of the 67 L. R. A.

officer. Handley v. State, 96 Ala. 48, 38 Am. St. Rep. 81, 11 So. 322.

And the uncommunicated intentions of a constable who had appointed a deputy, that the deputy should not act as such, are immaterial and inadmissible in evidence in a prosecution against the deputy for killing a man in an attempt to arrest him for a breach of the peace. State v. Dierberger, 90 Mo. 369, 2 S. W. 286.

And whether or not a justice has power to deputize a private person to serve a warrant, if the person thus deputized acts under the warrant, he should be treated, in a prosecution for killing the person sought to be arrested in the effort to make the arrest, as clothed with the protection thrown around officers de facto making arrests. Harris v. State, 72 Miss. 99, 16 So. 360.

And Mo. Rev. Stat. § 652, giving every constable power to appoint deputies, for whose conduct he shall be answerable, and providing that the appointment shall be filed in the office of the county clerk, is directory only as to the provision of filing; and a deputy appointed by a constable, who killed a man in an attempt to arrest him for a breach of the peace, is not deprived by this provision of his right to say, in justification of his act, that he was a deputy constable, by the fact that he had failed to file his appointment. State v. Dierberger, 90 Mo. 369, 2 S. W. 286, 96 Mo. 666, 9 Am. St. Rep. 380, 10 S. W. 168.

XII. Conclusion.

Officers of the law charged with duties from the performance of which homicide results are not chargeable with criminal responsibility therefor. This rule is particularly applicable to officers charged with the execution of a death sentence. But the killing of a person, though under sentence of death, is murder if done by any other than the person required by law to do it, or if done at any other time, or in any other manner, than that prescribed. And the rule is also applicable to the acts of officers in the performance of any other duties imposed by law, whether civil or military, including the obeying and carrying out of orders of superior officers where that is a duty. The act of a person, whether he be a civil officer, or a military one, or a private soldier, resulting in death, is not criminal where it was done in the performance of his official duty, or in carrying out proper orders of an official superior; and, where he is sought to be held responsible to any tribunal, or in any way other than to his own government, or to his official superior, the courts of the government or jurisdiction for which he acted will procure his discharge by habeas corpus. If the killing was not done in order to enable the officer or soldier to perform his legal duty, however; or if the authority or order under which he acted was illegal, and such that any person of ordinary sense would recognize its illegality,—the slayer is not protected by his official position, or by his authority or orders; and the question whether his act was an official one, or one of aggression, is one of fact for a jury.

The same general rule applies with reference to homicide in effecting an arrest, though its application may be somewhat different. An arrest in a proper case is an official duty. The officer, therefore, is clothed with authority to use such force as may be necessary and proper for effecting his purpose; and, if such force, exerted properly and in a proper case, results in the death of the person sought to be arrested, the homicide is justifiable. The degree of force which may be used, however, depends upon the differing surrounding circumstances. If the act for which the arrest was sought to be made was a felony, or, at least, if it was a felony dangerous to human life,—and in some instances it has been held that, if the act was dangerous to human life, though a misdemeanor,—the law justifies the officer in killing the culprit if he cannot otherwise be taken; and this rule applies to checking or preventing flight before actual arrest, and to preventing escape or rescue after arrest, and to rearrest after escape, as well as to actual physical resistance to, or an attack upon, the officer. The amount of force must be limited, however, to that necessary, or apparently necessary, to the proper accomplishment of the arrest; and if it can be made without killing, the killing will be at least manslaughter; and the question as to what force is necessary is one of fact for the jury.

With reference to misdemeanors, and perhaps felonies, not affecting the person, the same danger does not result to the public from a failure of justice as in the case of the more dangerous or serious crimes. Greater regard, therefore, is given to the life of the alleged wrongdoer. And, while the officer in making the arrest is permitted to use such force as is necessary to overcome resistance and subdue efforts to escape, he cannot take the life of the alleged culprit, or inflict upon him great bodily harm, except to save his own life, or to prevent like harm to himself. This rule makes it criminal to kill to prevent escape by flight either before or after actual arrest, but requires the officer to press on though he meets with personal resistance, and permits him, in case he does so, and is placed in danger of loss of life or of great bodily harm, to kill the culprit in self-defense. The justification for killing must rest solely upon the ground of self-defense, differing from the ordinary right of self-defense in that the officer must press on and need not flee to the wall, and usually permits the use of deadly weapons only when the officer has reason to suppose that such weapons are about to be used on him; and the question of necessity of killing in self-defense is one for the jury.

If the officer has no right to arrest, however, he is a trespasser, who may be resisted, and cannot justify a killing on the ground of self-defense. And an officer may be held criminally liable as for negligent homicide when he acted negligently, or as for a malicious homicide when he acted with malice, notwithstanding the fact that he acted with due authority; and, though his right to act is complete, he may still render himself a trespasser, and subject to be treated as such, by proceeding without notice to, and in the absence of knowledge of, the person sought to be arrested, of his official character and design.

A principal officer cannot be held criminally liable for a killing by his deputy or assistant in effecting an arrest, unless he expressly and directly directed or authorized it. But a deputy or duly authorized assistant has a right to use the same force, and is entitled to the same protection, and may defend himself to the same extent, as the principal officer under whom he acts.

F. H. B.

MICHIGAN SUPREME COURT.

Mary Jane WARE

v.

Charles W. HALL, Appt.

(.....Mich.....)

Merely raising a few vegetables on a vacant lot is not such occupancy as entitles one entirely insolvent, without ability sufficient to earn her own support, and without any prospect of getting money to erect a building thereon, to hold the land indefinitely as a homestead.

(October 26, 1904.)

A PPEAL by defendant from a judgment of the Circuit Court for Berrien County, in Chancery, in a suit to cancel an execution levy upon certain real estate. Reversed.

Statement by Grant, J.:

The object of this bill is to cancel an exe-

NOTE.—As to what occupancy is necessary to constitute property a homestead, see also, in this series, First Nat. Bank v. Hollingsworth, 6 L. R. A. 92; Gill v. Gill, 55 L. R. A. 191; and Lyons v. Andry, 55 L. R. A. 724. 67 L. R. A.

cution levy made upon a vacant lot in Benton Harbor, which complainant claims as a homestead. The sole question presented by the record is whether she had taken sufficient steps to establish and maintain this lot as a homestead. She formerly lived in Kalamazoo, where she owned a lot and a small house, in which we may infer (though it does not clearly appear upon the record) that she lived. In September, 1899, she sold that house and lot for $375, out of which she paid a mortgage upon them for $250. She then moved to Benton Harbor, where some of her children were living. While living there with her son she purchased the lot in question, for which she paid $150. She is a widow having four children, all of whom are married. She testified that they contributed a little towards her support. Subsequently she rented a house of the defendant, failed to pay the rent, and he brought suit therefor, obtained a judgment, and levied upon this lot in June, 1903. The lot was vacant when purchased, and was never occupied by her in any other manner or for any other purpose than to raise some vegetables upon it during the summer. It does not appear that it was fenced. Her son set out two small maple trees for her in front of the lot, but not at her request. She afterwards paid him 40 cents apiece for them. There were also two or three peach trees upon the lot. She had no money with which to build a house, or even to pay her rent. She never made any plans for building, and testified that the reason was that she was too poor.

Mr. Harris S. Whitney, for appellant:

A homestead consists of a certain tract of land "with a dwelling house thereon, with its appurtenances, owned and occupied by any resident of this state."

Mich. Const. art. 16, § 2.

It is the land including the dwelling house and the appurtenances, and constituting a homestead in fact.

Beecher v. Baldy, 7 Mich. 500; Wisner v. Farnham, 2 Mich. 472; Coolidge v. Wells, 20 Mich. 87.

The law is made to protect actual homes, and not mere possibilities.

Stanton v. Hitchcock, 64 Mich. 320, 8 Am. St. Rep. 821, 31 N. W. 395; Dewille v. Widoe, 64 Mich. 596, 8 Am. St. Rep. 852, 31 N. W. 533; Reske v. Reske, 51 Mich. 544, 16 N. W. 895; Mills v. Hobbs, 76 Mich. 126, 42 N. W. 1084.

Mr. John J. Sterling, for appellee:

Homestead laws are liberally construed and enforced for the benefit of the debtor, and are not merely a privilege conferred, but are, under the Constitution, an absolute right.

Chamberlain v. Lyell, 3 Mich. 458; Comstock v. Comstock, 27 Mich. 101; Barber v. Rorabeck, 36 Mich. 399; Bunker v. Paquette, 37 Mich. 80; Lozo v. Sutherland, 38 Mich. 171; Skiinner v. Shannon, 44 Mich. 86, 38 Am. Rep. 232, 6 N. W. 108; Wilson v. Bartholomew, 45 Mich. 43, 7 N. W. 227; Bouchard v. Bourassa, 57 Mich. 10, 23 N. W. 452; Riggs v. Sterling, 60 Mich. 643, 1 Am. St. Rep. 554, 27 N. W. 705.

Absence from a homestead for a period of six years will not deprive the owner of the protection of the statute, if, during such absence, he had a continuing intent to return and occupy it.

Kaeding v. Joachimsthal, 98 Mich. 78, 56 N. W. 1101; Riggs v. Sterling, 60 Mich. 643, 1 Am. St. Rep. 554, 27 N. W. 705; Evans v. Grand Rapids, L. & D. R. Co. 68 Mich. 602, 36 N. W. 687; Myers v. Weaver, 101 Mich. 477, 59 N. W. 810.

Where a vacant city lot is all the property owned by complainant, and was bought with the intention of making it a homestead as soon as the owner's means would permit, and the owner has planted shade trees in front of the lot along the street line, 67 L. R. A.

or otherwise attempted to improve it, the same will constitute a homestead in law.

Reske v. Reske, 51 Mich. 541, 47 Am. Rep. 594, 16 N. W. 895; Dewille v. Widoe, 64 Mich. 593, 8 Am. St. Rep. 852, 31 N. W. 533; Mills v. Hobbs, 76 Mich. 123, 42 N. W. 1084; Corey v. Waldo, 126 Mich. 709, 86 N. W. 122.

Grant, J., delivered the opinion of the court:

Where one buys a piece of land with the intention of soon thereafter erecting a building thereon for the sole purpose of a homestead, there is reason in holding that such land comes within the protection of the Constitution as a homestead, and that he will have a reasonable time in which to erect the building. That is not this case. For three years and a half complainant had owned this lot. It could not exist indefinitely as a homestead in her intention alone. Something must be done within a reasonable time towards making it such a homestead. There was no such occupancy as, under any of the decisions cited, has been held to constitute a homestead. From her own testimony there was no immediate or remote prospect that she could erect a house. She testified that her son, who was a carpenter, said that some time when he got able he would erect a house on the lot and give it to her. That was the only prospect she had. The facts were entirely different in the cases relied upon. Reske v. Reske, 51 Mich. 541, 47 Am. Rep. 594, 16 N. W. 895; Dewille v. Widoe, 64 Mich. 593, 8 Am. St. Rep. 852, 31 N. W. 533; Mills v. Hobbs, 76 Mich. 126, 42 N. W. 1084; Corey v. Waldo, 126 Mich. 706, 86 N. W. 122.

Corey v. Waldo comes nearest to sustaining the plaintiff's contention. But in that case the defendant and his wife were "proceeding as rapidly as circumstances would permit" to convert a homestead, which had been condemned by the city of Detroit for the purpose of opening a street, into another homestead composed of the lot which had been levied upon. Mr. Waldo was able to erect buildings thereon as a homestead, and we held that the reasonable time for him to carry that intention into effect by the occupancy which the Constitution and law require had not expired. Here the naked question is, Can one utterly insolvent, without any ability to earn money sufficient even to support herself, without any prospect of getting money to erect a building thereon, hold land indefinitely as a homestead? To so hold would be in direct opposition to the language of the Constitution and the law, which require ownership and occupancy combined. In all the cases cited, except possibly Corey v. Waldo, there were some acts of occupancy. Intention without occupancy cannot create a homestead, for the Constitution requires occupancy as well as intention. There must be some acts which, coupled with the intention, constitute the necessary occupancy.

Decree reversed and bill dismissed.

The other Justices concur.

NEW MEXICO SUPREME COURT.

Re ESTATE OF Menna TEOPFER, Deceased.

Mary TEOPFER, Appt.,

v.

Henry KAEUFER.

(.....N. M.....)

- *1. In this territory wills may be revoked, not only by a written instrument, as provided in § 1953, Comp. Laws 1897, but also in certain causes by operation of law.
2. The marriage of a testator, whether or not it is followed by the birth of a child, revokes an antenuptial will.

(September 13, 1904.)

APPEAL by the legatee from a judgment of the District Court for Bernalillo County setting aside the will of Menna Teopfer, deceased, and granting letters of administration to Henry F. Kaeufer. Affirmed.

Statement by MILLS, Ch. J.:

One Menna Teopfer, then an unmarried woman, made a will on the 11th day of July, 1900, by which she devised all of her property to her sister Mary, and to the children of her said sister, should such sister die before her. On April 8, 1901, she married Henry F. Kaeufer, and on June 13, 1902, she died, leaving surviving her husband. Deceased never had any children as the result of her marriage. Her property remained in her name at her death, and the will had never been revoked by any written instrument. On September 2, 1902, the will was duly filed in the probate court of Bernalillo county by the surviving husband, and at the same time he filed his petition asking that letters of administration be issued to him, on the grounds that the marriage of Menna Teopfer to him, subsequent to the making of the will, revoked the will, and that therefore the deceased died intestate. The application of the surviving husband was opposed by Mary Teopfer. The evidence of the subscribing witnesses to the will was taken by deposition, and was, in substance, that Menna Teopfer duly signed the will, and that they affixed their names to the same as witnesses in her presence and in the presence of each other; and the judge of probate approved the will, from which Henry F. Kaeufer, appellee herein, prayed an appeal to the district court of the county of Bernalillo, which appeal was granted, bond was given, and the clerk of the probate court certified "a full, true, and complete transcript of the proceedings and all matters relating to the estate of Menna Teopfer, deceased, now on record or on file" in his office, to the district court of the second judicial district. On February 6, 1903, a stipulation was filed in the district court, stating the facts on which the contest of the will should be submitted to the court. Issue of citations was waived, and Mary Teopfer and the minor heirs (her children) entered their appearance by their attorneys. The case came up for argument on the record and stipulation of facts on February 6, 1903, and was continued to give the attorney for Mary Teopfer additional time in which to submit authorities to the court. On February 12, 1903, a motion was made to strike the stipulation from the files of the court, and set it aside, on the ground that it had been signed improvidently, which motion was denied. Motion was then made to strike out certain portion of the record, which was also overruled. On the same day motion to dismiss the appeal was also filed and overruled, and on February 20, 1903, a final judgment was entered in said cause, decreeing that the will of Menna Teopfer was not "eligible to probate" and denying the probate thereof. To this judgment the attorney for Mary Teopfer excepted, and appealed to this court.

*Headnotes by MILLS, Ch. J.

NOTE.—As to revocation of a will by marriage, see also cases in notes to Riggs v. Palmer, 5 L. R. A. 346, and Davis v. Fogle, 7 L. R. A. 485; also the later cases in this series of Ellis v. Darden, 11 L. R. A. 51; Roane v. Hollingshead, 17 L. R. A. 592; Re Comassi, 67 L. R. A.

28 L. R. A. 414; Re Heulett, 34 L. R. A. 384; Ingersoll v. Hopkins, 40 L. R. A. 191; Hudnall v. Ham, 48 L. R. A. 557; Glascott v. Bragg, 50 L. R. A. 258; and Re Kelly, 56 L. R. A. 754.

Mr. S. B. Gillett, for appellant:

A will in New Mexico is not revoked by marriage. Comp. Laws 1897, § 1953, provides the manner in which a will may be revoked.

Hoitt v. Hoitt, 63 N. H. 475, 56 Am. Rep. 530, 3 Atl. 604; Kelly v. Stevenson, 85 Minn. 247, 56 L. R. A. 754, 89 Am. St. Rep. 545, 88 N. W. 739; Ward's Will, 70 Wis. 251, 5 Am. St. Rep. 174, 35 N. W. 731; Noyes v. Southworth, 55 Mich. 173, 54 Am. Rep. 359, 20 N. W. 891; Fellows v. Allen, 60 N. H. 439, 49 Am. Rep. 328; Re Emery, 81 Me. 275, 17 Atl. 68; Morton v. Onion, 45 Vt. 145; Re Tuller, 79 Ill. 99, 22 Am. Rep. 164; Webb v. Jones, 36 N. J. Eq. 163; Colcord v. Conroy, 40 Fla. 97, 23 So. 561.

If she could have made a will in the same language after her marriage, it would be idle and utterly fruitless for her to have made another will after marriage. The law does not operate to destroy and restore the same thing by the same breath.

Roane v. Hollingshead, 76 Md. 369, 17 L. R. A. 592, 35 Am. St. Rep. 438, 25 Atl. 307; Noyes v. Southworth, 55 Mich. 173, 54 Am. Rep. 359, 20 N. W. 891; Ward's Will, 70 Wis. 251, 5 Am. St. Rep. 174, 35 N. W. 731; Kelly v. Stevenson, 85 Minn. 247, 56 L. R. A. 754, 89 Am. St. Rep. 545, 88 N. W. 739; Morey v. Sohler, 63 N. H. 507, 56 Am. Rep. 538, 3 Atl. 636; Re Emery, 81 Me. 275, 17 Atl. 68.

Mr. John H. Stingle, for appellee:

Since the removal of disabilities of coverture the will of a man and of a woman stand on the same footing.

Re Tuller, 79 Ill. 99, 22 Am. Rep. 166; Noyes v. Southworth, 55 Mich. 173, 54 Am. Rep. 359, 20 N. W. 891; Brown v. Scherrer, 5 Colo. App. 255, 38 Pac. 427.

In New Mexico, in the event of there being no children, the husband or the wife is the sole heir of the other.

Laws 1901, chap. 62, § 9.

Statutes prescribing the method of express revocation do not exclude revocation by implication or inference of law by various circumstances not within the provisions of the statute.

Fallon v. Chidester, 46 Iowa, 590, 26 Am. Rep. 164; Beach, Wills, § 62; Garrett v. Dabney, 27 Miss. 335.

Legislation inclines to extend the rule of revocation.

Schouler, Wills, 2d ed. § 424; 1 Jarman, Wills, 5th Am. ed. by Bigelow, 122, note.

A will is revoked pro tanto to let in after-born children.

1 Woerner, Am. Law of Administration, 2d ed. § 55; 1 Jarman, Wills, Randolph & T.'s ed. p. 272, and note; N. M. Laws 1901, chap. 81, § 39.

A woman's will is revoked by her marriage.

riage, notwithstanding the statutes have given her testamentary capacity.

Swan v. Hammond, 138 Mass. 45, 52 Am. Rep. 255; Brown v. Clark, 77 N. Y. 369; Blodgett v. Moore, 141 Mass. 75, 5 N. E. 470; Ward's Will, 70 Wis. 251, 5 Am. St. Rep. 174, 35 N. W. 731.

In those jurisdictions where the husband and wife are heir to each other, marriage works such a change in the conditions and circumstances of a testator as to revoke a will made prior to marriage. The tacit condition is annexed to such a will that it shall not take effect upon the happening of such a contingency.

Tiedeman, Real Prop. § 888; Tyler v. Tyler, 19 Ill. 151; American Board v. Nelson, 72 Ill. 564; Re Tuller, 79 Ill. 99, 22 Am. Rep. 166; Morgan v. Ireland, 1 Idaho, 786; Brown v. Scherrer, 5 Colo. App. 255, 38 Pac. 427, Affirmed in 21 Colo. 481, 42 Pac. 668; Colcord v. Conroy, 40 Fla. 97, 23 So. 561; Byrd v. Surles, 77 N. C. 435; Schouler, Wills, § 424; Garrett v. Dabney, 27 Miss. 336; 1 Redf. Wills, p. 281; 1 Jarman, Wills, p. 279; Walker v. Hall, 34 Pa. 483; Stokes v. O'Fallon, 2 Mo. 32; Beach, Wills, § 63; Re Kaufman, 131 N. Y. 620, 15 L. R. A. 292, 30 N. E. 242.

Mills, Ch. J., delivered the opinion of the court:

Of the seven assignments of error only the sixth and seventh will need any considerable discussion by us, as the others can readily be disposed of.

The first and fifth assignments will be considered as one. The first alleges that the transcript of record from the probate court, filed in the district court, contained no copy of the will of Menna Teopfer, and the fifth alleges that the court erred in declaring said will not "eligible to probate, because said will was not before the court. Our examination of the transcript of record shows that the will was certified by the clerk of the probate court to the district court. A copy of the will is found on pages 10 and 11 of the transcript, and it is nowhere claimed that that is not an exact copy of the original on file in the probate court. The stipulation which is filed in this case shows what the will was, and admits that it was made and executed by the deceased, and that it was filed in the probate court of Bernalillo county. This stipulation or agreed statements of facts is neither the pleadings nor the issues. It is simply the proofs upon which the cause was tried by the district court. Territory v. Sante Fé P. R. Co. 10 N. M. 415, 62 Pac. 985.

The second alleged error is that the appeal from the probate to the district court was not taken as required by law, and that the court should have sustained the motion to dismiss the appeal. Section 2014 of the Compiled Laws of 1897, providing for appeals from probate courts, was amended by § 40, chap. 81, p. 158, Laws 1901; but this amended section expressly provides that it "shall not affect any proceeding or proceedings now provided by law for the review in the district court of any decision of any probate court upon the approval or disapproval of any last will or testament." Consequently § 2014, Comp. Laws 1897, is still in force so far as appeals in matters relative to the allowance or disallowance of the probate of a will is concerned, and that section provides that in all matters relative to wills any party aggrieved by the decision of the probate court shall have the right to appeal to the district court in the manner provided by law within three months; and § 929, Comp. Laws 1897 provides that "appeals from the judgment of the probate court shall be allowed to the district court in the same manner and subject to the same restriction as in case of appeals from the district court to the supreme court." This seems to have been done in this case, for an appeal was prayed for and granted, bond was given, and the entire record was sent up, and the whole matter was before the district court for a trial de novo. There was no error in overruling the motion to dismiss.

The third error assigned is that the court erred in refusing to strike out certain parts of the record in regard to the issuance of letters of administration to Henry F. Kaeufer, because that was no part of the record in the matter of the will of Menna Teopfer. We do not consider this point as well taken; nor do we see, even if the learned judge below had allowed it, that it would have made any difference in the decision he arrived at in this case. In his petition opposing the allowance of the probate of the will the appellee herein asked that letters of administration be issued to him; but the probate court, so far as appears from the record before us, never did issue letters of administration to Henry F. Kaeufer, but, on the contrary, approved the will and continued the application for the issuing of the letters of administration asked for, to which continuance the attorney for Kaeufer then and there excepted. The district court never acted on the matter of the issuing of these letters of administration, as no appeal was taken from the action of the probate judge, nor could any have been taken, as no final decision was made by the probate judge.

The next assignment is that the court committed error in refusing to set aside the stipulation between counsel. There was no error in the refusal of the judge of the district court to set aside the stipulation of facts, on which stipulation the case was tried before him. The grounds set up in the motion asking the court to set aside the stipulation are not in our opinion sufficient to have warranted the district court in so doing. After hearing the case argued, and after having attentively listened to counsel, we are of the opinion that the stipulation very fairly states the facts of the case, and from an examination of the record and the facts as set out in the briefs of the attorneys who tried the case we believe that the evidence, if it had been heard by the court, would have proved substantially all of the facts as they are set out in the stipulation. The most that can be said is that possibly the attorney for the appellants acted hastily in signing the stipulation. If it had appeared that appellant had really been hurt by it, we believe that the trial judge would have set it aside, or have allowed other evidence to have been produced on the hearing before him.

The sixth and seventh assignments are really the important ones in this case, and are the ones on which appellant relies. They are that the court erred in deciding that marriage revokes a will in New Mexico, and that the decree of the trial court in declaring the will not eligible to probate is contrary to law. These points raise a question which is entirely new in our jurisprudence, it never having been passed upon by the supreme court of this territory, and we have therefore considered it with especial care, having carefully examined the authorities presented by the several attorneys who argued the case before us, as well as many others which were not cited in their briefs. It will be remembered that the deceased made her will on July 11, 1900; that in April, 1901, she married Henry F. Kaeufer, appellee herein; and that on June 13, 1902, she died, leaving surviving her husband, but no children. Appellant contends that because this territory has a statute concerning the revocation of wills (Comp. Laws 1897, § 1953), which provides that a will may be revoked by a testator by an instrument in writing, executed and attested in the same manner as is required by law for the execution and attestation of a will, or by making a subsequent valid will, a will can be revoked by no other means. If a person desires to revoke a will theretofore made, the revocation must be made in the manner set out in the statute; but it is idle to claim that wills cannot also be revoked by operation of law. "There are two kinds of revocation of wills,—one by the act of the party, the other by operation of law. This section [referring to the Iowa statute, Code 1851, § 1288] prescribes the manner of revocation of the first character. Wills that have never been revoked by the testator may not be enforced by the law; that is, they will be treated as revoked." Fallon v. Chidester, 46 Iowa, 590, 28 Am. Rep. 164; Beach, Wills, § 62; Garrett v. Dabney, 27 Miss. 335. The point that a will may be revoked by the operation of law is too well settled by the authorities and text-books to need any further citation of authorities.

It is well settled at common law that the marriage of a feme sole revoked her will. Forse and Hemblings Case, 4 Coke, 60b. In the case of a man it was equally well settled that marriage alone did not revoke his will, but that marriage and birth of a child did. 1 Jarman, Wills, 122; Warner v. Beach, 4 Gray, 162. The reason why the common law held that the will of a feme sole was revoked by her marriage was that marriage took away her testamentary capacity and the ambulatory character of her antenuptial will. The reason for this common-law rule is ably discussed in Brown v. Scherrer, 5 Colo. App. 255, 38 Pac. 427. The common-law rule has been changed by statute in most of the states of the Union, so that married persons can now dispose of their property by will, subject only to such limitations as the statutes of the several states impose. By our laws (Laws 1901, chap. 62, § 9, p. 114, and §§ 2033, 1904, Comp. Laws 1897), if a husband or wife die, leaving no will and no children, the survivor shall inherit all of the property of the deceased; and by § 7, chap. 62, p. 113, Laws 1901, all disabilities of coverture are removed, and the wills of both men and women stand on exactly the same footing. The laws of this territory also provide that a will made during coverture is revoked pro tanto to let in children born after it was executed (Laws 1901, chap. 81, § 39, p. 157); and the reason of this is that a new heir has come into existence since the will was executed.

All of the states, so far as we have been able to discover, which hold that the marriage of a woman does not set aside a will made before such marriage, make such holding on the ground that the law amply provides for the survivor; but in those jurisdictions where the husband and wife are heir to each other, in the event of no children being born, the rule is generally held to be that marriage works such a change in the condition and circumstances of the testator as to revoke a will made prior to such marriage. It is presumed that the intent of the testator was that such a will should not take effect upon the happening of such a contingency. We do not think that the mere marriage of a woman would set aside her will, but it is the coming of a new heir; for, under the laws of this territory, by marriage not only does a man or woman get a wife or husband, but also an heir. We think that, under the laws of this territory, by which the surviving spouse is the heir to the other in the event of no children being born of the marriage and no valid will being made during coverture, the common law is so altered that on marriage the antenuptial will of a husband would be set aside, as well as that of his wife, and that both of them are now on the same footing. Marriage and the coming in of an heir to all the property work such a natural change in the testator's condition that it is not to be expected that the devise was made in view of such changed conditions.

The supreme court of Colorado says: "Under the English statute of primogeniture, the lands went to the male heirs in absolute succession, and ordinarily without power on the part of the deviser to change the right of succession. It is thus apparent that, in the acceptance of this rule of the ecclesiastical law, the English common-law judges went to the limit essential to the absolute adoption of the principle. In other words, they certainly decided that, wherever an heir who could inherit land sprung into being, it should be held to revoke the will, since it was not to be presumed that the will was executed in the contemplation of such a changed condition. This broad basis seems not to have been always considered by the American courts when they have attempted to restate and reapply existing law to new and novel conditions. In the conclusion at which we arrive we are not, however, without the support of cases in this country. Garrett v. Dabney, 27 Miss. 335; Tyler v. Tyler, 19 Ill. 151; Morgan v. Ireland, 1 Idaho, 786; vide Tiedeman, Real Prop. § 888; Svan v. Hammond, 138 Mass. 45, 52 Am. Rep. 255." Brown v. Scherrer, 5 Colo. App. 255, 38 Pac. 429. The law of Colorado is very similar to ours, in that it provides that when a person dies intestate, without children, but leaving either husband or wife, the surviving spouse shall inherit the entire property; and they also confer upon married women the right to make wills bequeathing their property; and that state holds that a wife by law is the absolute heir of the husband's estate, so that she is put into precisely the same position that the male heir occupied under the English law of primogeniture, with reference to the inheritance of lands, with the exception that, while the English heir took all of the lands devised, in Colorado the wife holds this position only with reference to half of the estate. Our laws place husband and wife on the same footing as the laws of Colorado.

Both are heirs to each other in the event that they leave no children, or will made during coverture, and even if the deceased leaves a will, such will can only dispose of one half of the acquets or community property. "The English law rests on the firm foundation that the birth of an heir who can inherit lands shall be held operative to destroy a will, because it is not to be conceived that the testator has devised his estate in view of such an extraordinary alteration in his condition. The same principle and the same rule can be urged with like force in our own legislation, as stated by the English cases, and in those which have followed the law which they announce. It is a strained conception to assume that a man who has made a will while unmarried has made it in contemplation of his assumption of the marriage relation. There is no force in the suggestion that, because the woman becomes an heir by virtue of the statute, she does not come within the beneficent provisions of the rule as declared at the common law. It was by the law only that the male heir succeeded to the testator's lands and took his inheritance." Brown v. Scherrer, 5 Colo. App. 255, 38 Pac. 429.

It seems to us that in this territory this reasoning is equally applicable, whether the surviving spouse be a man or woman. By the marriage not only a husband or wife, but a new heir capable of inheriting all of the property, comes into existence; and in accordance with what we think is the spirit and reasoning of the doctrine, and the purpose and meaning of our laws, we hold that the marriage of a testator, whether or not it be followed by the birth of an heir, is operative to revoke any antenuptial will. There being no error in the judgment given by the court below, the same is therefore affirmed.

Parker, McFie, and Pope, JJ., concur.

Baker, J., having tried this case below, and Mann, J., not having heard the argument, did not participate in this decision.

OREGON SUPREME COURT.

P. L. FRAZIER et al., Appts.,
v.
WESTERN UNION TELEGRAPH COMPANY, Respnt.

(.....Or.....)

1. To entitle the sendee to sue for failure promptly to transmit and deliver a telegram, the telegraph company must know, or be chargeable with notice, that the message is for his benefit.
2. A message addressed to a firm who are not known by the telegraph company to be brokers, directing them to see a certain person and take his last offer, does not disclose that it is for the benefit of the addressee, so as to give them a right of action for failure promptly to deliver it, where the telegraph company is not otherwise notified that it is intended for their benefit.

(October 17, 1904.)

A PPEAL by plaintiffs from a judgment of the Circuit Court for Marion County

NOTE.—For other cases in this series as to right of sendee of telegram to maintain action for damages because of mistake therein, or delay or failure to deliver, see Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Adams, 6 L. R. A. 844; International Ocean Teleg. Co. v. Saunders, 21 L. R. A. 810; Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Wood, 21 L. R. A. 706; Mentzer v. Western U. Teleg. Co. 28 L. R. A. 72; Ferferro v. Western U. Teleg. Co. 35 L. R. A. 548; and McPeck v. Western U. Teleg. Co. 43 L. R. A. 214. 67 L. R. A.

in favor of defendant in an action brought to recover for failure promptly to transmit and deliver a telegram. Affirmed.

Statement by Bean, J.:

The plaintiffs are real-estate brokers. Some time prior to February 18, 1903, two farms were listed with them for sale, designated in the record as the "Shepard" and "Schutte" farms, under an agreement with the owners that plaintiffs were to receive $100 commission on the former and $200 on the latter if they effected a sale. About that time they had a customer in the person of one E. P. Weir, who, after examining the property and entering into some negotiations with the owners, started for California, informing the plaintiffs that he would advise them if he concluded to take the property. On reaching Ashland he wrote, signed, and delivered to the agent of the defendant at that place for transmission to the plaintiffs the following despatch:

Ashland, Ore., Feb. 18, '03.

To Frazier & Long,

Salem, Ore.

See Shepard. Take his last offer. Wire me at Frisco.

E. P. Weir.

The message was sent to the agent of the defendant at Salem, who received it about 1:20 in the afternoon of the day it bears date. It was not delivered to the plaintiffs, however, until some five days thereafter, by reason of which delay they claim they have lost their commission on the sale of the property referred to, and therefore bring this action against the company to recover the amount of such commission as damages for its negligence in not promptly delivering the message. The plaintiffs were nonsuited, and appeal.

Messrs. Bonham & Martin, for appellants:

Appellants' claim for damages in this case was not too remote and uncertain.

2 Sedgw. Damages, 8th ed. §§ 881, 882, 891, 892; 1 Sutherland, Damages, 2d ed. § 45; Blagen v. Thompson, 23 Or. 239, 18 L. R. A. 315, 31 Pac. 647; Wisner v. Barber, 10 Or. 342; 5 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, pp. 5-10; Western U. Telegr. Co. v. Scirole, 105 Ind. 227, 2 N. E. 604; Shearm. & Redf. Neg. §§ 739, 740, 745; Chapman v. Western U. Telegr. Co. 90 Ky. 265, 13 S. W. 880; Postal Telegr. Cable Co. v. Lathrop, 131 Ill. 575, 7 L. R. A. 474, 19 Am. St. Rep. 55, 23 N. E. 583; Western U. Telegr. Co. v. Cornwell, 2 Colo. App. 491, 31 Pac. 393; Baldwin v. Western U. Telegr. Co. 93 Ga. 692, 44 Am. St. Rep. 194, 21 S. E. 212.

The law does not require that a telegraph company should be apprised of the details as to the purpose of the message. If the message, as delivered, discloses its importance as a business communication in general terms, that is all that is required of the sender.

Sutherland, Damages, 2d ed. §§ 960, 970; Brooks v. Western U. Telegr. Co. 26 Utah, 147, 72 Pac. 499; 25 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, p. 845.

The question whether a message is on its face such as to disclose the nature of the business and notify the defendant that its prompt delivery is necessary, is purely a question of fact, and should be submitted to the jury.

Pope v. Western U. Telegr. Co. 14 Ill. App. 531; Western U. Telegr. Co. v. McKibben, 114 Ind. 511, 14 N. E. 894.

Messrs. George G. Bingham and C. A. Dolph, for respondent:

There having been no contractual relation between the appellant and respondent, there can be no recovery for a breach of contract.

Postal Telegr. Cable Co. v. Ford, 117 Ala. 672, 23 So. 684; Western U. Telegr. Co. v. Wood, 21 L. R. A. 706, 6 C. C. A. 432, 13 U. S. App. 317, 57 Fed. 471.

Recoverable damages must be certain in their nature, and in respect to the cause from which they proceed.

Wisner v. Barber, 10 Or. 342; Blagen v. 47 L. R. A.

Thompson, 23 Or. 239, 18 L. R. A. 315, 31 Pac. 647.

The damages claimed are too remote. They are not the approximate consequence of the nondelivery of the message.

Beatty Lumber Co. v. Western U. Telegr. Co. 52 W. Va. 410, 44 S. E. 309; Postal Telegr. Cable Co. v. Barwise, 11 Colo. App. 328, 53 Pac. 252; Western U. Telegr. Co. v. Cooper, 71 Tex. 507, 1 L. R. A. 728, 10 Am. St. Rep. 772, 9 S. W. 598.

Where the company is to be held for more than nominal damages, it should have notice from the face of the message, or otherwise, of its importance.

Postal Telegr. Cable Co. v. Barwise, 11 Colo. App. 328, 53 Pac. 252; Gulf, O. & N. F. R. Co. v. Loonie, 82 Tex. 323, 27 Am. St. Rep. 891, 18 S. W. 221.

Beam, J., delivered the opinion of the court:

Several questions were discussed at the argument, but it is only necessary to notice the contention that the plaintiffs are not entitled to maintain an action against the defendant for negligence in delivering the message addressed to them, because they were not parties or privies to the contract between Weir and the company for its transmission, nor was the company advised by the terms of the message or otherwise that they were the parties for whose benefit such contract was made.

In England the doctrine is settled that the addressee of a telegraphic message cannot sue the company for error or negligence in its transmission or delivery, because the obligation of the company springs entirely from the contract between it and the sender, and the addressee is not a party or privy thereto. Playford v. United Kingdom Electric Telegr. Co. L. R. 4 Q. B. 706. This doctrine, however, does not prevail generally in this country, and the weight of authority is that the addressee of a message may sue the telegraph company in his own name, and recover such damages as he may have sustained by reason of its negligence, when the message was intended for his benefit, and the company had knowledge of that fact. 2 Shearm. & Redf. Neg. 5th ed. § 543; Gray, Communication by Telegraph, § 65; Thompson, Electricity, § 427; Joyce, Electric Law, § 1008; 21 Enc. Pl. & Pr. p. 509. A telegraph company is not a common carrier in the sense that it is an insurer against mistakes in the transmission of messages or delay in their prompt delivery, but it is an instrument of commerce and a public-service corporation. It therefore owes the duty to those for whose benefit it undertakes to transmit and deliver messages to transmit and deliver them without unreasonable delay. For a violation of this duty, or for a negligent performance thereof, it is responsible to the party for whose benefit the contract was made, whether it be the sender or the addressee. 27 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, 2d ed. p. 1024; Thompson, Electricity, § 427; Postal Teleg. Cable Co. v. Barwise, 11 Colo. App. 328, 53 Pac. 252; Webbe v. Western U. Teleg. Co. 169 Ill. 610, 61 Am. St. Rep. 207, 48 N. E. 670; McPeck v. Western U. Teleg. Co. 107 Iowa, 356, 43 L. R. A. 214, 70 Am. St. Rep. 205, 78 N. W. 63. But the right of an addressee to recover is necessarily grounded upon the contract between the company and the sender, whether the action be in form technically for a breach of contract or one sounding in tort. Without the contract under which the message was forwarded as a foundation for the cause of action, no recovery whatever could be had. In order for the addressee to sue, it is essential, therefore, that it appear that he was to be benefited by the contract for sending the message, and that fact was known to the company when it received the message for transmission, either from its language or otherwise. The addressee can maintain an action only on the theory that he was the party intended to be benefited by the contract between the sender and the company, and that he is injured by a failure to perform such contract. Messrs. Shearman & Redfield say that the right of an addressee of a telegraphic message to sue for the negligence of the company, either in its transmission or delivery, rests on the principle that, where two persons make a contract for the benefit of a third person, such third person may sue upon it. 2 Shearm. & Redf. Neg. 5th ed. § 543. Under this doctrine the right of an addressee to sue does not exist unless the sender of the message and the company, at the time the contract for its transmission was made, understood that it was for the benefit of such person. Mr. Gray, in his work on Communication by Telegraph, says: "It may be hazarded that the right of the person to whom a message is directed to sue as beneficiary for a breach of the contract to communicate that message—a contract to which he is not a party—will, where it is admitted at all, be restricted to the comparatively small class of cases in which the person who employs a telegraph company to communicate a message does so solely to benefit the person to whom the message is directed; for, where the person who employs a telegraph company to communicate a message does so to benefit himself, there is no ground for the interpretation that he intends to part with his right of action for a breach of the contract." Gray, Communication by Telegraph, § 67. Mr. Crosswell says: "To give 67 L. R. A.

the addressee the benefit of this rule, it must appear, either from the language of the message, or the circumstances under which it is sent, and which are known to the telegraph company, that the message is sent for the benefit of the addressee." Crosswell, Electricity, § 457. The supreme court of Texas (Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Adams, 75 Tex. 531, 6 L. R. A. 844, 16 Am. St. Rep. 920, 12 S. W. 857), in discussing this question says: "We think the question as to who may maintain a suit for damages for the breach of contract does not depend upon the payment of the fee, nor upon the question whether the sender had been previously constituted an agent for that purpose by the party to whom the despatch is sent, but who in fact was to be served, and who is damaged. If it was intended to serve the receiver, and he accepts the act, we are unable to see why the telegraph company should be excused from the consequences of its neglect to discharge its own duty by reason, alone, of its ignorance of the relations that may exist between the sender and the receiver of the message. In Western U. Teleg. Co. v. Wood, 21 L. R. A. 706, 6 C. C. A. 432, 13 U. S. App. 317, 57 Fed. 471, and Butner v. Western U. Teleg. Co. 2 Okla. 234, 4 Inters. Com. Rep. 770, 37 Pac. 1087, it is held that a person to whom a telegraphic message is directed cannot recover against the company for a failure to deliver when he is not a party to the contract under which it was sent, and when the company is not informed, either by the terms of the message or otherwise, that the contract was for his benefit. The liability of a telegraph company for damages resulting from error in the transmission or failure to deliver a message promptly is limited to such as may fairly be considered according to the usual course of things to have arisen from the breach of the contract actually made between it and the sender, and which both parties must reasonably have understood and contemplated, when making the contract, would be likely to result from its breach. It is accordingly quite generally held that, in an action for a failure to transmit correctly or deliver promptly a cipher or unintelligible despatch, when the company is not informed of its nature, or the importance or extent of the business to which it relates, the measure of damages is merely the sum paid for sending it. 27 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, 2d ed. p. 1062; Primrose v. Western U. Teleg. Co. 154 U. S. 1, 38 L. ed. 883, 14 Sup. Ct. Rep. 1098. This is on the theory that the measure of the company's responsibility depends upon the nature and character of the contract, its knowledge of special circumstances and of the purpose of the despatch which it agrees to transmit and deliver. In a word, the measure of its responsibility is determined by the contract which it makes with the sender of the message. Now, if the proper criterion by which to determine the measure of responsibility of the company in the matter of damages is the contract between it and the sender, it would seem clear that, upon the same principle, the person or persons to whom it is to be liable must be ascertained from the same source, and that it is liable only to such persons as it may have expressly agreed to serve, or who are the beneficiaries of the contract made with it; and such we believe to be the decisions.

An exhaustive examination of the cases holding that the addressee of a telegraphic message may sue the company for negligence discloses that in all of them the company knew or was chargeable with knowledge that the message was for his benefit. No case has come under our observation where the addressee was permitted to sue under any other circumstances. On the contrary, those already cited show that he has been denied relief where the contract was not for his benefit. In the present case the message sent by Weir to the plaintiffs does not disclose that they were the parties intended to be benefited by the contract between him and the company for its transmission and delivery, or that they had any interest whatever in the subject-matter, nor was the company otherwise advised of that fact. The message is a mere direction to Weir to the plaintiffs to perform some act for him, and the company could not have understood from it that it was intended for the benefit of the plaintiffs, or that they would be injured by its nondelivery. If the message had been directed to them as real-estate brokers, or if the company, at the time it received and agreed to transmit it, knew that they were engaged in that business, or if the message had simply advised them that Weir would take the Shepard farm at the price named, without more, the facts might possibly bring the case within the doctrine of some of the decisions holding that an addressee may sue the company for negligence in not delivering a message. The message in question, however, is not of that character. It indicates on its face that it was sent for the benefit of Weir, and therefore it cannot be held that the contract between Weir and the company for its transmission was made for the benefit of the plaintiffs.

The judgment will be affirmed.

RHODE ISLAND SUPREME COURT.

STATE of Rhode Island

v.

Charles J. QUIGLEY.

(.....R. I.....)

1. The exclusion of general evidence as to the past life of one accused of murder and the condition of his father, offered as a foundation for the inference that he was suffering from delirium tremens at the time of the homicide, is not error if evidence is subsequently admitted showing his condition and habits within a reasonable time of the commission of the crime.
2. One on trial for the commission of a crime cannot require the judge to single out for particular comment in its instructions to the jury certain facts or evidence to which his attention is called.
3. The burden of proving insanity as a defense to a criminal prosecution is upon the accused; and it is not sufficient merely to raise a reasonable doubt as to sanity, but the evidence upon that point must preponderate in his favor, or be sufficient to satisfy the jury of the fact.

NOTE.—For presumption and burden of proof as to sanity or insanity of accused person, see also State v. Scott, 38 L. R. A. 721, and note; Ryder v. State, 38 L. R. A. 721; and Maas v. Oklahoma, 53 L. R. A. 814.
67 L. R. A.

4. A new trial cannot be granted in a criminal case for newly discovered evidence to rebut the testimony of one of the state's medical witnesses, who testified that he vaccinated accused and observed his condition on a certain day, by showing that the witness was mistaken, where the accused and his counsel knew before the trial ended that there was no evidence of recent vaccination of the accused, and had access to the prison records to determine the medical treatment of him.

(March 21, 1904.)

APPPLICATION by defendant for a new trial after being convicted of murder.
Denied.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Messrs. Thomas F. Cooney, James A. Cahill, and James H. Higgins, for defendant:

The accused in a criminal prosecution, who alleges insanity from alcoholism as a defense, is entitled to have all the facts and circumstances bearing upon the condition of his mind fairly submitted to the jury, which must determine as to his responsibility.

2 Clevenger, Med. Jur. p. 715; 6 Lawson, Criminal Defenses, 630.

Delirium tremens is insanity.

3 Rice, Crim. Ev. p. 666, (b).

Evidence of hereditary insanity in the father of this defendant was admissible.

16 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, 2d ed. p. 613; 3 Bucknill & T. Psychological Medicine, p. 14, cited in 3 Witthaus & Becker, Med. Jur. pp. 208, 209; 1 Clevenger, Med. Jur. p. 526, § 11; State v. Windsor, 5 Harr. (Del.) 512; Bradley v. State, 31 Ind. 402; State v. Felter, 25 Iowa, 67; Basster v. Abbott, 7 Gray, 71; Prentiss v. Bates, 93 Mich. 234, 17 L. R. A. 494, 53 N. W. 153; 2 Hamilton, Legal Medicine, p. 57; People v. Garbutt, 17 Mich. 9, 97 Am. Dec. 162; Smith v. Kramer, 1 Am. Law Reg. 353; Com. v. Andrews, Wharton & Stille, Med. Jur. § 375; Com. v. Rogers, 7 Met. 500, 41 Am. Dec. 458; Cole's Trial, 7 Abb. Pr. N. S. 330; Buswell, Insanity, p. 249, § 235; 1 Crim. Law Mag. p. 446; Jones v. People, 23 Colo. 276, 47 Pac. 275; Porter v. State, 135 Ala. 51, 33 So. 694; Murphy v. Com. 92 Ky. 485, 18 S. W. 163; Kniloch's Trial, 25 How. St. Tr. 891-997.

When the proof in a criminal case is equal, the scale is turned not against the defendant by the presumption of sanity, but is turned in his favor by the presumption of innocence. The presumption of innocence is regarded as perhaps the most powerful in the law relating to presumptions.

Best, Ev. Chamberlayne's ed. p. 334; Rea v. Twynning, 2 Barn. & Ald. 386; McArthur v. State, 59 Ark. 431, 27 S. W. 628; State v. McDaniel, 84 N. C. 803; State ex rel. Phelan v. Walsh, 62 Conn. 260, 17 L. R. A. 364, 25 Atl. 1; 22 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, 2d ed. p. 1236; Persons v. State, 90 Tenn. 291, 16 S. W. 726; State v. Lee, 69 Conn. 186, 37 Atl. 75.

Where the presumptions are of equal weight they, of course, neutralize each other.

22 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, 2d ed. p. 1237.

The essential elements must be proved beyond all reasonable doubt by the government. This includes the fact of sanity, and the party whose duty it is to prove that fact must introduce positive and express evidence showing the fact to exist.

Foster v. Berry, 14 R. I. 601; Com. v. Bradford, 9 Met. 268; Atlas Bank v. Doyle, 9 R. I. 76, 11 Am. Rep. 219, 98 Am. Dec. 368; State v. Beswick, 13 R. I. 211, 43 Am. Rep. 26; Cooley, Const. Lim. § 355; Dove v. State, 3 Heisk. 348; Davis v. United States, 160 U. S. 469, 40 L. ed. 499, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 353.

There can be no criminal intent when the mental condition of the party accused is such that he is incapable of forming one.

People v. Garbutt, 17 Mich. 9, 97 Am. Dec. 162.

The prosecution takes upon itself the burden of establishing, not only the killing, but also the malicious intent in every case. The defense of insanity denies positively the capacity to have any malice in its legal sense.

Sanity is an essential part of the case of the state. If there is a reasonable doubt of sanity on the proof offered, the jury must bring in a verdict of not guilty.

State v. Schweitzer, 57 Conn. 532, 6 L. R. A. 125, 18 Atl. 787; Walker v. People, 88 N. Y. 81; Brotherton v. People, 75 N. Y. 159; People v. Nino, 149 N. Y. 317, 43 N. E. 853; Com. v. York, 9 Met. 93, 43 Am. Dec. 373; Com. v. Heath, 11 Gray, 303; Com. v. Pomeroy, 117 Mass. 143; Wharton, Homicide, 2d ed. p. 753; Ortwein v. Com. 76 Pa. 414, 18 Am. Rep. 420; Com. v. Wireback, 190 Pa. 138, 70 Am. St. Rep. 625, 42 Atl. 542; Scott v. Wood, 81 Cal. 398, 22 Pac. 871; People v. Bushon, 80 Cal. 160, 22 Pac. 127, 549; People v. Travers, 88 Cal. 233, 26 Pac. 88.

An insane person is irresponsible for crime of any sort or degree.

16 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, 2d ed. p. 622. 2 Thompson, Trials, pp. 1878, 1879, § 2524; Clark, Crim. Proc. pp. 540, 541.

Evidence of insanity sufficient to cause irresponsibility requires an acquittal, and cannot have the effect of reducing the decree of murder.

16 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, 2d ed. p. 621; Com. v. Hollinger, 190 Pa. 155, 42 Atl. 548; Com. v. Wireback, 190 Pa. 138, 70 Am. St. Rep. 625, 42 Atl. 542; Burt v. State, 38 Tex. Crim. Rep. 438, 39 L. R. A. 305, 330, 40 S. W. 1000, 43 S. W. 344; Davis v. United States, 160 U. S. 469, 40 L. ed. 499, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 353; Hotema v. United States, 186 U. S. 413, 46 L. ed. 1225, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 895; State v. Bartlett, 43 N. H. 224, 80 Am. Dec. 154; People v. McCann, 16 N. Y. 69, 69 Am. Dec. 642; Com. v. York, 9 Met. 93, 43 Am. Dec. 373; Com. v. Pomeroy, 117 Mass. 143; Wharton, Homicide, 2d ed. 753, Appx. et seq.; People v. Garbutt, 17 Mich. 9, 97 Am. Dec. 162; State v. Crawford, 11 Kan. 32; State v. Lee, 69 Conn. 200, 37 Atl. 75.

A reasonable doubt of a person's sanity is sufficient to prevent a conviction.

1 Bennett & H. Lead. Crim. Cas. pp. 295, 299, 302, 304, 306; Davis v. United States, 160 U. S. 469, 40 L. ed. 499, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 353; Hotema v. United States, 186 U. S. 413, 46 L. ed. 1225, 22 Sup. Ct. Rep. 895; Guiteau's Case, 10 Fed. 161; Thayer, Cases on Ev. p. 48, note 3; Best, Ev. Chamberlayne's ed. part 2, p. 301, note B; Bishop, New Crim. Law, chap. 26, pp. 162, 287; 3 Greenl. Ev. 15th ed. p. 9, note 3; McKelvey, Ev. pp. 79, 80, § 50; 1 McClain, Crim. Law, pp. 139, 174, 175.

If the prisoner was insane he was not an accountable being.

State v. Marler, 2 Ala. 43, 36 Am. Dec. 398; Ogletree v. State, 28 Ala. 693; Boswell

v. State, 63 Ala. 307, 35 Am. Rep. 20; Perry v. State, 87 Ala. 30, 6 So. 425; Maxwell v. State, 89 Ala. 150, 7 So. 824; Ward v. State, 96 Ala. 100, 11 So. 217; Burger v. State, 83 Ala. 36, 3 So. 319; Pate v. State, 94 Ala. 14, 10 So. 665; Albritton v. State, 94 Ala. 76, 10 So. 426; Pellum v. State, 89 Ala. 28, 8 So. 83; Oasat v. State, 40 Ark. 511; Blankenship v. State, 55 Ark. 244, 18 S. W. 54; Hill v. People, 1 Colo. 436; Kelly v. People, 17 Colo. 130, 29 Pac. 805; Kent v. People, 8 Colo. 563, 9 Pac. 852; Jones v. People, 23 Colo. 276, 47 Pac. 275; State v. Johnson, 40 Conn. 136; Pease v. Cole, 53 Conn. 53, 55 Am. Rep. 53, 22 Atl. 681; State v. Lee, 69 Conn. 186, 37 Atl. 79; State v. Schwoetzer, 57 Conn. 532, 6 L. R. A. 125, 18 Atl. 787; State v. Reidell, 9 Houst. (Del.) 470, 14 Atl. 550; State v. Kavanaugh (Del.) 53 Atl. 335; State v. Taylor, Houst. Crim. Rep. (Del.) 454; Hodge v. State, 26 Fla. 11, 7 So. 593; Armstrong v. State, 30 Fla. 170, 17 L. R. A. 484, 11 So. 618; Davis v. State, 44 Fla. 32, 32 So. 822; Long v. State, 38 Ga. 491; Ryder v. State, 100 Ga. 528, 38 L. R. A. 721, 62 Am. St. Rep. 334, 28 S. E. 246; People v. Walter, 1 Idaho. 386; State v. Hamilton, 57 Iowa. 596, 11 N. W. 5; Hopps v. People, 31 Ill. 385, 83 Am. Dec. 231; Chase v. People, 40 Ill. 353; Langdon v. People, 133 Ill. 382, 24 N. E. 874; Dunn v. People, 109 Ill. 635; Dacey v. People, 116 Ill. 555, 6 N. E. 165; Montag v. People, 141 Ill. 75, 30 N. E. 337; Lilly v. People, 148 Ill. 467, 36 N. E. 95; Guetig v. State, 66 Ind. 94, 32 Am. Rep. 99; Grubb v. State, 117 Ind. 277, 20 N. E. 257, 725; Plummer v. State, 135 Ind. 308, 34 N. E. 968; Stevens v. State, 31 Ind. 491, 99 Am. Dec. 634; Plake v. State, 121 Ind. 433, 16 Am. St. Rep. 408, 23 N. E. 273; State v. Crawford, 11 Kan. 32; State v. Elliott, 10 Kan. App. 69, 61 Pac. 981; State v. Grinstead, 10 Kan. App. 74, 61 Pac. 976; State v. Mahn, 25 Kan. 182; State v. Nixon, 32 Kan. 205, 4 Pac. 159; State v. Hendricks, 32 Kan. 559, 4 Pac. 1050; State v. Mowry, 37 Kan. 369, 15 Pac. 282; State v. Yarroworough, 39 Kan. 581, 18 Pac. 474; State v. Gould, 40 Kan. 258, 19 Pac. 739; Graham v. Com. 16 B. Mon. 587; Parris v. Com. 14 Bush, 369; State v. Lawrence, 57 Me. 574; State v. McDonald, 65 Me. 465; Small v. Clewley, 62 Me. 155, 16 Am. Rep. 40; Bourne v. Ward, 51 Me. 191; Woodcock v. Calais, 68 Me. 244; Tarbox v. Eastern S. B. Co. 50 Me. 345; Market & F. Nat. Bank v. Sargent, 85 Me. 349, 35 Am. St. Rep. 376, 27 Atl. 192; Frechette v. Goulet, 8 Can. S. C. 169; Hamilton v. Davis, 2 U. C. Q. B. 137; 1 Greenl. Ev. 15th ed. p. 78; Baltimore & R. Co. v. Shipley, 39 Md. 251; Jones v. Jones, 48 Md. 391, 30 Am. Rep. 466; Spencer v. State, 69 Md. 28, 13 Atl. 809; Com. v. McKie, 1 Gray, 61, 61 Am. Dec. 410; Com. v. Eddy, 7 Gray, 583; Com. v. Rogers, 7 Met. 500, 41 Am. Dec. 458; Com. v. York, 9 Met. 125, 43 Am. Dec. 373; Com. v. Heath, 11 Gray, 303; Com. v. Tukey, 8 Cush. 1; Jaquith v. Rogers, 179 Mass. 192, 60 N. E. 486; Powers v. Russell, 13 Pick. 69; Delano v. Bartlett, 6 Cush. 364; Central Bridge Corp. v. Butler, 2 Gray, 130; Nichols v. Munsel, 115 Mass. 567; Willett v. Rich, 142 Mass. 356, 56 Am. Rep. 684, 7 N. E. 776; Broult v. Hanson, 158 Mass. 17, 32 N. E. 900; Com. v. Lahy, 8 Gray, 460; Com. v. Kimball, 24 Pick. 366; Wilder v. Cowles, 100 Mass. 487; Crowninshield v. Crowninshield, 2 Gray, 529; Griffin v. Boston & A. R. Co. 148 Mass. 143, 1 L. R. A. 608, 12 Am. St. Rep. 526, 19 N. E. 166; Maher v. People, 10 Mich. 212, 81 Am. Dec. 781; People v. Garbutt, 17 Mich. 9, 97 Am. Dec. 162; State v. Howell, 100 Mo. 628, 14 S. W. 4; Wright v. People, 4 Neb. 407; Ballard v. State, 19 Neb. 609, 28 N. W. 271; Snider v. State, 56 Neb. 309, 76 N. W. 574; Knights v. State, 58 Neb. 225, 76 Am. St. Rep. 78, 78 N. W. 508; State v. Lewis, 20 Nev. 333, 22 Pac. 241; State v. McCluer, 5 Nev. 132; State v. Bartlett, 43 N. H. 224, 80 Am. Dec. 154; State v. Spencer, 21 N. J. L. 196; Graves v. State, 45 N. J. L. 203; People v. McCann, 16 N. Y. 58, 69 Am. Dec. 642; Brotherton v. People, 75 N. Y. 159; People v. Nino, 149 N. Y. 317, 43 N. E. 853; Walker v. People, 88 N. Y. 8; O'Connell v. People, 87 N. Y. 377, 41 Am. Rep. 379; People v. Riordan, 117 N. Y. 71, 22 N. E. 455; People v. Downs, 123 N. Y. 558, 25 N. E. 988; State v. Vann, 82 N. C. 631; State v. Davis, 109 N. C. 780, 14 S. E. 55; State v. Starling, 51 N. C. (6 Jones, L.) 366; Faulkner v. Territory, 6 N. M. 465, 30 Pac. 905; Loeffner v. State, 10 Ohio St. 598; Judge v. Narragansett Electric Lighting Co. 21 R. I. 128, 42 Atl. 507; Cassidy v. Angell, 12 R. I. 447, 34 Am. Rep. 690; State v. Yokum, 11 S. D. 544, 79 N. W. 835; Dove v. State, 3 Heisk. 348; Stuart v. State, 1 Baxt. 178; King v. State, 91 Tenn. 619, 20 S. W. 169; United States v. Sickles, 2 Hayw. & H. 319; People v. Tracy, 1 Utah, 343; State v. Meyer, 58 Vt. 457, 3 Atl. 195; State v. Cross, 42 W. Va. 253, 24 S. E. 996; Revoir v. State, 82 Wis. 295, 52 N. W. 84; Gustavson v. State, 10 Wyo. 300, 68 Pac. 1006.

Mr. Charles F. Stearns, Attorney General, for the State.

Douglas, J., delivered the opinion of the court:

The defendant, on January 30, 1903, was found guilty of the murder of Abraham A. Camac, October 4, 1902. He now prays for a new trial, alleging: (1) That the verdict is against the law; (2) that the verdict is against the evidence; (3) that the presiding justice erred in excluding certain testimony offered by the defendant; (4) that the presiding justice erred in his instructions to the jury; (5) that the presiding justice erred in refusing to instruct the jury as requested by the defendant; (6) that he has discovered new and material evidence, which could not, by the exercise of due and reasonable diligence on his part, have been procured for use at the first trial.

The verdict, in our judgment, is right in law and fact. The undisputed facts are that the defendant had known one Ellen L. Howard for thirteen or fourteen years, and had become engaged to marry her; that on September 25, 1902, she was married to Abraham A. Camac; that Quigley was informed of this by letter from Mrs. Howard, Mrs. Camac's mother; that within a day or two after he received this letter he went from Canton, Massachusetts, where he lived, to Pawtucket, as he himself said, to kill the man who had married his girl. He arrived at Pawtucket Wednesday or Thursday, October 1st or 2d, and bought a revolver on Friday, October 3d. While under the influence of liquor he showed the revolver to the bartender in Rock's saloon; told him that he came from Massachusetts; that he was stopping at Rumford, and that there was a man and woman there whom he was going to shoot. In the evening of Friday, the 3d, he was discovered in the back yard of Camac's house. The barking of the dog attracted the attention of the people in the house, some of whom went to the door, and, in response to his request to see Abraham Camac, Abraham, with others, went out to see him. Quigley heard Mrs. Camac's voice in the doorway, and reproached her for marrying. Camac told Quigley that he had seen a letter in which Quigley had threatened to blow out his (Camac's) brains if he ever saw him. After some further conversation Quigley said he wished Mr. and Mrs. Camac good luck, and left the place. The next afternoon (Saturday) Quigley went to Rock's saloon, and after he had been there a short time Camac entered the saloon. At 10 minutes past 2 Quigley went out of the side room in which he was sitting, followed Camac to the bar, and without the exchange of any words fired three shots at Camac, wounding him in the left hip and also in the back. Camac died the next morning of these wounds. After the shooting Quigley left the saloon, and ran slowly towards the center of the city, and within a short time thereafter he was arrested. When the officer arrested him he said he was going to give himself up. All the witnesses agreed that Quigley was sober at the 67 L. R. A. time of the shooting. The testimony also showed that Quigley was a man who was accustomed to steady drinking. After his arrest Quigley told Officer Flynn, who arrested him, that he was sorry that he did not shoot both Camac and the girl, that he shot Camac because he had married the girl, and that he had bought the revolver a few days before the shooting. Flynn testified that Quigley was sober at the time he arrested him, and that he was calm and cool. Thomas F. Vance, a lawyer, and the coroner of Pawtucket, saw Quigley at half past 3 that afternoon, and was with him for an hour or more. Mr. Vance testified that Quigley appeared to be all right, that he looked pale, and that he had apparently been drinking a very limited number of glasses of beer. The same afternoon Quigley was taken to Camac's house, and confronted with him. He was very reluctant to go until he was told that the police would protect him. While he was there Camac's father attempted to assault him, and he was thoroughly frightened, and his alarm continued until he was away from the house. Camac, realizing that he was mortally wounded, fully identified Quigley as the person who had shot him. While on the street between the Camac house and the police station, Quigley's picture was taken by a newspaper man, and he told Mr. Vance that he supposed his picture would be in the Journal and Bulletin, and said something about being the boy murderer. Captain Vananda, of the Pawtucket police, saw Quigley soon after the shooting. He testified that he was very nervous, but that he was quite sober; that he guessed the man had been drinking. At the station Quigley wanted to tell his story to the officer, and told the officer that if he knew the story—the other side of it—that he would not blame him (i. e., Quigley). Chief of police Rice saw Quigley about 3 p. m. on October 4th, Saturday, and Quigley said to him that he shot Camac because he married the girl he was going with. Rice testified that Quigley looked pale, but that he could not say that he was under the influence of liquor. He looked like a man who had been on a drunk, but he showed no indications of delirium tremens then; that he remained in the station until Monday morning, and while there showed no indication of delirium tremens to nonprofessional observers. None of these facts were controverted.

The accused, through his counsel, sets up the defense of insanity of a temporary character, to wit, delirium tremens; alleging that this incapacity existed at the time of the homicide, but had passed away soon after. There was no pretense that the accused had ever suffered from anything in the nature of permanent aberration of mind. To support this defense several witnesses appeared, who had known the accused from one to twelve years, and their testimony was to the effect that the accused was accustomed to drink to excess, and on some occasions had shown symptoms which to them indicated delirium tremens. One medical expert—Dr. Ford—made examinations of the accused at various times, at the request of his counsel, and declared it to be his opinion that the accused had delirium tremens or alcoholic insanity on October 4th in an aborted form. He first examined Quigley on Sunday evening, October 5th, and thinks he was then suffering from delusions of persecution. He did not have the typical symptoms of delirium tremens. When asked, "What kind of symptoms did he suffer from?" he answered, "I think they were aborted." He judged from circumstances that the delusions had lasted a week. In cross-examination it appeared that the doctor thought the accused was suffering from a delusion because the accused told him that he was afraid Mr. Camac might shoot him, and he likewise thought this delusion had lasted a week because Quigley told him so. In describing Quigley's disease, he says, "I think it more on the type of abortive delirium tremens than it was of the typical kind." He says, further: "There was no delirium, as far as I could find out. I have no reason to believe that he had active hallucinations and delusions." The state, in rebuttal, called, amongst other witnesses, Dr. Keene, who is in charge of the State Insane Asylum, who explained that the symptoms of true delirium tremens are visible and apparent to an ordinary, unprofessional observer, consisting of physical tremor and mental hallucinations which the patient cannot help giving evidence of. Omitting all other evidence for the state on that issue, we see no ground upon which the jury could have founded even a reasonable doubt that the homicide was the deliberate premeditated act of the accused, and that in committing it he possessed and exhibited intelligence and malice. As the jury had heard the evidence which described the attempt of Mr. Camac, the father, to seize a gun for the purpose of shooting Quigley when he was brought to his house to see Camac, the son, as he lay dying, they were quite justified in attributing the fear of Camac, which the accused showed in the presence of the doctor, to a rational appreciation of the situation, and in considering his emotion as the remorse which a sane person would feel after the commission of a heinous crime. Indeed, it is not now urged by the counsel for the accused that the verdict was against the evidence under 67 L. R. A.

the law as charged by the court. The only exception to the rejection of evidence offered by the accused was taken because the court would not permit him to introduce testimony covering the whole of the defendant's previous life, and also to show the condition of his father, as a foundation for an inference that the defendant had delirium tremens at the time of the homicide. The precise question to which objection was sustained was addressed to a witness who said he had known Quigley about eighteen years, and was: "Now, will you kindly tell the jury, in your own way, just what sort of man in Canton Mr. Quigley appeared to be?" In support of the inquiry defendant's counsel referred to Shailer v. Bumstead, 99 Mass. 112, where the court says: "If, therefore, the statement or declaration offered has a tendency to prove a condition not in its nature temporary and transient, then . . . [it] is admissible. Its weight will depend upon its significance and proximity." The court, after considerable discussion, said that "evidence that the accused suffered from delirium tremens ten or fifteen years ago or somebody in his family suffered in that way," was too remote; and again referring to the fact, as shown by authorities submitted by defendant's counsel, that delirium tremens is a temporary and transient condition, the court said: "You may show what his condition was, or anything not too remote; anything, say, close to this time about his drinking, his habits, and whether he had recently been in the habit of doing it, and then his leaving Canton and coming here; and all that you may show for the purpose of convincing those twelve men there of the mental condition of this man, and as to whether or not he did know or didn't know what he was doing at the time he did it; and further than that, of course, I cannot see my way at present, but you can save that point if you desire. Mr. Cooney: Under the circumstances, I desire to save that point if you will permit. (Exception noted by Mr. Cooney.)" It would be sufficient to say of this exception in a civil case that it could not be entertained because it does not apply to any specific testimony or raise any specific question of law; and in this case, if we consider the question which was attempted to be raised, we cannot sustain the exception. The court, in effect, told the counsel that he must keep within reasonable limits in proving past conditions as a basis of inference with regard to the present. The evidence which was afterwards offered on this point and admitted was all that could have been reasonably considered as bearing even remotely upon the question. Witnesses were allowed to testify to Quigley's condition and habits for periods of from one to twelve years, and his father's habits were detailed also without objection. This exception is untenable.

The objection to the charge and the exceptions taken to the refusal of the court to charge as requested by counsel for the accused raised two questions. The fifth, sixth, and seventh requests were that the presiding justice should call the attention of the jury particularly to certain portions of the testimony, and should suggest to them certain inferences of fact to be drawn from them. While our statute (Gen. Laws 1896, chap. 223, § 13) gives the judge who is presiding at a jury trial great latitude in his comments on the evidence, only requiring that he shall not materially misstate it, it does not impose upon him as a duty anything more than to give instruction in the law. It must be left to the discretion of the judge in every case to discuss the evidence and analyze it as bearing upon the issues of fact which the jury are to determine, or to confine himself only to a statement of the legal propositions which are applicable to those issues, leaving the jury to find the facts and apply these principles for themselves. Some cases require one mode of treatment and others the other. But it can never be insisted by a party that a certain class of facts or evidence should be singled out by the judge for particular comment, as was here requested, and the court very properly refused to do as it was asked. The jury had already been told by the judge that they were to consider and weigh all the evidence in the case, and that was all that the accused or the state was entitled to demand.

The second request, so far as it involved a question of law, had already been charged.

The other question is of greater importance, and requires very careful consideration. The court charged that upon the issue of insanity the burden of proof is upon the accused, and that the rule of evidence upon this issue is that it shall be proved by a fair preponderance of evidence. The first, third, and fourth requests, which were refused, were based upon the proposition that upon the question of sanity or insanity of the accused the burden is upon the state to prove sanity beyond a reasonable doubt. The question was settled in England in 1843 by the answer of the judges to questions propounded by the House of Lords, suggested by the Case of Daniel M'Naghten, reported in 10 Clark & F. 200. In that case the law was said to be that, if the accused was conscious that the act was one which he ought not to do, and if the act was at the same time contrary to law, he is punishable. In all cases of this kind the jurors ought to be told that every man is presumed to be sane, and to possess a sufficient degree of reason to be responsible for his crime, until the contrary be proved to their satisfaction; and that to establish a defense on the ground of insanity it must be clearly proved that at the time of committing the act the party was laboring under such a defect of reason from disease of the mind as not to know the nature and quality of the act he was doing, or as not to know that what he was doing was wrong. We are not now concerned with the definition of insanity here given, which has been criticised as not entirely accurate. In the case at bar the rule of evidence only is at issue. The question has arisen in almost every state of the Union and in the courts of the United States, and between the decisions of these courts there is a hopeless conflict. The decisions up to 1882 were collected in an article by Henry Wade Rogers in the Central Law Journal, vol. 14, p. 2. The writer cites, as supporting the view that the burden is upon the accused, the courts of Alabama, Arkansas, California, Connecticut, Delaware, Georgia, Iowa, Kentucky, Maine, Massachusetts, Minnesota, Missouri, New Jersey, North Carolina, Ohio, Pennsylvania, Tennessee, Texas, and Virginia. To the contrary are cited Illinois, Indiana, Kansas, Michigan, Mississippi, and New Hampshire, while New York is called uncertain. From the report of the trial of Henry K. Goodwin, published in 1887 by the attorney general of Massachusetts, by authority of law, it appears that the courts of that state have abandoned the English rule. Judge Allen, who presided, distinctly charged the jury that if, upon the whole evidence, they had a reasonable doubt of the defendant's sanity, they should acquit him. Georgia has also changed its view. Ryder v. State, 100 Ga. 528, 38 L. R. A. 721, 62 Am. St. Rep. 334, 28 S. E. 246; Maryland (Spencer v. State, 69 Md. 28, 13 Atl. 809) and New Mexico (Faulkner v. Territory, 6 N. M. 465, 30 Pac. 905), where the question has come up for the first time, have adopted the same rule. To the supporters of the English rule named above may be added Nevada (State v. Lewis, 20 Nev. 333, 22 Pac. 241); South Dakota (State v. Yokum, 11 S. D. 544, 79 N. W. 835); and Utah (People v. Dillon, 8 Utah, 92, 30 Pac. 150). The case of State v. Scott, 49 La. Ann. 253, 36 L. R. A. 721, 21 So. 271, reviews the law up to that date, and adopts the English rule. The notes to this case present fully all the American cases to that time, and justify the conclusion of the court that the great weight of authority, including both decisions of courts and conclusions of the text writers, supports its decision.

Perhaps the most weighty authority to the contrary is Davis v. United States, 160 U. S. 469, 40 L. ed. 499, 16 Sup. Ct. Rep. 353, which adopts the view apparently originated by Mr. Bishop (2 Bishop, Crim. Proc. § 673), where it is thus stated: "To the writer of these volumes the true doctrine seems to be the following: 'Sanity,' as observed by a learned judge (Wright, J., in Walter v. People, 32 N. Y. 147, 164), 'is presumed to be the normal state of the human mind, and it is never incumbent upon the prosecutor to give affirmative evidence that such state exists in a particular case.' But suppose this normal state is denied to have existed in the particular instance. Then, if evidence is produced in support of such denial, the jury must judge of it and its effect on the main issue of guilty or not guilty; and if, considering all the evidence, and considering the presumption that what a man does is sanely done, and sufficing the evidence and the presumption to work together in their minds, they entertain a reasonable doubt whether the prisoner did the act in a sane state of mind, they are to acquit." In Davis v. United States the court holds that the burden is upon the prosecution to establish sanity as an ingredient of the crime; and hence, when the presumption of sanity becomes silent on the introduction of evidence against it, proof of sanity beyond a reasonable doubt must be made before the jury can convict. It would be a fruitless task to review in detail the cases where the question has been considered, for they are divided into two classes, which follow substantially the same two divergent lines of reasoning. The English rule implies that the question of guilt and the question of insanity raise two distinct issues, and that, while both may be involved in the final verdict, the burden of proof upon each issue lies upon different parties. The most complete and forcible statement of the argument in support of this rule which we have found is contained in the opinion of Judge Danforth in State v. Lawrence, 57 Me. 574, 581. The American rule, so called, holds that in a criminal case there is but one issue, and that the burden throughout is upon the prosecution to prove, not only the criminal act, but the capacity of the accused to commit it beyond a reasonable doubt.

We think the first of these positions is the more logical. Sanity is not an ingredient of crime. It is a condition precedent of all intelligent action, as well benevolent as nefarious. It is a quality of the actor, not an element of the act. It is incumbent upon the prosecution to show the commission of the act, and from this showing and its circumstances to sustain the inferences of malice and such emotions as the particular crime may include. But sanity is not one of these inferences. It is a pre-existing fact which may be taken for granted as implied by law and general experience. We do not infer sanity from the criminal act as we do malice and premeditation. Sanity is a premise, not a conclusion.

It is argued that criminal intent, malice, and premeditation are facts to be proved by the prosecutor; that these cannot exist in an insane mind; hence sanity must be proved by the prosecutor. But these are facts of mental condition and action, and they can only be proved by inference from material facts, circumstances, and acts. It is incumbent, therefore, upon the prosecution to prove such material facts, circumstances, and acts as would compel the inference of guilt in a sane person, and this is the limit of his burden. In murder the prosecution must establish the act, and, either by inference or additional evidence, malice and premeditation. If these ingredients of the crime cannot exist without sanity, sanity is presumed. All the ingredients of the crime must be proved, and as to these we agree the burden never shifts; but as to sanity it never attaches to the prosecutor. The plea of not guilty by itself does not put the sanity of the accused in issue. He must raise the question otherwise, as all agree, if not by special plea at least by introducing evidence, and this is confession and avoidance. Confession and avoidance are an admission that the accused performed the act charged and a denial that the act was criminal. They are not, as the arguments of several courts assume, an admission that a crime was committed, and the tender of an excuse for committing it. The defense of insanity admits the act, but not the crime; just as the pleas of self-defense or of a license do. Upon both these defenses we have held the burden to be upon the accused. State v. Ballou, 20 R. I. 607, 40 Atl. 861; State v. Beswick, 13 R. I. 211, 43 Am. Rep. 26.

The defendant's counsel argue that because, when a defendant relies upon an alibi, this defense is established by sufficient evidence to create a reasonable doubt of his presence at the crime, therefore it should be held that when the defense of insanity is set up it will be sustained by sufficient evidence to create a reasonable doubt of the sanity of the defendant. This argument is specious. It is part of the state's case to show that the accused was present and did the act complained of. An alibi is merely a circumstantial denial of the state's case. The issue is not a new one, and the burden of proof and the rule for weighing evidence remain the same. But, physical presence being proved, mental presence is inferred without proof. Setting up a mental alibi introduces a new issue; one not ordinarily involved in the issue of guilty or not guilty; an issue not concerning the crime as a crime, but the accused as an actor. Presence or absence of body at a given place at a given time is a physical fact, always depending upon evidence. Sanity of a human being is an assumed fact, never depending upon evidence until it is disputed.

Another error which it seems to us is committed by those who adopt the American rule is in mistaking the scope of presumptions of law. There are two well-settled presumptions involved in this question, both disputable: First. That every man is presumed to be innocent of crime. This presumption vanishes when the mind is convinced by evidence that the accused did commit the crime. Second. Every man is supposed to be a responsible, free agent, capable of knowing right from wrong, and able to choose between them. This presumption vanishes when the mind is convinced that the accused was insane at the time under consideration. Now, the theory we are considering supposes these two presumptions to be summoned as witnesses, and to be weighed against each other, and it is said by some of these cases that the presumption of innocence outweighs the presumption of sanity. A moment's reflection will show that the contrary is the case, for, as there are many more persons who commit crime than there are who are criminally irresponsible, when a given person commits a criminal act, in the absence of further knowledge, we consider him guilty, not insane. Lawson, Presumptive Ev. 458. But, properly speaking, presumptions do not clash together. They are assumptions of the truth of certain facts in the absence of evidence. The normal office of a disputable presumption of law is to fix the burden of proof, not to modify the acceptance of evidence when resort is had to evidence. "When conflicting evidence on the point covered by the presumption of law is actually gone into, the presumption of law is functus officio as a presumption of law." Best, Ev. 276, note 2. The burden of proof on any issue is always contrary to the presumption. One who disputes the presumption must take the burden. "If, to procure an acquittal, he relies upon insanity, he assumes the burden of proof as to that matter. He makes insanity an affirmative issue upon his part, because it is an allegation of fact in opposition to a presumption of law." People v. Walter, 1 Idaho, 386, 391. He invites a resort to evidence, and must supply the evidence. This is involved in Mr. Wharton's statement: "Hence it may be stated as a test admitting of universal application that, whether the proposition be affirmative or negative, the party against whom judgment would be given as to a particular issue, supposing no proof to be offered on either side, has on him, whether he be plaintiff or defendant, the burden of proof, which he must satisfactorily sustain." Wharton, Ev. § 357. In civil cases this is the only function of a disputable presumption of law. In criminal cases the presumption of innocence goes further, and imposes a rule for weighing evidence, and it extends its protection to the accused until this rule of evidence is satisfied. In this capacity it does not assume the place of a witness, but rather that of an advocate. It does not contradict the evidence, but insists that it shall be weighed by the prescribed standard. When the evidence works conviction beyond a reasonable doubt, the presumption of innocence withdraws its protection. Coupled with the presumption of sanity, there is no such arbitrary rule of weighing evidence.

It was held by some early cases in this country that this defense must be proved by the accused beyond a reasonable doubt; but the very general concurrence of those courts which hold the accused to proof of the fact only requires that the evidence should be sufficient to satisfy, or that it should preponderate in his favor. The more stringent rule upon the main issue was adopted out of favor to the accused, and it would seem inconsistent, while deeming him worthy of favor on one issue, to impose a greater burden than simple proof upon him on the other. We may condense these views as follows: Homicide, unexplained, is murder at common law. Com. v. York, Bennett & H. Lead. Crim. Cas. 504; Com. v. Webster, 5 Cush. 320, 52 Am. Dec. 711; Wharton, Crim. Ev. § 738. The definition of murder includes several elements, all of which, except the act of killing, are inferable from the act itself. The presumption of innocence is a presumption that the accused did not commit the act which the law calls a crime. Evidence convincing beyond a reasonable doubt that he did commit the act is proof that he committed the crime. The presumption of innocence has been overcome when the criminal act is proved. Involved in this conclusion, amongst other things, is the presumption, which is an inference of fact from general experience, that the accused was sane when he committed the criminal act. This presumption continues after the presumption of innocence has been overcome. Evidence is required to overcome it, and the accused must furnish this evidence. If the evidence on this point simply balances, and so produces no probative effect on the mind, the presumption of sanity survives, and the judgment that the man is guilty remains unshaken. Sanity is a condition which does not require proof until its existence is denied. When the well-established but absolutely arbitrary rule is announced that all facts constituting the crime must be proved beyond a reasonable doubt, it cannot logically be held to include a fact which is not required to be proved at all. Insanity is not a normal condition, but a positive disease; and positive proof may reasonably be required to establish it as a fact to be regarded in making up a judgment on any question where it is relevant. We cannot doubt that this is the view of the issue which is implied by our statute law (Gen. Laws 1896, chap. 82, § 22), which provides: "Whenever, upon the trial of any person upon an indictment, the accused shall set up in defense thereto his insanity, the jury, if they acquit such person upon such ground, shall state that they have so acquitted him," etc. This statute requires the defense of insanity to be set up by the accused, and requires the jury to find specially upon that issue. Under this provision the rules of evidence are as essentially fixed as if a special plea of insanity were required. The statute is silent as to how this defense shall be set up, and so it need not be presented in writing, but may be advanced verbally by counsel as the plea of not guilty is by the accused, or by the court on his behalf, if he stands mute, when arraigned. Having set up this special defense, it is incumbent upon him to prove it by evidence; and if the jury, after weighing the evidence for and against the assertion, are not convinced of its truth by a fair preponderance of the evidence, it cannot avail him. The statute does not contemplate that the jury shall acquit on the ground that they doubt the sanity of the accused, but on the ground of his actual insanity. And the finding of the jury is made sufficient ground for the court in its discretion, and without further investigation, to certify the case to the governor that the insane person may be confined.

Statutes of similar tenor have received this construction in Massachusetts (Com. v. Eddy, 7 Gray, 583); in Minnesota (Bonfanti v. State, 2 Minn. 123, Gil. 99); in Louisiana (State v. Scott, 49 La. Ann. 253, 36 L. R. A. 721, 740, 21 So. 271); in Pennsylvania (Ortwein v. Com. 76 Pa. 414, 18 Am. Rep. 67 L. R. A.

420); in Maine (State v. Lawrence, 57 Me. 574, 581). It has been held within the power of the general assembly, under the Constitution, to provide that the burden of proving an excuse or license to do an act which is generally criminal shall be upon the accused. State v. Beswick, 13 R. I. 211, 43 Am. Rep. 26, approved in State v. Higgins, 13 R. I. 330, 43 Am. Rep. 26, note, and State v. Mellor, 13 R. I. 666. These decisions are as applicable to the defense of insanity as to the defense of license. In Oregon the English rule is enacted by statute. Bellinger & C. Anno. Codes & Statutes, § 1393.

The last ground urged for granting a new trial is based upon the contention that one of the medical witnesses called by the state in rebuttal was mistaken in saying that he observed the condition of the accused on the 7th day of October. The witness testifies that he vaccinated the accused and several others on that day, and during the operation, which occupied a very short time, took notice of his condition. The substance of his testimony is that the witness did not note any abnormal symptoms in the accused. Counsel now ask to have a new trial, that they may present evidence that the accused was not vaccinated on the 7th day of October. One of the affidavits to support this prayer divulges the fact that immediately after this testimony was given a recess was taken, during which counsel and his expert medical witness examined both arms of the accused, and found no trace of a recent vaccination. Not only the accused, therefore, who was perfectly sane when he was tried, but his counsel, knew the alleged fact in time to have shown the arm to the jury, and, in view of it, to have cross-examined the witness. By bringing the matter to the attention of the court he could have procured the record of medical treatment of the accused at the jail, which he has since obtained. We fail to see any merit in this allegation.

In view of the overwhelming preponderance of the whole evidence that the accused was guilty of wilful murder, we cannot assign to the error, if it was one, any appreciable influence on the minds of the jury.

The petition for new trial is denied, and the case will be remanded to the Common Pleas Division for sentence.

SOUTH DAKOTA SUPREME COURT.

STATE of South Dakota ex rel. Robert M.
HOWELLS

v.

H. A. METCALF.

(.....S. D.....)

1. The claim of a candidate for office to have his name printed in the regular party column where all the candidates in the column can be voted for at once by a mark at the head of the column, presents a question of substantial right.
2. An organized political party cannot have at the same time on the official ballot more than one candidate for the same county office.
3. The supreme court has jurisdiction to control by mandamus the action of the county auditor in determining the names to be placed on an official ballot, where there is not sufficient time to enable the county judge to whom the statute gives jurisdiction to act, and have his action reviewed on appeal prior to the election.
4. That faction of a county convention which assembles at the place designated by the chairman and a majority of the county committee, organizes, and proceeds to nominate candidates, must be regarded as the regular representative of the party, in the absence of anything which justifies delegates in refusing to attend at the place selected.
5. The desire to prevent bloodshed is not a sufficient excuse to justify delegates to a convention of a prominent political party in refusing to attend the meeting organized by the central committee.
6. Delegates are not justified in refusing to attend the convention organized by the central committee of a political party because there are contesting delegations, and the central committee is favorable to the opposing faction.
7. The names of candidates nominated by a convention erroneously claiming to represent a political party, in opposition to the regular convention, of that party, should be excluded from the official ballot.
8. That the law does not require the official ballots to be printed and in possession of the proper officer until ten days before election does not, prior to that time, deprive the court of jurisdiction of a controversy to settle the names which shall be placed upon the ballot.

(September 21, 1904.)

NOTE.—For questions as to the regularity of a political convention by which nominations are made, when there is a dispute as to the right to place them on the official ballot, see also, in this series, Shields v. Jacob, 13 L. R. A. 760; Phelps v. Piper, 33 L. R. A. 53; Sims v. Daniels, 35 L. R. A. 140; McDonald v. Hinton, 35 L. R. A. 152; and Stephenson v. Election Comrs. 42 L. R. A. 214.
67 L. R. A.

APPPLICATION for a writ of mandamus to compel the auditor of Roberts County to place the names of certain candidates for office upon the official ballot. Granted.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Messrs. Horner & Stewart, for plaintiff:

Where the county auditor refuses to receive and file certificates of nomination of county officers made by the political party entitled to a column upon the official ballot, this refusal involves the right of a citizen to vote for nominees of the political party of his faith, the exercise of the elective franchise, and indirectly involves the election of every candidate in that column upon the official ballot; and the supreme court has jurisdiction to issue an original writ of mandamus in such case.

State ex rel. Fosser v. Lavik, 9 N. D. 461, 83 N. W. 914.

The functions of a county auditor are ministerial, and not judicial.

State ex rel. Plain v. Falley, 8 N. D. 90, 76 N. W. 996; State ex rel. Fosser v. Lavik, 9 N. D. 461, 83 N. W. 914.

The relator has the necessary interest to maintain this action.

State ex rel. Dakota Hail Asso. v. Carey, 2 N. D. 36, 49 N. W. 164; State ex rel. Adkins v. Lien, 9 S. D. 297, 68 N. W. 748; State ex rel. Plain v. Falley, 8 N. D. 90, 76 N. W. 996.

If improper nominations have been filed any citizen interested may apply to a court of competent jurisdiction, where all the facts can be speedily and certainly investigated; and if any other nominations other than those prescribed by law have been filed, the officer may be enjoined from placing the same upon the official ballot.

State ex rel. Wolfe v. Falley, 9 N. D. 450, 83 N. W. 860.

There cannot be two nominees by one party for one office that is filled by one person; hence one of such certificates cannot contain the regular party nomination.

The court will refuse to go into the procedure of a convention, and will limit the inquiry as to whether or not an assembly is a political convention organized as the law requires.

S. D. Rev. Code P. C. 1892, 1915; State ex rel. Wolfe v. Falley, 9 N. D. 450, 83 N. W. 860; State ex rel. Bloomfield v. Weir, 5 Wash. 82, 31 Pac. 417; State ex rel. Fosser v. Lavik, 9 N. D. 461, 83 N. W. 914; McDonald v. Hinton, 114 Cal. 484, 35 L. R. A. 152, 46 Pac. 870.

Where the convention divides and two conventions are held, and nominations are made and filed, the nominees of each convention claiming to be the regular party nominees, the court will, upon proper application, determine which are the regular nominees.

State ex rel. Wolfe v. Falley, 9 N. D. 450, 83 N. W. 862.

The inquiry of the court should be limited to ascertaining which of the conventions from which the nominating certificates come is the regular one, and should not extend to an examination of the political methods and tactics further than is necessary to ascertain the identity of the regular party convention.

State ex rel. Gramold v. Porter, 11 N. D. 309, 91 N. W. 944; Re Fairchild, 151 N. Y. 359, 45 N. E. 943; Phillips v. Gallagher, 73 Minn. 528, 42 L. R. A. 222, 76 N. W. 285; Moody v. Trimble, 109 Ky. 139, 50 L. R. A. 810, 58 S. W. 504; Davis v. Hambrick, 109 Ky. 276, 51 L. R. A. 671, 58 S. W. 779.

Action of the state convention in seating delegates from a county convention, and in refusing to seat opposing delegates, is conclusive upon the court.

State ex rel. Buttz v. Liudahl, 11 N. D. 320, 91 N. W. 950.

Mr. J. J. Batterton also for plaintiff. Messrs. Frank McNulty and Campbell & Taylor for defendant.

Haney, J., delivered the opinion of the court:

On March 22, 1904, the regularly constituted central committee of the Republican party in Roberts county issued a call for a delegate convention to meet in Sisseton, at 1 o'clock P. M., on April 5, 1904, for the purpose of selecting 28 delegates to the state convention, 28 delegates to the judicial convention, and to place in nomination candidates for the following legislative and county officers: One senator, 3 representatives, treasurer, sheriff, register of deeds, auditor, state's attorney, county judge, clerk of the courts, superintendent of schools, corner surveyor, 3 county justices, and 3 constables. The call was properly published. It recommended that precinct caucuses be held April 2d or at such time as might be fixed by the member of the county committee residing in the precinct, and at the place where the preceding spring election was held. It stated that "credentials should be handed to the chairman or secretary of the committee before the opening of the convention." At the time designated in the call numerous persons claiming to be delegates to the convention provided for therein appeared at Sisseton. Some of these persons repaired to the place selected by a majority of the county central committee, were called to order by the chairman of that committee, and, having organized in the usual manner, proceeded to transact the business mentioned in the call. At the same time the other persons present in Sisseton, claiming to be delegates, assembled in another place, were called to order by a member of the county central committee, and, having organized in the usual manner, proceeded to transact the business mentioned in the call. The first-mentioned assembly so organized was presided over by Mr. Howard Babcock, and will be hereafter termed the "Babcock convention." The other assembly so organized was presided over by Mr. A. M. Houck, and will be hereafter termed the "Houck convention." In due time the nominations for legislative and county offices, made by each of these conventions, were certified in proper form by the respective officers of such conventions as nominees of the Republican party in Roberts county, and each of these certificates of nomination was received and filed by the defendant as auditor. Subsequently the relator and his associate candidates, who were nominated by the Babcock convention, demanded of the defendant that their names be printed on the ballots to be used in Roberts county at the coming general election, in the Republican party column, and that the names of the persons nominated by the Houck convention be excluded from such ballots. This demand having been refused, the relator has applied to this court, upon notice, for a peremptory writ of mandamus commanding the defendant to comply with such demand.

The writ of mandamus may be issued by this court to any inferior tribunal, corporation, board, or person to compel the performance of an act which the law specially enjoins as a duty resulting from an office, trust, or station. Rev. Code Civ. Proc. § 764. The writ must be issued in all cases where there is not a plain, speedy, and adequate remedy in the ordinary course of law. It must be issued upon affidavit, upon the application of the party beneficially interested. Id. § 765. It is an official duty of the auditor, which the statute specially enjoins, "to provide printed ballots for every election in which the voters of the entire county participate." All official ballots are to be white in color, of good quality of printing paper, and to contain the name of every candidate whose nomination has been certified by the Secretary of State or filed with the county auditor in the manner provided by law; but the name of no candidate shall appear more than once on the ballot for the same office. "The names of candidates for each office shall be arranged in large type under the designation of the party or principle for which said nomination is made, so that all the names of candidates of each party shall be in a separate column, and each party ticket shall be printed side by side on the ballot with names of candidates for each office directly opposite each other; and the names of all independent candidates shall occupy a column separate from regular party tickets. There shall be a circle printed at the head of each ticket on the ballot; also a circle at the left of the name of each candidate on the ballot, and no other circle shall appear on the ballot." Rev. Pol. Code, §§ 1886, 1892. Where, as in this state, the voter may express his choice for all the candidates in a party ticket by merely making a cross in the circle over the head of a party column (Id. § 1914), the practical advantage of having a candidate's name printed in a party column, is apparent, and whether it shall be so printed presents a question of substantial right. At the coming general election in this state the Republican column will embrace the names of candidates for presidential electors, congressmen, judges, and state officers. It can embrace the names of only one set of county candidates. In counties where only one set of Republican county candidates have been nominated in the manner provided by law, the duty of the auditor to print their names in the Republican column will be clear and unquestioned. In the county of Roberts, however, there are two certificates of nomination on file in the auditor's office, each regular on its face, each containing a set of county candidates, and each purporting to have been nominated by the Republican party.

When the legislation under consideration was enacted the existence of organized political parties, governed by generally recognized rules, and perpetuated by well-known methods, was disclosed by the current history of the country. Hence, where the word "party" occurs in the statute relating to nominations, it should be construed to mean a number of persons united in opinion and organized in the manner usual to the then existing political parties. Mindful of this definition, it seems to us to be self-evident that a party—that is, an organized political party—cannot have, at the same time, more than one candidate for the same county office. The acts of an organized political party, with respect to the selection of candidates for public office, must be regarded as the acts of the electors constituting such organization, and the statute expressly declares that no person shall join in nominating "more than one person for any place to be filled." Rev. Pol. Code, § 1903. Whenever an elector joins, through a convention or by petition, in nominating a candidate other than the one nominated by the party organization, he by that act ceases to be a member of the organization with respect to such nomination, and the candidate he has joined in nominating cannot be regarded as representing the organization. A convention, within the meaning of the statute relating to nominations, "is an organized assembly of delegates or electors representing a political party or principle." Such a convention "may nominate candidates for public offices to be filled by any public election within this state." All nominations made by such convention are required to be certified in a prescribed manner, the certificate of nomination to "designate in not more than five words the party or principle which such convention represents;" and if the certificate relates to county officers it shall be filed with the county auditor. Id. §§ 1899, 1900, 1901. Then, as the auditor is required to print only such names as have been certified or filed "in the manner provided by law," and only one set of county candidates can be in the Republican column, someone must decide which, if either, of the conventions held in Roberts county, represents the Republican party. Such a controversy as has here arisen may not have been anticipated by the legislature. It did, however, provide for the correction of errors on the part of the auditor, and thus clearly indicated that his decision respecting such a controversy should not be regarded as final. The statute reads as follows: "Whenever it shall appear by affidavit that an error has occurred in . . . the printing of the sample or official ballots, the judge of the county court shall, upon application of any voter, by an order, require the county auditor or other public official or board charged with the duty of preparing ballots, to correct such error or show cause at such time and place as under the circumstances he may deem necessary, why such error should not be corrected." Id. § 1889. Having thus clothed the county judge with power to review the auditor's action, it is clear the legislature did not intend to preclude interested parties from invoking the aid of the courts in enforcing their legal rights with respect to the preparation of ballots; and, as an application to the county judge in the present case would not have afforded an adequate remedy, because of the delay incident to any proper procedure for bringing his decision here for review, this court undoubtedly has authority to control the auditor's action by means of a peremptory writ of mandamus.

Whenever the legislature, in its wisdom, sees fit to regulate nominations and the printing of ballots by statutory enactments, the duty of interpreting such enactments devolves upon the courts, and they should not attempt to escape responsibility or avoid disagreeable consequences by assuming that no judicial questions are involved. The auditor's duties and the candidate's rights respecting the preparation of ballots having been defined by statute in this state, the performance of such duties and the protection of such rights no longer present merely political questions, but must be dealt with as are other legal duties and other legal rights. So we are compelled to conclude that it is the duty of this court in this proceeding to determine which, if either, of these sets of candidates is entitled to be recognized as representing the Republican party in Roberts county.

Where a custom or usage is of such notoriety and obtains so extensively as to be a matter of general knowledge and common information, judicial notice is taken thereof by the courts. 17 Am. & Eng. Enc. Law, p. 945. There are such customs and usages governing the creation and existence of all organized political parties in this country. A party having been organized by the meeting of electors or delegates, its organization is perpetuated by the appointment of a committee, which is clothed with authority to act for its members until they are again assembled and otherwise direct. The existence and authority of such committees are recognized by our statutes, which provide that, where any person nominated dies or declines before the ballots are printed, the vacancy thus or otherwise caused may be (if the original nomination was made by a party convention which delegated to a committee the power to fill vacancies) filled by such committee. Rev. Pol. Code, § 1908. Therefore, from the adjournment of one convention until the temporary organization of another, the national, state, or county committee, as the case may be, represents and is alone authorized to act for the organization which appointed it. Such a committee existed in Roberts county. Its regularity is unquestioned. Its authority to fix the time and select the place of holding a convention for the nomination of county officers must be conceded, because the claims of each faction rest on the validity of the call issued by such committee. As is not unusual, the call named the city, but not any particular building, in which the convention would be held. A majority of the committee concurred in the selection of the opera house, and it is not suggested that anyone claiming to be a delegate did not know that such place had been so selected.

These facts concerning the organization of the Babcock convention are established by the pleadings: At the time fixed and in the place selected by the county committee, its chairman, with the concurrence of a majority of the committee, called the persons there assembled to order. The call was read by the secretary of the committee, and thereupon a temporary chairman, secretary, and the usual committees were selected. The report of the committee on credentials having been adopted without objection or protest from anyone present, a permanent organization was effected, and the convention proceeded to transact the business for which it was convened. Defendant admits in his answer that none of the delegates composing the Houck convention sought admission to the other, and alleges that none of the delegates attending the Babcock convention sought admission to or attended the Houck convention. It needs no argument to show that the Babcock convention, thus called and organized, was regular, and should be so regarded, in the absence of anything which justified a majority of the whole number of delegates in refusing to attend at the place selected by the committee. The reasons assigned for such refusal are thus stated in defendant's answer: "That, on account of the fact that a majority of said [central] committee were thus interested [as candidates] in the result of the convention in said county, and were so violently and bitterly opposed to the portion of said party whose convention was presided over by said A. M. Houck, and on account of the Babcock faction having already instituted groundless contests and causing to be elected contesting delegations in said 19 different voting precincts in said county, thus preventing the delegates from said contested precincts from participating in the organization of said convention, and as no place for the holding of said convention was designated in the call, the said Houck faction determined, for said reasons, and for the further reason that an unseemly riot and possibly bloodshed would thereby be averted, to hold said Republican convention in a public hall on Main street in Sisseton." So it appears that the Houck faction remained away from the regular meeting place (1) for fear of bloodshed, (2) because there were numerous contesting delegations, and (3) because the central committee favored the opposing faction.

The first reason can hardly be taken seriously. It affirmatively appears that none of the Houck delegates entered or attempted to enter the opera house, and nothing is disclosed which would warrant the inference that they would have been excluded, had they attempted to do so. Surely it should not be presumed that such gentlemen as are usually chosen for delegates to Republican conventions in Roberts county necessarily resort to bloodshed when they disagree concerning the selection of delegates to a state convention. The law wisely presumes, in absence of evidence to the contrary, that no person intends to commit crime or to do any wrongful act, and we trust the time will never come in this state when the conduct of delegates to political conventions must be viewed in any other light.

The other two reasons are equally, though perhaps less palpably, untenable. They rest on the assumption that, if all the persons claiming to be delegates had assembled in the opera house, an erroneous decision would necessarily have been rendered regarding who were entitled to seats in the convention. Doubtless the decisions of conventions concerning credentials are frequently erroneous, and occasionally arbitrary and unjustifiable. Even the judgments of judicial tribunals are sometimes so regarded, especially by unsuccessful litigants. But all this does not justify the presumption that any tribunal will decide erroneously, in the absence of substantial grounds for anticipating such a result. When a man is sued, he must appear and defend, or judgment will be taken against him by default. If he believes the court or judge is prejudiced, or otherwise disqualified, he must appear and preserve his rights by timely objections, provided, of course, the tribunal has jurisdiction of the matter involved. In the case at bar the persons claiming to be delegates were duly notified to appear at the opera house for the purpose of organizing the convention. When the hour of meeting arrived, it was, we think, the right and duty of the chairman of the central committee, or some other person authorized by that committee, to call the assembly to order. The next step would be the selection of a temporary chairman. If different persons arose for the purpose of nominating such officer, someone would necessarily have to decide which of those persons was entitled to recognition, and, if a division or roll call were demanded, someone would necessarily have to decide who were entitled to vote. It being a convention of an organized party, and the central committee being the only body authorized to act for the organization at that moment, we think it would be entirely proper for such committee, following the practice of the national committee, to determine who should participate in the temporary organization by having prepared a temporary or prima facie roll of delegates. Then, when a temporary organization was effected, it would be for the convention itself to determine the qualification of its own members. Such a temporary roll of those deemed to have a prima facie right to seats is prepared in advance of the meeting of Congress and of the state legislature, the former and each branch of the latter being, of course, the conclusive judge of the qualification of its own members when organized. But whether this procedure be adopted, or the other, which confides all questions relative to both temporary and permanent organization to the delegates present, it was clearly incumbent upon all who claimed to be delegates to at least appear and demand recognition, whether or not they delivered their credentials to the committee. In the absence of such a demand they are clearly precluded from assuming that their rights would have been ignored by the convention, even if they were disregarded by the committee. Having refrained from attending at the proper time and place, they are in precisely the same position as if no delegates had been selected in the precincts they claimed to represent, in which case the convention would be at liberty to seat electors residing therein, as did the Houck convention, with respect to several precincts from which no one appeared claiming to have been chosen at any caucus or otherwise. Therefore, upon the undisputed facts, we conclude that the Babcock convention was regular; and, as the party could hold but one convention for the same purpose, it alone must be regarded as representing the Republican party in Roberts county.

It appears from the record in this proceeding that the same conclusion was reached by the Republican state convention and the Republican judicial convention in the fifth judicial circuit, to each of which each of these rival county conventions sent delegates demanding recognition as the regular Republican organization. It is, however, unnecessary in the view we have taken to consider whether the decision of the highest tribunal within the party organization in this state concerning the issue here presented should be deemed conclusive, and we express no opinion as to that contention, which has the support of well-reasoned cases in other jurisdictions. Nor do we now determine to what extent an investigation of the facts leading up to and involved in the organization of a convention should be pursued, where the regularity of such convention is put in issue. No opinion is expressed concerning the methods of either faction in regard to the conduct of caucuses or initiation of contests. We merely decide upon undisputed facts that the Babcock convention is regular, because those who alone could attack its regularity waived their right to do so by failing without any valid excuse to assert their claims at the proper time and place.

Under the provisions of the statute heretofore cited, only the names of such candidates as are nominated in the manner provided by law can be printed on the ballots. Nor can the name of any candidate be written thereon whose nomination has not been properly certified. Chamberlain v. Wood, 15 S. D. 216, 56 L. R. A. 187, 91 Am. St. Rep. 674, 88 N. W. 109. Only "an organized assembly of delegates or electors representing a political party or principle" can file such certificate of nomination as we are considering, and the certificate must designate the party represented. If the Houck assembly did not represent the Republican party, and we have shown that it did not, what party did it represent? Its certificate of nomination reads thus: "This is to certify that on the 5th day of April, 1904, a convention of delegates of the Republican party in and for the said county of Roberts and state of South Dakota was duly assembled at Sisseton, in said county; that upon the organization of said convention A. M. Houck was elected chairman and J. A. Le Lacheur secretary; whereupon said convention proceeded to nominate the following named persons, whose residence and business address is stated opposite each name, for the office designated, respectively: . . ." No new party was organized. No principle was designated in its certificate. If it was not the Republican county convention, it had no existence as a convention within the meaning of the statute. By its certificate of nomination it authorized and directed the auditor to print the names of its candidates in the Republican party column. It authorized the doing of nothing else, and, having ceased to exist without conferring power on anyone to change its certificate, the same becomes wholly inoperative. It is not a case of mistake in drafting a certificate, which might be amended by those who signed it. The instrument accurately expresses the intent and purpose of the assembly which caused it to be filed. Its invalidity is a matter of substance, not of form. It is without force or effect, because the assembly was without power to act for the Republican party. Briefly stated, the situation is simply this: The Republican party in Roberts county did not nominate the Houck candidates. The Houck certificate does not authorize the auditor to print their names under any other party designation. Therefore it is his duty to exclude their names from the ballots. No other conclusion can be drawn from the plain and unmistakable language of the statute. Moreover, to print the names of candidates not nominated by the Republican party at any place on the ballots, under the designation of that party, would be precisely such a misrepresentation and deception as the Australian ballot system is designed to prevent. Of course, the view we have taken does not deprive the requisite number of electors from placing the names of the persons nominated by the Houck assembly on the ballots as independent candidates by petition.

Statutes regulating the methods of nominating candidates, and providing for the use of secret ballots to be officially prepared and furnished at public expense, have been enacted in nearly all the states. The decisions which involve the interpretation of such enactments are numerous. While designed to effect the same general objects and similar in many features, these statutes are by no means identical in terms. Hence the law in any particular jurisdiction can be accurately determined only by reference to the language employed in expressing the legislative will. As such language differs in different states, and equally enlightened minds disagree concerning the meaning of the same language, there has necessarily arisen much apparent conflict in the case law on these subjects. The proceeding at bar must be governed by the laws of this state. Being satisfied that our own law has been correctly interpreted and properly applied, we might, with confidence and propriety, rest this decision alone on the reasons already stated. However, as the views herein expressed have the support of abundant authority, a few leading cases will be reviewed and others cited.

In North Dakota, where the statutes on these subjects are probably more nearly the same as here than in any other state, it is held that when two nominations, purporting to be by the same political party for the same office, are filed with the secretary of state, it is his duty to refuse to certify to the proper county auditors the names contained in both nominations, the law requiring him, however, to certify the name of the regular party nominee; and, if he refuses so to do, he may be coerced by mandamus. State ex rel. Wolfe v. Falley, 9 N. D. 450, 83 N. W. 860. In this case, after defining its own powers and duties, the court proceeded to determine which was the regular candidate according to the customs and usages which govern political organizations. The following excerpts from the opinion are pertinent and convincing: "It requires no argument to show that one political party cannot hold two separate conventions at the same time, and nominate two different persons to fill one office. If two nominations for the same office by the same party are filed, one or the other must be spurious. Both may be spurious, but both cannot be genuine. It is perfectly clear, from § 502, Rev. Codes, that the legislature never intended that one party should have more than one candidate for any one office. The section declares: 'No certificate shall contain the name of more than one candidate for each office to be filled.' Section 504 requires the secretary of state to certify to the proper county auditors 'the name and postoffice address of each person nominated for such office as specified in the certificates of nomination filed with him.' But certificates can be filed with him only in pursuance of nominations made by a convention representing a party or a principle. Such is the clear purpose of the law. Section 497a to 512, inclusive. But one party can make but one nomination for one office. Hence he can properly certify but one nomination by the same party. This is made clear by the provisions of § 491, which permits a voter to vote for the entire party ticket by marking a cross in the square following the party named. This the voter could not do if there could be two candidates for one office under the same party heading. From this it follows that it is the duty of the secretary of state to certify the genuine party nominee. See the case of State ex rel. Bloomfield v. Weir, 5 Wash. 82, 31 Pac. 417. It becomes necessary, then, that there should be a final determination as to who is the real party nominee. . . . But who shall decide this question? . . . Where only one certificate of nomination, purporting to be the nomination of a certain named party for a certain named office, is filed with the secretary, it becomes as to him the party nomination, and he cannot question it. But it is self-evident that this cannot be true where two certificates are filed, each purporting to be the nomination of the same party for the same office. It is an uncontrovertible fact that there cannot be two nominees by one party for one office that is filled by one person. Hence one of such certificates, at least, cannot contain the regular party nomination. It requires no judicial investigation to determine that fact. It is patent and conclusive. He cannot certify both names, because both cannot go on the same party ticket. He is in duty bound to refuse to certify both. Perhaps he may properly refuse to certify either, as we understand he did in this case, but certain it is he must refuse one. . . . Indeed, under our statute, which gives the certifying officer no judicial powers, and which requires party nominations to be filed with the secretary of state, and which contemplates that no nominations shall be filed with him except those made by political parties, it becomes absolutely necessary that the courts should pass upon the regularity of such nominations; otherwise, the door for fraud and deception must stand wide open, and no power exist anywhere to close it. Perhaps we were not justified in taking any space to demonstrate that this court had the power, and it is its duty, to act in this matter." The nature and scope of the inquiry in this class of cases is thus defined in State ex rel. Granvold v. Porter, 11 N. D. 309, 91 N. W. 944: "In determining which of two sets of nominees of a split political convention are entitled to have their names placed upon the official ballot as the party nominees, the inquiry of the court should be limited to ascertaining which of the conventions from which the nominating certificates emanate is the regular one, and should not extend to an examination of political methods and tactics further than is necessary to ascertain the identity of the regular party convention."

It was held in State ex rel. Sturdevant v. Allen, 43 Neb. 651, 62 N. W. 35, that, where two factions of a political party nominate candidates and certify such nominations to the secretary of state in due form of law, the latter will not inquire into the regularity of the convention held by either faction, but will certify to the several county clerks the names of the candidates nominated by each; such practice being in harmony with the rule which requires courts, in case of doubt, to adopt that construction which affords the citizen the greater liberty in casting his ballot. The doctrine thus stated was, however, modified in a later case, where the court says: "Although the courts will not decide which of two rival conventions is the regular convention of the party when both were called and held in accordance with the precedents and usages of the party, and each claiming in good faith to represent the party, since that is not a subject of judicial inquiry, yet the courts, in a proper case, will determine whether nominations were in fact made by a de facto convention of the party, even though to do so may lead to an investigation of political methods." State ex rel. Rose v. Piper, 50 Neb. 42, 69 N. W. 384. In a still later case the same court decided that a nomination made by 4 out of 28 members of a county committee chosen by a political party is invalid, where previous notice of the time and place of the meeting had not been given to the other members. State ex rel. Whedon v. Smith, 57 Neb. 41, 77 N. W. 384. And in another case the supreme court of Nebraska concedes that "where the ballot law requires the names of candidates of political parties to be arranged and printed on the official ballot in a separate group, and it is made the duty of the election officer, in arranging the ballot, to place the ticket of the party having the greatest number of votes at the last preceding election first on the ballot, and that the position of other tickets should be controlled relatively by the same rule, it is obvious that under such a law it is necessary to decide between rival factions of the same party, in order to determine the position of the tickets upon the ballot." State ex rel. Dahlman v. Piper, 50 Neb. 25, 69 N. W. 378.

In Michigan, where State ex rel. Sturdevant v. Allen, 43 Neb. 651, 62 N. W. 35, seems to have been once approved, the supreme court uses this language: "The reluctance of the courts to enter upon an inquiry, or to permit an inquiry by the election commissioners, into the question of fact as to which of two contending factions truly represents a political party, has been manifested in various cases. State ex rel. Sturdevant v. Allen, 43 Neb. 651, 62 N. W. 35; Phelps v. Piper, 48 Neb. 724, 33 L. R. A. 53, 67 N. W. 755; Shields v. Jacob, 88 Mich. 164, 13 L. R. A. 760, 50 N. W. 105. In Shields v. Jacob it was held that the court would not undertake to determine which of two rival conventions resulting from a split in a regularly called convention should be treated as the regular convention of the party, and a mandamus was issued requiring the election commissioners to give to both tickets a place upon the ballot. At the time that decision was rendered, however, the provision requiring that the ticket of the party having the greatest number of votes within the county at the last preceding election should be placed first upon the ballot, and that the position of other tickets should be governed relatively by the same rule, was not a part of the statute, and it was not necessary to determine which of these tickets should be placed first on the ballot. Under the law as it now exists, such an investigation seems necessary, and it would seem that the commissioners did determine the question, and place the Shelby ticket second on the ballot." Baker v. Election Comrs. 110 Mich. 635, 68 N. W. 752.

The following cases may be cited as sustaining the view taken in State ex rel. Sturdevant v. Allen, 43 Neb. 651, 62 N. W. 35; People ex rel. Eaton v. District Court, 18 Colo. 26, 31 Pac. 339; Sims v. Daniels, 57 Kan. 552, 35 L. R. A. 146, 46 Pac. 952; State ex rel. Gillis v. Johnson, 18 Mont. 556, 46 Pac. 440. In People ex rel. Eaton v. District Court two rival state tickets were involved, and no allusion is made to what position either should have on the ballots. Sims v. Daniels has to do with county candidates, but no question concerning the position of their names is discussed; the decision merely relating to what may be determined by the officer charged with the duty of considering objections to nominations under statutory provisions essentially different from any in this state. State v. Johnson relates to rival state tickets having different designations, with no reference to the position of either on the ballots. In a later case the supreme court of Montana 67 L. R. A.

holds that a party convention of a single county, which is one of two or more counties composing a judicial district, has no authority to place in nomination a candidate for the office of district judge; that being a state office, the legal nomination to which can only be made by a convention representing all the voters of the party in the several counties in the district. The court employs this language: "A candidate certified as nominated by electors is not nominated by a political party. He is simply a candidate of those individual electors who have joined in nominating him, and he is only entitled to be placed upon the ballot as such a candidate. . . . The certificate to the secretary of state emanating from a convention or primary meeting must be signed by the officials of the convention. The certificate of nomination by electors must be signed by the electors only. The certificate emanating from the officers of a convention clearly must designate the principle or party represented by the convention. By means of this designation in the convention certificate the secretary of state specifies the description of the person nominated, including his party designation. But the law, except, perhaps, in cases presenting unusual conditions, does not authorize electors who may make a nomination by petition to make their nominees the nominees of an organized political party whose name they may select, provided such party is authorized to make a nomination by convention or primary meeting held for the purpose of making nominations. The secretary of state, therefore, cannot certify a candidate so nominated by electors as the candidate of a political party; for clearly he is not such a candidate, and has no place in a group of candidates certified as nominated by a regular political party convention or organization, under the name of the party making such nominations. We find authority for these views in the cases of Atkeson v. Lay, 115 Mo. 538, 22 S. W. 481, and Phillips v. Curtis, 4 Idaho, 193, 38 Pac. 405. We conclude, under the facts of this case, that the Republican conventions of the district have not nominated Judge Reeves as their candidate; and it being our opinion that the attempts to make him the candidate of such parties by petition are invalid, and as the court is not requested to regard him as an independent or electors' candidate, it necessarily follows that the demurrer must be sustained, and the writ of injunction prayed for will be made permanent; and it is so ordered." State ex rel. Woody v. Rotwitt, 18 Mont. 502, 46 Pac. 370.

In no case, so far as our research has extended, where the right of the candidate to have his name printed in the party column was considered, has any court declined to enforce such right, though its enforcement involved a determination of the regularity of his nomination, except in Michigan, where the question was left to the decision of the election commissioners (Stephenson v. Election Comrs. 118 Mich. 396, 42 L. R. A. 214, 74 Am. St. Rep. 402, 76 N. W. 914); a disposal of the matter which does not seem to be consistent with the views expressed by the same court in Baker v. Election Comrs. 110 Mich. 635, 68 N. W. 752. Whenever the right of the candidate to have his name printed in the regular party column exists, and such right is contested, someone must necessarily decide the contest. As we have shown, even in jurisdictions where the doctrine of State ex rel. Sturdevant v. Allen, 43 Neb. 651, 62 N. W. 35, prevails; the courts have not hesitated to determine the question of regularity when its solution merely involved undisputed facts and generally recognized rules relating to the organization of political parties. We do nothing more than that in the present proceeding. In difficult cases it may be convenient, but is it logical, to say that, because two factions of a political party have attempted to nominate candidates, each claiming to represent the party organization, the names of both sets of nominees should be printed on the ballots, so that the electors may decide between them? Is not the proposition predicated upon a misconception of the real issue involved? It is for the party to nominate; for the people to elect. The question is not, Who shall be chosen to any particular public office? That is for the voters of all political parties to determine at the polls. It is simply, Who shall represent the organization as its nominees? and certainly the determination of that question should be controlled by the action of the party itself; otherwise, party nominations are impossible. To what extent, if at all, the rights of organized political parties should be recognized and regulated by law, is a matter of public policy, to be determined by the legislative department; a matter which does not concern this court. Its duty is done when it gives effect to the legislative will as expressed in statutes which do not conflict with any provision of the Federal or state Constitution.

It appears from statements of counsel 67 L. R. A.

that the Babcock candidate for register of deeds has died since this proceeding was commenced. The Babcock convention delegated authority to its central committee to fill vacancies. If any doubt exists as to the form of such committee's certificate relative to the office of register of deeds, another can be filed setting forth the original candidate's death as the cause of the vacancy. Therefore this feature of the controversy demands no further attention.

It is contended that, whereas, sample and official ballots are not required to be printed and in possession of the auditor more than ten days before the day of election (Rev. Pol. Code, § 1886), defendant has until that time to decide how the ballots shall be prepared, and that this court is without authority to issue its writ before the ballots are in fact prepared. This is untenable. Had the relator delayed his demand until ten days before the day of election, his rights and those of his associates might have been lost, or the county put to the useless expense of printing erroneous ballots. Having made his demand, concerning which no doubt exists in this case, if the auditor did not express a willingness to comply therewith, it was proper to institute this proceeding, when, if defendant intended to comply with the demand, he might have disclosed such intention and have avoided any judgment for disbursements. But, having answered and contested the relator's right, he cannot be heard to say that he would or might have complied with the relator's demand.

It follows that the relator is entitled to a peremptory writ of mandamus commanding the defendant to print the names of the Babcock candidates in the regular Republican column on all ballots to be used at the coming general election in Roberts county, and to exclude the names of the Houck candidates therefrom, unless, within the period prescribed by statute, they shall be hereafter nominated as independent candidates by petition. He is also entitled to recover his taxable disbursements, but no statutory costs. Kirby v. Circuit Court, 10 S. D. 196, 72 N. W. 461; Re Kirby, 10 S. D. 416, 73 N. W. 908.

Let judgment be entered accordingly.

TENNESSEE SUPREME COURT.

ALABAMA GREAT SOUTHERN RAIL-ROAD COMPANY, Plff. in Err.,

L. BALDWIN.

(.....Tenn.....)

A railroad conductor in signaling the engineer to back the engine for the purpose of effecting a coupling acts in his capacity as representative of the master, and not as a fellow servant of the brakeman, who is attempting to prepare the cars for the coupling; so that the master will be liable in case he acts negligently to the injury of the brakeman, although the engineer would have obeyed the signal had it been given by the brakeman himself.

(October 12, 1904.)

ERROR to the Circuit Court for Hamilton County to review a judgment in favor of plaintiff in an action brought to recover damages for personal injuries for which defendant was alleged to be responsible. Affirmed.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Messrs. Shepherd & Frierson, for plaintiff in error:

The duty of the master is discharged when he exercises care with a view to selecting competent and suitable servants, and among the risks which the employee assumes, upon entering into the service, is that of injury arising from the negligence of those engaged with him in a common employment.

Illinois C. R. Co. v. Bolton, 99 Tenn. 276, 41 S. W. 442; Buswell, Personal Injuries, § 217; Hussey v. Cogger, 112 N. Y. 614, 3 L. R. A. 559, 8 Am. St. Rep. 787, 20 N. E. 556; Taylor v. Evansville & T. H. R. Co. 121 Ind. 124, 6 L. R. A. 584, 16 Am. St. Rep. 372, 22 N. E. 876; Quinn v. New Jersey Lighterage Co. 23 Fed. 363; Gann v. Nashville, C. & St. L. R. Co. 101 Tenn. 383, 70 Am. St. Rep. 687, 47 S. W. 493; Allen v. Goodwin, 92 Tenn. 385, 21 S. W. 760.

The question is not one of rank. If the superintendent was acting at the time in the capacity of a fellow servant, and his negligence caused the injury, the master is not liable.

Stockmeyer v. Reed, 55 Fed. 259, 20 C. C. A. 381, 34 U. S. App. 727, 74 Fed. 186; St. Louis, A. & T. R. Co. v. Torrey, 58 Ark. 217, 24 S. W. 244; Nall v. Louisville, N. A. & C. R. Co. 129 Ind. 264, 28 N. E. 183, 611; Hankins v. New York L. E. & W. R. Co. 142 N. Y. 416, 25 L. R. A. 396, 40 Am. St. Rep. 616, 37 N. E. 466; Ross v. Walker, 139 Pa. 42, 23 Am. St. Rep. 160, 21 Atl. 157, 159; Harrison v. Detroit, L. & N. R. Co. 79 Mich. 409, 7 L. R. A. 623, 19 Am. St. Rep. 180, 44 N. W. 1034; Texas & P. R. Co. v. Reed, 88 Tex. 439, 31 S. W. 1058; Sweeney v. Gulf, C. & S. F. R. Co. 84 Tex. 433, 31 Am. St. Rep. 71, 19 S. W. 555; 47 Cent. L. J. 130; Bailey, Personal Injuries Relating to Master & Servant, §§ 1834, 1972, 2154, 2176, 2535; National Fertilizer Co. v. Travis, 102 Tenn. 16, 49 S. W. 832; Gann v. Nashville, C. & St. L. R. Co. 101 Tenn. 380, 70 Am. St. Rep. 687, 47 S. W. 493; Knox v. Southern R. Co. 101 Tenn. 375, 47 S. W. 491; Chattanooga Electric R. Co. v. Lawson, 101 Tenn. 406, 47 S. W. 489; Boyce v. Fitzpatrick, 80 Ind. 526; Allen v. Goodwin, 92 Tenn. 385, 21 S. W. 760.

Messrs. Smith & Carswell, for defendant in error:

The conductor has entire control and management of the train to which he is assigned. In no proper sense of the terms is he a fellow servant with the firemen, the brakemen, the porters, and the engineers.

Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. v. Ross, 112 U. S. 377, 25 L. ed. 787, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 184; Illinois C. R. Co. v. Spence, 93 Tenn. 173, 42 Am. St. Rep. 907, 23 S. W. 211.

It is hard to conceive of any act of a conductor in charge of a train which could be of more official character than that of ordering the train to move.

2 Labatt, Mast. & S. § 541; Hoke v. St. Louis, K. & N. R. Co. 88 Mo. 360; Spencer v. Brooks, 97 Ga. 681, 25 S. E. 480; Devine v. Boston & A. R. Co. 159 Mass. 348, 34 N. E. 539; Patton v. Western North Carolina R. Co. 96 N. C. 455, 1 S. E. 863; Miller v.

NOTE.—As to when conductor is deemed to be a co-servant of other railway employees, see also, in this series, Jackson v. Norfolk & W. R. Co. 46 L. R. A. 337, and note; Grattis v. Kansas City, P. & G. R. Co. 48 L. R. A. 399; and Howe v. Northern P. R. Co. 60 L. R. A. 949.

For vice principalship considered with reference to the superior rank of a negligent servant, see also Stevens v. Chamberlin, 51 L. R. A. 513, and note; Norton Bros. v. Nadebok, 54 L. R. A. 842; Southern P. Co. v. Schoer, 57 L. R. A. 707; Canney v. Walkeine, 58 L. R. A.

R. A. 33; and Illinois Southern R. Co. v. Marshall, 66 L. R. A. 297.

For vice principalship as determined with respect to the character of the act which caused the injury, see Lafayette Bridge Co. v. Olsen, 54 L. R. A. 33, and note; Wellston Coal Co. v. Smith, 55 L. R. A. 99; Swift & Co. v. Bielse, 57 L. R. A. 147; Kelly v. New Haven S. B. Co. 57 L. R. A. 494; Sroufe v. Moran Bros. 58 L. R. A. 313; Knutter v. New York & N. J. Teleph. Co. 58 L. R. A. 808; Sams v. St. Louis & M. River R. Co. 61 L. R. A. 475; and Southern Indiana R. Co. v. Harrell, 63 L. R. A. 461.

Missouri P. R. Co. 109 Mo. 350, 32 Am. St. Rep. 673, 19 S. W. 58; Gann v. Nashville, C. & St. L. R. Co. 101 Tenn. 385, 70 Am. St. Rep. 687, 47 S. W. 493; Walker v. Gillett, 59 Kan. 214, 52 Pac. 442; Purcell v. Southern R. Co. 119 N. C. 728, 26 S. E. 161; Shadd v. Georgia, C. & N. R. Co. 116 N. C. 968, 21 S. E. 554; Richmond & D. R. Co. v. Williams, 86 Va. 165, 19 Am. St. Rep. 876, 9 S. E. 990; Cole Bros. v. Wood, 11 Ind. App. 37, 36 N. E. 1074; Clark v. Hughes, 51 Neb. 780, 71 N. W. 776.

Shields, J., delivered the opinion of the court:

The defendant in error, L. Baldwin, a brakeman in the employ of the plaintiff in error, while attempting to make a coupling in the operation of one of its trains, through the negligence of Edgar Fuller, conductor in charge of the train, in prematurely signaling the engineer to back his engine and a car attached for the purpose of making a coupling, had his arm caught between the bumpers of the cars to be coupled, and crushed, and brought this suit to recover the damages sustained by him, and recovered judgment.

The contention of the plaintiff in error is that Edgar Fuller, when he signaled the engineer, was not acting in his official capacity as conductor, but as a fellow servant of the defendant in error, and that it is not responsible for the negligence of which he was guilty while so acting.

There is no controversy as to how the injury was sustained. The conductor and his crew were engaged in making up a freight train, and were attempting to couple a car attached to the engine to one on the side track; both of the cars being equipped with automatic couplers. The first effort failed and another was being made when the injury was inflicted. The declaration correctly states the facts in relation to the last effort to make the coupling in these words:

"Plaintiff in the discharge of his duty thereupon went in between said cars which were then standing still, one coupled to the engine, and proceeded to adjust the said couplings by opening the 'knuckle' thereof, and to otherwise set the two drawheads so that the two cars might be properly coupled. While the plaintiff was standing in between the two said cars, entirely out of sight of the engine, and while he was endeavoring to adjust the said couplings in a proper manner, acting in a careful manner, and in the proper discharge of his duties, the defendant's conductor, Edgar Fuller, then and there the immediate superior of plaintiff, carelessly, negligently, and wrongfully signaled to the engineer to shove up the car which was attached to the engine upon and against the car to which it was to be coupled, although the said conductor knew, or by the exercise of ordinary care should have known, that the plaintiff had not adjusted said drawheads and was not ready for said coupling to be made. The engineer, upon receiving said signal from the said conductor, thereupon pushed on said car, as it was his duty to do in response to said signal, and the plaintiff's hand and arm was then and there caught in between the drawheads, deadwoods, bumpers, or ends of said two cars, and was crushed and mangled in and between said drawheads."

It also appears in evidence that the defendant in error could have given the signal to the engineer to back the engine and car, or to another brakeman to be repeated to the engineer, or to the conductor, for that purpose, and the engineer would have obeyed it. In other words, the order to the engineer to move his train backward or forward in making a coupling does not necessarily have to be given by the conductor, but may be given by a brakeman making the coupling; but the conductor may take immediate charge and direction of the matter, and give all necessary signals and orders, which Conductor Fuller did on this occasion.

The conductor of a train is the superior in authority and grade in every train crew, and has charge of the train and its operations, and all the other members of the crew are under his control and subject to his orders, which they must obey, regardless of whether they concur in the necessity or propriety of them. He is the representative of the company, and is vested with all of its authority over the train and its crew in the work being done, and charged with all the duties and responsibilities, which the company owes to its employees, engaged in this perhaps the most hazardous of all industrial pursuits, chief of which is the duty to carefully and skilfully superintend the movements of its cars and trains for the prevention of accidents, upon the proper discharge of which the safety of the employees is so greatly dependent. He is a vice principal of the company, and it is liable for his negligence when acting in his official capacity. Illinois C. R. Co. v. Spence, 93 Tenn. 181, 182, 42 Am. St. Rep. 907, 23 S. W. 211; Chicago, M. & St. P. R. Co. v. Ross, 112 U. S. 377, 28 L. ed. 787, 5 Sup. Ct. Rep. 184.

This is conceded by the plaintiff in error to be the general rule, but it insists that a vice principal may act in a dual capacity,—that is, he may lay aside his official or representative character, and engage in the common service with the employees who are under him and subject to his orders; and when he does so he is a fellow servant only, and any negligence of which he may be guilty while so acting is personal, and that of a fellow servant, for which the employer is not liable; and that in this case the order or signal to the engineer to move his engine backward, being one which could have been given by a brakeman, was of this character. The cases of Allen v. Goodwin, 92 Tenn. 386, 21 S. W. 760; Illinois C. R. Co. v. Bolton, 99 Tenn. 274, 41 S. W. 442; and Gann v. Nashville, C. & St. L. R. Co. 101 Tenn. 380, 70 Am. St. Rep. 687, 47 S. W. 493, are cited to sustain this contention.

The rule in this state, as held in these cases, unquestionably is that a vice principal may at times lay aside his official character and engage in the common service of the other servants of the employer over which he has control, and that his acts and negligence, while thus engaged, are those of a fellow servant, for which the employer is not ordinarily responsible; but he cannot act in both capacities at the same time, and, in order to exonerate the employer, the service or act in performance of which he is engaged must be strictly that of a fellow servant, and not one which it is his duty to do, or which he may do, as a superior or vice principal. The cases in which the doctrine has been applied by this court are where the vice principal was, at the time the injury was inflicted through his negligence, engaged solely in the work or service of a common employee. In all those above cited, the vice principal was performing manual labor along with the other employees. In Allen v. Goodwin the negligence complained of was that of a foreman, working upon a building in a position above the plaintiff, in dropping a piece of pipe upon him.

In Illinois C. R. Co. v. Bolton a section boss negligently injured one of the section men under him while he was personally assisting him in lifting and unloading some heavy timbers; and in Gann v. Nashville, C. & St. L. R. Co. the action was sought to be maintained on account of the negligence of the section boss in operating the brake upon a hand car, which was the work of the section men under him, whereby the car was thrown from the track and one of the men injured.

In none of these cases, or any other to which we have been cited, was the injury the result of a negligent order or direction given by a superior servant.

The vice principal cannot act in the capacity of superior and fellow servant at one and the same time, and, if the act is one which he could do in either capacity, it will be held to have been done in the capacity in which it is his special duty to act; but the nature of the act may also be considered in determining the character 67 L. R. A.

in which he was acting. The giving of orders, and a signal, is as much an order as if spoken, is essentially the province of the master or his representative, and when given by them to a servant, or one under their control, it will be presumed to be made in the capacity of master, and must be obeyed.

The fact that the engineer would have obeyed the signal, if given by the brakeman, is immaterial, since the order was in fact given by his superior in the line of his authority, and he had no discretion but to obey it. There seems to be no conflict in the authorities upon this subject. In the late work of Mr. Labatt on Master and Servant [vol. 2, § 541] it is said: "The logical consequence, if not the actual effect, of some decisions referred to in § 544, supra, is to absolve the master even from the results of complying with the negligent order of a vice principal, where such order relates merely to the details of the work. But there is an overwhelming weight of authority to sustain the doctrine that the liability to which the master is declared to be subject, wherever 'the negligent act is the direct result of the exercise of power conferred by the master, in the performance of a duty devolving by law upon him,' is predicable in the case of orders issued in respect to the work, whatever may be the precise object to which those orders may have relation. It is, in fact, difficult to see what more indisputable example there can be of an 'exercise of authority' than the giving of such orders, and, for the purpose of affecting the master with liability in this instance, it is obviously quite immaterial whether the delinquent employee be a mere superior servant or a general or departmental manager. According to the great majority of the cases, therefore, all that is necessary to fix liability upon the master is that the negligent order which caused the injury should be proved to be incident to the performance of the duties of his position. The order may be a negligent one because the servant is directed to use dangerously defective appliances, or to work in an abnormally dangerous place, or to do work in a dangerous manner, or to do something which, under the circumstances, will render the place of work abnormally dangerous for a fellow servant." The author cites numerous cases, which, so far as we have access to them, seem to fully sustain the text.

In the case of Hoke v. St. Louis, K. & N. R. Co. 88 Mo. 360, it is said: "Where a roadmaster of a railroad, having general superintendence of its track, while engaged in superintending and directing the removal of a wrecked train, but not in the manual work of removing a wreck, gives a wrong signal to the engineer of a train assisting in removing the wreck, whereby a laborer engaged in the work of removal is injured, the railroad is liable therefor . . . The roadmaster was not a fellow servant of the one injured in the transaction in which the injury was received, but represented the company therein as vice principal, or alter ego, and his negligence in the matter, causing the injury, was that of the company. . . . In the case at bar, as has been seen, Tracy, whose negligence and carelessness in giving signals to the engineer occasioned the injury in question, was not at the time engaged or assisting in the manual work of removing said wreck from the roadbed and track of defendant, or in loading said wrecked car upon said wrecking train, . . . but was engaged as such in superintending, directing, and controlling said laborers, including plaintiff, in said work, and in that particular was in the line of his duty;" and the road was liable.

And in a recent case decided by the supreme court of Georgia, where the facts were almost the same as those in the case at bar, it was held: "It was complained that the trial judge, in his charge to the jury, erred in assuming that the conductor was the alter ego of the defendants on the occasion in question, thereby excluding the theory of the defendants that they were fellow servants, and that the company was, therefore, not liable for any injury resulting from the negligence of the conductor. Ordinarily the conductor of a train has control of its movements, and brakemen connected with the train are, while engaged in coupling cars to the train at stations, subject to his orders and under his control; and he is not, when directing the movements of the train and giving orders to the brakeman and engineer in connection therewith, a fellow servant of such employees, within the meaning of the rule as to fellow servants, but is a vice principal of the master. See Mills v. East Tennessee, V. & G. R. Co. 87 Ga. 105, 13 S. E. 205; Prather v. Richmond & D. R. Co. 80 Ga. 436, 12 Am. St.

Rep. 263, 9 S. E. 530, and cases cited." Spencer v. Brooks, 97 Ga. 681, 25 S. E. 480.

The supreme court of Massachusetts, in the case of Devine v. Boston & A. R. Co. 159 Mass. 351, 34 N. E. 539, where the plaintiff was injured by the negligence of the conductor in improperly signaling the engineer to move back some cars, said: "He [the conductor] gave the stop motion, as he himself testified, to the first three cars that were detached from the train. He also testified that he gave the kick motion for the two that struck the bunting post; but he does not seem to remember whether he gave the stop motion for them that morning or not. Nobody appears to remember who gave the stop motion that morning for these two cars. It appears from the testimony of the engineer and conductor that the stop motion was usually given by the conductor. It also appears from the testimony of the conductor that, when the two cars were kicked onto the stub track, he stood at the switch. It is not unreasonable to suppose that that was a place from which the stop motion could be easily given. It is said that the switchman sometimes gave the motion, but naturally he would not give it with the conductor at the switch." And the road was held liable for the negligent signal, although, as seen, the switchman also had authority to give the signal.

The same rule has been announced and applied in the cases of Walker v. Gillett, 59 Kan. 214, 52 Pac. 442; Purcell v. Southern R. Co. 119 N. C. 728-738, 26 S. E. 161; Richmond & D. R. Co. v. Williams, 86 Va. 165, 19 Am. St. Rep. 876, 9 S. E. 990; Cole Bros. v. Wood, 11 Ind. App. 37, 36 N. E. 1074; and Clark v. Hughes, 51 Neb. 780, 71 N. W. 776.

We are therefore of the opinion that there is evidence of negligence upon the part of the railroad company to sustain this verdict, and the assignment of error to the contrary, and under which this question is made, is overruled, and the judgment of the Circuit Court affirmed.

MISSOURI SUPREME COURT.

STATE of Missouri, Respt.,

v.

O. MONTGOMERY, Alias Frank Gale,
Appt. .

(181 Mo. 19.)

1. The ownership of money in a cash

NOTE.—Robbery by taking from one person property belonging to another.

I. Introduction, 343.

II. In general, 344.

67 L. R. A.

drawer, of which a clerk has possession with the right to make change therefrom and place receipts from sales therein, may be laid in such clerk as against one who, in the absence of the proprietor, by exhibiting a deadly weapon, compels the clerk to permit him to take the money from the drawer, although the clerk claims no

III. Taking from wife or servant, 346.

IV. Conclusion, 351.

I. Introduction.

Robbery at common law is defined as the personal interest in the money, and is not held accountable for its loss, where the statutes permit an indictment for robbery for taking money from the clerk or agent.

2. Failure to verify an information for robbery is waived if no objection is made on that ground.

(February 1, 1904.)

A PPEAL by defendant from a judgment of the Criminal Court for Jackson County convicting him of robbery. Affirmed.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Messrs. A. C. Durham and L. E. Durham for appellant.

Messrs. Edward C. Crow, Attorney General, and Bruce Barnett for respondent.

felonious taking of money or goods of any value from the person of another or in his presence, against his will, by violence or putting him in fear. 2 East, P. C. 707; 1 Hale, P. C. 532; 1 Hawk. P. C. 147; 4 Bl. Com. 241. This definition has been followed by most of the statutes, and, even where the language has been varied sufficiently to sustain, by a literal interpretation, a narrower definition of the offense, it has usually been held that it could not be presumed that the legislature intended to change the nature of the crime as understood at common law. It is necessary, to constitute the crime, that the property taken should be that of some person other than he who takes it, but it is not necessary that it should be the property of the person from whom taken.

II. In general.

In Stegar v. State, 39 Ga. 583, 99 Am. Dec. 472, it is held that a person in the actual possession of money has such a qualified ownership in it as is necessary to constitute the offense of robbery in any person who wrongfully, fraudulently, and violently takes it from his person by force or intimidation without his consent. In this case on an indictment for robbery a motion was made in arrest of judgment on the ground that the indictment alleged that the money was the property of a certain woman, and was taken from her daughter without the latter's consent, and that there was no allegation that it was done without the consent of the mother, who was charged to be the owner. The court said that this might have been a good objection to the bill of indictment on special demurrer, but that they were not prepared to say it was good in arrest of judgment; adding that the possession, if legal, constituted the necessary ownership, though there might be a question whether the ownership in the daughter was sufficiently alleged.

That the felonious taking of a pistol in the possession of a person from his person or immediate presence and against his will, accomplished by means of force or fear, constitutes robbery, whether the pistol was his property or that of another, is held in People v. Anderson, 80 Cal. 205, 22 Pac. 139. It was contended in this case that the defendant should have been acquitted because of a variance between the allegations of the information which laid the property in the pistol in the person robbed, and the proof at the trial, which showed it to Gantt, P. J., delivered the opinion of the court:

The defendant was convicted in the criminal court of Jackson county of robbery in the first degree, and sentenced to ten years' imprisonment in the penitentiary.

The information is in two counts, as follows:

"Now comes Rowland Hughes, prosecuting attorney for the state of Missouri, in and for the body of the county of Jackson, and, upon his official oath, informs the court that O. Montgomery, alias Frank Gale, whose Christian name in full is unknown to said prosecuting attorney, late of the county of Jackson aforesaid, on the 4th day of January, 1903, at the county of Jackson, state of

be the property of another person; but the court held that, the pistol having been in the possession of the person named in the information when violently taken by the defendant, the act of robbery charged was the same whether the pistol was his property or that of another person not the defendant.

So, an indictment which alleges the forcible taking from one person of property belonging to another, and which fails to aver the character of the possession of the person from whom it was taken, or that he was the agent or servant of the owner, or that it was taken without the knowledge and consent of the owner, is held, in People v. Shuler, 28 Cal. 490, to be sufficient under a statute defining robbery as the felonious and violent taking of money or other valuable thing from the person of another by force or intimidation. The court held that the statute did not require that the indictment should in terms contain a statement that the property was taken without the consent of the owner, or that the bailee had the right of possession; that, having possession of it, the law deems that possession rightful; and adds that, when money or goods are stolen out of the possession of the bailee, they may be described in the indictment as the property of either bailor or bailee.

And that it is not necessary, to make out a case of robbery, that the property should belong to the party from whose possession it is forcibly taken, is said, obiter, in People v. Vice, 21 Cal. 345.

This statement is quoted in People v. Ammerman, 118 Cal. 23, 50 Pac. 15, where an information for robbery that failed entirely to allege the ownership of the property was held to be fatally defective. Nothing is decided as to the necessity of the person from whom the property is taken being the owner, but this quotation from People v. Vice seems to imply that an allegation of ownership merely in some person other than the accused was considered to be sufficient.

That robbery may be committed by a taking from one not the owner of the property is also recognized in Smedly v. State, 30 Tex. 215, where the court said that the indictment must state correctly the ownership of the property, and that all the approved common-law forms set forth the ownership of the property taken as well as the name of the person from whom it was taken; adding that the Texas statute had not changed the rules of the common law in re-

Missouri, in and upon one William I. Mills unlawfully and feloniously did make an assault, and twenty-two dollars, in lawful money of the United States, of the value of twenty-two dollars, the money and property of said Williams I. Mills, and in the presence of the said William I. Mills, and against the will of said William I. Mills, then and there, by putting said William I. Mills in fear of immediate injury to his person, feloniously did rob, steal, take, and carry away, against the said peace and dignity of the state.

"And the prosecuting attorney aforesaid, upon his oath aforesaid, further informs the court that O. Montgomery, alias Frank Gale, whose Christian name in full is unknown to said prosecuting attorney, late of the county aforesaid, at the county of Jackson and state of Missouri, on the 4th day of January, 1903, in and upon one William I. Mills unlawfully and feloniously did make an assault, and twenty-two dollars, in lawful money of the United States, of the value of twenty-two dollars, the money of T. J. Radford, which said money was then and there in the care, custody, and control of the said William I. Mills as the clerk of the said T. J. Radford, and in the presence of the said William I. Mills, then and there being, and against the will of the said William I. Mills, then and there, by putting the said William I. Mills in fear of immediate injury to his person, feloniously did rob, steal, take, and carry away, against the peace and dignity of the state."

quoting that it must clearly appear that the article taken belonged to some person other than the accused, or that the party deprived of the possession through violence is entitled to such possession as against the defendant. In this case the indictment charged the taking of a gun from one person, "the said gun being the corporeal personal property of one ———," and it was held defective in failing to state the name of the owner. The court remarked that, had the indictment charged that the gun was the property of the person from whom it was taken, it would probably have been supported by proof that the article was in his legal custody, though belonging to a third person.

Similar rulings are made in Barnes v. State, 9 Tex. App. 128, Boles v. State, 58 Ark. 35, 22 S. W. 887, and Com. v. Clifford, 8 Cush. 215, in all of which the indictments failed to allege the ownership of the property; and the court held that it was necessary to show that the property belonged to some person other than the one accused of its robbery. In none of the cases is the question whether it is necessary that the person robbed be the owner of the property raised. It seems to be taken for granted that this is not necessary.

So, in State v. Hobgood, 46 La. Ann. 855, 15 So. 406, it is held that possession of property, though without title thereto, is sufficient to support a charge of robbery. In this case it was attempted to destroy the allegations of ownership of the property by the person robbed by showing that he had failed to place it on the assessment roll, but the court said that such failure did not in itself destroy his actual or apparent ownership of the property.

And in State v. Nelson, 11 Nev. 334, it is held that in an indictment for robbery of the property of an express company from a stage coach the ownership of the money may be laid in the driver of the coach. The court said that the rule as to the ownership of the property is no more stringent in cases of robbery than in cases of larceny; that the only thing essential in either case seems to be an averment which shall show conclusively that the property does not belong to the defendants.

In Reed v. State, 88 Ala. 36, 6 So. 840, an indictment for robbery charging the felonious taking from the possession of a person by violence of certain articles and a certain sum of money, the property of another person, was held sufficient to support a judgment of conviction. 67 L. R. A.

The indictment was objected to on the ground that the description of the money was insufficient, and nothing is said about the fact that the stolen property did not belong to the person from whom it was taken.

While in Danzy v. State, 126 Ala. 15, 28 So. 697, an indictment for robbery from one who was not the owner of the property was held not to be subject to demurrer because it failed to aver that the person from whom the property was taken was lawfully in possession, or that he was the legal custodian of the money, the possession of the money by the person from whom it was taken being prima facie presumed lawful. Nothing is said as to the effect of the ownership of the property.

In Spencer's Case, 2 East, P. C. chap. 16, § 128, p. 712, the prosecutor swore that, having in his possession corn belonging to other persons, the prisoner came to him, together with a great mob marching in military order, and said that, if he would not sell the corn for a certain sum, they would take it by force, on which the prosecutor sold the corn for the sum offered, which was less than its value. This was held to be robbery, and the prisoner was convicted and executed. The sufficiency of the prosecutor's ownership to sustain the indictment was not questioned. This seemed to be taken for granted.

In a note to King v. Taylor, 1 Leach, C. L. 356, it is said that it was held in the case of Ralph Packer at the Old Bailey in April session, 1714, that goods stolen from a washerwoman, who takes in the linen of other persons to wash, may be laid to be her property, for persons of this description have a possessory property, and are answerable to their employers, and can maintain a bill of robbery or larceny and have restitution.

And it is held in Wright's Case, Style, 156, without any discussion of the question, that, if a man's servant be robbed of his master's goods in sight of his master, it shall be taken for a robbery of the master.

A conviction of robbery was had in People v. Oldham, 111 Cal. 648, 44 Pac. 312, on an indictment alleging the taking of money of an express company from the driver of a stage to whom it had been intrusted for transportation. The question treated in this note was not considered, the point under discussion being the necessity of proving the ownership of the express company. The court held that the pos-

At the trial the state was required to elect, and the second count was dismissed.

The facts in evidence were these. On the 4th day of January, 1903, about 10:15 p. m., the defendant entered the drug store of Mr. T. J. Radford, located at the corner of Ninth and Locust streets, in Kansas City, Missouri. Mr. Radford was at that time at his home, in the suburbs of the city, and William I. Mills, his clerk, was in charge of the store. The defendant walked in, pointed a revolver at Mills, and commanded him to throw up his hands. The clerk complied with the demand, while defendant took about $22 in money from the cash register of the store. Putting the money in his pocket, defendant backed out of the store and escaped. Two days afterwards he was arrested by a detective, and identified by Mills. The evidence of the state further showed that the money alleged to have been taken was not the property of said Mills, as charged in the information, but was the property of his employer, Mr. Radford; that Mills was a clerk in the store, and had charge of the store and the money in the register, with authority to put the money received on sales therein, and to take cash therefrom to make change, and had no other interest in the money taken or in the store, and was not, under the terms of his employment, required to make good the loss of this money.

Mills testified:

Q. Did Mr. Radford hold you responsible for that money after it was gone?

A. No, sir; he didn't.

session by the driver of the state was the possession of the company, and that, in the absence of evidence to the contrary in larceny or robbery, proof of the possession of the stolen property by the person from whom it was taken is sufficient evidence of ownership.

In United States v. Wood, 3 Wash. C. C. 440, Fed. Cas. No. 16,756, the prisoner was indicted for aiding in the robbery of the mail, putting the life of the carrier in jeopardy by means of dangerous weapons. There is nothing to show in whom the property was laid in this indictment, but it is evident that the carrier could not have had more than a special property in the mail carried, and so it is a case of robbery by taking from one person the property of another.

All cases in which the robbery was from a wife or servant have been placed in the next division, even when the subject is discussed generally, and not with reference to the question whether a wife or servant can have a special ownership in property of another in her or his possession.

III. Taking from wife or servant.

That the violent taking from a wife or servant of property belonging to another constitutes robbery is now well settled, even under statutes requiring the taking to be from the person or in the presence of the owner, although the possession of the wife may be regarded as that of her husband, and the possession of the servant as that of his master.

One of the leading cases is that of Brooks v. People, 49 N. Y. 436, 10 Am. Rep. 398, which was a case of robbery from a house left in charge of a minor child by putting her in fear, and in which it was contended that she was not the owner, but the mere servant of the owner, her father; that her possession was his; and that, therefore, she had no special property in the articles taken. The statute defined robbery as the felonious taking of the personal property of another from his person or in his presence and against his will, by violence to his person or by putting him in fear. The court held, however, that this did not mean that the property should belong absolutely to the person robbed; that this was not necessary at common law; and that it did not seem to have been the intention of the statute to alter the common law; that, while the language of the statute, taken literally, declared that the person robbed must own the property, this simply meant that it must belong to someone other than the prisoner, and that the property must be taken from the person or in the presence of the person robbed. The court argues that, if all property found in the actual custody of the person robbed is not held to be his property under this statute, then whenever the master of the house is absent the house may be robbed with impunity so far as robbery is concerned, and, if a servant be intrusted with money to be deposited in a bank, and is robbed on his way, it is larceny merely, but not robbery; and concludes that, though such a construction is within the letter, it is not within the spirit or purpose, of the act, and that a purpose to change the common law should not be imputed, unless that purpose is plainly evinced. There were two counts in this indictment, one charging the goods to be the property of the daughter, and the other that they were the property of the father; and it was held that, as against the robber, the girl was the owner, though, as between her and her father, the latter had the possession and title, and that, therefore the property might be laid as belonging either to the actual owner or to the person robbed.

This decision seems to be much more reasonable than that in State v. Lawler, 130 Mo. 366, 51 Am. St. Rep. 575, 32 S. W. 979, where, under a statute almost identical with the New York statute, it was held that, in order to constitute robbery, the property must be taken from the person of the owner or in his presence, and that an indictment alleging the forcible taking from a woman of money belonging to her husband, who was not present at the time, was insufficient. The court admits that there is no doubt that the property may be laid either in the general owner or in a special owner, as a bailee, pawnee, carrier, and the like, but holds that a wife or servant cannot be included in such category, inasmuch as neither has the property or possession; adding that the turning-point and test rule in all cases of this sort may be formulated in the question, Did the party, alleged in the indictment to be the owner, have such a property or right of possession in the goods as would enable him to maintain an action for them if taken out of his custody? Tested by this rule, the court says that it must be obvious

Q. You were merely clerking there?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. You have no interest in that store?

A. None whatever.

Q. The money belonged to Mr. Radford?

A. Yes, sir.

The defendant introduced no evidence, but bottoms his appeal upon the fact of the variance between the allegation in the information that the money taken was the property of Mills, and the proof that it belonged, not to Mills, but to his employer, Radford.

The court refused to give the following instruction offered by the defendant, to which action the defendant excepted at the time: "The court instructs the jury that, if they find from the evidence in this case that the money alleged to have been stolen was not the property of the said William I. Mills, but the property of T. J. Radford, and that he had no specific property therein, then they will acquit the defendant of the charge of robbery as alleged in said information."

As the law of this state had been adjudged prior to March 24, 1903 (Mo. Laws 1903, p. 162), to constitute the crime of robbery the taking must be laid in the indictment, and proved on the trial, to be from the person or in the presence of the owner—either the true owner, or one having such a special property therein, as a bailee, pawnee, carrier, or the like, as would enable him or her to maintain an action therefor if taken out of his or her custody. State v. Lawler, 130 Mo. 366, 51 Am. St. Rep. 575, 32 S. W. 979:

to even casual observation that the wife in this case had no such special ownership in the property taken as would enable her to maintain an action for it, and remarks that, not only does the indictment fail to allege ownership of any kind in her, but, on the contrary, alleges it to be in her husband, and that it is difficult to understand how robbery could be committed in the absence of the real or special owner. The court lays much stress on the fact that the statute requires the property to be taken from the person or in the presence of the owner; and it seems as if, in its desire to comply strictly with the requirements of the statute in this respect, it enforced the literal terms of its provisions at the expense of the spirit thereof. If it is necessary, to constitute the crime of robbery, that the property must be taken in the presence of the owner, and a servant or wife is not deemed to have a sufficient interest in property in his or her possession to constitute him or her a special owner, then in all such cases the person taking the property must escape conviction for robbery, no matter how great the violence used in the taking, though it is the violence used that constitutes the real essence of the crime of robbery, and distinguishes it from larceny. The court argues at great length that at common law it was necessary that the person robbed be either the absolute or the special owner, and that an indictment laying the property in a wife or servant was defective; but most of the cases cited by it to sustain this proposition were cases of larceny, holding that an indictment for larceny from a wife or servant must lay the property in the husband or master. To draw from these cases the inference that one violently taking property from a wife or servant is not guilty of robbery is not justified, even though it be conceded that the possession of the wife is that of her husband, and of the servant that of the master.

It is doubtless true that at common law it was necessary to lay the property in the husband in case of a robbery from a wife. Only one case of this kind has been found—that of Reg. v. Sallows, 2 Cox, C. C. 63—in which a married woman was assaulted, and a purse containing money which she had found lying in the road was violently taken from her. In the indictment the purse and money were described as the property of the woman's husband, and it was contended that this was error, as the purse really belonged to the person who had lost it, and that the wife had a special property in it independent of her husband and good against everyone but the individual who had actually lost it. The court held, however, that the property was rightly laid as that of her husband, since the possession of a married woman under all circumstances is the possession of the husband, and, if the circumstances are such as to constitute only that special kind of property to which reference was made, it is still the special property, not of the wife, but of the husband.

This case sustains the contention of the Lawler Case, that the possession of a wife is that of her husband. But at common law this fact was important merely in determining the form of the indictment. It did not affect the character of the offense committed by the violent assault and taking, since the crime of robbery as understood at common law did not necessarily require a taking from the owner. The essence of the offense consisted in the manner of the taking, which was the only thing that distinguished it from larceny. There is absolutely nothing either in the cases or the textbooks which, when reasonably interpreted, sustains the contention of the Lawler Case, that at common law it was necessary that the taking be from the person or in the presence of the owner. If the question were merely one of pleading, as it doubtless was at common law, it would be of small importance; but, if statutes defining robbery as the violent taking of property from the person of the owner or in his presence are to be interpreted literally, as is done in the Lawler Case, then one may rob from a wife or servant, and subject himself to no greater liability than in case of larceny.

On the authority of the Lawler Case, an indictment for robbery of money from a saloon at night while in charge of the bartender was held, in State v. Morledge, 164 Mo. 522, 65 S. W. 226, to be fatally defective in laying the ownership of the money in the bartender instead of in the real owner. It was contended that, since the offense charged was robbery in the first degree, the proof should show that the money was taken from the possession or in the presence of the real owner, and that, as it appeared from the evidence that the bartender was not the owner, but only a servant or employee left temporarily in the possession of the State v. Morledge, 164 Mo. 522, 65 S. W. 226. And it was expressly ruled in the case last cited that a clerk, such as Mills was in this case, had no such special property in the goods as would authorize the ownership of the property to be laid in him. Since the enactment of the statute of March 24, 1903, the offense can be charged for the taking from the wife, servant, clerk, or agent.

We are again confronted with the question whether the evidence in this case is sufficient to sustain the charge of robbery. The defendant relies upon State v. Morledge, 164 Mo. 522, 65 S. W. 226, and, if that case is to be followed, he is entitled to a reversal. The decision in that case was predicated upon State v. Lawler, 130 Mo. 366, 51 Am. St. Rep. 575, 32 S. W. 979. There is, property, the defendant could not be convicted under the indictment. The court sustained this contention, and held that the possession of the money was that of the bartender's employers, and the indictment should have so shown. It should seem from this that the court considered the question to be merely one of the sufficiency of the indictment, and that an indictment charging the robbery from the servant, but laying the ownership of the property in the master, would have been good. And yet, it is difficult to see how this could be if, as claimed in State v. Lawler, it is necessary that the property should be taken from the person or in the presence of the owner.

However, these cases are no longer law in Missouri, it being held in State v. MONTGOMERY that, under the act of March 24, 1903, robbery may be charged for a taking from a wife, servant, clerk, etc., as well as from the absolute or special owner. And the court in this case says that the conclusion reached in State v. Lawler, that under no circumstances can the goods be laid in the servant, is not supported by the common law authorities, on which the court in the Lawler Case relied, but that, on the contrary, his possession is sufficient as against a robber or trespasser and all others but the true owner; and adds that they do not think that the rule laid down in State v. Morledge, that the party in whom the goods are laid must have such a special interest in them by lien or otherwise as would enable him to maintain an action for their possession or injury thereto against any other person than the true owner, applies to a prosecution for robbery. The facts in this case were almost identical with those in the Morledge Case, and the court concludes that the possession of the servant in charge of the store with the implied obligation of exercising ordinary care of his employer's goods and property was such as authorized the property to be laid in him, and that the court's opinion in State v. Morledge ought no longer to be followed as the law of the state; and that so much of State v. Lawler as holds that the possession of a wife or servant in circumstances such as shown by the record in the present case is not sufficient in a prosecution for robbery to justify the laying of the goods in them should also be overruled.

A case very similar in its facts to the Morledge Case is that of State v. Gorham, 55 N. H. 152, in which money was forcibly taken from 67 L. R. A.

however, this distinction between the two cases: In State v. Lawler the indictment alleged an assault upon, and putting in fear of, Mrs. Sexaner, and the taking of the goods and money of George Sexaner, whereas in the Morledge Case the indictment charged the assault upon, and putting in fear of, John Resmussen, and the taking of the money of said John Resmussen. In an exhaustive decision by Judge Sherwood, in Lawler's Case, as to the essentials of a good indictment for robbery, the conclusion was reached that the money or goods must be laid in the general or special owner, and it was said it was sufficient that they be laid in a bailee, pawnee, carrier, or the like. State v. Moore, 101 Mo. 316, 14 S. W. 182. "But in such category a wife or servant cana person who, while employed as a carpenter by the owner of a saloon, was left temporarily in charge of the saloon. The indictment laid the property in the money in the person robbed, though he had received it in payment for liquor sold, and it belonged to his employer; and this was held to be correct, notwithstanding the contention by counsel that, although there might be a sufficient ownership of goods stolen in one who had only a special property in them, yet, where the person from whom the money was taken was a mere servant of the real owner, the one taking it could not be convicted of robbery, as the possession of a servant is the possession of the master.

In contradiction of the statement in the Lawler Case that it was uniformly held at common law that the taking must be from the person or in the presence of the owner is the case of Reg. v. Rudick, 8 Car. & P. 237, in which the indictment charged the prisoners with having robbed a certain person of a sum of money, the property of another person, who was his master. It appeared that the servant had been sent by his master to receive the money from certain customers, and that he was on his return to the master's house when the money was taken from him. It was contended that the money could not be laid as the property of the master because it had never reached his hands, except by the possession of the servant, and Alderson, B., in delivering the opinion of the court, said that he was inclined to think the objection valid, as it was difficult to see how such an offense as embezzlement could have been a part of the criminal law if the possession by the servant of property which had never come to the hands of his master were construed to be in the possession of the master. He added that he should certainly reserve the question, but that, as the grand jury were still sitting, it would be better to prefer a fresh bill so as not to raise the question. A fresh bill was, therefore, taken and sent to the grand jury, which laid the money in one count as the property of the servant, and in the other as the property of the master, and on this indictment the prisoners were convicted. This case is universally cited to sustain the statement that in case of a robbery from a servant of money of the master, the property thereof may be laid in the servant; but, as seen by the statement of the facts above, the question was really not decided. Nevertheless it is authority for the contention that a person may not be included." That the great weight of authority, at common law, sustains Judge Sherwood's opinion as to the possession of a wife at common law, we think there can be no doubt, because the possession of the wife was prima facie the possession of the husband, and by the common law she could have neither real nor personal property in possession. Hughes v. Com. 17 Gratt. 565, 94 Am. Dec. 498; Wade's Case, 17 Pick. 395; Com. v. Williams, 7 Gray, 337; Com. v. Cullins, 1 Mass. 116. But this doctrine has been so modified by statute that it can no longer be said to obtain in most of our states. The question presented by this record and in the Morledge Case is whether a clerk left in charge of, and intrusted with the care of, his employer's cash, with authority to sell his goods and make change out of the drawer, is not a person in whom the ownership of such money may be laid, as against a robber. Certainly, if he is over sixteen years of age, he may be convicted of embezzlement of such money, if he fraudulently converts it to his own use without the consent of his master or employer. What, then, was the relation of Mills to the cash left in his possession in the cash register, and what his obligation in respect thereto? It is no answer to the question to show that his employer, Mr. Radford, did not hold him responsible for the money which was taken from his possession by putting him in fear of his life by presenting a revolver at his head. Is it the law that, if the president or cashier of a bank should be temporarily abbe guilty of robbery in forcibly taking an article of value from another, although the latter is not the owner thereof.

While in 2 East, P. C. 654, it is said that a man may even be guilty of robbery of his own goods, as if he send his servant with money, and afterwards waylay and rob him with intent to charge the hundred; and that in this case there could be no objection to laying the property of the goods in the servant, for, though in general it may be said that he had no property in them as against his master, although he had against every other person, yet, having a clear right to defend his possession against the master's unlawful demand, the special property still remained in the servant, but that a taking from the servant of the money or goods of his master in his presence by putting in fear is a taking from the master, and the offender may be indicted for robbing him.

And, as said in State v. Adams, 58 Kan. 365, 49 Pac. 81, where the Lawler Case was considered in passing upon an information for robbery under a statute very similar to the Missouri act: "It cannot be that the legislature ever intended to give less protection against violence to a wife or child in the possession of property belonging to the husband or father, or to a servant in the possession of the property of his master, than to the owner himself when in possession of his own property. The characteristic of robbery . . . lies in the violence inflicted on the person of the one in possession of the property, or in putting him in fear of injury to his person. So far as the mere taking of the property is concerned, the offense is neither greater nor less than if filched in any other way. . . . At common law it was never held that the property taken must belong to the person robbed. It was sufficient that the property belonged to the person robbed or some third person. . . . As against the robber, a servant has the same right, and rests under the same duty, to preserve and defend his possession of the property that the owner has. He is the custodian, and has a right to oppose, with violence if necessary, the violence offered by the robber. As against him he stands as the owner."

An indictment for robbery charging a taking from the person and possession of a married woman and laying the property in her husband was also held, in State v. Ah Lol, 5 Nev. 99, to be good as against the contention that, to constitute the offense of robbery, the property must be taken from the possession of the real owner. The court said that the gist of the crime was the violent taking from the person of another against his will, and that it was not essential that the person robbed be the absolute owner of the property taken, that it was sufficient if it appear that the property did not belong to the prisoner; adding that, if the person robbed have a general or special property in, or a right of possession of, the goods taken, it is sufficient; otherwise the statute would be defeated, and there would be no robbery except when property is taken from the person or the immediate presence of the absolute owner, which, fortunately, is not the law.

In case of an indictment for the robbery of a key, containing several counts, in some of which the property in the key was laid in the person from whom it was taken, who was janitor of a bank, and in other counts was laid in the bank, it was contended that the indictment was not good, since, to constitute a valid indictment for the offense of robbery in the first degree under the statute, it must be averred that the property was taken from the person or in the presence of its owner and against his will, and by violence to his person, or by putting him in fear, and that, therefore, an indictment averring the taking of the property of one person by committing violence upon another is not good. The case of Brooks v. People, 49 N. Y. 436, 10 Am. Rep. 398, supra, was cited by the prosecution to sustain the sufficiency of the indictment, but the court held that it was not material to examine that question, since in all the counts the robbery was alleged to have been committed upon the janitor, and the first and second counts, which laid the property in him, were conceded to be good; and that, even if the others were bad, that would be no ground for directing an acquittal of the prisoner on the whole indictment. Hope v. People, 83 N. Y. 418, 38 Am. Rep. 460. In this case the question seems to be treated as one of pleading merely, and the fact that a robbery had been committed to be conceded. And the fact that the person robbed was a mere servant is not discussed.

It is apparently held in Crews v. State, 3 Coldw. 350, that a conviction of robbery cannot be had on an indictment in which the property taken is laid in the husband where the possession was in the wife and the property taken sent from the bank, a robber may with impunity enter the bank, and present a revolver or gun at the clerks left in charge, and take all the money of the bank, and escape punishment for robbery? Or, to state it differently, if a gentleman confide to his friend his watch, for convenience, and, after they part, a robber places his revolver at the friend's head, and, by putting him in fear, takes the watch, there can be no robbery, because the real owner was not present, and was not put in fear, and, as the friend was not a bailee for hire, and makes no claim of any property rights, other than his possession, therefore the ownership cannot be laid in him. The question is one of much practical moment. Mr. Mills bore a contract relation to Mr. Radford, by which, in consideration of his wages as clerk, the law, in the absence of an express agreement, implied a promise on his part to exercise care and prudence in the management of Mr. Radford's store in the course of his employment. Certainly the law imposed upon him the obligation of collecting the price of the goods he sold, and of accounting for the same. He was, for that purpose, intrusted with the cash register; and by virtue of his employment he was authorized to take money out of the register to make change when he sold an article, and was required to place his receipts in the register. He was an agent for hire, and Mr. Radford had, by the course of business adopted, delivered to him the possession of the cash in the register, in law, as effectually as if he had gone through the most formal act of delivery. The delivery in this case, while not the transfer of the absolute title to Mr. Radford's money, was a transfer of its possession, with its accompanying temporary rights. Even bailees without reward have an interest sufficient to enable them to sue tortfeasors, and to maintain trover against all strangers to the bailment who wrongfully invade their possession. Possession is prima facie evidence of right, and the party who seeks to dispossess should show a better title; and, moreover, the possessor sustains a responsibility to the true owner. The language of the statute defining robbery in the first degree is: "Every person who shall be convicted of feloniously taking the property of another from his person or in his presence and against his will by violence to his person or by putting him in fear of some immediate injury to his person, shall be adjudged guilty of robbery in from her by violence. But the indictment is not set out in this case, and the statement of facts do not show that the property was taken from the wife, and the opinion of the court is so lacking in clearness that it is difficult to state just exactly what was decided. The facts set out show that the house of the prosecutor was entered while he and his family were asleep, and he was aroused by the presentation of a pistol at his head and a demand for money; that, alarmed and excited, he sprang from his bed, and he and his sister, in whom the property taken is laid in one count of the indictment, ran from the house. In their absence one of the prosecutor's daughters was compelled to go up stairs and bring down her father's box, which was broken open in the presence of the remaining members of the family, and some money, clothing, etc., taken away. The court holds, first, that to constitute robbery the taking must be from the person or in the immediate presence of the person robbed, and then states that another question to be decided is whether an indictment for robbery in which the property is laid in the husband can be sustained by proof that the possession was in the wife and the property taken from her or in her presence, under fear and violence. In answer to this question, the court says that the law is well settled, adding: "The goods or money taken must be proved to be the property of the person named as the owner in the indictment.

... True, there are cases where there is only a special property in the person put in fear, and from whom the goods or money are taken, in which it has been held to be robbery. As, if a servant, having collected money for his master, is robbed of it on his way home, it has been thought it should still be allowed the money of the servant until it has been delivered to the master, or otherwise the servant could not be guilty of the crime of embezzlement. But that principle is not applicable to the case. Here the ownership, as well as the possession of the property was in the prosecutor and the taking must have been from his person or in his presence." To the end that another investigation, under a proper indictment, might be had, the judgment of conviction was reversed and a new trial awarded.

This is the only Tennessee case that has been found on this point: but it has been held in a later case (Clemons v. State, 92 Tenn. 282, 21 S. W. 525) that it is not necessary that an indictment for robbery should contain any allegation whatever as to the ownership of the property. The court says that the essential ingredient of the offense is the felonious and forcible taking from the person of another of goods of value by violence, and that an allegation of ownership is not necessary.

In Ward v. Com. 14 Bush, 233, there was an indictment for robbery charged to have been committed by taking certain articles from a dwelling house by putting the wife of the proprietor in fear. The indictment was under a statute providing that, if any person shall rob any person in his dwelling house, he, his wife, children, or servants, or third persons then being within, he shall be confined in the penitentiary for a certain period. Nothing is said here as to the necessity of the property being taken in the presence of the owner, or as to allegations of ownership in the indictment, the objection made to the indictment being that it failed to charge that the taking was with the intention to deprive the owner of his property, or to convert it to a use of the accused.

In State v. Chapman, 6 Nev. 320, the indictment alleged in one count that the property the first degree." Rev. Stat. 1899, § 1893. The weight of the argument that the person robbed must have a general or special property in himself, and that possession alone is not sufficient, lies in the words of the statute, "taking the property of another from his possession." This identical question arose in Brooks v. People, 49 N. Y. 436, 10 Am. Rep. 398, on a statute couched in the exact words of our statute; and it was ruled by the court of appeals of New York that, as against a robber, the person robbed was the owner of the goods in his possession and custody, whereof he was robbed. Judge Peckham in that case traced the history of this section in the New York Code, and found that the revisers had said they defined robbery "according to 2 East, P. C. chap. 16, §§ 125, 129; the material ingredient in this offense being that it is done against the will, by violence or by fear of immediate injury" to the person. The learned judge pointed out that the elementary common-law writers generally did not insert in their definition of this crime that the property should belong to the person robbed. 1 Hale, P. C. 532; 4 Bl. Com. 241; 2 Russell, Crimes, 4th ed. 98, 867; Hawk. P. C. 95, chap. 34; Com. v. Clifford,

8 Cush. 215. The conclusion was reached that, as against a robber, the possession was sufficiently laid in the person robbed. The same question again arose on a statute in the same words in State v. Adams, 58 Kan. 365, 49 Pac. 81, and the court very aptly says: "The characteristic of robbery, distinguishing it from other forms of larceny, lies in the violence inflicted on the person of the one in possession of the property, or in putting him in fear of injury to his person. So far as the mere taking of the property is concerned, the offense is neither greater nor less if filched in any other way. The gravity of the offense lies in the breach of the peace, in the personal violence inflicted, or the terror excited in the mind of the individual robbed. At common law it was never held that the property taken must belong to the person robbed. It was sufficient that the property belonged to the person robbed or some third person." "As against the robber, a servant has the same right and rests under the same duty to preserve and defend his possession of the property that the owner has. He is the custodian, and has a right to oppose with violence, if necessary, the violence offered by the robber. As against him, he stands as taken was that of an express company, and in another count that it was that of their messenger in custody thereof at the time. It was insisted that this was a charging of more than one offense in the same indictment; but the court said that it would be difficult, if not impossible, to frame a better indictment than the one at bar, and held the indictment good. Nothing is said, however, as to the effect on the nature of the offense of the property not having been taken from the owner or in his presence.

IV. Conclusion.

A careful review of the authorities shows that the contention that to constitute the crime of robbery the person from whom the property is taken must be the owner thereof cannot be sustained. There is nothing in the common-law definition of the crime to justify this claim, nor in the statutes when reasonably interpreted; nor is it borne out by the cases, not even by those decided under statutes that, by a literal interpretation of their provisions, might be construed as defining the crime more narrowly than was done at common law.

Lord Mansfield states (2 East, P. C. chap. 16, § 130, p. 725) that the true nature and original definition of robbery were the felonious taking of property from the person of another by force, in which there were three things to be observed: First, that it must be done feloniously; second, that it must be from the person of another; third, that it must be done by force. He adds that all the rest which was to be found in the books on this subject formed no part of the definition of the offense, but arose from legal construction.

The cases all concede that it is not necessary that the person robbed should be the absolute owner; that it is sufficient if he be a special owner or bailee; while a majority of them hold that mere possession is sufficient. The claim that the interest of the person robbed must be such as would enable him to maintain an action for the property if taken out of his custody has been sustained by only two cases (State v. Lawler, 130 Mo. 366, 51 Am. St. Rep. 575, 82 S. W. 979, and State v. Morledge, 164 Mo. 522, 65 S. W. 226, ante, III.), which, since the decision in STATE V. MONTGOMERY, are no longer law.

As to the form of the indictment, it is usually held that the property may be laid in either the absolute or special owner, though it has been held that the real ownership of the property must be shown. In case of the robbery of a wife, it was necessary at common law to lay the property in her husband; and that may be still necessary in some states, notwithstanding the modern married women's acts, though as a rule this should not seem to be now necessary. No common-law case has been found squarely deciding the question in whom ownership should be laid in case of robbery from a servant. The implication from the case of Reg. v. Rudlick, 8 Car. & P. 237 (ante, III.), is that ordinarily the property should be laid in the master, though in that case it was questioned whether, because of the peculiar circumstances, it was not necessary to lay the property in the servant. And in 2 East, P. C. 654, it is said that, in case of a robbery by a man of his own goods from his servant, it should seem there could be no objection to laying the property of the goods in the servant. Under modern statutes it is generally held that a servant has such an interest in the property in his possession as to sustain an allegation of ownership in him.

F. H. L.

the owner; and we think the statute intended to extend to him the full measure of protection that it gives to the owner or bailee. The principles governing civil actions for the recovery of property wrongfully taken have no application in a case of robbery." In State v. Lawler, 130 Mo., loc. cit. 374, 51 Am. St. Rep. 575, 32 S. W. 981, it was said: "There is no doubt but that goods may be laid to be either in the general owner or in a special owner, with the like result of conviction where the evidence corresponds with the allegation. Thus they may be laid to be in a bailee, pawnee, carrier, or the like." We find, on examination, the foregoing is a substantial quotation from East on Pleas of the Crown, vol. 2, chap. 16, § 90, p. 652; but the learned author was treating of larceny, not of robbery. It is further said: "But if it appear in evidence that the party whose goods they are laid to be had neither the property nor the possession [and for this purpose the possession of a feme covert or servant is, generally speaking, the possession of the husband or master], the prisoner ought to be acquitted." But in the same section it is said: "If A. send his servant with money, and afterwards waylay and rob him, with intent to charge the hundred, . . . the felony is complete." East says: "And even in this latter case I see no objection to laying the property of the goods in the servant, for though, in general, it may be said that he has no property in them as against his master, although he has against every other person, yet, having a clear right to defend his possession against A.'s unlawful demand, the special property still remains in the servant. But a taking from the servant of the money or goods of his master, in his presence, by putting in fear, is a taking from the master, and the offender may be indicted of robbing him." So that, when the whole context is read, it does not support the conclusion reached in State v. Lawler, 130 Mo. 374, 51 Am. St. Rep. 575, 32 S. W. 981, that under no circumstances can the goods be laid in the servant, but, on the contrary, his possession is sufficient as against a robber or trespasser, and all others but the true owner. And while we think that the rule laid down in State v. Morledge, that the party in whom the goods are laid must have such a special interest in them, by lien or otherwise, as would enable him to maintain an action for their possession, or injury thereto, against any other person than the true owner, does not apply to a prosecution for robbery, yet even in a civil case "the law is that a person possessed of goods as his property has a good title against every stranger, and that one who takes them from him, having no title in himself, is a wrongdoer, and cannot defend himself by showing that there was title in some third person, for against a wrongdoer possession is a title." Lord Campbell, in Armory v. Delamirie, 1 Strange, 505; Jefferies v. Great Western R. Co. 5 El. & Bl. 802; Cooley, Torts, 2d ed. p. 520; Cobbey, Replevin, § 786; Rosencrane v. Swofford Bros. Dry Goods Co. 175 Mo. 518, 97 Am. St. Rep. 609, 75 S. W. 445; Hoagland v. Forest Park Highlands Amusement Co. 170 Mo. 335, 94 Am. St. Rep. 740, 70 S. W. 878.

67 L. R. A.

Mills, then, being lawfully in possession, by virtue of his employment as clerk for Mr. Radford, of the money in the cash register, had a sufficient ownership thereof, as against the defendant, to justify the laying of said money in him for the purposes of this prosecution against the defendant, who robbed him of the same, and a sufficient ownership to meet the requirement of the statute that said money should be laid as his. The information properly charged the robbery of Mills, and laid the goods in him; otherwise there can be no robbery in such circumstances.

Upon a reconsideration, we are satisfied that the possession of Mr. Mills, as the clerk in charge of the store, with the implied obligation of exercising ordinary care of his employer's goods and property, was such as authorized the money to be laid in him, and that our opinion in State v. Morledge ought no longer to be followed as the law of this state, and that so much of State v. Lawler as holds that the possession of a wife or servant, in circumstances such as shown by the record in this case, is not sufficient in a prosecution for robbery to justify the laying of the goods in them, should also be overruled.

The information is not verified, but no objection was taken to it on that account, and the failure was waived.

The result is that the judgment of the Criminal Court must be, and is, affirmed.

Burgess and Fox, JJ., concur.

PENNSYLVANIA SUPREME COURT.

John KAUFMANN et al.

v.

John LIGGETT et al., Trustees, etc., of Sarah L. Hitchcock, Deceased, Appts.

(209 Pa. 87.)

1. Statutes providing a summary remedy for a landlord to obtain possession of the leased premises do not deprive equity of jurisdiction of a suit to determine the rights of the parties under a clause in the lease giving a right to renewal at a rental to be fixed by arbitrators, since the remedy provided by them is not adequate.
2. Equity may enjoin proceedings at law under statutes giving a summary remedy for obtaining possession of property under lease, where the lessee has an equitable right to a continuance of possession, and where the remedy at law is not adequate to determine the rights of the parties.
3. Failure of the arbitrators to fix the rental to be paid during the extended term, as the contract for renewal of the lease provided they should do, does not deprive the lessee of the privilege of renewal, where he has given the agreed notice of his desire to do so, and where, from the provisions of the contract, it is evident that the right of renewal, and not the rent to be paid, was regarded as the essence of the contract.
4. Equity has jurisdiction to fix the rent to be paid during the renewed term of a lease, if the arbitrators provided by the contract failed to do so, where the lessee has taken the required steps to preserve his right to renewal, and such right, and not the amount of rent to be paid, is the essence of the contract.
5. The fixing of the rental is not of the essence of a contract to renew a lease upon receipt of notice to that effect, upon a rent to be fixed by arbitrators to be appointed by the parties.

(May 2, 1904.)

APPEAL by defendants from a decree of the Court of Common Pleas, No. 1, for Allegheny County in favor of complainants in a suit to enjoin defendants from proceeding under the landlord and tenant acts to take possession of property which had been leased to complainants. Affirmed.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Messrs. D. T. Watson, Marcus A. Woodward, and John M. Freeman for appellants.

NOTE.—As to injunctions against execution sales or other proceedings under final process, see note to Parsons v. Hartman, 30 L. R. A. 98.

For injunction against judgments, see note to Jarrett v. Goodnow, 32 L. R. A. 321.

For some cases in this series on injunctions against actions at law, see Devlin v. Quigg, 10 L. R. A. 665; Kelley v. Ypsilanti Dress-Stay, 67 L. R. A.

Messrs. Edwin H. Stowe, W. B. Rodgers, and J. Rodgers McCreery, for appellees:

Equity has jurisdiction to determine the rental in this case for the term of five years from April 1st, 1903.

The inducement, end, and purpose were improvement of lessor's premises and establishment of a business therein, by securing to lessees time to reap the fruits of their outlay and efforts. The fixing of rental for an extension term is not of the essence of the contract.

Dinham v. Bradford, L. R. 5 Ch. 522; Weater v. Wood, 9 Pa. 222; Fitzsimmons v. Lindsay, 205 Pa. 79, 54 Atl. 488; Fry, Spec. Perf. §§ 343-346; Backus's Appeal, 58 Pa. 186.

The material thing in the mind of the parties was the notice. When that notice was given appellees were absolutely bound to take the premises for the term, and appellants to grant the term. And therefore the fixing of the rent was not of the essence of the contract.

There is no time limited for the ascertainment of the rent, therefore, that could not be considered as essential to the renewals.

The conduct of appellants has been such as to estop them from taking their present position.

Dunnell v. Keteltas, 16 Abb. Pr. 205; Meynell v. Surtess, 3 Smale & G. 113.

The fact that the arbitration did not fail until in the renewal term adds measurably to the equities, and makes the necessity for, and jurisdiction of, the court to grant relief more clear.

Philadelphia Library Co. v. Beaumont, 39 Pa. 43; Boswell's Appeal, 3 Pennyp. 305; Dunnell v. Keteltas, 16 Abb. Pr. 205; Arnot v. Alexander, 44 Mo. 25, 100 Am. Dec. 252; Fiany v. Ferran, 5 Abb. Pr. N. S. 110; Piggot v. Mason, 1 Paige, 412; Gregory v. Mighell, 18 Ves. Jr. 328; Dike v. Greene, 4 R. 1. 285; Herrman v. Babcock, 103 Ind. 461, 3 N. E. 142; Gourlay v. Somerset, 19 Ves. Jr. 430.

A court of equity may restrain proceedings under the landlord and tenant acts. These contemplate decision of matters of fact, by one not learned in the law, and do not apply to cases where the termination of the tenancy involves the decision of a difficult legal question.

Mfg. Co. 10 L. R. A. 686; Proctor v. National Bank, 9 L. R. A. 122; Milwaukee Mut. F. Ins. Co. v. Sentinel Co. 15 L. R. A. 627; Leighton v. Young, 18 L. R. A. 286; Central Trust Co. v. Moran, 29 L. R. A. 212; Bomelsier v. Forster, 39 L. R. A. 240; Siever v. Union P. R. Co. 61 L. R. A. 319.

Graver v. Fehr, 89 Pa. 463; Scott v. Fuller, 3 Penr. & W. 55; Newell v. Gibbs, 1 Watts & S. 499; Blashford v. Dunoon, 2 Serg. & R. 486; Clark v. Everly, 8 Watts & S. 231; Davis v. Davis, 115 Pa. 261, 7 Atl. 746; Steel v. Thompson, 3 Penr. & W. 38.

Potter, J., delivered the opinion of the court:

The complainants in this case, Kaufmann Bros., leased certain premises on the southeast corner of Fifth avenue and Smithfield street, in the city of Pittsburgh, from Sarah L. Hitchcock, for a term of years. By the leases, two in number, it was provided, in language substantially identical, that the lessees should have the privilege of re-renting at the expiration of the first term, which ended April 1, 1898, for a period of five years more, at a rental to be determined by four arbitrators, two selected by each party, with power, in case of disagreement, to choose an umpire, whose decision should be final and without exception or appeal. It was also stipulated that no such privilege of renewal should be granted unless the lessees gave written notice to the lessor or her heirs of their intention to exercise such privilege for six months prior to April 1, 1898; also that, if the arbitrator and umpire should not agree within two months after their appointment, then others should be chosen in the same manner; also that if the lessees should occupy the premises for the term of five years from April 1, 1898, they should have a further privilege of lease for another period of five years, upon a like six-months' notice, at a rental to be fixed and determined in the same manner. There was no provision in either lease covering the contingency of a failure to agree upon the part of the second set of arbitrators. The lessees exercised their privilege of renewal for the five years beginning April 1, 1898, and the rental was determined according to the provisions of the leases. Six months prior to April 1, 1903, which was the termination of the first extension of five years, they gave notice of their intention to renew for another period of five years. Arbitrators were named by both sides in accordance with the provisions of the leases, but they failed to agree upon a rental or to select an umpire within two months. A second set of arbitrators was then chosen. But again there was a failure to agree, and upon April 9, 1903, the arbitration was dissolved and adjourned sine die. Meanwhile the respondents, who were trustees under the will of the lessor,—she having died during the tenancy,—had given notice to the lessees, under the landlord and tenant acts of 1772 (1 67 L. R. A.

Smith's Laws, p. 370) and 1863 (P. L. 1864, p. 1125), to surrender possession of the premises, and threatened proceedings to dispossess them. The lessees then filed this bill against the trustees, praying (1) for an injunction to restrain them from proceedings at law to disturb or interfere with the complainant's possession of the premises; and (2) for a determination by the court of the amount of rental to be paid for the five years beginning April 1, 1903.

Upon the trial the court made a full finding of facts, all of them being practically undisputed, and reached the following conclusions of law: (1) That equity has jurisdiction; (2) that there is no sufficient remedy at law; (3) that the landlord and tenant acts of 1772 and 1863 have no application; (4) that an injunction should be granted until further order. Exceptions were filed to certain of the findings of fact, as being irrelevant and immaterial, and also to the conclusions of law and the opinion of the court. These exceptions were dismissed, and a decree was entered directing that an injunction be issued, restraining the respondents from interfering with the possession of the plaintiffs until further order of the court, by proceeding under the landlord and tenant acts of 1772 and 1863, or otherwise. The present appeal was then taken by the respondents. The decree of the court below is not assigned for error, but the assignments are confined to the dismissal of the exceptions to the conclusions of law reached by the court below.

That a court of equity has jurisdiction in a proper case to restrain proceedings under the landlord and tenant acts of 1772 and 1863 was expressly held in Denny v. Fronheiser, 207 Pa. 174, 56 Atl. 406. Justice Mitchell there said (p. 177, 207 Pa., and p. 407, 56 Atl.): "The jurisdiction of equity to restrain actions at law is too well established to require discussion, and there is nothing in the act of 1772 to give proceedings under it any immunity from such restraint in a proper case." In that instance it was held that equity would not interfere, not because it is without jurisdiction to do so, but because a proper case was not made out for its exercise. The summary remedy provided under the acts of 1772 and 1863 is not adapted to the determination of intricate and delicate questions of law. As the present chief justice said in the case just cited (p. 179, 207 Pa., and p. 407, 56 Atl.): "The act was passed in the interests of justice, to give against tenants who held over without even color of right after the expiration of their terms a better remedy than the old, cumbersome, dilatory, and expensive one by action of ejectment." But as Justice Sterrett said in Davis v. Davis, 115 Pa. 261, 7

Atl. 746, speaking of the provisions of the act of 1863 (p. 265, 115 Pa., and p. 746, 7 Atl.): "It also clearly indicates that the legislature, in providing a remedy so summary that the person in possession may be ousted therefrom in a few days, intended to further limit the jurisdiction of magistrates, and restrict the remedy to plain cases of ordinary tenancy." And further in the same case (p. 266, 115 Pa., and p. 747, 7 Atl.) he says: "In view of the fact that the special and summary jurisdiction given to justices of the peace and magistrates by the act of 1863 and supplements has been so sharply defined by the legislature, and limited to a class of cases that are of easy solution, it would illy become us, even if we had the power to do so, to enlarge its scope so as to embrace cases which the average justice of the peace or city magistrate is incompetent to dispose of."

In the present case the appellees contend for the right to hold the premises in dispute under the covenants in the lease providing for a renewal for five years from April 1, 1903. This raises a somewhat complicated question of law, which must be settled before it is possible to determine whether or not the right of possession in the lessees ended with the term which expired March 31, 1903. Had no notice been given by the appellees six months prior to that date of their intention to exercise the right of renewal, which was expressly granted to them by the original lease, then there would be but a simple question of fact for determination, entirely within the province of the justice and the jury to decide. But it is undisputed that the six-months notice was given, and the rights of the parties now turn upon questions of law, rather than upon any disputed facts.

We are clear that, under the circumstances of the present case, neither the act of 1772, nor that of 1863, supplies an adequate remedy, nor do they provide a proper tribunal for the determination of the questions involved. They cannot, therefore, be allowed to operate as a bar to the maintenance of this bill.

In the second prayer of the bill, the lessees ask that the court shall fix and determine the rental to be paid by the plaintiffs for the premises for the term of five years from April 1, 1903. But it is urged by counsel for the appellants that the court has no jurisdiction to grant this relief, because, as they allege, the leases terminated March 31, 1903, by reason of the failure of the mode provided by the parties for the fixing of the rental. As we have seen, the original term in both leases expired April 1, 1898, but each provided for similar renewals,—one for five years from April 1, 1898, and 67 L. R. A.

another for a further term of five years from April 1, 1903; and, by another agreement, two additional extensions from that date were provided on both of the above leases,—one for five years, and, at its expiration, another for four years,—so that extensions are provided for, which run, at the option of the lessees, until April 1, 1917. The leases therefore contemplate, in addition to the first term of thirteen years, four extensions in all,—three for five years each, and one for four years. The entire contract embraces a period of thirty-two years' occupancy of the premises by the lessees, if they choose to avail themselves of the rights placed at their disposal by the terms of the agreement. The rental for the first thirteen years was fixed by the parties at the outset. That for the first extension of five years was fixed by arbitration in accordance with the terms of the lease, and the present dispute grows out of the failure upon the part of the arbitrators to fix the rental for the second period of extension of five years.

The language of the original lease of 1885 is as follows: "And the said parties of the first part hereby grant unto the said J. Kaufmann & Brothers or their assigns, the privilege of rerenting the premises at the expiration of the first term of thirteen years for a period of five years longer." It will be noticed that here is a direct and positive grant of the right of renewal. It is not left to be determined by anybody else, but is definitely settled by the parties. And with reference to the second extension of five years the language is no less clear. It is: "And the said parties of the first part further agree to and with the said parties of the second part that, should they occupy the said premises for the said five years above designated, that they hereby grant to the said J. Kaufmann & Brothers a further privilege of lease for a period of five years upon a like six-months' notice." So that in both cases there was an absolute contract between the parties to the lease stipulating at the time of the making of the lease, not only for one term of thirteen years, but for the privilege of further extensions. Clearly the question of whether or not an extension should be made was not left open to be determined by arbitration. That much, at least, was definitely fixed by the contract. It is true that these extensions were to be at a rental to be fixed by arbitration, and the manner and method of the arbitration were pointed out. But when the lessees exercised their right to an extension, by giving notice to the lessors six months before the expiration of the pending term, the lessees were then absolutely bound to take the premises for the extended term, and the lessors were bound to the grant of the additional term. With that matter the arbitrators had nothing to do. It was the amount of the rental for the buildings and premises for the extended periods which alone was left to be determined by arbitration.

The learned judge of the court of common pleas reached a conclusion which he expressed in his opinion as follows: "The plaintiffs having exercised their option for a renewal of the leases within the time prescribed, their right to a lease, and to keep possession of the premises for a new term of five years, was vested in them, regardless of whether the arbitrators fixed the amount of the rent or not. If the right to renewal had been intended to depend upon the rent being fixed in advance, it would not only have been the easiest, but most natural, thing to have said so. It seems clear to us that no such result was even thought of by either party." We agree with the conclusion thus stated. The lessees were stipulating for what was certainly to them a valuable privilege, in providing for a long term, made up of successive extensions. Under the contract, that privilege was absolutely secured to them, provided they gave six months' notice, prior to the expiration of each term, of their desire to take advantage of the agreement for the extension.

The arbitrators were appointed, in the language of the lease, "for the purpose of determining the amount of rent which the said J. Kaufmann & Brothers shall pay per year during the said five years." The right to a renewal was not in any way before them for consideration. Can it be said that, because the arbitrators failed in their duty, which was to determine the amount of the rental, or to agree upon an umpire, whose decision upon that subject should be final and conclusive, the lessees are to be deprived of the privilege of a renewal, which they had taken the pains to secure for themselves by means of carefully drawn stipulations in the contract?

To the mind of the trial judge, the specifications of the lease for successive renewals at the end of the intermediate periods appeared to be the substantial part of the contract, and he viewed the manner of fixing the rental value as merely incidental thereto. In his opinion he thus states his conclusion: "It is evident that the essence of the contract in the leases was the options for renewals, and that the parties so understood it. This is strengthened by the fact that the leases were made to terminate, subject to the options, in 1917, and by the following clause of the agreement of 1897, viz.: 'It is desired by the said parties of the second part for the better security for the future of their business interests where the same is at present located to provide for and obtain the right of future options. . . . And the parties of the first part deeming the grant of such options as of advantage to the estate of Sarah L. Hitchcock, . . . and . . . it being understood that on failure to exercise any of the said options within the time and according to the terms of said leases as aforesaid, the leases terminate with the term in which notice of such option is to be given according to the terms thereof.' Now, under these somewhat extraordinary conditions, the real subject-matter of the contract being a right to the renewal of the leases, and fixing of the rent being only secondary, the terms as to rental being, in substance and effect, that the rent shall be a fair one, fixed by an impartial tribunal,—for that is all that the clause as to fixing the rent means,—has equity jurisdiction? We think it has."

After careful consideration of this question in the light of the elaborate argument of counsel for the appellant, we agree with the conclusion of the court below that the fixing of the rental value of the premises for the period in dispute in this case is not of the essence of the contract, but that the right of renewal constituted the substantial element in this portion of the agreement. It was that feature which, in great measure, justified the lessees in erecting upon the premises a large and costly building, adapted to the needs of their business. As a general rule, in construing provisions of a lease relating to renewals, where there is any uncertainty, the tenant is favored, and not the landlord, because the latter, having the power of stipulating in his own favor, has neglected to do so, and also upon the principle that every man's grant is to be taken most strongly against himself: Taylor, Land. & T. 9th ed. § 81.

Nearly all of the cases cited by the appellants to sustain their contention that the fixing of the rental value is of the essence of the contract were proceedings to enforce specific performance of contracts for the sale of land; and in this class of cases it has invariably been held that the price to be paid is an essential element of a contract of sale, and, unless the price has been fixed, the contract is not certain, and cannot be enforced. We are not, however, here dealing with a contract for the sale of land, but we are dealing with covenants for the renewal of a lease, and that, too, in a case where the lessees have been in possession of the premises under the lease for more than eighteen years, and have made valuable and extensive improvements upon the property during that time, and have built up a large and extensive business thereupon. During all these years the lessors have been receiving a rental for the property which was entirely satisfactory. There is a marked distinction between the rule which may equitably be applied to a contract for the sale of land, and that which should govern in an agreement for the renewal of a lease, where possession has been enjoyed and improvements made during the first period under a reasonable expectation of benefits to be derived therefrom during future extensions of the lease at the option of the lessee.

One of the cases upon which the appellants rely is Milnes v. Gery, 14 Ves. Jr. 400. The contract in that case was one for the sale of land, and the court, by Sir William Grant, said that the price is of the essence of a contract of sale. But the same eminent judge afterwards delivered the opinion in Gregory v. Mighell, 18 Ves. Jr. 328. In this case there was a parol agreement for a lease of twenty-one years,—the amount of rent annually to be fixed by two indifferent persons,—under which the lessees entered and made improvements. Sir William Grant here held that the failure of the arbitrator to fix the rent could not affect the agreement, but that the court would find some means of completing its execution. Specific performance was accordingly decreed, and it was referred to a master to ascertain what the rent ought to be. And in Gourlay v. Somerset, 19 Ves. Jr. 429, a lease was to be given with such conditions as the defendant's steward should judge to be reasonable and proper, or, in the event of his death, by some other person to be mutually agreed upon. The question arose, under a bill filed by the tenant, whether the terms of the lease should be settled by the steward of the defendant or by a master of the court. And in this case Sir William Grant held that when the agreement to give a lease is binding, and such as ought to be executed, it does not require foreign aid to carry the details into execution.

The appellants also cite the case of Hopkins v. Gilman, 22 Wis. 476. This was the case of a letting, and not a sale, but it seems favorable to the position of the appellees, rather than of the appellants. The lease stipulated that at the end of the term the lessor should have the value of the land, independently of the improvements placed upon it by the lessee, determined by the arbitrators, to be chosen in a specified way, and that the lease should then be renewed at a percentage of the valuation, or else the improvements taken at a valuation to be fixed by arbitrators. It was held that, while the court would not compel an arbitration, it would restrain the lessor from proceeding at law to dispossess the tenant until the improvements were paid for, and also that a 67 L. R. A. court of equity had power itself to ascertain the value of such improvements, notwithstanding the provisions of the lease as to arbitration. It was there said (p. 481): "The court, having acquired jurisdiction of the cause, should provide and grant any relief consistent with the case made by the complaint and embraced within the issue."

In Dinham v. Bradford, L. R. 5 Ch. 519, two partners made an agreement containing a provision that, on the determination of the partnership, one partner should purchase the share of the other at a valuation to be made by two persons, one appointed by each partner, and the partnership was carried on for some time under that agreement. Held, that though the valuation could not be so made, because no umpire was provided, the court would carry the partnership agreement into effect by ascertaining the value of the shares. Lord Hatherley said, inter alia (p. 523): "This case is not like that of the sale of an estate, the price of which is to be settled by arbitration, but is a case in which the whole scope and object of the deed would be entirely frustrated if the court were to apply the well-known doctrine to the present state of circumstances. In cases of specific performance the matter is very plain and simple. One person agrees to sell his estate in a given way, and no rights are changed by the circumstance of that method of selling the estate having failed. The estate remains where it was, and the money where it was. But here is a man who has had the whole benefit of the partnership in respect of which this agreement was made, and now he refuses to have the rest of the agreement performed, on account of the difficulty which has arisen. It is much more like the case of an estate sold, and the timber, on a part, to be taken at a valuation, the adjusting of matters of that sort forming part of the arrangement, but being by no means the substance of the agreement; and in such cases the court has found no difficulty. If the valuation cannot be made modo et forma, the court will substitute itself for the arbitrators. It is not the very essence and substance of the contract, so that no contract can be made out, except through the medium of the arbitrators. Here the property has been had and enjoyed, and the only question now is, What is right and proper to be done with regard to settling the price?"

In Dunnell v. Keteltas, 16 Abb. Pr. 205, the law is stated as follows (p. 211): "It is true, indeed, as a general rule, that a court of equity will not decree specific performance of a covenant or agreement to appoint arbitrators or appraisers. Where, upon a contract for the sale of property, the price is not fixed, but is left to be determined by certain persons named in the contract, the court will not force them to a decision, and will not undertake to perform the duty intrusted to them, so that, if they do not fix the price, the agreement must fail, unless under certain circumstances there has, notwithstanding the defect, been an acquiescence under it, or such a part performance that it would be inequitable not to enforce its execution. In such a case the court will ascertain what is the fair value. Where, also, the agreement was to sell at a fair valuation, and no persons were appointed to make it, there being nothing to preclude the court's interference, a court of equity has taken upon itself to determine what is a proper price, and has decreed a specific performance accordingly. In fact, where any term of a contract in all other respects complete is left to the determination of others, and the same is not of the essence of it, the court will take upon itself to decide that matter, and will thereupon decree a specific performance. See Jeremy, Eq. Jur. 442, 443, and cases there cited."

In Viany v. Ferran, 5 Abb. Pr. N. S. 110, it was held, under facts similar to those of the present case, that a court of equity had power to compel the execution of a renewal lease, and also to determine the rent to be paid for the new term.

The contention of the appellants that the fixing of the rental is of the essence of the contract does not seem to be borne out by the authorities. Thus, in Taylor's Landlord & Tenant, 9th ed. § 14: "A stated rent, however, is not essential to the contract, because, from favor, or for a consideration passing to the lessor at the time of its inception, a lease, beneficial in its nature to the lessee, may be made without a reservation of rent." And several authorities are there cited to sustain the proposition. In Weaver v. Wood, 9 Pa. 220, Gibson, Ch. J., held that an agreement for a lease at a fair rent is sufficiently certain to be enforced. And in Mitchell v. Com. 37 Pa. 187, in the opinion of this court, delivered by Thompson, J., an agreement for holding premises rent free was construed to be a lease. One of the latest cases in which the question here involved was considered is that of Grosvenor v. Flint, 20 R. I. 21, 37 Atl. 304, where the court said: "The case is before us on bill, answer, replication, and proof. The case presents two questions for decision; viz.: (1) Whether the court, by a master or otherwise, can appraise the rent payable to the complainants, if the arbitration provided for in the lease has failed; and (2) whether, as a matter of fact, the arbitration has failed. In answer to the first question, we think it is clear that the court has jurisdiction to do, either directly or by its master, what the appraisers or arbitrators could have done 67 L. R. A.

under said provision of the lease, if it is shown that the arbitration has in fact failed. And refusal to agree to a third man constitutes such a failure. Brock v. Dwelling House Ins. Co. 102 Mich. 583, 26 L. R. A. 623, 47 Am. St. Rep. 562, 61 N. W. 67; Niagara F. Ins. Co. v. Bishop, 154 Ill. 9, 45 Am. St. Rep. 105, 39 N. E. 1102; Brown v. Harper, 54 Iowa, 546, 6 N. W. 747; Watson v. Northumberland, 11 Ves. Jr. 153. The covenant to appraise the rent does not stand alone, but is merely a subsidiary part of the lease in question. That is to say, the manner of determining the amount of rent to be paid is a matter of form, rather than substance. And if it appears that this question cannot be determined in the manner provided for in the lease, by reason of the refusal of one party to the contract to do what, in equity, it ought to do, the court will determine it upon the application of the other." The question is also fully discussed, and the authorities bearing upon it are carefully considered by Judge Dillon, in Tscheider v. Biddle, 4 Dill. 58, Fed. Cas. No. 14,210. The reasoning in Coles v. Peck, 96 Ind. 333, 49 Am. Rep. 161, is also helpful in determining the question at issue. In that case there was a lease providing for the erection of a building, with an option to purchase; the price to be determined by arbitrators. The court held that the plaintiff was entitled to equitable relief on a failure of the arbitration. Many American and English cases are cited and commented upon. After referring to the doctrine laid down by Milnes v. Gery, 14 Ves. Jr. 400, that contracts for the sale of land will not be specifically enforced when the purchase price is to be determined by arbitrators, and such arbitration has failed, the court says (p. 339, 96 Ind., p. 166, 49 Am. Rep.): "The doctrine of that case has, however, generally been followed by the courts of the United States only in a limited and restricted sense, and is mainly applied only to contracts for reference in which, by the form and language of the stipulation, the mode of determining the price by values on arbitration is made an essential provision—in fact, condition—to the validity of the agreement, and to cases in which the parties can be easily placed in statu quo, or where an action for damages can be made to afford an adequate remedy."

After a careful consideration of all the cases bearing upon the subject which have been brought to our attention, or which we have found, we are satisfied that the authorities well agree that equity will not compel an arbitration, and this upon the very good ground that the courts remain open to the parties, with better provisions for securing justice than are possessed by arbitrators, but that in cases of renewal leases the weight of authority clearly favors the view that the tenant in such a case has a quasi proprietorship, a right, lacking merely a valuation; and that the grossest inequity would be worked, should he lose his right through a failure upon the part of the arbitrators to fix a valuation. While, therefore, a court of equity will not undertake to compel an arbitration, which it cannot control, it will in such case make an appraisal itself, or direct it to be done by its own officer, and will thereafter enforce specific performance of the contract upon the terms so found.

Under the facts of the present case, the court has complete jurisdiction in equity to fix the amount of the rental to be paid by the lessees during the extension of five years from April 1, 1903, and to enforce specific performance of the agreement providing for such extension.

The assignments of error are overruled, and this appeal is dismissed, at the cost of the appellants. The decree of the court below is affirmed, and it is ordered that the record be remitted for further proceedings in accordance with this opinion.

John Henry RADEY

v.

James MCCURDY et al., Appts.

(209 Pa. 306.)

The insertion in a renewal lease of a clause giving the tenant the right to remove trade fixtures is not necessary to enable him to remove, before the termination of the extended period, fixtures which he might have removed before the expiration of the original term.

(May 28, 1904.)

APPEAL by defendants from a judgment of the Court of Common Pleas, No. 1, for Philadelphia County in favor of plaintiff in a suit to enjoin the removal of fixtures from plaintiff's property. Reversed.

The facts are stated in the opinion.

Messrs. Daniel C. Donoghue and M. Hampton Todd, for appellants:

The right of a tenant to remove trade fixtures continues as long as the tenant is in possession as a tenant.

Hill v. Sewald, 53 Pa. 271, 91 Am. Dec. 209; Hey v. Bruner, 61 Pa. 87; Davis v. Moss, 38 Pa. 346; Seitzinger v. Marsden, 2

Pennyp. 463; Watts v. Lehman, 107 Pa. 106; Charlotte Furnace Co. v. Stouffer, 127 Pa. 336, 17 Atl. 994; Wick v. Bredin, 189 Pa. 83, 42 Atl. 17; Penton v. Robart, 2 East, 88; Weeton v. Woodcock, 7 Mees. & W. 14.

In the absence of an express agreement title to fixtures in Pennsylvania, as between landlord and tenant, depends upon the tenant's intention when the fixtures were placed upon the property; and there is no presumption that a tenant who annexes trade fixtures to the freehold intends to make a gift of them to the landlord for the benefit of the property.

Hill v. Sewald, 53 Pa. 271, 91 Am. Dec. 209; Watts v. Lehman, 107 Pa. 106; Darrah v. Baird, 101 Pa. 265; Townsend v. Underhill, 6 Pa. Co. Ct. 544; Charlotte Furnace Co. v. Stouffer, 127 Pa. 336, 17 Atl. 994; Davis v. Moss, 38 Pa. 346; Kerr v. Kingsbury, 39 Mich. 150, 33 Am. Rep. 362; Penton v. Robart, 2 East, 88.

The insertion of a clause permitting the removal of the fixtures was not necessary to preserve that right.

Seitzinger v. Marsden, 2 Pennyp. 463; Seeger v. Pettit, 77 Pa. 437, 18 Am. Rep. 452; East Sugar-Loaf Coal Co. v. Wilbur, 5 Pa. Dist. R. 202; Darrah v. Baird, 101 Pa. 265; Shellar v. Shivers, 171 Pa. 569, 33 Atl. 95.

If the second lease is not to begin until the first lease ends, the taking of the second lease is no surrender of the first lease.

2 Co. Litt. pp. 554, 555n; Roe ex dem. Berkely v. York, 6 East, 86.

Trade fixtures are personal property, even though physically annexed to the property.

Voorhis v. Freeman, 2 Watts & S. 116, 37 Am. Dec. 490; Pyle v. Pennock, 2 Watts & S. 390, 37 Am. Dec. 517; Hill v. Sewald, 53 Pa. 271, 91 Am. Dec. 209.

Trade fixtures in Pennsylvania are personal property belonging to the tenant as long as the latter is in possession.

Lemar v. Miles, 4 Watts, 330; White's Appeal, 10 Pa. 252; Seitzinger v. Marsden, 2 Pennyp. 463; Church v. Griffith, 9 Pa. 117, 49 Am. Dec. 548; Wick v. Bredin, 189 Pa. 83, 42 Atl. 17.

The preponderance of authority in the late decisions outside of this state supports the appellant's contention.

Kerr v. Kingsbury, 39 Mich. 150, 33 Am. Rep. 362; Bernheimer v. Adams, 70 App. Div. 114, 75 N. Y. Supp. 93; Smusch v. Kohn, 22 Misc. 344, 49 N. Y. Supp. 176;

